Alarms bring Surf's Up to screeching halt

By DEB SHAULIS
Jambar Entertainment Editor

Kilcawley Center was hot with action Friday night, but no one could be sure if things were getting too hot to handle.

The fourth annual Surf's Up Dance came to an early end as fire alarms were repeatedly pulled in Kilcawley Center, causing Kilcawley Center Student Activities and Auxiliary Services Director Phil Hirsch to close the dance for safety reasons.

"Somebody was liable to get hurt. I made the decision for safety's sake," Hirsch said.

The first fire alarm sounded at approximately 11:15 p.m. Alarms were pulled near the main entrance of the Chestnut Room and the entrance near the residence hall. Staff members tried to evacuate the building, but the students wouldn't leave, Hirsch said.

A second alarm was pulled around midnight. After the second alarm, Hirsch decided to file a report and end the dance.

The building had been cleared by approximately 12:45 a.m. After determining the second alarm false, "we let them [the students] go at their own pace," Hirsch said.

Between the music of the Fabulous

Flashbacks in the Chestnut Room and WHOT DJ A.C. McCullough in the Pink Flamingo Room, many students were unable to hear the alarms.

No one has been blamed for pulling the fire alarms as of yet, according to Hirsch.

Mike Thomas, midweek contest coordinator, agreed with Hirsch's decision to end the dance early.

The scene was reminiscent of a 1960s sit-in: students sat on the floor in the rear area of Arby's, protesting the announcement that the Surf's Up dance was officially over.

"Hell no! We won't go!" was the repeated chant of over 50 dance attendants.

However, students soon began to disperse as it was apparent the dance was over. John Shook of Canfield said he was disappointed that many students got up and left after Campus Security guards arrived on the scene.

Crime Stoppers focuses on unsolved Tenney murder

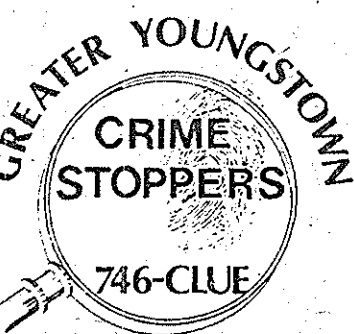

YOUNGSTOWN — The unsolved 1985 murder of YSU student Gina Gay Tenney has been selected as the "Crime of the Week" by the Greater Youngstown Crime Stoppers.

Tenney's body was found floating in the river by a passerby on Dec. 30, 1985 while he was checking his animal traps along the south bank of the Mahoning River, about 100 yards east of the West Avenue Bridge, according to Det. Michael Landers of the Youngstown Police Department.

Landers further stated that her body was taken to Southside Medical Center by the Youngstown Fire Department Ambulance. Dr. Nathan D. Belinky, Mahoning County Coroner, released autopsy findings indicating that Tenney had died of asphyxiation due to strangulation. Belinky ruled the death a homicide.

Anyone with information on this murder is urged to call Crime Stoppers collect, 746-CLUE Monday through Friday between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Persons with information do not have to give their names. A code number will be assigned to each caller. If the information leads to the arrest and indictment of the person(s) responsible, a cash reward up to $1,000 will be given as authorized by the Crime Stoppers Board of Directors.

Tenney, a 19-year-old sophomore, was the vice chairman of Student Council during fall quarter 1985 and was scheduled to advance to the position of office of chairman for winter quarter 1986. She was also a student assistant in the Student Serving Students program, which helps freshman students become familiar with the YSU campus.

Tenney's apartment located at 2236 Ohio Ave., was burglarized in early December but YPD had made no arrests after the incident.

Following Tenney's murder, Benny Lee Adams, who in 1985 listed addresses on both Willis Avenue and 2236 Ohio Ave., and Horace Landers, who in 1985 listed an address of 330 W. Evergreen Ave., were charged with receiving stolen property after it was determined that Adams had in his possession a Dollar Bank automatic teller card that belonged to Tenney.

Landers was also charged with receiving stolen property.

According to YPD, they also had in their possession a television that had belonged to Tenney.

Later, the Mahoning County Grand Jury refused to indict Adams on the receiving stolen property charge. The charge was also dropped against Landers.

Student injures finger during dance, another passes out

By PAMELA GAY

A former YSU student lost part of his finger in an accident and another YSU student suffered an epileptic seizure at Friday's Surf's Up dance.

James Zaremski of Struthers reported to Campus Security that a door on Kilcawley Center's second floor slammed on the little finger of his left hand at around 12:20 a.m.

Campus Security reports indicated that approximately one fourth of the finger was severed by the door.

Zaremski told The Jambar

that while he was talking to his girlfriend he leaned one hand back on "what he thought was just a wall but was really a door frame" of the southeast stairwell just west of the Chestnut Room.

He said that he wasn't really thinking of where he was leaning and that he had been talking for at least five minutes when the door slammed shut on his finger.

Campus Security reports stated an ambulance was called to Kilcawley Center and that one officer recovered the missing portion of the finger. Zaremski was transported to St.

Elizabeth's Hospital Medical Center.

Zaremski said that doctors at the hospital told him that the severed portion of his finger could not be put back on because of its smashed condition. He was released after his finger was sewn up, he reported.

