YSU cracks down on logo pirates

Some of the legally manufactured merchandise available from the YSU Bookstore that bears the University logo. The merchandise pictured is produced by Gear For Sports and is available to alumni by mail order.

If you're planning to buy your sweetheart anything that bears a YSU logo for Valentine's Day, then buyer beware.

According to Charles Sabatino, the YSU Bookstore's director, certain companies are manufacturing YSU memorabilia illegally.

A license agreement would give any manufacturer the right to use Pete the Penguin, Jones Hall and YSU's logo and seal on their products. The University owns sole rights to these four symbols. According to Sabatino, there are a few companies using these symbols without having entered into a licensing agreement with YSU. Many big name companies are using these symbols without having entered into a license agreement with YSU and more are suspected.

Sabatino added, the nationally known Starter Company "is selling unlicensed merchandise." Starter is one of the two leading manufacturers of team logo clothing. "They have been selling merchandise printed with YSU logos without having a license agreement," Sabatino said.

Sandra Denman, YSU general counsel, is presently in contact with Starter about the situation. "I can't say what will happen right now," said Sabatino. "Sometimes it happens out of ignorance, sometimes it's something other than that," said Sabatino.

Sabatino added that J.C. Penney is selling this merchandise from Starter, however, the retail store is not required to be licensed.

"There are others out there right now. I can't say what is and what is not licensed," said Sabatino.

Due to the success of the Penguins, Sabatino's office receives phone calls about other violators, said Sabatino. No one has been busted yet.

"You can't tell the illegal merchandise. Not every vendor puts their own name into a garment," said Sabatino. He suggests shopping for YSU merchandise at a reputable retailer. He also said that all merchandise being sold in the YSU Bookstore comes from licensed entities.

"We have about 150 wholesalers and manufacturers all across the country who are licensed with YSU. Gear in Kansas and Russell in Alabama are two of them," said Sabatino.

These licensed companies pay a $50 application fee and remit 6.5

Bell Curve debated at Coalition for Diversity meeting

The Coalition for Diversity presented the topic "Race and Intelligence" at noon on Thursday in the Kilcawley Gallery.

Three professors spoke on the issue: Dr. Susan deBlois, foundations of education, Dr. Brendan Minogue, philosophy and religious studies and Lauren Schroeder, biological sciences.

Rev. Jim Ray, Cooperative Campus Ministry, and Dr. Stephen Sniderman, English, introduced the speakers.

The lecture was scheduled in response to the publication of the book The Bell Curve by Richard Herrnstein and Charles Murray. The book is about IQ and class-structure.

Minogue discussed philosophical positions asserted by The Bell Curve.

He said the position that race and intelligence are connected is biological determinism.

Minogue said that biological determinism is the view that races, cultures or sexes have genetic differences and that the differences are used to justify hierarchy in societies.

"If biological determinism were true, we would be powerless to alter genetically determined traits," said Minogue.

If this were true, said Minogue, then genetic diseases could not be treated.

The Bell Curve is "a treasure-trove of examples of bad reasoning," said Minogue.

Minogue pointed to the authors' conclusion that there is a causal relationship between race and intelligence. He said, "Two events can be correlated without there being a causal relation between them."

Next, Schroeder discussed the biological aspects of intelligence and heredity.

He said human beings divide themselves into populations and sub-populations and that these artificial divisions keep people from achieving their full potential.

"Intelligence is not all there is to being human," Schroeder said.

He added, "The Bell Curve is a revisitation of age old arguments comparing nature and nurture."

"The authors and proponents of the book have hidden agendas," Schroeder said. According to Schroeder, these agendas might be political, religious, or social.

Schroeder said the variation among people far exceeds the variation among groups and that the book did not assert this enough.

DeBlois spoke about issues of intelligence in the educational system. "IQ is not hereditary," deBlois said.

She said teachers and parents often expect siblings to perform similarly in school. However, she pointed out that children often vary greatly in their strengths and weaknesses.

