Black role models recognized during Malcolm X Week

Malcolm X Appreciation Night will be hosted 7:30 tonight in Kilcawley's Ohio Room.

CINDY MILLER
Assistant News Editor

The Pan African Student Union is sponsoring Malcolm X Week, a three-day event honoring the contributions of the late African-American activist.

Paula Nixon, president of Pan African Student Union, said Malcolm X can teach people of all races about perseverance.

"Malcolm X can teach you to stand up for what you believe in, even though your beliefs may change. Even when people give up on you, don't give up on yourself," she said.

Part one of the motion picture, "Malcolm X," was presented at noon, Monday in Peaberry's. The conclusion will be shown noon, Wednesday in Peaberry's.

At 7:30 tonight in Kilcawley's Ohio Room, the Pan African Student Union will present Malcolm X Appreciation Night. Nixon said students and community members share their thoughts about Malcolm X. Some people who have met Malcolm X will share those experiences with the group, she said.

Nixon explained during his career, the Nation of Islam discredited Malcolm X.

But after his journey to Mecca, his perspective of race relations and the political and economic situations facing blacks in America broadened.

Nixon said Malcolm X's wife, Betty Shabazz, who died last year, will also be honored.

"She stuck by him during the troubled times. She is a positive role model for black women," Nixon said.

Shabazz founded organizations and worked to educate the public.

"YSU is a campus where there is a need to recognize black role models to help strengthen the black community in America," she said.

King's speech sparks questions about race relations at YSU

With a successful diversity conference concluded just two weeks ago, Tamica Green, secretary of multicultural affairs for Student Government, said she wants people to think about Coretta Scott King's message and how it relates to race relations and diversity on our campus.

"I serve as a voice. It's my responsibility as secretary of multicultural affairs, to bring issues that face minority students to the forefront," she said.

One of those issues is the isolation African-American students feel, she said. Green said the isolation, which is sometimes self-imposed, is evident in the relations among the different branches of the Greek System.

There are three sororities and one fraternity consisting primarily of African-American students, many of whom feel detached from the predominately white chapters.

"I think when they think about the Greeks, they don't think about us at all," she said.

Green said the four groups have been invited to participate in some Greek events, but said, "We feel that we're really not wanted there."

Green said membership in the organizations is low. A recruitment and informational booklet was produced for the Greek System. However, Alpha Kappa Alpha, Delta Sigma Theta, Zeta Phi Beta and Alpha Phi Alpha, the groups with predominately African-American membership, were excluded.

A new site is being developed instead of finishing the current site.

With the simple click of a button, you can access a whole world of information on the World Wide Web. YSU students use the university Web site to locate faculty telephone numbers, e-mail addresses and information about upcoming campus activities. Prospective YSU students visit the site to learn more about the university.

The Internet is a valuable tool if Web sites are continuously updated, but much of the YSU Web site has not been updated since 1997.

Instead of updating the current site, a new YSU Web site is being developed, and it is taking longer than expected, according to Director of University Relations Linda Lewis. She said the new Web site should be running by June 1.

"We had hoped it would be up by April 1. I'm very aware of the need to get this updated," she said.

Lewis said it is possible an outside company will be hired this summer to revamp the site. She said her office is still determining whether to hire more students to finish the job or "take it to a professional Web site person." She said her office talked to three agencies and received three proposals.

"Talking to other universities, the cost was anywhere from $30,000 to $60,000 to set up a Web site," she said.

Robert Hogue, assistant professor, computer science and information systems, said, "It seems unfortunate to me that they would spend the money to contract it out and not spend the money to hire someone. For the Web citizen who is browsing, it would send a very unfortunate message to say the page was designed by company X."

Dr. Cynthia Anderson, vice president of Student Affairs has offered to help the groups with recruitment by sponsoring informational sessions, Green said.

The Interfraternity Council and the Panhellenic Council have representatives to Greek Campus Life, but the National Panhellenic Council, which governs nine national African-American fraternities and sororities, including the chapters at YSU, does not have a representative.

Green said she would like to see this policy change so the NPHC has representation at YSU. She said the campus could accomplish more if the groups could come together.

Robin Bradley, faculty adviser to the NPHC said the campus chapters are considering making their own booklet to increase African-American participation in the Greek System.

But even if the number of African Americans in the Greek System increases, the African American students are missing out on a vital part of the college experience — just having a good time.

There are few activities on campus that appeal to African-American students, she said. When the groups do sponsor events, participation is limited because their expectations for the events are low, Bradley said. YSU's commuter campus status makes it even more difficult to organize events, she said.

Bradley has been the adviser to the NPHC for about two years.

She advises concerned students to remain as active and visible as they can.

Nontraditional Student Organization sponsors Spring Fling event

Admission to the event is free.

SABRINA SCHROEDER
Assistant News Editor

The Nontraditional Student Organization will be holding a Spring Fling 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Wednesday from in the campus core.

The event is geared toward having children come onto campus with their parents so the children know what their parents are doing during the day.

Wendy Bolyard, event organizer, said "The idea is for children to know what parents do during the day. I know with my children, I drop them off at day care and then they have no idea about what I do during the day or what campus is."

The event is something the organization hopes to be able to do every year.

It is free, with the only cost being the buying of hot dogs and hamburgers that will be available courtesy of dining services.

Jocko the Clown will be on hand with an educational show that will also be entertaining with audience participation bringing an intimate touch to every program. Joe Sullivan, aka "Jocko," graduated from the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus College of Clowns in 1969, followed by a two-year tour with the circus. Sullivan is a 1979 graduate of YSU who holds a degree in Advertising and Public Relations.