Zaremski was a junior, F&PA, but dropped out this quarter to work.

Campus Security also received a call that a student had passed out in a downstairs bathroom of Kilcawley Center.

Trustees adopt raises; accreditation lost

By MELISSA WILTHEW
Jambar Editor

The Board of Trustees approved a 7.4 percent salary increase for its nonunion administrators during Friday's meeting and also announced in the provost's report that YSU's dietitian program lost its accreditation.

According to the adopted resolution, when the University's 1986-87 operating budget was adopted in June 1986, the salaries of all professional/administrative employees were included at the 1985-86 rates because part of that group sought union representation and chose to engage in collective bargaining.

Those that chose not to be represented by the union (YSU-APAS) have notified the trustees, thus going ahead with the raises.

The increases will be paid in lump sums for the period July 1, 1986 through last Friday and will continue on a monthly basis beginning Sunday.

Dr. Bernard T. Gillis, provost, will now earn $85,000 and Dr. Taylor Alderman, vice president of personnel services, will now make $76,500. YSU President Neil D. Humphrey's salary remains at $90,000. Approximately 82 additional personnel received salary increases, also.

In other action, Gillis reported that the Dietetic Association, which recently instituted dramatic increases in its requirements, revoked the dietitian program's accreditation.

Dr. Victor A. Richley, dean of CAST, stated in order to regain accreditation, the program would have to require students work nearly twice as many hours in clinical labs.

YSU has received $40,000 as the first payment under the terms of a "long-term See Trustees, page 16

Deviance rampant in academia

By DEB SHAULIS
Jambar Entertainment Editor

Cheating in academia is a bigger problem than most professionals want to admit, according to the participants in Thursday's Faculty Forum held in DeBartolo Hall.

Beverly Gartland, sociology, anthropology and social work, Dr. George Letchworth, director of counseling and health services and Dr. Charles Reid, philosophy and religious studies, discussed the problems posed by cheaters in the scientific and academic worlds. Dr. John Symthe, economics, was moderator.

Gartland, who discussed "Deviance in Science," said most of the examples of deviance "come from the natural sciences."

"What we feel is that it is easier to detect in the natural sciences rather than the social sciences," said Gartland. "That which is documented appears to be relatively few."

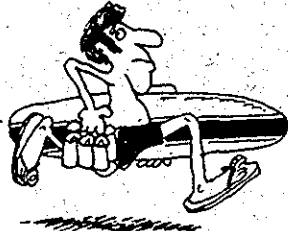

According to Gartland, the ratio of unreported acts of deviance to those which are reported is approximately twelve to one.

Gartland cited an example of See Forum, page 10

Sad mistake made by a select few

This was no ordinary dance — YSU students were too excited for that.

Students ran to the Spring Street entrance of Kilcawley at-tired in floral print with precious ticket in hand. Coats were carefully put away for the evening by patient nontraditional student helpers.

Fun was ready to be had by all during the annual Surf's Up Friday night dance.

However, one or more Surf's Up attendants ruined the fun for over 2,000 students — a person or persons pulled the fire alarms twice.

I can't help but wonder if they stood in last Wednesday's ticket line and planned their devious deed, thinking how funny it would be to see what 2,000 people would do when an alarm was sounded. Or maybe they imbibed too much and pulled the alarms on a whim or a dare.

Whatever the reason, it just wasn't funny. Students' lives were at stake and University officials were forced to take measures to guard those lives with the utmost care.

The decision was made to close the dance early in case a fire alarm was pulled again. How can you determine between a false alarm and a real one? Thus, the immediate decision to close the dance.

Whoever did it, college age is a little old for pulling fire alarms. Pulling fire alarms is the type of behavior you hear high school students performing.

However, the atmosphere in Kilcawley Center Friday night was unusual and different from the everyday routine. Students were talking to students they didn't even know — no cliques, no snobby-sectors sitting off by themselves. Every facet of the University was represented.

Hopefully, an act accomplished by a few will not ruin the fun for the majority in the future.

Kilcawley officials will contemplate and consider new and better ways to hold future Surf's Up dances.

Afterall, you learn from past mistakes — hopefully those students who pulled the fire alarms have.

COMMENTARY

Surf's Up incident turns campus to Apathy University

One of the biggest events to take place on this campus was threatened Friday night because of someone's insane practical joke.

Everyone at the dance, except the idiot that set the fire alarms off realized the severity of the two false alarms.

The decision to close the dance was a good, sound choice made by the Kilcawley directors. The facts were plain and simple, someone threatened the lives of 2,000 people by pulling the fire alarm not once, but twice.

LISA M. SOLLEY

The situation could have ended differently — it could have been tragic. Something perhaps a little more scary is the fact that no one exited the building when the alarms were sounding.

The sirens were ringing in Chestnut Room and yet many students in Arby's didn't even hear the alarms.

Probably the most scary event of the entire ordeal is one that has not happened, but was being considered — should Surf's Up be cancelled for next year?

The signs for cancellation were apparent and speculations were running rampant. Once again, it appeared that YSU would resort to the drop back and punt syndrome when the first signs of trouble appeared.

Maybe we should change the name of our University once again. Apathy State University with a drenched Penguin holding a fire extinguisher for a mascot.

