Campus 2000 Revitalizes Elm Street

SUSAN SCAGGS
Assistant News Editor

Another piece of Campus 2000, a blueprint for development on and around the YSU campus through the year 2000, is becoming a reality. $25,000 worth of in-kind services from the city of Youngstown and YSU and a $12,500 grant from Ohio Edison will aid investors in the development of a Victorian-style village on Elm Street.

The project is designed to encourage economic revitalization and to improve the appearance of the commercial areas on Elm Street, between Madison and Park avenues.

"There is a critical need for services typically available to citizens of the University community. This project is designed to stimulate investments in retail shops, restaurants, boutiques, entertainment complexes, et cetera," said YSU President Leslie Cochran in a recent YSU press release.

Although YSU and Youngstown will aid in the development, private investors will be funding 95 percent of the village.

"Wherever we can help within the law and with the various programs we have, for instance with low interest loans, grants, painting the fire plugs to look like Penguins, and increased police protection, we will," said Joe Naples, third ward councilman.

"The Victorian-style village is part of a bigger plan here on the Northside. We want to promote student housing and activities in Wick Park.

"When I went to school," said Naples, "Wick Park was an important part of campus life. I would like to make the park a vital part of the University again.

"As far as student housing is concerned, I know that security is a major issue in the area. We are currently working with landlords in getting rid of tenants who are involved in drug dealing or those who are known for criminal activity. We are also patrolling the streets more and paying special attention to the street corners."

James Miller, executive director of administrative services at YSU, said, "YSU plans to encourage the private investors and help them however we can. We will offer whatever type of expertise is needed at specific times. For instance, we will hire a person through the art department to draw models."

Miller will chair a grant committee that will guide the project. The committee will consist of representatives from YSU, Ohio Edison, the city of Youngstown and business owners in the area.

The College of Engineering and technology also will involve students in the design and engineering projects.

"Ohio Edison was interested in getting involved with the village because we are interested in economic revitalization and the area around YSU is a good area for revitalization," said Douglas Elliott, Youngstown division manager for Ohio Edison.

"We have made a twelve thousand, five hundred dollar monetary promotion," said Elliott. The money from Ohio Edison will be used to do further planning and to provide architectural renderings of the commercial buildings which will be renovated.

"We are pleased to be a part of the development process at YSU and we are happy to know that our effort will contribute to community revitalization," said Elliott.

Students Protest WTI

MATTHEW DEUTSCH
Assistant News Editor

This past Saturday three YSU students were part of an all-student rally at the Waste Technologies Industries (WTI) incinerator in East Liverpool.

The students, who are all officers of Students for a Healthier Planet on campus, joined more than 200 other students at Tomlinson Park to protest the operation of the incinerator, mainly the plant's close proximity to nearby buildings. The students were Brett Laverty, president of Students for a Healthier Planet, Amy Hodge and Steve Savage.

Students from many different universities attended the rally, including Dennison University, the University of Pittsburgh, Indiana University of PA and California University of PA. The rally began at noon and lasted until 3 p.m.

"It was a very peaceful rally," See WTI page 7

Cookie King Shares Secrets

CYNTHIA LOVAN

You've snacked on his cookies between classes.

Now you can learn Wally "Famous" Amos' secret recipe. But don't expect to learn the secret to good oatmeal cookies. The secret recipe for "Success in Business," will be the topic discussed by Amos at the annual Williamson Symposium at 8 p.m. Tuesday, April 19, in Kilcawley Center's Chestnut Room.

At 11 a.m. April 19, Amos, who donated his famous Panama hat and "the shirt off his back" to the Smithsonian, will be signing copies of his book The Power in You, in the YSU Bookstore. It is described as an "inspirational book" and was co-written with his son.

From 3 to 4 p.m. on Monday, April 18 and Tuesday, April 19, Amos will meet with students in Williamson Hall's Cafaro Executive Development Suite.

Also at noon on Tuesday, April 19, Amos will have lunch with the Williamson College of Business Administration's faculty, who will be honoring the cookie maker as a Williamson Fellow.