Local band Extinct will also be on hand for the day.

Although they have written some original music, the group will be playing mostly cover songs.

James Cerenelli, lead singer for the band, said, "We like to play a little of everything and appeal to the listening techniques of those in our age range. We have songs from artists such as Jimi Hendrix, Garth Brooks and Jimmy Buffett."

There will also be an M-4 Motion Simulator courtesy of the Smith Agency, Inc., in Grand Rapids, Mich.

The simulator is a personal motion theatre and is the world's only 360-degree rotating motion simulator.

"I know with my children, I drop them off at day care and then they have no idea about what I do during the day or what campus is."

Student Government blazes a new Path

One obstacle for the new Financial Path is the quarterly budget verses the annual budget.

CINDY MILLER
Assistant News
MEGAN E. WALSH
Contributing Writer

It's written in plain English, yet some say it's impossible to understand. It's long, tedious and boring, but it's one of the most important documents to student organizations.

Although they'll never have direct contact with it, this document is equally important to the student body. This complicated, yet necessary document, is the Financial Path.

Any event sponsored by a student organization on campus can receive funding from Student Government; however, the 37-page Financial Path has strict regulations on what can and cannot be funded.

For example, only 50 percent of travel, lodging and conference fees can be funded. Sigma Alpha Epsilon requested $790 for a National Leadership Conference, but was only granted $395 due to this regulation.

This is just one of the regulations student organizations find fault with and have prompted Financial Appropriations Committee members to revise the Financial Path.

Jason Pavone, secretary of finance, said the booklet is given to all student organizations at the beginning of each school year for their review and use. From the Financial Appropriations Committee's perspective, student accountability must be increased.

"Student Government loves to fund events that we feel are worthy to YSU and involve a lot of students," said Tara Mauch, Financial Appropriations chair.

However, she said, organizations need to take more responsibility and be held accountable for the funds they receive.

The six-person committee is working to amend the Financial Path by taking suggestions from other schools such as Bowling Green, Northwestern and the University of Madison.

Mauch said the committee examined each of the school's paths and outlined their strengths to possibly use in the new Path. They were prompted to do so by both complaints from student organizations concerning efficiency and suggestions for overall improvement of the procedures.

Pavone said, "We all agreed that something needed to be done about this. Some schools' financial paths only had five pages. We got ideas from them and some input from student organizations on campus."

One of the fundamental dilemmas of the current Financial Path is the quarterly budget versus the annual budget.

"You can't please everyone. Quarterly budgets didn't please everyone. Annual budgets won't please everyone. Some people need money ahead of time, but other groups like flexibility," Pavone said.

With quarterly budgets, the requests are due the quarter before the event occurs.

Chantel Gonzalez, Financial Appropriations Committee member, said the committee wants annual budgets for organizations that hold annual events.

Other events would be funded through the general requests for funding. Deadlines for requesting funds have not been set because the plan is still preliminary, Gonzalez said.

Mauch said under the new plan, student organizations must take more initiative to get the funds. They must provide the committee with a list of organizational accomplishments, such as community services, and an outline of the event for which they are seeking funds.

Following the event, the organization must fill out a form detailing the event, attendance and its benefit to YSU. The organization's adviser must also sign the form, Mauch said.

In an effort to further the efficiency of the new financial path, the committee is exploring the addition of a flow chart that will outline what organizations need to do to apply for and receive funds.

"We want to have a laid-back, casual, friendly atmosphere," Gonzalez said about the committee's new approach to allocating funds.

Pavone said the new path should cut down on money that sits in accounts and is not used. Fall quarter, $4,630 of unused funds was collected from student organizations' accounts.

"[The new path] will be fair to everyone. This book fails because it gives them too much information that they don't need to know and it ends up confusing them," Pavone said.

Professor donates dollars for writing scholarship

■ Students must have a 2.8 GPA to apply.

EMILY D. CRONK
News Editor

The money tree is continuing to grow for new and transfer students interested in coming to YSU this fall.

A gift of $20,000 was donated by Robert A. Hogue, assistant professor in computer science and information systems, for a new writing scholarship.

The money will be disbursed in $1,000 increments over the next 20 years and will also be used to attract students to the university.

"I wanted the money that I donated to be used for incoming and transfer students because I am hoping that it attracts them not only to YSU but to the study of writing as well," said Hogue. "There are so many other scholarships at YSU for current students, and I wanted other people to have a chance to win a scholarship."

Hogue decided to donate the money because of his interest in writing. He has had much success in the English department while "tag team" teaching English 551, which includes work with computers.

"I really made my decision to start a scholarship after helping to 'tag team' teach in the English department," said Hogue. "Everyone in that department is incredible. And the response to what I've done has made it all worth it. But the real gratitude for me will come when the scholarships can finally be used this fall."

In a prepared statement, Vern Snyder, vice president for development and community affairs expressed his appreciation for the donation.

"Bob's desire to give back to the institution is the most significant validation of the University's mission. After all, who can better judge the institution and its worthiness than someone inside? That makes his gift doubly important," he said.

In order to win the scholarship, students who apply must follow some general guidelines. The students must complete an application form, have a GPA of 2.8 or higher and write an essay consisting of 250 to 300 words illustrating why he or she is interested in the scholarship and why he or she should be chosen.

"The criteria for the scholarship isn't really anything new to students who have applied for scholarships in the past," said Hogue. "With the exception that this particular scholarship is for new and incoming students. I am hoping to see a great turnout of applicants this fall."

YSU forms partnership with Youngstown Business Incubator

■ Representatives stressed the region must change to a technological-based one in order to succeed.