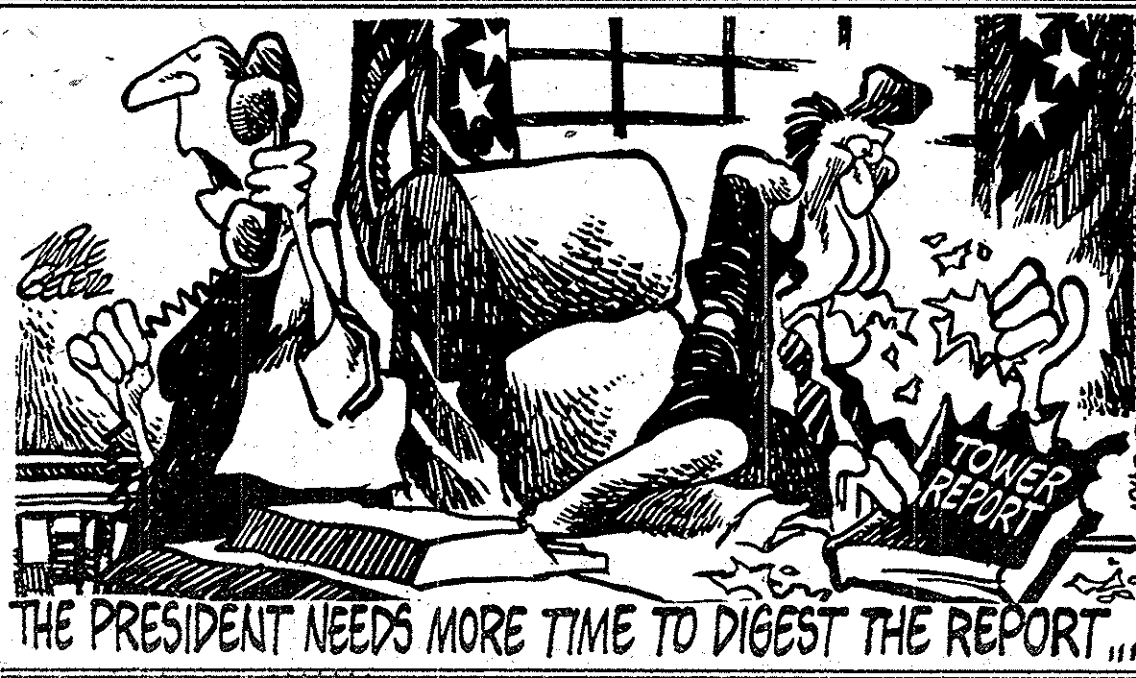

We can change our slogan to home of the fighting quitters. Advertise for degrees in defeatism.

My only question concerning this throw-in-the-towel and cancel if-something-goes-wrong attitude, is why didn't anyone ever tell our football team this motto? They had a 2-9 season last year, but are they calling it quits? Heck no, they're trying to rebuild and improve themselves.

All students should be thankful that student services and student auxiliary

Expresses feelings for Surf's Up

Dear Editor,

I have two emotions which I would like to express concerning this past weekend's Surf's Up party here at the University.

I have been at YSU since the inception of Surf's Up and served as a committee person on the very first party.

I have watched the party grow to the point where the first Surf's Up suffers in comparison to the extraordinary effort put forth by this year's committee.

Despite the problems of Friday night, I would like to let all the people involved in this year's production to know that their efforts did not go without notice and that they were greatly appreciated by the majority of students here on campus.

You all worked very hard and it showed at every turn made in Kilcawley. Congratulations.

My second emotion is negative and yet puzzling. How do you keep the few who get out of hand from ruining it for themselves and the other 98 percent of the student body who came to the dance, have a few beers, and see the skin that they have not seen since last September?

Campus Security did everything expected of them short of having a guard posted at every fire alarm.

I hope that the problems of last weekend do nothing to stop the enthusiasm for next year's Surf's Up.

Commends Surf's Up workers

Dear Editor,

As we kicked back and said, "Boy I can't wait until Surf's Up this year," they were having meetings and spending endless hours planning Surf's Up.

As we stood in line buying our tickets, they put up with all the complaints and hassles.

As we dressed up in our pastel Jams, sipped on Bud Lights and wondered if we were going to be able to work or not, they were running around putting the final touches on Surf's Up.

You may ask, "Who are 'they'?" Are "they" hired to come into YSU and put on this wild production? Are "they" crazy or what? Not exactly.

"They" are the dedicated, creative and hard-working Surf's Up committee members, staff members and students.

I want to commend these people for an excellent job on this year's Surf's Up. Special recognition to Madonna Barwick, the 1987 Surf's Up chairperson and her wild Surf's Up crew!

Hats off to the staff members of Kilcawley Center for allowing us to turn Kilcawley into an animal house. Also to the Non Traditional Student Organization who dedicated their time to work the coat check. "Thank you" for your time and patience.

Most importantly, "thank you" to Lynn Haug (if she is still alive). See Letters, page 11

March marks first Women's History Month

By LISA M. SOLLEY
Jambar Managing Editor

Today, many females juggle the dual role of career-woman and mother, leaving behind the old stereotypes of womanhood.

The fight for equal rights among women is still going strong and certain stereotypes still exist, but the month of March has been dedicated to women who have made history and have fought for the rights women have today.