Later that day, from 4:30 to 6:45 p.m., Amos will dine with Williamson Dean James Cicarelli, then be honored at a reception from 7 to 8 p.m. in Kilcawley Center's Gallery.

"What is interesting about him is he is a survivor," said Barbara Romeo Shade, assistant to the dean of Business.

"More than once he started with nothing and worked his way up."

Before Amos attained world wide fame for his gourmet chocolate chip cookies, he was a high school drop out. After joining the Air Force and earning his GED, he later began working for the William Morris Talent Agency as a mail clerk in the mid-'60s. Eventually, Amos advanced in the company and managed stars such as Simon and Garfunkle. the See AMOS page 7

Collins Named To Direct Financial Aid Outreach

YSU - William T. Collins Jr., financial aid director at YSU, will assume new duties as the director of financial aid outreach, effective April 15.

The focus of Collins' new position will be on recruiting high-achieving high-school students and helping disadvantaged students from the area obtain financial assistance and reach their educational goals.

Other duties assumed by Collins will include training and serving as a consultant to the New Student Relations Office and other Student Affairs staff members regarding financial aid information. Collins will promote YSU's financial aid and scholarship programs at area high schools and also coordinate on-campus financial aid and scholarship workshops. He will help Enrollment Services recruit transfer students from various community colleges and assist in fund-raising efforts through the University Development Office.

Dr. Raymond Dye, vice president for student affairs, said he looks forward to using Collins in this new capacity.

"The University will benefit by capitalizing on Bill's many years of experience at YSU, vast knowledge of various federal and state financial aid regulations and programs and his many contacts and close relations within the community," said Dye.

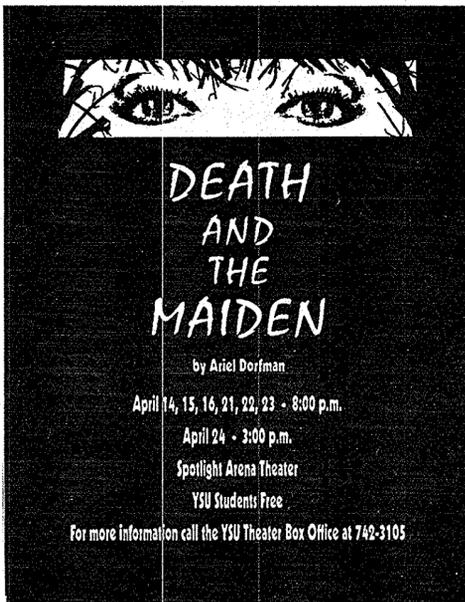

Eileen Greauf of Liberty, director of internal audit, will serve as interim director of Financial Aid and Scholarships.

"Eileen is a superb administrator because she has outstanding leadership skills and many years of experience at YSU. She is clearly qualified for her new position," said Dye.

Dye said he is pleased with Collins' continued presence in the Division of Student Affairs and is looking forward to using Collins' knowledge and experience to enhance services to area high schools, transfer students and the community.

The student affairs vice president also said he is pleased to have Greauf on the staff and is looking forward to the contributions she will make to the division.

POLICE BLOTTER

Sunday, April 10

An officer was dispatched to St. Elizabeth's Hospital at 10:07 a.m. in response to juvenile who said he was attacked on the campus of YSU. The juvenile was on campus Friday night at 11:30 p.m. to attend a dance in Kilcawley Center. While he was getting into his car in the F-5 lot next to Beehly Center at approximately 12:15 a.m., he was approached by two subjects who asked him to give them a ride to the upper northside. When he refused to do so, he was punched in the left eye and mouth. As the victim was leaving, a campus police officer pulled up and told him to leave the area. The juvenile did not tell the officer what happened because he did not know his eye would close up.