SABRINA SCHROEDER
Assistant News Editor

A formal Partnership Council was announced Thursday morning between YSU and the Youngstown Business Incubator to encourage the growth of high technology companies in the region.

Betty Jo Licata, dean, College of Business Administration, said, "The partnership will create an added value of resources of the incubator and the university."

Representatives from the Partnership Council and the Ohio Industrial Technology Council stressed the region must change from a manufacturing-based economy to a technological-based one in order for it to succeed in the 21st century.

Objectives have been developed for this change to occur. These include stimulating a regional knowledge regarding technology-based business opportunities, stimulating among selected faculty an entrepreneurial outlook toward their academic discipline and consideration of the commercial potential of their research and establishing research partnerships between emerging technology-based companies and YSU faculty.

Other objectives include creating internship opportunities for YSU students with emerging technology-based companies, actively pursuing research opportunities that support the goals of YSU and the Youngstown Business Incubator, establishing methods of access for emerging technology-based companies and stimulating an entrepreneurial outlook among YSU students.

"The focus of the partnership is not on someone creating a business to keep themselves employed, but to employ others as well," Licata said.

"The most successful incubators are those that have a close partnership with universities. Students will be provided an increased opportunity for students interested in working in a high technology business, either starting their own or interning for one," she added.

Hogue added, "It sends two messages — either we can't do it, or we don't want to do it — and neither of those is acceptable."

The YSU Web site should contain useful information for YSU students, especially prospective students.

Mandy Brooks, Fine and Performing Arts Webmaster, said "It's a major component for recruitment and information for students. It should be treated as any published recruiting material."

Lewis said they are not updating the current site because a new site is being developed by Eric Elliston, sophomore, computer science and information systems. She said he has been developing the new Web site, but nobody has been hired to help him. The site that Elliston is developing should replace the current YSU Web site on June 1, according to Lewis.

Elliston said Lewis has not told him that they were taking proposals from outside companies to finish the project.

He said, "This is the first I have heard of an outside company coming in to finish it."

Elliston, who has worked alone on the project, has spent a lot of time developing the new site. He said the site is almost finished.

"I used to spend at least 20 hours per week on the site until I had it basically completed. Many hours were at home due to lack of equipment for this project," said Elliston.

He said he was hoping other students would be hired to help with the project.

Both Elliston and Hogue said YSU should hire a full-time person to update and maintain the site.

Lewis said, "At this point, I don't think we will be hiring a full-time Webmaster."

Hogue said YSU students should be hired to help with the YSU Web site because it would be an excellent experience, and they would be able to have input and be part of the university.

Several YSU students run Web sites on and around campus, and some of them might be interested in joining the YSU Web site team.

Jason Hallewell, junior, telecommunications, is the YSU Now Web site designer. He said he updates the site frequently.

He said, "When I changed the YSU Now page, it took me half an hour, and every time I update it takes me about five minutes."

Erik Hendel, junior, telecommunications, has his own Web site. He said he updates his site weekly, but he said major changes need to be made frequently.

"I think you should revamp your Web site every three months," he said.

The YSU Web site is a large, complex site that connects all aspects of the university. Hogue said the site should be updated on a daily basis.

Elect Boone and Chasebi

YSU's Student Government is one of the most important student organizations on campus. Student Government offers students a voice to the administration and the community.

Because of the importance of Student Government, it needs to be led by competent individuals who have the students' wants and needs at heart. In this year's election, there are many qualified candidates, but Kipp Boone and Angela Chasebi are the best candidates for president and vice president.

Boone and Chasebi both served on Student Government this year and Chasebi was one of only two vice-presidential candidates who knew anything about Academic Senate, in which the vice president is extremely involved. The other was Maria Carano.

Boone and Chasebi have a realistic platform and care about what the students want. They propose to make Student Government more visible and accessible to students by making all representatives serve office hours and continuing the Student Government newsletter. Boone created the newsletter, which already shows his willingness to let students know what's going on.

They also propose reinstating a Campus Activities Board, which will allow students to have more say in the kind of entertainment that comes to campus. This is a good idea since students are always complaining there's nothing to do.

Boone and Chasebi also propose trying to create a fixed tuition rate and book swap meets where students can buy, sell and trade textbooks with other students.

Boone and Chasebi have the best ideas and the most ability to make them happen. They have been the most proactive of any of the candidates, being the first to hold a press conference. Boone has also published his ideas in The Jambar.

Boone and Chasebi have shown they are committed to serving the students and making themselves and the rest of Student Government available to all students. For this reason, they should be elected.

Vote yes to $2 increase

Students are always complaining there's nothing to do on campus and that the entertainment we do have is not very entertaining.

Students have the chance to change all that this week, by voting for a $2 per quarter increase to bring in a big-name act. This proposal won't do all the work. Students will still probably have to buy tickets, but it's a step in the right direction. It will also raise $40,000 to bring in somebody YSU students and the community will want to see. It would be wonderful for the students and for the university.

Student Government has put this issue on the ballot to address the student consensus concerning entertainment on campus. We owe it to them and to ourselves to vote in favor of this.

A STAFF VIEW

Vote responsibly

The signs are posted, the buttons and stickers are all passed out and the polls are in place. Yes, it is that time of year again. Student Government elections.

When casting your vote today, remember that the vice president will have just as many duties as the president, if not more.

According to the Student Government Constitution, the president of Student Government serves as an ex-officio member of Academic Senate, along with numerous other duties.

The person elected to the position of Student Government president is responsible for making any recommendations to Student Government in writing, submitting the annual budget to Student Government, approving or vetoing all legislation passed by Student Government, submitting approved names for Cabinet positions to Student Government, discharging obligations delegated to him/her in the form of legislation by Student Government, assuming responsibility for all authority he/she has delegated, acting as the official representative of Student Government and Student Body and appointing the chairperson(s) of the Homecoming Committee with approval of Student Government.