DeBlois identified three areas that affect school performance: motivation, individual learning styles and life experiences.

"If biological determinism were true we would be powerless to alter genetically determined traits."

Sororities prepare for upcoming appreciation week

Julie Miller
contributing writer

Sororities at YSU will be hosting a week of events to allow YSU students to learn about sororities. Sororities are an opportunity to form lasting friendships and increase campus involvement.

Mercia Stevens said, "Sorority has given me leadership skills that I will be able to use in my career."

Next week sororities will be holding events and open houses for interested women. There will be information tables in Kilcawley Center and a banner contest, which will be judged by The Jambar staff.

Established here in 1952, Phi Mu Sorority is the oldest sorority on campus.

Some of the sorority's most recent achievements include: winning formal and open classes at Greek Sing; winning the Constellation Award for outstanding student campus activity, which involved their jail and bail fund raising efforts; best paired float award with Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity; Phi Mu's focus on academics earned them a 3.09 combined GPA in fall quarter of 1994.

A rush party being held on Feb. 19 at 8:10 p.m. in rm. 258 of DeBartolo.

Gamma Phi Delta is the newest member to YSU's Greek community. As a local sorority, they strive to promote academic achievement and provide an introduction to social aspects on campus.

Leadership skills, philanthropy projects and other community involvement contribute to the completeness of each member's personality.

Gamma Phi Delta helps to prepare each member to graciously fulfill her role in society. They are having an open house on Feb. 15 in Kilcawley, rm. 2057 at 8:10 p.m.

This year marks Delta Zeta Sorority's 25 anniversary on campus. Their focus on academics has earned them the award for the highest GPA of all sororities 11 of the past 12 years.

Some of the other campus organizations the sisters are involved in are student government, modern dance ensemble, honorary academic fraternities, majorettes, homecoming court, speech team, centaurs, Who's Who of College Students and Golden Key National Honor Society.

Some of the philanthropic events held by the chapter include Turtle Tug, a canned food and clothing drive with Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, and answering phones at the MDA telethon. Their rush party will be in the Scarlet/Carnation Rm. of Kilcawley on Feb. 13 at 8:10 p.m.

Xi Delta Gamma is YSU's oldest local sorority, having been founded in 1989. Their philanthropies include the National Leukemia Society and Assumption Nursing Home.

Their sisters have been crowned TKE Mayfest Queen and Sigma Chi's Aquacade Queen. They have won awards for the sorority woman of the year and the highest individual scholarship. They also took second place at Greek Sing and were represented on Homecoming Court.

All are invited to Xi Delts open house on Feb. 14 at 7 p.m. in Buckeye 1 and 2 of Kilcawley.

Established in 1964, Zeta Tau Alpha has won the title of Greek Week champions several years in a row.

They were chosen by their national to help in the reorganization of the Baldwin-Wallace chapter. The title of Crown Chapter was awarded to them by nationals for meeting membership and scholastic requirements.

Every year they contribute over $250 to the Crown Development trust fund for scholarships that are given out nationally.

The Susan G. Komen breast cancer foundation and the Great American Smokeout are some of the philanthropies in which they help. One of their sisters is the reigning homecoming queen. A few of their campus involvements include majorettes and the Newman Center.

A rush party is being held in the Carnation Room of Kilcawley at 9 p.m. on Feb. 16.

Calendar

Friday, Feb. 10

Bountiful Basket will be selling Valentine's Day gifts from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. near the candy counter in Kilcawley Center; sponsored by the Society of Women Engineers.

Cooperative Campus Ministry will conduct a Bible study from noon to 1 p.m. at the First Christian Church on the corner of Wick and Spring Streets.

Environmental Awareness Council will hold an Earth Day discussion at 4 p.m. in the Buckeye Reception Room of Kilcawley Center.

Tuesday, Feb. 14

Non-Traditional Student Organization will hold a bake sale from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the lobby of DeBartolo Hall.

