CPT 510 Introduction to Computing

2 Quarter Hours

An introductory course providing a broad overview of computers and their role in society. Among the topics discussed are: hardware and software, operating systems; multiprogramming and multiprocessing; system analysis as it relates to current computer applications; the selection and use of computing power; special uses in management decision making; and the impact of computers on society. Traditional and non-traditional educational media such as home television, university based cassette lessons and teacher-student lecture sessions will be used.

Tentative Course Organization

1. Twenty 1-1/2 hour TV sessions are viewed on home TV.
2. Student study manual coordinates twenty TV sessions, study material and session quizzes.
3. Cassette tapes on sessions may be placed in YSU library.
4. One YSU class meeting per week (one hour) held during evening or Saturday morning hours.
5. Instructor answers questions, expands on session material and collects session quizzes. Quizzes are graded and returned.
6. Students not enrolled for credit may mail in quizzes for grading.
7. Final exam administered on campus for those enrolled for credit.