The vice president of Student Government is responsible for performing any duties delegated to her/him by the President, is an ex-officio member of the Academic Senate and is responsible for the Academic Senators.

The person elected will also be responsible for assuming the functions and duties of the president if the president is not able to perform the duties.

According to the Student Government Constitution, the vice president "shall preside over all regular and special meetings of Student Government, shall have the power to call special meetings of Student Government, shall appoint and remove members of special committees, shall appoint the parliamentarian from the Student Representatives; shall create all special legislative committees and shall perform those functions normally pertaining to the position of chair as defined in Robert's Rules of Order."

Think about the requirements of both positions and check on the qualifications of the candidates before casting your vote. You are voting for the people who will be representing the student body for the next year; make sure you vote for who you feel will be the best and do the job, and not for someone who simply says "Vote for me."

Congratulations on successful cleanup

On May 8, about 70 YSU students set out to make a difference. These students, comprised mostly of members from the Greek System and Scholar program, decided to change the area around YSU for the better. They set out to clean up the Northside, which is the area around the residence halls, from Wick Park to Wick Street.

This group of students worked tirelessly and collected countless bags of trash and litter. These bags of trash, along with a few stray trees, were carried away by the City of Youngstown and disposed of properly.

I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate and thank all of those that participated in the cleanup. The difference each of you made is remarkable. I took the time afterwards

If 70 students can make a difference around YSU, just imagine the difference that more than 10,000 students can make to the City of Youngstown.

to drive the area and the improvement was amazing. Each of you should be very proud of your efforts. I would also like to encourage each and every student to take part in this cleanup next fall. THROUGH EBONY EYES

QUANTIA D. WATSON
Contributing Writer

Single parents

At the beginning of the school year, a young lady came into The Jambar upset about an article. She said the writer made it seem as if single parents are the only ones who have a hard time juggling school and children.

Of course, that is not true. Any person who balances school or work with child rearing has it hard. It is worse for single parents, though. I know because I've been on both sides of the fence.

Before my relationship with my son's father dissolved, I could count on him for certain things. We took turns getting up at night, we switched who would take my son to the sitter and when one of us was too tired to keep our eyes open, the other could pick up the slack.

When he moved to Columbus, however, things changed — drastically. All of a sudden I was doing everything alone, and it was a much harder task.

My days were completely full. I worked full time from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. I was a full-time student from 5:40 to 9:30 p.m. In the hour between work and school, I picked my son up from daycare and dropped him off at my mother's house. After school I picked him back up and we didn't get home until 10 p.m. every night.

I never had time to do homework until the weekend and if it was due a day or two from when it was assigned, I had to try to do it on my lunch break, ask for an extension or leave work early.

Sometimes I called off or didn't turn in my assignments. Incidentally, that was the last time I was in school for a few years.

When I did return to school last September

I worked at a hospital 32 hours per week, The Jambar 10 hours per week, and I took three classes. That doesn't include homework, studying or family time. Have you ever tried doing your homework at Chuck E. Cheese? Whoever said single parenting isn't harder was grossly misinformed.

I thank God every day for my mother. Last quarter she worked part time at her own job so my son could stay with her during the week. Some single parents don't have that kind of support.

Normally, I don't sing praises to my son's father, but he does pay support and exercise his visitation rights. Any time I ask him to keep Ri'Quan for a weekend, or a week, to give my mom and me a break, he does it without complaint. Fewer single parents have that.

Sometimes teachers scowl at us for having less than perfect attendance, but when the school calls saying my son is ill or busing has been cancelled, I have to stop what I am doing to get what he needs.

He always comes first. And if I miss class to catch up on homework for another class, my teacher can be assured that I have missed another class, at some time, to catch up on homework for him or her.

Some people say it was my choice and I just have to deal with it. It was and I do. I could have abstained, but I didn't. I could have had an abortion or given him up for adoption, but I didn't. Some people didn't have a choice. They may have gotten divorced, or been widowed.

The road for other single parents and me is longer and tougher. Still, every time I look at the smile on my baby's face, I know he is worth it. I will continue to do what I have to do to give him the best possible life.

Commending university's Women's Club

I wish to commend the YSU Women's Club on their successful annual dinner at which they awarded two scholarships, installed officers for the next academic year and honored my late wife, Martha Shuster, and me for our past support of their programs.

Martha was president of the Club from 1980 through 1981, and we both enjoyed the social interaction with many of the members through the years since we came to YSU in 1971.

I was enabled at this dinner to announce the establishment of the Martha Kryston Shuster Memorial Scholarship, which will, in the next three years, be funded to $50,000 plus interim investment gain under the care of S. Reid Schmutz, president of YSU Foundation. We expect that annual income from this fund will produce three or more $1,000 scholarships.

This scholarship program will supplement the Club's current scholarship program and the applicants will be selected by the Club's scholarship committee and in accordance with their general criteria.

The membership of the Club has fallen off in recent years, so I would urge all university women and the wives of faculty and male employees to join this wonderful organization and help support its programs for the betterment of the university, as well as enjoy the fellowship and special programs it offers.

PRESIDENTIAL AND VICE PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES

Robert Harvey and Marla Carano

Qualifications and Experience:

Robert Harvey: 1996 Graduate of Youngstown Chaney High School, senior, political science major (G.P.A. 3.20), YSU Centurians member, Golden Key National Honor Society, Student Government Representative. College of Arts & Sciences, Student Government Parliamentarian, member of Executive Committee, Political and Legal Thought Society president. Nemenz IGA, Struthers, OH: employed four years, Employed as executive assistant on YSU campus, 1999.