Cooperative Campus Ministry and the Newman Center will conduct an ecumenical prayer service at noon in Room 2069 of Kilcawley Center.

percent of the wholesale price to YSU. These royalties go directly into a general scholarship fund, which is equally divided between athletic and general scholarship funds for the University.

Sabatino and Gucwa, merchandise coordinator for YSU, agree that yearly royalty returns yield $38,500, which comes from quarterly checks received from licensed manufacturers.

The retail mark-up of the bookstore sales only becomes the bookstore's profit less cost, Sabatino added. Campus Book and Supply is not affiliated with the YSU bookstore in any way.

Steps are being taken by Sabatino's office and the University to track down unlicensed vendors.

"The responsibility should not fall into the consumer's hands," said Sabatino, who has been negotiating a contract with a license agency. This agency will police third party businesses and will assume the job of preparing license agreements to avoid further loss of royalties to the University, he elaborated.

"We have a staff that can run the day-to-day operations in the Bookstore. We don't have a large enough staff to handle a licensing program," Sabatino said. By using an agency to regulate the details of YSU merchandising, the YSU bookstore director said that "this could easily double our past royalties." This increase in royalties would mean that the scholarship fund may double.

After the final details are worked out, "This agency will be working within the next couple of months," said Sabatino.

Consumers should be careful to consider that all YSU merchandise that is not sold at the bookstore could possibly be contraband.

200 junior high school students invade campus for Mathcounts competition

2a+c=14 YSU - More than 200 students from 33 junior high schools will participate in YSU's 1995 Mathcounts competition, which will begin at 9 a.m. and again at 12:15 p.m. on Friday, Feb. 10. The event will be held in Kilcawley's Chestnut Room.

During the morning session, teams of four from each school will be required to answer questions about probability, statistics, linear algebra and polynomials.

The afternoon competition will follow a game show format as students attempt to score points for their team by answering math questions.

The top teams and the top four individuals will advance to the state competition in Columbus on March 4. The state champion will advance to the national competition in Washington, D.C.

Awards will be presented at the National Engineers' Week Banquet of the Mahoning Valley Society of Professional Engineers (MSVPE) at 6:30 p.m. on Thursday, Feb. 23 at Colonial Catering.

Dr. Nate Ritchey, director of YSU's University Scholars Program, will be the guest speaker. John F. Ritter, professor of civil and environmental engineering at YSU, organized the local program.

Funding for the program is provided by the MVSPE; the East Ohio Gas Company through its educational representative, Madonna Chism; and by the YSU Arby's Restaurant.

A photo session for the winners will be held at 2:15 p.m. in the Chestnut Room.

EDITORIAL

Professors should offer credit for students to attend campus events

The Coalition for Diversity recently held a meeting in which the book The Bell Curve by Charles Murray and Richard J. Herrnstein was discussed. One of the book's premises is that social class influences intelligence.

The writer of the story told us some things about the meeting. He said approximately 20 people attended the meeting, most of whom were professors. Some of the students who attended seemed to be there only because they were assigned by a professor to go to the meeting for class credit. He also said that most of the audience members who chose to comment on the subject were professors, not students.

One positive aspect of the meeting was that the professors who spoke had opposing views about the book. Because of their differing opinions, the discussion was more interesting. Perhaps some people even learned something. (Anyone who attends a Coalition for Diversity meeting is bound to learn something. They should be commended for provided interesting, informative and important topics on varying social issues.)

By attending various meetings as reporters we have discovered two things. First, many events provided are poorly attended. Second, those who do attend these meetings are usually the people who need the least education about the subjects.

When one of us attended a meeting about feminism, half a dozen women and two men (one of which was a professor) attended. Nearly everyone considered themselves feminists and could list another half a dozen noted feminists.