Honoring generations of courage, compassion and conviction is the theme for Women's History Month. This is the first year that the celebration will be a month long.

Women's History Month used to only cover one week, but the demand for speakers and events expanded so much, that the event was made into a month-long celebration, according to Danna Bozick, Women's Resource Center director.

YSU's Women's Resource Center will sponsor events for the first two weeks of March. Bozick said the reason the center is only celebrating the event for the first two weeks of the month is because the academic session will be ending and YSU will begin finals and students would be too involved with their studies.

Bozick said celebrating women's history is important for a variety of reasons. "We need to take it back to our children and show them what women have done and what they can do," Bozick said.

Bozick said she is happy that many colleges are offering women's studies. "There is a need for women's history," remarked Bozick. The Women's Resource Center is sponsoring four speakers to come to YSU during the month-long celebration.

Dr. Donna DeBlasio, program supervisor of the Ohio Historical Society, will discuss "Women of the Western Reserve" at noon Tuesday, March 3 in the Scarlet Room, Kilcawley Center.

A Black and White Women's dialogue conference will be held from 7-10 p.m. Thursday, March 5 in the Ohio Room, Kilcawley Center. The conference will address sexism and racism in the home and what women can do about it.

Bozick said the conference will allow women to exchange views, feelings and share in each others experiences. Bozick said the conference will have a conversation starter at each table.

The women at the tables will bring up issues to discuss and those issues would then be given to a panel for review. The panel is made up of Ahalya Krishnan, psychology, Brenda Leak, elementary education, Romelia Carter, community social worker, Janice Leias, home economics; and Lynn Doyle, Hine Foundation.

"A Look At Women's History" will be the topic of discussion from 8-10 p.m. Tuesday, March 10 in DeBartolo Hall. Laverne Love, Ohio River Division, Army Corps of Engineers and Federal Women's Program manager, will be the guest speaker. Dinner will precede this lecture at 5 p.m. in the Wicker Basket. Cost is $6.95 per person and is open to the public.

Love will then present "15 Steps to Career Development" from 9-11 a.m. Wednesday, March 11 in the Scarlet Room, Kilcawley Center.

Besides the speakers, films concerning women's struggles, history making and other topics, will be shown. The films are sponsored by Organization for Women's Equality.

Small Happiness: Women of a Chinese Village will be shown from 3-4 p.m. Tuesday, March 3 in the Scarlet Room, Kilcawley Center.

The film looks at the traditional attitudes that still persist in the Chinese countryside. Chinese women will discuss marriage, birth control, work and daily life.

With Babies and Banners will be shown from 3-4:30 p.m. Wednesday, March 4 in the Carnation Room, Kilcawley Center.

This film presents the untold story of the wives, mothers and sisters who became the backbone of the General Motors sit down strike in Flint, Michigan in 1937.

director Phil Hirsch has more of an optimistic attitude rather than one of apathy and quitting at the first sign of trouble.

Hirsch realizes the severity of the problems and is willing to conduct meetings and discuss solutions to the problems. More than likely, certain changes will take place for future Surf's Up dances, but at least quitting is not an alternative.

Maybe Surf's Up could be held in May outside next year. This would eliminate the overcrowdedness, more tickets could be sold and potential dangers would be minimized.

Sand could be hauled in, lights could be hung, a variety of games could be played and the band could be heard by all

Surf's Up is the biggest event at YSU and something students look forward to every year.

Now is the time for the rest of the student body to show that maturity exists on this campus and events such as big as Surf's Up can be held.

— people were afraid to show how they felt," he said as he left the dance.

At 12:05 a.m. WHOT DJ A.C. McCullough announced the dance was officially over. The music stopped and the lights went on, however, students' energy levels remained high.

Sticky beer puddles and broken ceiling tiles were scattered as students began their search for coats and friends.

Two fire alarms were intentionally pulled and the decision to close the dance was made by Phil Hirsch, director of student activities and auxiliary services. The decision was made in regards to students' safety.

"We're dealing with people's lives here, not a party."

Lynn Haug
— Surf's Up coordinator

Friday night, Surf's Up coordinator Lynn Haug said, "How do we know if it's a real fire or not? We're dealing with people's lives here, not a party."

I thought it was someone just messing around, I didn't think it was a real fire," she added.

The general consensus of students questioned was one of disappointment. Many students who were polled said they didn't care or they didn't hear the alarms sound.

"I can't believe they closed it an hour early because one person was immature enough to set off the fire alarm," said Lisa Blinzley, senior, WSBA.

Surf's Up committee member Mike Thomas said, "It was a bad situation because if there really was a fire, people wouldn't have left because they thought it was a joke. There could have been a really bad accident."

McCullough expressed the same feeling. "I can understand why they closed the dance early. It's a shame that a few people had to ruin the fun because everyone was having a good time," he said. "They [Kilcawley officials] really had no choice."

Although Kilcawley administrators and nine Campus Security personnel were on hand, some students felt more preparation would have been appropriate. "If the management is so incompetent that they can't do something about fire alarms being pulled, then maybe they shouldn't have had the party in the first place. Everybody should get their money back," said one student.