Marla Carano: 1997 Graduate of Austintown Fitch High School, Secondary Education-Comprehensive

Communications Major (G.P.A. 3.60), Student Government Rep-at-Large, two years, Student Government: second vice-president/member of Executive Committee, Served on Academic Senate-two years, member of YSU Centurians, Serving on Academic Grievance Committee, former member of General Education Committee (GER), Served on Orion Award Selection Committee.

Platform:

We propose to enhance the relationship between the students of YSU and the City of Youngstown. Recognizing that the University and the City are becoming integrated further, there are many concerns that need to be addressed on the student level. If elected we propose to be the voice of the students in the Campus Gateways Project, particularly on the issues of parking and campus accessibility.

We plan to use our experience as student leaders to do the job of Student Government. Having served on the executive committee of Student Government, we are familiar with the way that it operates. If elected, we will use this experience and knowledge to the best of our abilities to serve the students and student organizations.

We will use our experience on various committees to help guide the students and represent their needs through the Q2S and GER processes.

Many current and future students will be affected by these changes. Adequate and experienced student representatives will ensure that the needs and concerns of students are addressed.

Finally, having served on Student Government, we are well aware of the limited power of student representatives due to the limitations placed upon us. We will not make unrealistic or false promises.

The one promise we can and will make, is to be available to the students and student organizations to listen to, talk with and remedy their concerns.

We would value the opportunity to personally speak to your organization at your next meeting and discuss our views and proposals in further detail, as well as to address any questions you may have.

Please feel free to contact us if you would like to set up an appointment to speak.

You can place a note in our mailboxes in the Student Government Office.

Kipp Boone and Angela Chasebi

Qualifications and Experience:

Our names are Kipp Boone and Angela Chasebi. We would like to be your next president and vice-president of Student Government. We want to fight for the great students of this university.

We also felt we are the most qualified for the positions. Kipp Boone has been a Resident Assistant in Lyden for the past two years along with being Treasurer of the American Society of Civil Engineers.

He is also a member of Golden Key National Honor Society and of Political and Legal Thoughts, recipient of the Arby's Leadership Award. He is a Representative at Large in Student Government with a GPA of 3.81. He is very active in helping the students as shown by his creation of the Student Government Newsletter and by helping plan the ASCE trip to Las Vegas.

Angela Chasebi is also very active in Student Government and has been for the last two years, serving as the Representative at Large last year and the Representative of Fine and Performing Arts and Publicity Chair this year.

She is also a sister of the Delta Zeta Sorority, is currently the 2nd Vice President of the DZ's and received the Delta Zeta Phyllis Favorite Outstanding New Member Award this year. Along with this, she was a member of the Panhellenic Council. She co-chaired the successful diversity conference and is a member of the Diversity Curriculum Committee.

She is also the secretary of the Political and Legal Thoughts Society and was on the Homecoming Committee the past two years.

She spearheaded the successful solar survey that Student Government conducted.

Our goals, if elected, are designed to help every student in every aspect of his/her education here at YSU. We do not want any student to feel that we are not helping them. We want Student Government to represent all students and work for the student body as a whole.

1. Leadership for the Semester and GER change: With all the changes that are about to take place, your Student Government needs to step up and make sure that no students are hurt or forgotten in this transition. This is what Angela and I want to do. We want to create a board where the students can go if they feel that they were wronged in the process. To help this, each student will receive an information packet from us detailing all the University Services.

2. More visible Student Government: Under our leadership, Student Government will be more involved in campus and will work hard for the students. They will hold office hours and everyone in their colleges will at least know their names.

3. More Campus activities: We will reinstate the Campus Activities Board (CAB) to plan all campus events. CAB will be student run, therefore the students will pick what they want to do. Through this organization, we will increase bands, parties, festivals, and anything else the students want to do.

4. Fixed Tuition Rate: We will fight to create a fixed tuition rate here at YSU. These systems are in place at Wright State in Dayton and also at Kent State, so we should be able to get one here.

5. Book Swap Meets: We will create an organized event where students can go to buy/sell/trade books with each other, instead of the local book stores.

David Weiss and Ryan Crincic

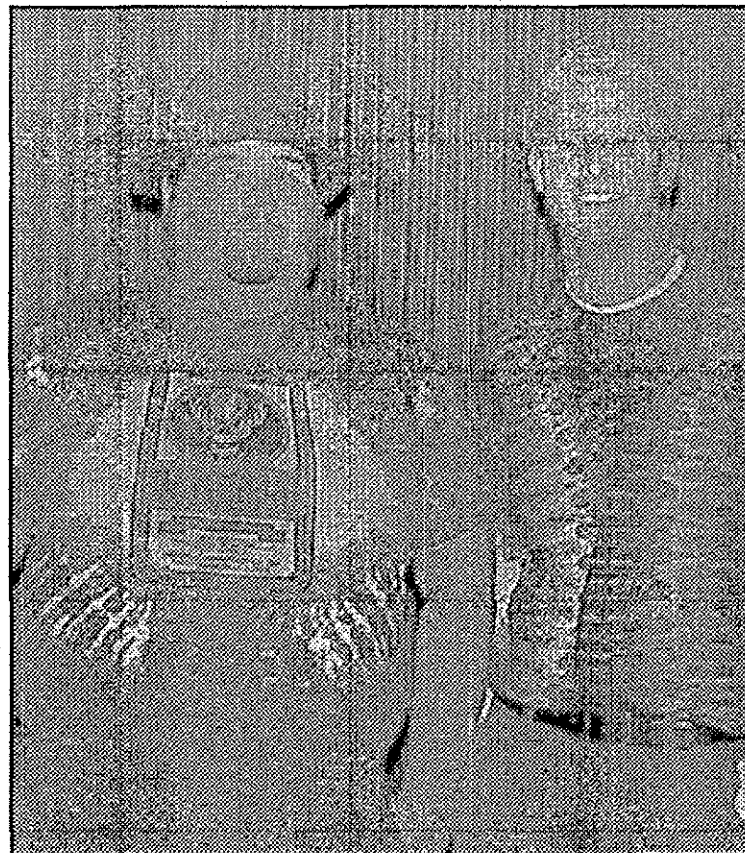

Qualifications and Experience:

