YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio - A two day Spring Microcomputer Show will be held March 19 and 20 in Youngstown State University's Kilcawley Center.

The show will be divided into two parts with an education focus on Tuesday, March 19, and business sector concentration on Wednesday, March 20.

Educators will be interested in an exhibit of microcomputers for elementary and high schools from noon until 9 p.m., March 19. A keynote address on "Microcomputers in Education" will be given by Ronald W. Erickson, editor of electronic publishing products for the South-Western Publishing Co.

Three other sessions relevant to education will be offered on Tuesday: "Put PEP in Your Classroom - People, Equipment and Procedures," "Setting Up a Microcomputer Lab," and "Creative Resources for Teaching Computer Literacy."

Participants may attend any or all sessions. The fee for one session is $5; for all three sessions, $10. Dinner is available for an additional $8.

Wednesday's seminar will feature a microcomputer exhibit focused on business applications. Sessions include "Meeting the Challenges of the Microcomputer Acquisition Process," "Lotus 1-2-3," "Data Manager-Fourth Generation Business System Generator," and "Strategic Planning for Office Automation." These fees are $10 for one session and $25 for the entire day.

Registration should be made no later than March 12. To obtain an information brochure, or to register, contact the YSU Office of Continuing Education at (216) 742-3358.