Sentiments were echoed by another as he was leaving: "We paid to get in and we should be able to stay."

Mark DeMalo, sophomore, A&S, said people have the image that college students don't behave like adults. "Friday's situation proves it," he said.

According to Hirsch, students were cleared from Kilcawley Center between 12:30 a.m. and 1 a.m.

Haug and committee members were disappointed because of the disastrous final moments of a successful string of week-long Surf's Up events. "They were literally crushed when the dance ended like it did," she said. "It was as if Santa didn't make it for Christmas when you were little."

Officials checked the zones in which the alarms were sounded and determined they were false. "It's a shame it had to end that way," Haug said.

a scientist who had written over 30 research papers in one year. Seven of those papers were later proven to be plagiarized.

"Research today is considered big business," said Gartland, noting that schools and other institutes are in competition for research grants. "This makes it easier for some to rationalize their deviance."

Due to such deviance, "there is a reluctance to share the information we have," said Gartland. "The prestige depends on the scientist who makes the statement."

Gartland said studies done on deviance showed that junior faculty members are less likely to report senior members' deviance, and more likely to perform acts of deviance themselves.

Academic deviance is somewhat similar to white-collar crime, which "when detected is not taken as seriously," Gartland said.

"We are all deviants," said Letchworth, who spoke on

"Cheating From a Clinical Perspective." "We can look at large, radical differences from the norm, but when we look at one or two pieces of paper, it doesn't seem as deviant."

As a counselor, Letchworth said he has heard a variety of reasons why students cheat in the learning process. From those reasons, he defined four themes: feelings of inadequacy; deserving without earning; lack of understanding; and lack of accountability.

Students who fall under the first theme "haven't learned how to follow through on something on their own, nor have they learned the pride of doing something on their own," said Letchworth. He added that the emphasis placed on winning during a child's play years also drives students to deviance in later years.

Students who believe in their right to an education believe it is permissible to cheat because "life is unfair," said Letchworth.

"The emphasis is on the right rather than the process. They're not prepared and they have difficulty finding out how to make it other than by cheating," Letchworth said.

As many children have only one parent, lack of understanding results from "less or no guidance," Letchworth said.

Lack of accountability emerges because "many students feel invisible. Many students are not called by their names. There's no obligation, no social contract," Letchworth said.

"We have to recognize how people learn right from wrong," said Letchworth. "We need to use our considerable influence to help others realize what is right and wrong."

"If society demands that we incarcerate all wrongdoers, but the state of Texas won't build prisons, . . . a conflict between values is unavoidable," said Reid.

Reid said people should adopt a "Just Say No" campaign to bring a halt to deviance. Otherwise, "more people will 'just say no' to us when it comes to research money, and it will be no laughing matter."

 "He has to be concerned with the safety of all the people," said Thomas.

"We worked hard for two months. It's a shame...I thought it was the best one we've ever had," he added.

The Fabulous Flashbacks, performing in the Chestnut Room, stopped playing until staff members determined the alarms were false.

Despite rumors which started after the dance, Surf's Up will continue in future years. "Schools do cancel, but this is not the case here," said Hirsch.

"An evaluation will be conducted 'to see how we can improve it (the dance)," Hirsch said. Possibilities include reducing the number of tickets sold and restricting alcohol sales during the dance.

"Two thousand people is a lot for the size of the facility," Hirsch said.

Beer sales in the Pink Flamingo room ended shortly after 10 p.m. due to a sellout, but the Pub continued to sell beer throughout the remainder of the dance.

The Surf's Up Pool Party, held Friday in Beeghly Center, was a success despite a small turnout, said Thomas. The Pool Party will be added to the weekly events in future Surf's Up celebrations, he said.

A summer beachwear fashion show by Kali-Dean, Androgynous and Madd Rags Friday rounded out the Surf's Up Midweek activities.

Winner of the Limbo Contest was Rick Baskins, sophomore, business, and Bob Friedman, sophomore, electrical engineering, placed second.

The Best Legs contest was won by Donna Ruff, freshman, business. Last year's winner, Michelle Demetra, junior, F&PA, placed second.

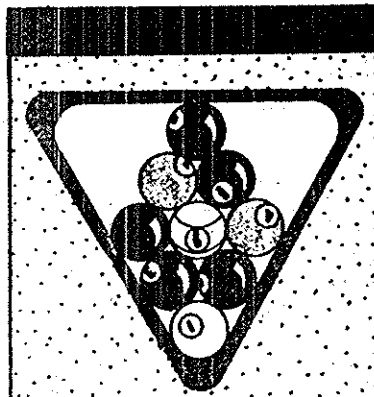

Persistence paid off for the team of Bermuda University, which won the Big Splash contest at the Surf's Up Pool Party Friday at Beeghly Pool. The group participated in many Surf's Up contests throughout the week.

Prizes awarded to winners included t-shirts, tanning lotion, visors and hats.

AT THE BUTLER

YOUNGSTOWN — Don't blink or you'll miss the temporary exhibition on view for the month of March at the Butler Institute of American Art.

"Mainstream America: The Collection of Phil Desind," is a show of 331 contemporary American paintings.