David Weiss: One year on student government, A & S representative, three years on YSU tennis team

Ryan Crincic: '95 graduate of Chaney High School, served one year as A & S representative of Student Government. I am a normal student who can relate to the majority of students. I have worked full time and gone to school full time. I have had two jobs and gone to school full time. I have the experience to do the job.

Platform:

The bands proposal, an increase in advertising to better promote the university, a better relationship with the city to improve and develop areas such as Federal Plaza into venues of college life, an increase of entertainment on the core of campus.

GOVERNMENT ELECTIONS

PRESIDENTIAL AND VICE PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES

Joelle Sahyoun and Mike Ray

Qualifications and Experience:

Joelle Sahyoun Student Government Representative-at-Large, Academic Senate Representative Academic Grievance student representative, Student Disciplinary/Board Member, Homecoming Chair (1998), Peer Assistant (winter 1997-present), president of Zeta Tau Alpha Sorority, treasurer of Eta Sigma Gamma, special teams coach for Annual Red and White game (1998-99), Arby's Leadership Scholarship Recipient.

Mike Ray Resident assistant 97-98, student assistant in the psychology department 95-99, KeyCorp INROADS intern 1998, YSU Mascot 98-99.

My running mate and I are the best candidates for the positions of Student Government president and vice president because these positions for us are not simply resume builders, but serve as a means for us to serve the students and make a difference.

It's true I don't have experience working within Student Government, but I have a great deal of experience actually working with students, which says that I didn't have to be an elected member of Student Government to do what I've always desired to do — serve the students.

Platform:

Our platform motto states "Our goal is to represent you," which we intend to do if elected.

Often times, candidates guess what students want and need. Rather than guess, we asked the students via survey and discovered what things were important to the students.

Some of the concerns included the establishment of a more visible and accessible Student Government. The surveys also indicated the recreation center was still a viable issue.

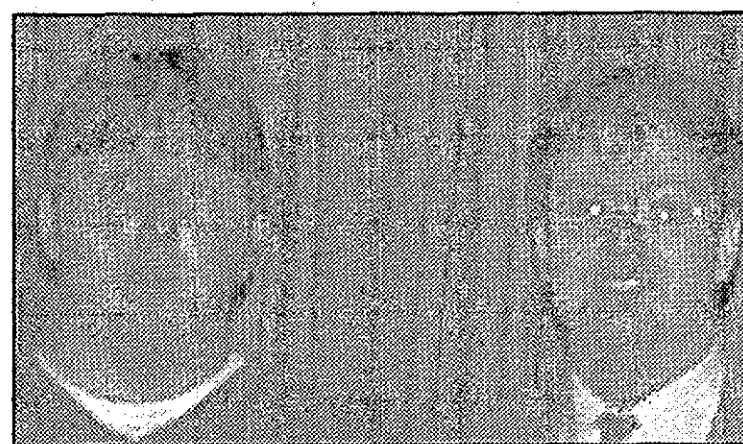

While our opponents are focusing a great deal on Q2S, it is our understanding from those who are directly in charge of the transition that the greatest role Student Government could play is in providing information to the student body, which we intend to do.

Once again, rather than guess or assume what role Student Government should play, we asked key players.

Student Government currently has a cabinet, who, for the most part, is not as visible as they could be. It is our goal to utilize cabinet members more effectively to help ensure the needs of their constituents (dorm residents, non-trads and minorities) are being addressed.

Up till Dawn is a committee that we serve on outside the campus. We will utilize this program to bring in two national acts.

Chris Pribisky and Ben Keck

Qualifications and Experience:

Chris Pribisky Served five years as delegate to East Ohio United Methodist Youth Annual Conference 1994-96, section leader of the YSU marching band, two jazz ensembles, woodwind choir and saxophone quartet, manager and leader of our band who played in Florida, Ohio and Pennsylvania, and have been offered a tour in Brazil.

Having lived on campus for the past three years and hearing the wants and concerns of the students, I am a very open person and communicate well with others. I have a lot of experience with parliamentary procedures.

Ben Keck Pi Mu Epsilon

treasurer, Sgt. at Arms, chairman and executive chairman of Grove City Area High School Model UN

I've seen many different aspects of the university, including the pros and cons of all the different "brands of students," and I'm very open to criticism and am willing to make changes if necessary.

Platform:

Stressing the importance of communication and increasing the lines of communication between students and Student Government. To inform students what's going on and to express their concerns.

Trying to harness the students power as a student body.

Vice president, The Institute of Electrical & Electronics Engineers, YSU student chapter. Member, The Centurians, YSU. Telecounselor & Tour guide, Office Of Undergraduate Recruitment & Admissions, YSU (July 1997-Dec 1998).

As a part of my job at YSU, I deal with students on a first hand basis and am aware of their concerns and opinions.

