Since the discovery of oil in Louisiana in 1901, she has become fifth in its production in the nation. Prior to that time King Cotton, sugar cane, and other agricultural commodities were her chief products. Now the numerous steel derricks rising from her land have made oil and its refining her chief industry. Most of the oil is found in the northwestern part of the state where there are extensive fields and in the Gulf Coast region, where they occur in connection with the salt domes.

According to legend the Acadian maid, Emmeline Labiche of St. Martinsville, Louisiana was the original maid of Longfellow's immortal "Evangeline." The Evangeline oak marks the landing place of the Acadians on their arrival from Nova Scotia and tradition claims it was also the appointed meeting place of Evangeline and Gabriel. Emmeline Labiche died of a broken heart and was buried in the church yard of St. Martinsville Catholic Church; over her grave there is a monument to "Evangeline" posed by Dolores Del Rio, the actress, who portrayed the Acadian maid in the screen version of the poem.