Paintings range from George Sorrels, "Garden of Small Flowers," a 1 inch by 1 inch painting to Sam Cady's "Swimming Pool" at 84 inch by 132 inch with every medium involved including, watercolor, pastel, ink, oil, acrylic, pencil, charcoal and gouache.

The unique personality of Desind's collection of over 3,000 works is that he never was inspired to own a painting simply on the basis of an artist's reputation.

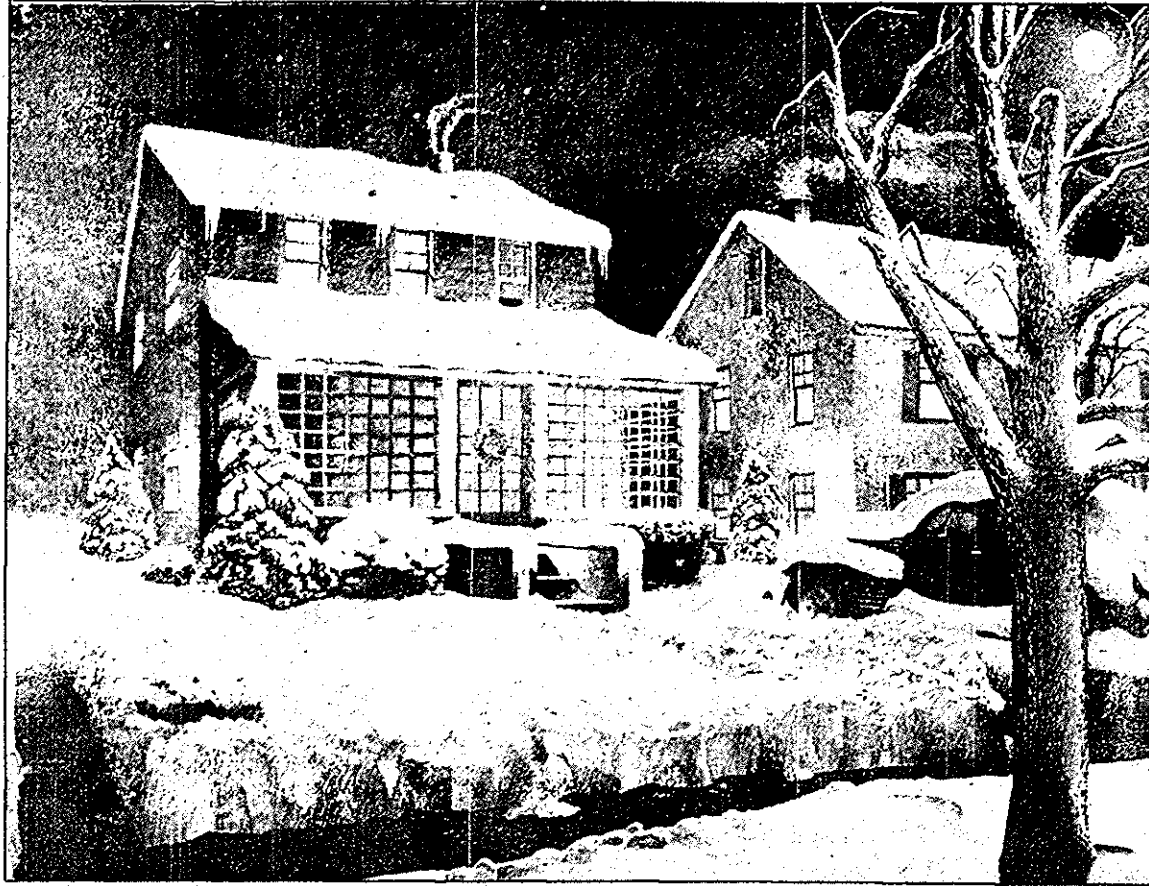

Thus it is that many of the artists included in the collection do not now have a national recognition but, according to Desind and like the old songs refrain, "it's just a matter of time."

This truly a highly varied collection, whose muscle seems to be that so called mainstream realism is after all multilinear and multireferential — "Mainstream America: The Collection of Phil Desind" reveals this. In doing so it uncovers those elements in contemporary American painting which universally appeal and inspire.

During a conversation with Dr. Louis Zona, director of the Butler Institute of American Art, Desind spoke of the artists whose careers have been positively affected by him.

"Well of course we have many. We have John Koch, who of course is not alive today. But we have resurrected Robert Riggs, Paul Sample, Adolf Dehn among the contemporaries. We have Roger Medearis, John Stewart Ingle, Robert Riggs, Adolf Dehn and many others. To mention names would be to mention a number of names that most people don't know. I hope that this show will remedy that to some extent."

He went on to explain the luck of becoming famous: "I feel that it's a matter of luck and circumstances that some artists have made it big and others haven't. But I think luck plays a very big role in that because I have known many artists who have really kicked around for many, many years and got nowhere. And then certain circumstances occurred and they made it fairly big. So the difference between those who have made it big and those who haven't is just a lot of luck."

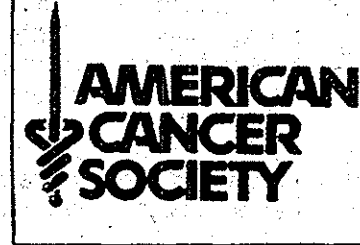

Day off: Richard Hoff's "Snowed In," a pencil drawing on paper, is one piece in the show Mainstream America: The Collection of Phil Desind, currently on display at the Butler Institute of American Art.