Monday, April 11

An officer was sent to Beehly Center at 4:59 p.m. to attend to an injured person. Upon arriving, the officer spoke with the man, who stated that he had injured his back while playing basketball at 1:15 p.m. After the injury occurred, he sat in the south bleachers and did not walk to get help. At 4:45 p.m. the man informed a YSU assistant women's basketball coach that he was hurt. The coach called the nurse's office, who contacted a Gold Cross ambulance. The man, who was waiting for his sister, was transported to St. Elizabeth's hospital by a Gold Cross unit.

Wednesday, April 13

At 9 a.m. it was reported by maintenance that two skylights on the roof of Cushiwa Hall were broken. A search of the roof and the first floor area for the objects that may have caused the damage met with negative results. Maintenance put temporary patches over the holes until they were replaced.

Buechner Hall Truly Has Everything

This beautiful residence hall for women, located mid-campus at YSU, is truly first-rate. Single and double occupancy rooms are completely furnished, including linens, telephones, and free cable. The building is fully air conditioned, and staff and guards provide professional, 24-hour security. Weekly maid service, exquisitely decorated lounge areas, quiet study environment, on-premise dining room and home-cooked meals, fitness room, and laundry rooms are other features supplying their share of full-comfort living.

Sound expensive? Not at all. Thanks to the large bequest of the Buechner family, which completed the building in 1941, more than half of all residents' room rental is still absorbed by the Buechner fund. The remainder required from residents including 15 meals per week, is $763 per quarter for double occupancy and $833 per quarter for single. Payable weekly. Your inquiry is solicited.

Americans Have Grown Weary Of Whitewater

A few days ago Tom Brokaw, an NBC anchorman, was on David Letterman. He said something to the effect that Americans were tired of hearing newscasts about White Water.

Brokaw is probably the first media correspondent to actually admit that Americans are beginning to find the whole White Water issue monotonous. When the media first got a hold of information that the Clintons were accused of some previous wrongdoings everyone was interested in the development the story would take.

However, it can not be denied that most of the information broadcasted at that time was almost always speculative. People who supported Clinton and those who did not support him wanted to know if he had managed to get himself into another jam. Although all presidents have encountered scandal at some time during their presidency, the Clintons seemed doomed to get entrapped in more scandals than most.

Americans sat by and kept score of everything from Clinton's presumed affairs to the suicide of Vincent Foster. Later it was speculated that Hillary Rodham Clinton could have had an affair with Foster. However, these scandals had something Whitewater did not, perhaps it was more information.

Right now, it seems like Whitewater stories have informed viewers with little more than it did in the beginning. It is granted that the small amount of information concerning White Water has not shed a good light on the Clintons. However, White water has hardly proven to be the equivalent of Watergate.

COMMENTARY

Leading With Labels Will Magnify People's Prejudices

Deborah Mathis

WASHINGTON — In a recent appearance on the "Larry King Live" TV talk show, Zlata Filipovic, the 13-year-old war diarist from Sarajevo, was asked her ethnicity. Croatian? Muslim? Serbian?

Zlata smiled demurely. "I am a girl from Earth," she responded. King seemed to have gotten the message. Zlata is one of us. Just another member of the species, though an extraordinary one for both the story she tells from the brink of destruction and her precocious understanding of what matters. And what doesn't.

Apparently, labels fall into the irrelevant category. Which goes to show what a foreigner she is. Around these parts, folks are expected to oblige the contentiousness by choosing a side and identifying themselves accordingly. A self-affixed label — conservative, liberal, pro-choice, pro-life, Democrat, Republican, etc. — is supposed to introduce us, cutting through the formalities, setting up the background, establishing the context.

We want to know, and quickly, where you stand. The labels game allows, even invites, assumptions. None of this innocuous "girl from Earth" stuff. Bring on the stereotype. Back some time ago — back when Sarajevo was one of the planet's beauty marks; back before young Miss Filipovic was even a zygote — Americans made a point of their individualism and rebuked labels.

"Don't fence me in" was the more likely cry of the day, which was as recent as the 1970s, but seems now like cons ago. We wanted our opinions and doctrines and credos to appear on fresh canvas, not set against the tableau of prevision.

