Mears explains YSU budget in simple terms

By Stephanie Ujhelyi
 EDITOR IN CHIEF

How does YSU spend students' tuition dollars? G. L. Mears, YSU executive vice president (or chief financial officer), tried to explain the University's $98.9 million budget as simply as possible for those unfamiliar with budget terminology.

According to Mears, the University budget of $98.9 million is spent to achieve the best possible results for students.

First, Mears said that the $98.9 million budget speaks of the University's operating fund. This includes the current general fund, which feeds money into campus-supported departments, and various departments that are partially or wholly self-supporting.

Which departments get current general fund money? The University uses general fund money to finance everything from the YSU Police, The Jambar's publication, academic departments, Maag Library, Student Life, New Student Relations and the YSU Marching Band.

In contrast, the YSU Bookstore and Parking Services are completely self-supporting. Other defined auxiliary departments, like Intercollegiate Athletics, Kilcawley Center and Housing, do receive some help from the University, but these groups raise a great deal of their operational revenue within their own departments.

One self-supporting department, Parking Services, raises enough money to fund its own operations as well as to contribute to other expenditures on campus.

How does YSU get its money? Mears said that the University continues to draw the majority of its revenue from state support (49.44%). The remaining 50.66 percent is provided by tuition, investment incomes, fundraising and other student surcharges.

How does the University spend its money? The biggest expenditure, Mears says, is the actual education students receive in the classroom. He said that 77 percent of the budget (or $68 million) is spent on compensating academic employees (including faculty members). Mears added, "This is typical of higher educational institutions. They usually spend 75 to 80 percent of their budgets on this."

The next most costly area is institutional support, which absorbs about $10.2 million to pay for miscellaneous operational expenses.

For example, YSU spends $260,000 annually to insure its buildings, valued at $378 million.

Operation and maintenance also is expensive for an institution of YSU's size. According to Mears, the University spends $2.2 million out of its $8 million operation and maintenance budget to pay utilities. Utilities, he adds, tends to be underbudgeted so YSU spends more than that. These funds are also needed to maintain and repair the buildings.

Although travel attracts much attention, Mears said it makes up less than one percent of the budget. The early retirement programs offered to YSU faculty, staff and administrators last year, though, will cost the University $2,841,000 this year.

Each annual budget is part of a three-year plan. For example, in V On Tuesday evening, YSU students, faculty and administrators gathered outside Kilcawley Center to remember Sean Kessler and Jermaine Hopkins, the two YSU students who were recently murdered.

More than 100 people showed their support and condolences. Although there was not much talking, the overall mood was one of solemnity and peace.

Mayor Pat Ungaro, President Leslie Cochran and Head Football Coach Jim Tressel spoke of their sadness and concerns regarding the crimes that were committed against these two young men.

With lighted candles and chanting voices, Dr. Wan-Tatah, professor of philosophy and religious studies, led the group as they traveled from the "Rock" outside Kilcawley, up Fifth Avenue to the Tau Kappa Epsilon (TKE) house, where Sean had lived.

After a moment of silence, members of TKE paid tribute to the young man who was their brother and friend. By this time, the crowd had acquired a few more followers who had heard the chanting voices and joined along. Almost magically, it seemed as if the city of Youngstown was banding together to fight these criminals who walk their streets. Children, fathers and mothers stood on their front porches as the protesters marched by their houses.

Many joined in the chanting. Praises of "Amen" echoed throughout the neighborhoods. Cars beeped their horns in support of the marchers. One would think that at least their deaths were not in vain, but ironically, at those exact moments, another killing was occurring on the North Side.

The group continued their mission of peace as they traveled to Park Avenue where Jermaine had lived. They stopped there so that friends and loved ones could express their grief and anger at the violence. The "Our Father" prayer (also known as the Lord's Prayer) was said as tears of sorrow rolled down the marchers' faces.