This situation is unfortunate. Many will argue that time is the main factor involved when deciding whether or not to attend an event. But, we feel the main reason is that YSU is mostly a commuter school. Students come and go faster than a tornado in the summertime and events come and go at about the same speed.

So where can the two meet so as to benefit each other? After all, if people don't attend the events coordinated by different departments, these events are likely to be cut. And how is YSU to graduate well-rounded, educated students if they do not attend these events? They need each other to survive.

Our solution is already being utilized by some professors. Give class credit (extra credit) to students who attend lectures, meetings and/or events that coincide with the professor's teachings. Surely, once these students go to the meetings and see what different activities are available (mostly for free), and how valuable and sometimes fun they are, they will go to others on their own. (Perhaps if you mention the possibility of meeting someone of the opposite sex at one of these events, that will entice them even more.) This will solve the problem of low attendance and give those who don't normally attend these meetings to learn something new.

Letters to the Editor

An open letter to President Clinton on the minimum wage increase

Dear Mr. President,

Let me see if I got this straight: Newt wants to revert back to minimum wage, and Dole says if they're not Republicans what's the problem?

Well, I'll tell you what one of the problems is—our parking lot attendants aren't getting a fair shake. Not only here—I'm sure the problem exists in fuller measure in places like Minnesota, Montana, Wisconsin—and we're way down here in Ohio.

What's the problem? Why can't the parking lot attendants be paid for their sacrifice: sitting in a booth, for 4-hours, at a gate, in the heart of winter—wind chill -25, and someone keeps driving up asking which way to anywhere? Mr. President, I say if we can boost the Peso, then the very least we can do for our parking lot attendants—everywhere—is boost their pay during the holocaust of winter.

Newt and Dole might say it would be creating a lower standard in the market place, yet to those like Newt and Dole—who do not get up at 5 a.m. to open a gate at 6 a.m. and to stay to 11 p.m.—sure raising the minimum wage would give a parking lot attendant some notions of arrogance and smug security—even to pay for books—but I say it's workable at least for the months of winter. It is a real problem, Mr. President and I don't suggest to have any real answers, but I was thinking that we could trade Dole to the AFC and send Newt to work at Harper & Row, because anyone who'd pay four million dollars to hear what Newt had to say truly deserves what they get.

In conclusion, if this suggestion fails, I've enclosed a photo of one of our frozen parking lot attendants. Maybe it'll move the Congress to empathy. Oh, and don't pay any mind to that body bag next to the attendant; it's just our groundhog. He came out the other day in search of his shadow and froze to death.

Words are often very powerful communication tools

Dear editor:

Public opinion is often influenced by the published remarks of social leaders. John White's interview [about the possibility of Indian remains being in YSU archives] with The Jambar, appearing Jan. 10, presents a local opportunity to consider how media discourse shapes our perspectives.

White is a tenured professor of archaeology and anthropology at YSU. He holds an established and respected position as a member of the academic community.

Mark Tayac is a Native American. For many years he has been an international voice in securing the return of Native American remains housed in museum, university and private collections throughout North America and Europe. He is also the son of the Piscataway Nation's chief. While these credentials are not formally academic, they are valid and deserve respect.

Tayac was an invited speaker at the Native American Cultural Exposition last October. The Jambar included an article covering Tayac's presentation on Nov. 4. White, who did not attend, responded with an interview. It is interesting to examine the language of the interview to see how White's position as an academic appears to marginalize Tayac's authority and credibility.

White's interview opens with a direct quote, "I would've let it pass if he [Tayac] wasn't on the 'soap box.'" He positions Tayac as a person standing on a wooden crate preaching at an unwilling audience, which is what "soap-box" implies.

"First of all," White continues, "Tayac doesn't even know who his ancestors are." This statement denies Tayac, a Native American by birth, the ability to have a direct understanding and acceptable interpretation of his heritage. The same attitude is apparent when White claims "virtually every bit of information concerning the history of Native Americans was learned by archaeologists." He continues to assume a position of superior knowledge when he corrects Tayac's description of Piscataway burial rituals.