We were on our own then, unaligned, unpledged, so that if we made an appeal for, say, the end of war and atrocity — as Zlata has done in her published diary — the case stood or fell on its merits, our talents for suasion, and the available facts.

Nowadays, we lead with the label, tainting the argument so that it bears the patina of prejudice, evoking a skepticism it may not deserve. Like the man who sashayed by the dinner table the other night to take a Florida newspaper editor to task about welfare reform. You could hardly see the point for the bias, lofted from the get-go, when the fellow declared, "I'm an ultraconservative."

Of course, there are causes to champion and membership has its privileges, but denominationalism — this business of defining oneself in terms of a faction — is a lazy, reckless way to make the point.

A good idea, like peace for Sarajevo, does not require a sectarian base for legitimacy. We need not know whether it was launched from a Croat, Muslim, or Serbian heart.

It is fine enough — having come from a girl from Earth.

Art Winners Displayed On McDonough Walls

YOUNGSTOWN—The McDonough Museum of Art will display "The McDonough Competition: Works on Paper" from April 8 through May 7. This juried exhibition features works by student artists from universities and colleges within 100 miles of Youngstown.

This will be an annual student art competition sponsored by museum founder and art patron, Dr. John J. McDonough and friends in conjunction with YSU. Sponsors for the competition include McDonough; Paul Dutton of Harrington, Huxley, Smith, Mitchell and Reed; Paul Riciuti of Buchanan, Riciuti and Balog; Gerald Walsh of Hill, Barth, King, Inc. and Gregory Ridler of the Mahoning National Bank of Youngstown.

The goal is to introduce students of other campuses to the McDonough Museum of Art.

"I hope that the McDonough competition rewards young artists for their artistic efforts and brings many people from the surrounding area to visit all the great museums in the city of Youngstown," McDonough said.

More than $4,000 was made available for awards including a $750 purchase award for a work which will be hung in the McDonough. Any work produced on or of paper is eligible including painting, drawing, printmaking, mixed media and one-of-a-kind photography. Artists must be currently enrolled college or university students who are attending school within 100 miles of Youngstown.

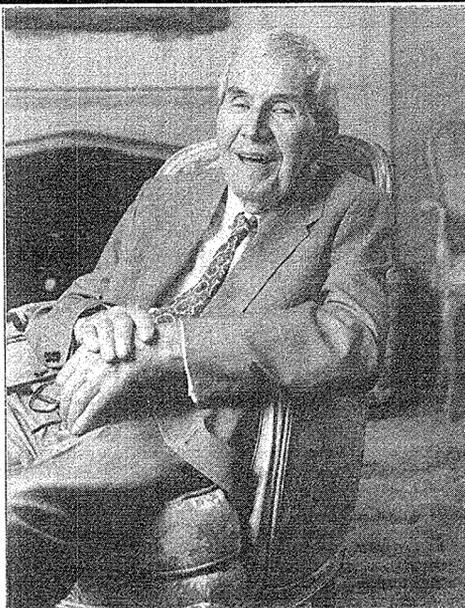

The juror is Marjorie Talalay, former director and currently consultant to the Cleveland Center for Contemporary Art. Talalay has worked to maintain close relationships with other cultural institutions by initiating joint programs.

Her recent awards include an award for Significant Contribution to Contemporary American Art by the Butler Institute of American Art, 1989; The Northern Ohio LIVE