Penguins bow to Akron, 103-74

By BRIAN J. MACALA
Jambar Sports Editor

Did you ever have one of those days where everything you did went wrong? Well, Coach Mike Rice and his YSU basketball team experienced such a moment last night at Akron.

The Penguins found themselves on the down side of a 103-74 score when the clock ran out.

The Zips did something that they had never done before in the fifty year history of the Akron-YSU rivalry — score 100 points against the Penguins.

Akron took their lead early in the first half and never looked back. The closest the Penguins ever came again was a 10 point deficit midway through that first frame. Akron went from there to build a 23 point halftime lead 66-43.

Rice said afterward: "Our big men didn't do the job on rebounding. We had no offensive boards. That's where we lost the game." Rice's quote is well taken as the Zips outrebounded the Penguins 21-9 in the first half.

The Zips didn't let up one bit in the second frame. They built their lead up to 27 points when the second session started. This lead grew to as many as 36 points in the waning moments of the contest.

Akron's all-OVC candidate Marcel Boyce paced all scorers with 27 points. Teammate Eric McLaughlin added 23 more and John Loyer contributed 13 points off the bench.

The Penguins were led by Tilman Bevely and James Wilson, both hitting for 15 points. Jim Gilmore added 14 and senior Robert Johnson, playing in the final game of his Penguin career, dumped 12 points.

The Penguins closed out the season 11-17 overall.

In other OVC Tourney games EKV defeated Murray 89-75. The finals will be played at conference champion Middle Tennessee.

Lady Penguins hang up sneakers

By MARK S. ARP
Jambar Sports Reporter

The Lady Penguins' 1986-87 roundball campaign fell somewhat short of Head Coach Ed DiGregorio's pre-season expectations, but he is optimistic that next year's squad will be much more productive.

The ladies mentor said, "I really thought we'd be, at a minimum, at 16 wins and 11 losses with our tough schedule."

The Lady Penguins fell just short of that goal with a 13-14 overall record. Along with finishing at 16-11, DiGregorio also noted that qualifying for the OVC tournament was another pre-season goal that "we just let slip away."

DiGregorio emphasized that the reason for the Lady Penguins' 13-14 record was the lack of mental maturity of his players. In support of his statement, he cited three OVC games — Akron, Eastern Kentucky and Morehead State. In each of these games the Lady Penguins had the lead but just couldn't finish off their opponents. DiGregorio feels that those three games in particular were games that the team should have won but didn't.

DiGregorio feels that the lack of mental maturity hurt the squad on the basis that "when you have a lead, you've got to be able to hold it, and we weren't able to hold the leads."

Yet, on a positive note, DiGregorio believes that the ladies' tough schedule this year could be beneficial in the future. By his own admission, he feels that the Lady Penguins had one of the toughest schedules of all the OVC teams this year.

DiGregorio stated, "None of those [OVC] teams go east and play in the big tournaments. We played against the best in the east. That was a great experience for us because you've got to play the tough ones to become a better team yourself."

Looking towards next season, the ladies' coach hopes that the experience gained this year will be put to use on the court next year. The Lady Penguins will again encounter a rigorous schedule and DiGregorio plans to have them ready for it.

DiGregorio stated that after spring break, he will have his players following an intense training program. He understands that the demands of his program will require increased effort from his players and expects his team to work hard.

"The only way you can compete against these other teams is you do the same things they do...that's a must for us," said DiGregorio.

In addition to his spring workout program, DiGregorio is making visits to the weight training room for the ladies mandatory. "We need that physical strength to combat the big teams that we play against," commented the coach.

In reference to the training program, he feels that his players must take it upon themselves to work hard and improve their abilities. "If our young ladies make a dedicated effort there, we can do nothing but improve," he stated.

DiGregorio, in speaking of individual efforts, lauded the play of his junior mainstays Dorothy Bowers and Tanja Simone as well as sophomore Stephanie Coie.

Herm Jackson named to grid coaching spot

By BRIAN J. MACALA
Jambar Sports Editor

The next time your professor asks for a synonym for the word commitment, simply answer Jim Tressel. If one person personifies the word commitment, it is the Penguins' head football coach.

Having just completed one of the best recruiting campaigns in YSU's history, bringing some of the top talent of the area to play at YSU, the Penguins' head football coach announced last week a pleasant surprise to YSU football fans.

Tressel's commitment to our football program doesn't end with getting the best players, it extends to bringing in the best coaches as well. His already fine coaching staff added another fine name to its rolls last week.

Herm Jackson had put together a fine record in the Youngstown City Series, compiling a 44-26-1 record while coaching at North and East High Schools. But last week Jackson put all that behind to accept a position on Coach Tressel's staff, working mainly with the Penguins' receivers.

Jackson is a 1970 graduate of Hubbard High School and 1975 alumnus of Miami of Ohio University. While in his role as head football coach at East High, Jackson led his Golden Bears' to two City Series football championships, in 1982 and 1986.

Jackson also coached track at East, winning City titles in 1984 and 1985.

"We're really excited about Herm. He has a proven track record. I've known him for years. His coming here is good for the whole team," said Tressel.