White states, Piscataway Indians "are what archaeologists call 'the tribe of convenience.'" "Tribe of convenience" is a derogatory term implying cultural illegitimacy. Resources confirm the 15,000 year history of the Piscataway people. White's use of "the" further implies that the Piscataway nation is the only one considered invalid by some non-Indians, which is inaccurate.

In referring to remains, White asserts archaeologists "handle them sacredly." The term "sacred" carries a religious connotation. Used here, it trivializes the Native American belief that remains nourish Earth after death and removal defiles the burial site's sacred nature. This disregard reappears when White labels as "boldface exaggeration" Tayac's statement, "We have great respect for our ancestors."

In the interview White relates an anecdote he prefaces with "and this is a true story." IN it he quotes a Seneca as saying, "Them are damn Eries," using what is considered incorrect grammar to represent the Native American's speech pattern. This device is usually intended to reflect cultural inferiority.

White recently apologized for the statements attributed to him and regrets the tone of the interview. "There are good guys and bad guys on both sides," says White. "My heart's in the right place on this issue."

He says that NAGPRA, the federal mandate protecting burial sites and requiring the return of remains to Native Americans when requested, is a law "I can live with."

Part of White's reaction can be traced to misinformation leading to a mistaken belief that Tayac had publicly accused YSU of covertly housing remains, a misunderstanding Dr. Block explained in his Jan. 13 letter to the editor.

Certainly no one should be evaluated on the basis of one incident. This unfortunate situation, however, calls attention to the need for careful facts and thoughtful speech, especially when it is part of the public record.

Acclaimed area pianist to perform works of Schubert, Beethoven

Pianist Gretchen Kuhns, a YSU senior, will bring her award-winning talents to the First Presbyterian Church, 201 Wick Avenue, at 1 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 12.

Kuhns is working toward a B.A. in piano performance at the Dana School of Music under the supervision of Dr. Caroline Altmanns, that school's newest faculty member. She then plans to pursue a graduate degree in music.

Kuhns, who was a recent recipient of the First Presbyterian Church's annual music award, is expected to include selections from Schubert and Beethoven in her program, which will be repeated at 2:15 p.m. that same afternoon at the Park Vista Retirement Community, 1216 Fifth Avenue.

Kuhns is the recipient of the 1995 Youngstown Music Teachers' Association Scholarship in competition with voice and other piano entries. She also received the national music award given annually by the Slovene Benefit Society.

She has served as organist and choir director for Sts. Cyril & Methodius, and St. Mathius Churches, and she has been providing private piano lessons from her home since 1985.

Both of Kuhns' performances are free and open to the public.

YSU pianist Gretchen Kuhns will perform at the First Presbyterian Church at 1 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 12, then later that afternoon at the Park Vista Retirement Community at 2:15 p.m. Both performances are free.

Planetarium will offer a View from a Distant Star

contributing writer

We have looked at the stars for centuries with awe, fear, wonder, complacency, fantasy, whimsy — and, perhaps, a sense of longing. Logic tells us that if planets exist around our Sun, then they must be present around other suns — and with them, other life.

The search for planets beyond our solar system has intrigued astronomers since before the beginning of this century. The search has intensified recently, however, thanks to advances in telescope technology.

The Ward Beecher Planetarium at YSU will take its audience along when it looks for a View From A Distant Star during February.

The program is scheduled at 8 p.m. Friday, Feb. 17; 2 and 8 p.m. on Saturday, Feb. 18; 2 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 23; 8 p.m. Friday, Feb.

24; and 2 and 8 p.m. Friday, Feb. 25. Additional showings will be held in March, April and June.

Exploration of our own solar system has proven that life exists only on Earth. Reason says if life can exist on Earth, then there should be life on other planets around other stars as well.