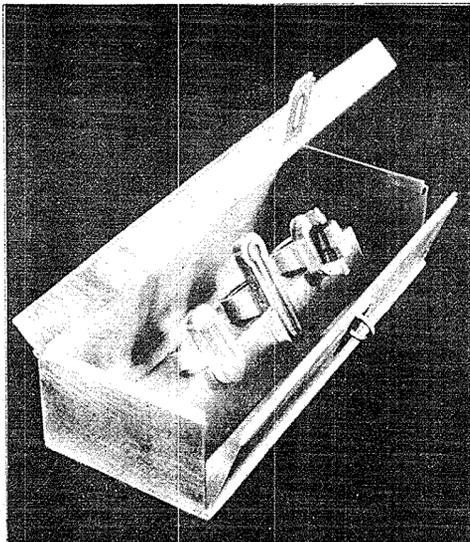

1989 Award for achievement in Visual Arts, for co-curating with Nina Sundell the exhibition "The Turning Point: Art and Politics in 1968"; the 1990 Cleveland Arts Prize, Special Citation, from the Women's City Club; the 1993 Ohio Governor's Award for the Arts in Arts Administration and the 1993 Northern Ohio LIVE Special Award of Achievement.

This is the first year of The McDonough Competition, and the prospectus was for works on paper. A total of 135 entries were received from art students of YSU, Kent State University, Case Western Reserve University, Cleveland Institute of Art, Cuyahoga Community College, Indiana University of Pennsylvania and the University of Akron.

Winners are as follows: $500 cash awards — Theresa Golas, Brent Young, Keith Foley, Preston Williams; $300 cash awards — Kim Novak, Ellen Faulkner, Joseph Sroka and a $750 Purchase award winner to be announced at the awards ceremony.

McDonough Dr. John J. McDonough, benefactor of the "McDonough Competition: Works on Paper," which runs April 8 through May 7 at the McDonough Museum of Art on Wick Avenue.

McDonough JoEllen Stevens' Tribute Toolbox, crafted of sterling silver, 14k gold, acrylic resin and found objects, is one of the many pieces included in "Ohio Metals: A Legacy" at the McDonough Museum of Art from April 8 through May 7.

Poets Read Works In Kilcawley Art Gallery

YSU — A poetry and fiction reading featuring Julia Wendell and Dr. Julie Brown, English, will be held tonight at 6 p.m. in the Kilcawley Art Gallery.

Wendell is a poet from Sparks, Maryland, where she teaches at Goucher College. She has published two widely praised collections of poetry, An Otherwise Perfect History (Ithaca House Books, 1988) and Fires at Yellowstone (Bacchae Press, 1993). Her poems have appeared in numerous important literary journals such as American Poetry Review, Missouri Review, Quarterly West, Crazyhorse and Prairie Schooner.

Brown teaches in YSU's English department. Her stories have appeared in numerous important literary journals such as Michigan Quarterly Review, Indiana Review, Southern Review and Greensboro Review. She recently edited a collection of essays, American Women Short Story Writers, which is forthcoming from Garland Press in 1995.

Kubacki Juggles Life's Bases And Balls

PIA BRADY
Editor-in-Chief

YSU Baseball Coach Dan Kubacki is sitting at his desk with his head bent. Kubacki starts writing something, and then he holds up his hand and says, "I'll be with you in one minute."

Kubacki is busy preparing for the doubleheader baseball game between YSU and Duquesne. Kubacki, who is anticipating the game, says Duquesne has a "much improved team, so it should be two good games."

Kubacki, previously an assistant baseball coach from Indiana University, has been the coach of YSU's baseball team for three years. Kubacki says he decided to come to YSU because it gave him an opportunity to coach.

"I like YSU a lot. It is a quality institution, especially the athletic department."

While attending the University of Toledo, Kubacki majored in broadcasting and considered a career in sports casting and coaching.

Kubacki swivels around in his chair as he considers future career options. After leaning back in his chair, he says, "Right now I'm enjoying [being a coach], and I'll just see where it leads."

It is apparent that Kubacki really enjoys the game of baseball. His small office is filled with YSU and other baseball memorabilia. For instance, a picture of Wrigley Stadium is hanging on his back wall. On the front wall is a poster of a batter and the words, "Victory Begins in the Heart." Kubacki immediately brightens up when he announces he is a Detroit Tigers' fan. Perhaps this is because he is a native of Toledo, mere hours from the Motor City.

Kubacki's father was a baseball and basketball coach in Toledo. Kubacki credits his father and Sparky Anderson with inspiring him to become a baseball coach.