Platform:

Introduction of an online communication network for students to voice their concerns and opinions on various issues. Student referendums on issues including class offerings and scheduling problems, campus safety and tuition increases.

Tara Mauch

Position running for: Representative at large

Qualifications

I am currently a representative from the College of Arts and Sciences, while also serving as the Financial Appropriations Committee Chair. I am also a member of the Political and Legal Thought Society and am currently an intern at the Domestic Relations Division of the Mahoning County Courthouse.

Platform:

I think that it is important for the students needs to be expressed on the ideas of Q2S, GER, the campus Gateways Project, the search for the new president, as well as funding procedures. We have already started this process in the Financial Appropriations Committee by proposing a newly revised Financial Path. I feel that I know how to get things accomplished, and I think that certain things need to be changed. I can help make these changes happen.

George Anthony Zokle

Position running for: Representative at large

Qualifications:

1997 graduate of Austintown Fitch, People to People International: student ambassador to Russia/Baltic nations, served as intern in Washington, D.C. 1997, member of the International Board of Directors. YSU Centurians, Sigma Chi fraternity, gymnastics instructor for Youngstown, Gymnastics Center, former YSU parking employee, Banana Republic employee, Homecoming committee 1999, Sean Kessler Award Recipient for Zeta Tau Alpha.

Best Candidate for the job:

I have put forth all my true efforts in all that I endeavor. I am standing up for what I and the students of YSU believe in. My good relations with organizations, faculty and students enable me to apply my skills of leadership to make improvements for YSU.

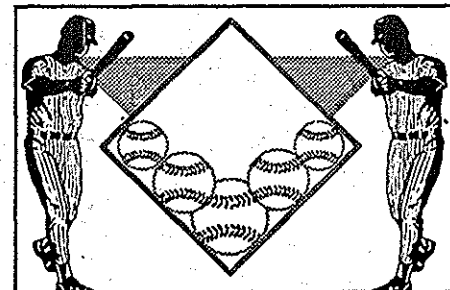

Platform:

By becoming aware of the diversity among YSU students, I plan to reach out to their best interests. Focusing on the rights of every student, I would like to start working to improve academic programs, student involvement, campus life and help to start building a new environment as our university heads toward the switch from quarters to semesters.

Penguins nab No. 5 seed in Mid-Con

■YSU gave No. 1 seed Oral Roberts its first two losses in the conference, along with beating every team but Western Illinois.

As YSU's baseball team slides into the final base of the year, they take a 17-34 record into the Mid-Continent Conference Tournament this week. They ended the home season May 10 with a commanding 14-1 victory over Cleveland State.

Thomas picked up a game against Duquesne yesterday. With a conference record of 8-10, the Penguins take the fifth seed. Oral Roberts takes the No. 1 seed with a 42-13 record, Valparaiso earns the No. 2 with a record of 27-25. Western Illinois claims the third seed with a record of 14-33, fourth seed goes to Chicago State. IUPUI gets the No. 6 seed with a record of 7-40-1.

The Penguins handed Oral Roberts their first two league losses earlier this year, as Oral claimed the title of the 29th team in the nation. YSU split with Valpo twice this year and fell to Western in all four match-ups. The Penguins went 3-4 against IUPUI this year.

The Red and White will be looking to keep the offense rolling, especially from junior Mark Thomas, who's been ranked nationally for his batting average for much of the season. He reached No. 2 the week of April 20 and captured YSU's All-Time Hits Leader title.

The Penguins play Valparaiso at 4:30 Thursday. The tournament is being held at Oral Roberts.

In the 1,500-meter run, sophomore Jeri Hull finished 23rd with a time of 4:05.20 and senior Matt Kaulen finished 26th with a time of 4:08.97.

Smith selected as all-academic

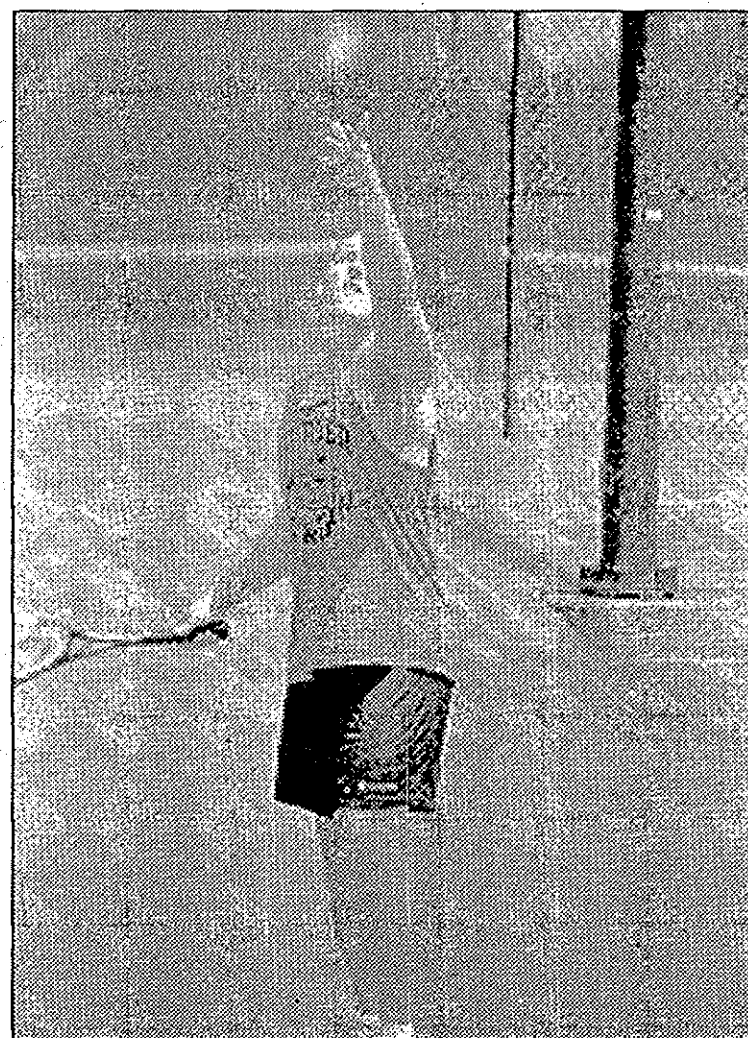

CINCINNATI — Senior Kevin Smith of the YSU baseball team was named to the GTE/CoSIDA Academic All-District IV Team.