View From A Distant Star will look at the various ways astronomers are searching for other planets and other life, from high altitude optical telescopes to huge arrays of radio telescopes, from infrared telescopes to telescopes in low Earth orbit.

Programs at the Ward Beecher Planetarium are free and open to the public. All are open to children in the first grade and above, although View From A Distant Star is more appropriate for an older child.

Reservations are requested and may be made by calling the department of physics and astronomy/Ward Beecher Planetarium at (216) 742-3616 from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. on weekdays.

Oakland Arts Center has Woman In Mind

An evening of dinner theatre and an afternoon of brunch theatre highlight the run of Woman In Mind, a comedy, opening at 8 p.m. Friday, Feb. 17, at the Oakland Center for the Arts, 1361 Fifth Avenue.

Alan Ayckbourn's play, directed by Patty Latham, concerns Susan, a housewife, married to a boring clerk named George.

After getting knocked out by stepping on a garden rake, she experiences hallucinations, in which her oppressive, everyday life is replaced by a fantasy life, where she is the perfect wife and mother with an adoring, ideal family. But soon enough, Susan's fantasy becomes a nightmare!

The cast includes Tom Burd, Kathy Gabriel, Michelle Matlack, Barb Evans, Brian Hoover, Joe Mineo, Sam Perry and Joe Rath. Geri DeWitt is stage manager for the production. Jeff Chrystal, of Chrystal Catering, will prepare a candlelight dinner on Saturday, Feb. 18, at 6:30 p.m., preceding the show. The cost for the dinner is $14.95. Reservations are necessary, and must be paid for by Feb. 14.

David Armstrong of Cater 2 U, will serve a brunch buffet beginning at 1:30 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 26. The matinee will follow at 2:30 p.m. The price of the brunch is $8. Reservations are necessary and must be paid for by Feb. 22.

Playing dates for Woman In Mind are 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays, Feb. 17 through Mar. 4. There is one matinee performance at 2:30 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 26.

Admission to the play is $10, and $8 for seniors and students. For reservations, call 746-0404.

YWCA looking for artists

The Youngstown YWCA is sponsoring its 14th annual art show, "Women Artists: A Celebration," May 13-20 at the YWCA, 25 West Rayen Avenue. The free exhibit will open May 12 with a patron party at 6:30 p.m.

This year's judge is Jane Tesso, art administration consultant for BP America, Cleveland. Over $1,000 in prizes will be awarded at this event.

Artists may submit up to five entries. A $5 registration fee is required for each entry. All artistic work will be accepted including paintings, drawings, graphics, photography, sculptures, ceramics, fiber, computer-generated art, metal work and videos. Slide entries must be received by Apr. 7. Entries shipped to the YWCA must include a shipping crate for return.

Hand delivered entries will be accepted Apr. 22 and 23 from 1-4 p.m. Contact the YWCA for a registration form at 746-6361.

My Fair Lady audition call

Youngstown—More than 30 major and minor singing/acting roles will be available for experienced and inexperienced performers when The Youngstown Playhouse holds auditions for Lerner and Lowe's most famous musical My Fair Lady at 7 p.m. Monday and Tuesday, Feb. 13 and 14.

In addition, singers and dancers will be needed for non-speaking chorus roles.

A rehearsal pianist will be provided, but auditioners may also use their own tapes.

Guest director Ben Agresti, well-known throughout western Pennsylvania as both a director and actor, suggests that My Fair Lady is an ideal debut vehicle for beginners because of the number of minor roles. He has scheduled callbacks for Wednesday, Feb. 15.

My Fair Lady will play three weekends, April 28 to May 14.

8th Art Show coming to JCC

Youngstown—The Jewish Community Center is announcing its 8th Annual Winter Art Show to be held Feb. 12-26, at the center located at 505 Gypsy Lane. Original and current works in painting, sculpture, textiles and fibers, graphics, photography, mixed media and jewelry will be accepted for the show.