Throughout it all, the crowd marched through the cold night air with a sense of purpose. The chanting never stopped. Different people took turns as chant leader with everyone encouraging each other. At one point, in fact, a man who had joined the march halfway through urged some of the more silent protesters to be louder because he has five children, and he doesn't want his eldest son to end up like Jermaine or Sean.

I didn't know Jermaine nor Sean, but I wish that I had. They seemed like good guys who just happened to be at the wrong place at the wrong time. And even though I didn't know them, I've still been affected by their deaths. I know that I'm not the same

Employers look beyond GPA

By Laura Clark
ASSISTANT NEWS EDITOR

Diane D. Hritz, engineering coordinator at Career Services, said that an applicant's GPA is only "one factor" that companies consider when hiring.

Many students feel constant pressure to raise their grade-point average, although work experience, especially an internship in a related field, is becoming more important to companies, according to Hritz.

She added that another factor that many employers look for is a candidate's involvement in extracurricular activities while going to school and work. The ability to achieve high grades, hold a steady job and be active in an organization exhibits ambition and maturity for which companies search, said Hritz.

"The screening process is becoming more elaborate," she said. This is mainly a result of new software that makes it easier for companies to insert each applicant's credentials into a computer program that rates him or her in comparison with others who are vying for the position, she said.

Some of these new programs give "weighted values" to internships, GPA's or whatever the company feels is most important, Hritz said.

It's nice to know that your grade-point average doesn't have the final word at your interview, but what exactly is that odd number that finds its way onto your report card each quarter?

"Divide your attempted hours into your quality points to get your GPA," explained Ellen Devine, Records Office.

Make sure that you use the number of hours you have attempted and not the ones that you've completed, she advised.

But what exactly are quality points? According to the YSU Undergraduate Bulletin (1994-95) "every grade has a quality point value for each quarter hour it represents, as follows: A, four quality points; B, three quality points; C, two quality points; D, one quality point; F, zero quality points."

So, if you earned a 'B' in a four-hour course, you would receive 12 quality points.

Many students feel that they are trapped by their grade-point average, because they think that they cannot change it. But they can.

"If a student gets an 'F' and then retakes the class the next quarter and gets a 'B', that student can file a repetition form to remove the hours," Devine said. This means that although the 'F' will still be on the student's record, it will no longer figure into the GPA, she explained.

Devine added that students can pick up repetition forms in the office of the college where they are enrolled or at the Records Office in Jones Hall.

Students can retake a class and then fill out a repetition form at any time as long as they are a current undergraduate, she said.

If you receive an unsatisfactory grade when you retake the class, you can still have another chance to improve your grade. But only the dean of your school can authorize a third repetition form. "It's all in the [undergraduate] bulletin," said Devine.

If you have any questions concerning YSU's grading system, look in the 1994-95 bulletin on page 55 or call 742-3182.

Blame is not answer; introspection is YSU seems to be caught in a vicious cycle. Youngstown needs the University in order to revitalize the city's economy, but its crime problem is scaring students away from attending here.

While the University needs to boost enrollment to receive more state funding, the recent murders of Sean Kessler and Jermaine Hopkins have been highly publicized and may create recruitment problems for University officials.

Through events such as the forum and vigil for the two murdered students, University officials are helping the community deal with the tragedy, but people in the Youngstown community continue to play the blame game.

One unsigned letter we received said:

"YSU must not be another regional institution that declines to insignificance. Since reaching a peak enrollment of 16,000, the enrollment has declined to 12,000. At current tuition and subsidies that amounts to a revenue loss of $24 million. . . It is believed that it is no coincidence that the major decline started about the time of the current president's arrival."

The letter's author also complains that "the current administration apparently lacks the managerial skills required to operate a university." He also blames the enrollment decline on YSU's tuition, which he writes, "is one of the highest in the state." YSU's tuition is one of the lowest in the state. Even though it seems to be constantly going up.