"He's [his father] always been someone I've looked up to... and just growing up I had an opportunity to watch how he coached," Kubacki says. Kubacki swivels back in his chair and pointed to Anderson's picture.

"I had a chance to meet him, and I thought he carried himself in a class manner."

The phone rings. The phone has been ringing ever since Kubacki's interview started. Kubacki gets the phone and one minute later it rings again; there is some problem concerning where the Penguins' game with Duquesne will be played. Although this "controversy" distracts Kubacki, he keeps right on preparing for the game.

Although a lot of activity takes place in his office, Kubacki manages to keep everything straight. He answers phone calls, makes phone calls, takes care of anyone who comes to the office with a question and remembers the last question he answers for the interview. It is a good thing he has an assistant baseball coach.

"Brian Funge, [assistant baseball coach] is a major contributor to our baseball program, and he does an outstanding job," says Kubacki.

Kubacki also credits YSU Athletic Director Joseph Malmsur, with helping him with his coaching endeavors. Soon Coach Jim Tressel will be filling the position of athletic director. However, Kubacki is confident that "Tressel will do whatever he feels is best for the athletes."

As far as the team's goals go, Kubacki is confident that the team will play well as long as they "play every game the way that they are supposed to... the statistics will just fall into place." Thus far, Kubacki says he has "seen a lot of improvement with the guys from game to game."

The team has won three of the four conference games they have played this year. They beat Wright State University two out of three, and they also defeated University of Pittsburgh, which has a 19 and five record.

Currently, the team's batting average is .270, but it continues to improve with each game. Kubacki said the team's leading hitters include: Nick Meiring, sophomore, A&S; Joe Ayette, junior, Engineering; and Louis Vassalotti, senior, Business. Leading pitchers are Jeff Santa, freshman, A&S, and Scott Hitchcock, sophomore, A&S.

Kubacki receives yet another call. It is hard to imagine how he manages to coach the team and have room in his schedule to participate in Bible studies and running. Kubacki swivels forward in his chair and simply explains that he is a "Christian guy."

Kubacki has also run in the Columbus marathon. He leans back in his chair as if remembering the race and says it took him "three hours, fifteen minutes and nineteen seconds" to finish.

Kubacki has prepared the team for the doubleheader between YSU and Duquesne; however he is still busy preparing all the arrangements for the team. Although there are complications concerning where the team will play, one senses Kubacki is determined to get this game off the ground as he swivels back around to his desk.

Campus 2000 Project Proposes An Addition To Stambaugh Stadium

KIMBERLEY KERR

Last year YSU President Leslie Cochran unveiled his Campus 2000 plan that provides for a long-term campus development strategy which will produce a number of changes at YSU and in several adjacent neighborhoods during the next 10 years.

"Campus two thousand is one of three planning initiatives intended to turn vision into reality by projecting YSU's appeal beyond the traditional computer radius and providing facilities and services to meet anticipated growth," according to the May issue of The Jambar.

"The addition will also provide expanded areas for corporate and private organization and help attract competitors to play here."

Campus 2000 plans propose the inclusion of an addition to Stambaugh Stadium that will be built on the east side of the existing facility. Vern Snyder, YSU executive director of University Development, said that the proposed facility "will be the same height as the existing one but will extend from the fifteen-yard line to the fifteen-yard line."

The new addition is expected to benefit the University and sports programs by providing the opportunity to increase attendance.

"The addition will also provide expanded areas for corporate and private organization use and help attract competitors to play here," said Snyder. According to Snyder, the time for completion is not yet locked in because the plans are still in a proposal format.

Campus 2000 plans also include a convention center that could be the future home of the YSU basketball teams. However, Snyder said that the convention center is still in the rough stages and "we're not even looking at that until after

The Campus 2000 project involves representatives from YSU and the community working together to create a better environment for everyone.

Gregory Voted 1994 Volleyball Team Captain

JADA MIKINA BRADY
Staff Reporter

Tina Gregory will serve as women's volleyball team captain for the 1994 season. The four-year setter was voted into her position by her fellow teammates last week.