Registration forms are available by calling Gail Froomkin at 746-3251. Artists may register four pieces at a non-refundable fee of $5 per piece.

Judging will be by Professor Herb Olds of Carnegie Mellon University. A total of $625 in merit awards will be presented during the preview party and artist's reception at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 11.

For more information and/or registration forms, please call the JCC at 746-3251.

Cancer survivor Dr. Jim to visit Book Nook

Warren—Dr. James Pleasant of Ashtabula will visit The Book Nook, 2103 Elm Rd. in the Warren Plaza, from 5 to 7 p.m. Friday, Feb. 17, to autograph copies of his latest book, Doctor Jim's Odyssey.

Pleasant underwent a bone marrow transplant as a last resort in what would have been a losing battle with multiple myeloma, a rare form of cancer of the bone marrow. During his recovery, he wrote about his experiences, which were then published in 1994.

The public is welcome and encouraged to meet Dr. Pleasant and welcome him to the area.

YSU faces greater challenge against improved Troy State dennis gartland

sports editor

YSU will face one of the hottest teams in college basketball, Troy State Saturday, to stay in contention for the Mid-Continent Conference lead.

In their first meeting, YSU won 83-65, but this might be a deceptive score. YSU clearly outscored Troy State 44-28 in the first half, but in the second half with the Penguin starters still in, the Trojans cut their deficit to three points, four minutes into the half and then again with six minutes left. The score became decisive with a 19-4 run in the final six minutes.

Since their last meeting, the Trojans have six victories and one loss. They are averaging 10.5 three point shots and 95 points per game. YSU Coach Dan Peters said "Troy is a very athletic team with good talent. They have really started playing exceptionally since our last game."

Troy State usually runs a fast break style offense and a pressing defense. Peters believes "We will have to get back defense and not let them run," Peters emphasizes. "On offense we will have to be strong with the ball and attack their press defense."

YSU is currently 6-5 in the Mid-Continent ranking fourth place and 13-6 overall. Troy State is 7-4 in the conference in third place and 8-11 overall. If YSU wins Saturday, they will be tied for third place in the conference.

Penguin forward Ronnie Easter is coming off the best game of his career with 16 points and eight rebounds. Easter will start his third game for the Penguins Saturday; he will replace Leroy King at forward. Also starting for the Penguins will be Derick Simmons, center; Andre Smith, guard; and Hank Raber, guard.

The game will be broadcast on WBBW beginning at 8:30 p.m.

Malmisur guides Pens to academic achievement

rochelle durban
contributing writer

Joseph Malmisur, who retired last June as YSU's executive director of athletics to accept a new position as executive director of athletic development, said that his life is not much different.

"I am still associated with the University that I love and the community that I deeply care about," explained Malmisur.

Malmisur said that his new position is well over a full time job. "It involves creating and designing programs to increase YSU's profit, which is channeled into academic and athletic scholarships."

Malmisur has been with YSU for approximately 13 years. "During all these years, his dedication has been and still is a definite factor in the success and growth of YSU," commented YSU President Leslie Cochran.

Looking back on Malmisur's accomplishments during his time as Executive Athletic Director, it is no wonder why YSU is successful today.

Malmisur helped take the football team to the top of Division I-AA. This was accomplished by the team appearing in four straight trips to the National Championship Game. Of those four trips, the championship games of 1991, 1993 and 1994 resulted in national titles.

Malmisur also started an athletic/academic advising area. The area includes tutors, computers and a full program of help for all student athletes. According to statistics, the athletic/academic advising area has helped improve the graduation rate of athletes. The statistics show that YSU athletes' graduation rate is higher than YSU's non-athlete students.

Malmisur commented, "To be eligible to participate in athletics, the athletes have to work toward graduation."

When talking about the role that the administration plays in athletics, Malmisur said, "It is more important to know if athletes are in the classroom, than it is to know if they are on the field or court."

Malmisur is a native of Youngstown. He attended East High School where he was known for his athletic talents.