Track Coach Jack Rigney asked me to remind all track athletes that a very important meeting is coming up on March 6 at 4 p.m. at Stambaugh Stadium. This is a mandatory meeting concerning eligibility for the upcoming track campaign. For more information get in touch with Coach Rigney at 742-3488.

Like to play tennis? Don Getz is looking for you. The Penguins' tennis coach is looking for a few good netters for the spring campaign. Call Coach Getz at 742-3189 or 742-3478. The opportunity for scholarships may exist for qualifying players.

The final part of this column today will be devoted to your introduction to me. In case you haven't noticed, The Jambar has a new sports editor, effective with this issue.

Many changes have occurred on these pages since I've taken over. Hopefully, they are all to your liking. The inclusion of statistics and interviews with the Penguin personalities are just a few examples of the ways we hope to serve you better.

If you feel we are not giving something proper coverage let us know and we'll see what we can do about it; after all this is your paper.

Another addition to these pages is this column, Penguin Potpourri and its accompaniment in the Friday issue, Intramural Beat.

These two alternating columns will focus on both aspects of YSU athletics, the varsity sport level and the intramural level. Both are equally important.

In the short time I've been on the job I've been able to assemble a fine staff of writers: Mark S. Arp, Russell Farmintino and George Rusnak have all made their journalistic debuts on these pages in the last few weeks and their work couldn't have been better. In addition, John Kovach will continue to work for us on reporting on the Penguins.

My staff isn't limited. If you like to write and like Penguin Athletics stop in The Jambar and we'll see what you can do for us.

Until next Tuesday...Go Penguins!

Bowers led the Lady Penguins with a 24.7 scoring average and a 9.7 rebounding average. Simone led the team in assists with 162 and added an 11.9 point scoring average.

He also recognized Carol Nee, a transfer student from the University of Pittsburgh/Johnstown, who stepped in as a starting guard near the end of the season.

DiGregorio sees these four players as the leadership trust of next year's squad. The Penguin mentor also went on to commend two freshmen, Margaret Somple and Julie Bray for their contributions on the hardwood this season.

With a full year lying ahead of next year's campaign, DiGregorio speculates on how he sees his team faring next winter. "We should have a minimum of 17 wins next year, but who knows?" he said with a smile, "Basketball's a funny game."

contract" entered with the Pollock Inn Restoration Associates for development of the Wick-Pollock Inn, the trustees announced.

Subsequent receipts from this project will be designated as a fund functioning as an endowment entitled: Wick Pollock Inn Endowment.

The trustees also appointed the following faculty members: Victor Gerdes, professor of accounting and finance; Claudia Corbe, special education instructor; and Madeline Haggerty, assistant professor of allied health.

The trustees also passed a resolution stating that "designation of names of buildings...of campus streets and outdoor spaces, shall be exclusively within the authority of the Board of Trustees..."

Building name changes include: Ward Beecher Science Hall will be modified to "Ward Beecher Hall" in "order that it be consistent in terminology with the other buildings named after individuals"; and the North Annex or Old American Legion Hall will now be known as the "Public Service Institute Building."

The trustees allocated an additional $1,500 from the same unrestricted gift money to the Cooperative Campus Ministry Free Clinic.

In 1986, the trustees allocated $1,500 from the same fund to purchase medical supplies and to paint the clinic.

CCM has been located for 14 years at 562 Wick Ave, (The First Christian Church). The clinic is entirely staffed by physicians, medical technologists and others who volunteer their services to YSU students.

In final action, the board granted an honorary Doctor of Science degree to William H. Lippy, M.D., an ear specialist who is chief of otology at St. Joseph's Riverside Hospital and a member of the courtesy staff at Trumbull Memorial Hospital, both in Warren.

Lippy will receive the degree during winter commencement exercises.

the fifth floor when Jones placed Wesley's coat, which was on a chair, onto the floor. Jones moved the coat so that he could sit on the chair while Wesley was on the phone, the report stated.

Jones is a fifth floor resident of the dorm, while Wesley lives on the Northside.

The report stated that words were exchanged and Ronald Peterson, freshman, CAST, intervened. Wesley then allegedly attempted to swing at Jones but missed.

After the fight broke up, Peterson and Jones left the floor and went up to the sixth floor. When they returned to the fifth floor, Wesley was standing by the elevator, the report stated.

According to the report, more words were exchanged and Wesley allegedly pushed Jones. Jones then attempted to tackle Wesley by pushing him towards the stairwell door.

Jones struck his head on the door frame and both went through the door into the stairwell where the fight continued, the report stated.

The fight was broken up by Dzuray and Peterson. Peterson informed Dzuray what had happened during the fight and Dzuray transported Jones to St. Elizabeth Hospital Medical Center. Jones received 40 stitches for a large laceration to the scalp.

According to the report, Campus Security went to the hospital to talk with Jones about the incident. Campus Security reported that the information they received from Jones "was similar to the information they received from Dzuray."

Jones told Campus Security he did not want to press charges against Wesley, the report stated.

Both students were cited to the Student Disciplinary Committee.

Campus Security contacted the Youngstown Fire Department after the student began having convulsions. The YFD transported her to St. Elizabeth Hospital Medical Center where she was treated and released.