This season will be Gregory's fourth year on the team. Since her time on the team, Gregory said she feels the program has had some changes.

"I think the level of recruiting and athletes has improved," said Gregory. She also said she feels that there is a difference in the competition and players in the conference.

Gregory became interested in volleyball by watching her two cousins in seventh and eighth grade practice and play volleyball. Gregory, then in the sixth grade, began to practice with them.

After graduation Gregory intends to teach. She also would like to coach high school volleyball in the future.

The Farrell, PA, native has

Tina Gregory

2,032 assists, 51 serving aces, 798 digs and 155 kills. Last year alone, she gave 296 assists and 222 digs. In 1992, as a sophomore, Tina was named most valuable player for posting 784 assists.

About playing for YSU, Gregory said, "I enjoyed being coached by Joe (Joe Conroy, the head coach) and playing with the players on the team. The team is like a family, and we try to make the players fit in."

Supremes and Dionne Warwick.

Amos left the agency to work as a personal talent agent using his homemade cookies as a conversation starter to help charm show business clients.

"Friends told him his cookies were so good he should sell them," Shade said.

With $25,000 worth of help from friends Marvin Gaye and Helen Reddy, Amos started a cookie company which has grown to eight franchises in four states.

However, Shade said, "Even though he was selling cookies like crazy," he lost the company to outside investors.

In 1985, Amos had to sell the company because it was losing money. It has changed hands four times since then. "Amos lost all equity," Shade said.

However, once again Amos has bounced back with better cookies than ever. He assembled a management team to oversee his interests and started a new company called "Wally Amos Presents...Chip and Cookie." His new company produces more than just cookies. Dolls, children's books, clothing and cookie jars have been added to the list of Amos products.

The objective of the Williamson symposium is to bring campus professional practitioners and academics, to present their personal triumphs or defeats and to give an extra dimension of knowledge to YSU faculty and students.

Amos fits that description.

WTI

said Lavery.

According to Lavery, the students participating in the rally were told by the organizers of the event to expect police on the scene. However, no members of law enforcement appeared at any time. However, WTI did have security guards blocking the entrance to the plant itself.

"Some of the students went up and talked to them," said Lavery. "They weren't cold or anything,

The most prominent speaker at the rally was Paul Connett, a professor of chemistry at the University of Lawrence in Quebec, Canada. Connett, who is very active against WTI, was among those arrested when actor Martin Sheen was imprisoned in his protest against the waste incinerator.

Lavery said that during his talk, Connett criticized Governor George Voinovich for taking a stand of neutrality on the WTI issue. He also denounced President Clinton and Vice President Gore, both of whom said in December 1992, that they would not sign a permit for a test burn at the plant until all issues were resolved. However, once in office, the two allowed a test burn, and the incinerator limited operation.

"He challenged Clinton to come down there, look the people in the face and tell them that it was safe to live there," said Lavery.

The controversy regarding the WTI waste incinerator began in 1983 when the plant was given a permit to begin construction. A year later the Ohio state legislature passed a bill which mandated that incinerators such as WTI be constructed no less than 2000 feet from a residence or school.

The nearest residence to the WTI incinerator is 300 feet away, and a school is approximately 1100 feet away. In addition, the plant is also located on the Ohio River, a major source of water for the area.

Lavery attributes the location of the incinerator to something called "environmental racism," one of the main points of Connett's speech. Environmental racism argues that low-economic areas are typically chosen for plants such as the WTI incinerator since the community is not likely to protest to a great extent.

In fact, according to Lavery, some members of the community showed up at the rally to show their displeasure for it.

"One guy showed up at the beginning of the rally, said his peace and then left," said Lavery. "He was yelling while the speakers were talking."

All in all, Lavery believes the rally was a positive experience.

CORRECTION: Parking spaces will be increasing to an estimated 6,000 not 2,286 as cited in the April 5 issue of The Jambar.