Malmisur would like to see that in the future the athletic department "enjoys the level of success that has been accomplished, but it must always strive to keep it."

The Lady Penguins will face Mid-Continent Conference foe Troy State University, Saturday at Troy State. YSU will try to stay in first place in the conference. If YSU wins just four of their remaining seven games, they will be guaranteed of making the conference tournament.

In their last meeting, YSU defeated the Lady Trojans 82-65. The Lady Penguins were led by freshman Ann Marie Martin who scored 19 points, brought down eight rebounds and dished out eight assists.

The Lady Trojans are currently 12-8 overall and 6-5 in the Mid-Continent. They are led by sophomore Heather Haney, who is averaging 12.5 ppg and 2.9 rebounds per game.

In their last outing on Wednesday, The Lady Trojans defeated Alabama State University 79-54. Troy State was led by LaShunya Johnson who scored 18 points and pulled down 10 boards.

Monday, the Lady Penguins will take on Central Connecticut State University.

Academic Senate discusses quarter-to-semester change

The Academic Senate Executive Committee met with President Leslie Cochran on Thursday, Jan. 26 and had a thorough discussion about the possible change from a quarter to semester calendar.

The Executive Committee will sponsor a forum in the future to discuss the issue of transition to the semester calendar.

Cochran had asked the University community to provide input for his ultimate recommendation to the Board of Trustees in June. Academic Senate input will be considered along with numerous other sources.

The form of the Senate's input will be a presentation of valid points of view either supporting or opposing the change. To avoid rehashing items already presented, the Executive Committee will schedule the forum after Cochran's fact-finding reports are available in early March.

Cochran has assured the Executive Committee that a final decision has not been made. He further assured the committee that he will not make a final decision until he has evaluated the recommendations received from various divisions of the University community, including the Academic Senate.

A special meeting of the Academic Senate, for the express purpose of discussing the issue, will be scheduled for the middle of March.

Talking Pens pull double duty

The YSU Forensics Club pulled double duty and braved the elements this weekend as the varsity team traveled to Indiana/Purdue University at Fort Wayne while the novice team competed in the Ohio Forensics Association Novice Tournament at Otterbein College.

The varsity Penguins were one of 18 schools competing at the Ft. Wayne "Mastodon Stomp". The top speech teams in the country were at this single-day tournament. Bradley University, last year's national champions; Eastern Michigan University; Miami (OH) University; and Indiana University were among those participating in the event.

Leading the YSU team at the "Mastodon Stomp" was Nicholas Mulichak, who earned first place in poetry, third place in prose, and fourth place in the pentathlon.

Overall, the Talking Penguins finished in sixth place.

In Columbus, the novice team was led by University scholar Daniel Huffman, who took third place in impromptu speaking; fifth place in extemporaneous; and sixth place in programmed oral interpretation, an interpretive reading event including at least two kinds of literature. Travis Ealy earned fifth place in programmed oral interpretation and fifth place in after-dinner speaking, while Jason Budd took fifth place in poetry.

The final results of the state title competition will not be known until the varsity tournament at Ohio State University in two weeks.

The next outing for the Talking Penguins will be at Geneva College in Beaver Falls on Saturday, Feb. 11.

Diversity

She said the IQ test is based on "white, middle-class experiences" and that most standardized tests are culturally biased.

"We need to address issues of diversity and teaching styles in all classrooms," deBlois said.

She added that the educational system needs to employ new styles of teaching for students who learn better by techniques other than auditory.

"Think about the ways the [educational] system has forced you to adapt," deBlois said.

The professors' speeches were followed by a short question and answer period.

The Coalition for Diversity meets every Thursday in the Kilcawley Gallery at noon.

Correction!

It was incorrectly stated in Friday, Feb. 3 issue of The Jambar that the office of Jeremy Mercer, secretary of residence life, was in Tod Hall. It is actually in Kilcawley Center.