Eleven athletes from 10 different Division I schools in three different states comprise the All-District Team. Smith, a 3.85 chemical engineering major, has played in 37 games for the Penguins this season. He's batting .240 with one home run and 14 RBIs. He is also a three-time All-Mid-Continent Conference Academic selection.

Team teaching offers benefits to students

■ Team-taught classes are those taught by two or more instructors.

JOYCE RANDALL
JO-LYNN HUNTER
Contributing Writers

With summer rapidly approaching, many members of the YSU community are reviewing the successes of the school year and deciding which things to use again and which to discontinue.

One feature of YSU's educational scene that has received high marks for its benefits to both students and faculty is the innovative approach to instruction known as team teaching.

Team-taught classes are those in which two or more instructors "team up" to instruct a course.

In some cases, the instructors are from the same department, while other classes employ instructors from different disciplines.

YSU instructors have approached many courses using team-teaching techniques, from the Dynamics of U.S. and Global Business to the teacher education course Building Foundations for Caring and Learning.

Despite the number of team-taught classes that have been offered at YSU, there are no set rules governing how the instruction will take place.

Instructors are free to decide if both are to be present at each class, or if the class will be split into two five-week sections.

Some have tried splitting two-hour classes into hour-long segments, with different instructors teaching each hour.

According to John Usis, professor of biological sciences, team-taught classes are born from an instructor's initiative.

"Usually a joint class is an instructor's idea, and [he or she] then interests another professor to aid [him or her]," Usis said. "Both become enthusiastic over the idea and propose it to the department."

Usis, who team-taught an environmental studies class with geology professor Alan Jacobs, said he brought the ecological component to the class, while Jacobs provided information about the impact on the environment.

While instructors may initiate team teaching, the university encourages them to do so.

viewpoints from the instructors," Nicolau said.

Christa Gillum, sophomore, special education, agreed with Nicolau, adding that team teachers often cover information more thoroughly.

Gillum also said team-taught classes break up the monotony of classroom instruction.

"You don't have the same professor day after day, so there's a little more variety for the students," Gillum said.

Robert Hogue, computer science and information systems professor, pointed out that team-teaching experiences can benefit instructors as well as students, saying his own experiences have been educational.

"I've learned a lot about English myself from teaching with other professors of that discipline," Hogue said.

Dr. Denise Da Ros, professor of teacher education, agreed with Hogue. She said while team teaching is more time consuming, the experience gained is worth it.

"It's nice to collaborate with others to share ideas and perspectives," Ros said. "I personally find it very rewarding."

The additional time involved is not the only concern of instructors who are team teaching, however. Guzell said that one issue instructors must address is consistency in testing, and that team teachers must be careful to assess students only on the information covered in the course—a task that can be difficult when two or more instructors are providing that information.

Guzell also pointed out that the cooperating instructors must be compatible.

"Team teaching is not for just any two instructors," he said. "Team teachers must work well together and have complimentary styles."

“Team teaching allows for a diversity approach, and the learning experience is enhanced because you are more likely to have an opportunity for critical analysis by students.”

Assistant Provost

Dr. Gordon Mapley, assistant provost, said the university encourages team-taught classes because of the benefits to students who take them.

"Any time you bring together two individuals to do something, whether it's to teach a class or build a house, you have an opportunity for enrichment that comes from having two perspectives," Mapley said.

"Team teaching allows for a diverse approach," he added, "and the learning experience is enhanced because you are more likely to have an opportunity for critical analysis by students."

Management professor Dr. Stanley Guzell said students enrolled in team-taught introductory courses also gain from meeting two or more professors through the experience and have an opportunity to "get a feel" for the type of instructors typical of the college.

YSU student Nicole Nicolaou said she enjoyed taking a team-taught geography class and found it to be a positive learning experience.

"The best thing about [a team-taught class] is getting different

College of Graduate Studies promotes program

■ A "Graduate Studies Information Day" informed students about continued education at YSU.

ANGELA GIANOGGIO
Managing Editor

The Kilcawley Arcade was beckoning to students Thursday to explore their options in the College of Graduate Studies.

A "Graduate Studies Information Day" took place 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. between the Candy Store and Comdoc, with seven department representatives present. Sitting at pamphlet-laden tables, the representatives were answering questions and explaining procedures to students as they walked by.

Dr. Thomas Copeland, English, said, "[The event] is to let prospective students know we are here and to let undergraduates know there is an active Graduate College on campus."

Jaelyn Farris, a graduate assistant who manned the counseling was available.

Tina Weintz, coordinator of admissions in the school of graduate studies, was in charge of the event. She said the information day has been a quarterly event for the past two years since she took over the position.

"It gives the students the chance to ask questions from different colleges, and [students] can also come talk to me," she said.

Weintz said the college is not as well-known at YSU as she would like it to be.

"I felt a lot of people on campus thought we didn't have a graduate program. I want them to look here before they look somewhere else," Weintz said.