This is part of the problem with the Youngstown community. Problems exist, but instead of trying to do something productive to help solve them, it is a lot easier for them to sit back and throw around the blame.

YSU has a problem and it is not necessarily an incompetent administration. It is not YSU administrators who are out in Youngstown dealing drugs and killing one another. It is not YSU police who take one hour to go to a crime scene. It is not YSU officials' responsibility to take on the problems of the entire city.

People always act like it is YSU's responsibility to be an oasis amidst a desert of death. But even though an oasis may be able to produce water and fruit for the surrounding area, it cannot make a desert into a flourishing orchard.

Youngstown needs to clean up its act to help YSU help the city. Before Kessler and Hopkins, the YSU community may have been guilty of not paying attention to the problems that plagued a city they leave after eight hours.

But many individuals in the Youngstown community, on the other hand, are guilty of indifference. Their neighbors are victimized, their children sell drugs and their friends are murdered. Yet nothing is done to change it. It is much worse not to care than not to be aware.

Until Youngstown and YSU form their own priorities, there will be no Campus 2000.

Does quest for success drive Generation X to violence?

By Rochelle Durban
 MANAGING EDITOR

Last night I turned on the television set to the sound of "Youngstown experiences their seventh and eighth murder of the year today." The news was shocking, but as I turned to my roommate she said, "It doesn't surprise me."

As a student reporter, my job is to give the complete and unbiased story, but as a human being reporting the stories that have gone on in the past three weeks and hearing information from others have been sudden shocks of reality.

One of my classes deals with the subject of Generation X, granted that a majority of YSU students are not of this age group. However, for those of us that think, "What is going on? Why is our generation relating to violence to solve problems and even to create them?" The acts that are going on around us are scary.

One source of the Generation X age group said that he and his friends carry guns now walking home and to class. Do we really have to do this or are we creating problems?

Another source said that going to the mall might even be dangerous because of gang violence. Note that gang violence is not the only type of violence that happens, there are more but unfortunately would take up this entire page.

I asked my roommate what she thinks causes people in our age group to resort to violence. She said, "It partially has to do with the media." She went on to say that the media glamorizes violence by drawing attention to it. Being a journalist, I felt like being defensive, but then I thought about what she said.

The conclusion that I came up with is that people in the age group of 20-29 year olds (Generation X) are striving for one main thing: success. The question is how much are we willing to sacrifice for this success? Death? If so, will there be anyone left to enjoy the success we created?

I would like to give a message to those that create violence: what are you doing? Violence is not the answer to solving problems, in fact it creates more. If you want success or fame, the best way to get it is without bars in front of your face.

The media might give you attention, but think of the attention that you are getting. It will not look good on a resume. The guns are not creating the violence. The people who shoot them are creating the violence.

Revenge is not the answer.

Women with personality Play delves into the minds of Shakespeare's women

YSU— Shakespeare is well known for his complex and powerful male characters like Macbeth and Hamlet, however, the Bard's female characters often lacked depth. In Blackbox's Second Production of the season, five actresses will attempt to give new life, and depth, to some of Shakespeare's most famous women.

The Girlhood of Shakespeare's Heroines, by Columbus native Don Nigro, explores the more human side of Shakespeare's greatest women figures and how he affects the lives of women who have devoted their lives to performing his plays. "Shakespeare didn't give them [his female characters] well rounded personalities," said Lu Harding, director of the Black Box production. She says Nigro's play delves more deeply into the characters' humor and sexuality in a way that, "even men will be able to relate to."

According to Harding, the play is divided into five separate monologues by Ophelia from Hamlet, Marianna from Measure for Measure and two modern women whose lives were deeply impacted by Shakespeare's works.

The ensemble cast includes Maureen Gorman, Becky McConnell, Kristin Kerchofer, Sarah Edgar and Deana Miller.

Performances are at 8 p.m. Feb. 8, 9 and 10; and 3 p.m. Feb. 11 in the Spotlight Arena Theater in Bliss Hall. Admission is $8. For ticket information call 742-3105.

Alumnus visits as part of award-winning trio

YSU— Russell Peterson, a 1991 graduate of the Dana School of Music, will perform with the Amici Della Musica Trio on Tuesday, March 5 at 8 p.m. in the Bliss Recital Hall.

The trio has won numerous awards throughout Europe, South Africa and the U.S. Other members of the Amici Della Musica Trio are Marco Albonetti, saxophone, and Giorgio Farina, piano. Albonetti and Farina are from Italy and The Amici Della Musica Trio's current US tour is sponsored in part by Italian sponsors and patrons. Their performance will include various combinations of trio, duo and solo repertoire, along with electronic and computer accompanied compositions.

Peterson recently won the top prize in the classical saxophone division of the prestigious 51st International Geneva Concours Competition in Geneva, Switzerland. This International Music Performance Competition draws contestants from all over the world and is the most prestigious of its kind. Most musicians have only one chance in their lifetime to win this top instrumental competition, because it rotates instruments annually and there is a 30-year-old age limit for contestants. Saxophonists compete once every ten to twelve years.

Peterson also holds the prestigious First Prize in Saxophone Performance from the National Conservatory of Bordeaux, France.

In addition to his degree from YSU, Peterson recently completed a master's degree in music performance at Bowling Green University. While a student at YSU, he studied saxophone with James Umble, assistant professor of saxophone, and bassoon with Donald W. Byo, professor emeritus. He currently works as an instructor at the University of Toledo, and continues to perform bassoon in the Youngstown Symphony orchestra.

Peterson will be conducting a master class prior to the 8 p.m. performance on March 5, from 5 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. in room 3150, Bliss Hall.

There will be a reception following the evening performance. The concert and master class are both free and open to the public.

Symphonic Wind Ensemble selected to perform at national conference

YSU— The Youngstown State University Symphonic Wind Ensemble, directed by Dr. Stephen Gage, assistant professor of music, was selected to perform at the 1996 North Central Region College Band Directors National Association (CBDNA) convention at the University of Wisconsin, Green Bay, at 2 p.m., Saturday, March 2, in the new Weidner Fine Arts Center.

The YSU Symphonic Wind Ensemble is one of six featured bands selected by four distinguished university band directors from a taped audition recorded during their 1994-95 season. The other bands who will perform are: Northwestern University Wind Ensemble (IL), DePaul University Wind Ensemble (IL), Central Michigan Wind Ensemble, Lawrence Conservatory Wind Ensemble (WI), and Western Michigan Wind Ensemble. YSU's Symphonic Wind Ensemble was one of six bands selected to perform at a national band directors convention in March.

North Central region will be in the audience at the CBDNA convention. It is a great honor for the YSU Symphonic Wind Ensemble to perform for such a prestigious audience.

The YSU Symphonic Wind Ensemble consists of fifty-five undergraduate and four graduate students from five state (Ohio, Pennsylvania, Maryland, West Virginia, and New York) and two students from Japan. The students were selected through an audition in fall quarter '95 from the woodwind, brass and percussion students currently enrolled in YSU's Dana School of Music.

Performing with the YSU Wind Ensemble will be Dr. James Umble, professor of saxophone, and Michael Crist, assistant professor of trombone. Umble will perform Marilyn Shrade's Concerto for Saxophone and Wind Ensemble. This piece was commissioned by the Dana School of Music for its 125th Anniversary celebration in 1994. Crist will conduct the Symphonic Wind Ensemble for Dello Joio's Variants on a Mediaeval Tune. Highlighting the repertoire on the convention program is Mussorgsky's Pictures At An Exhibition, as arranged for the wind ensemble by Mark Hindsley.

As a kick-off to their trip, the YSU Symphonic Wind Ensemble will perform at 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday, Feb. 29 at South Range High School in their new auditorium.

At 8 p.m. on Monday, Mar. 4, the YSU Symphonic Wind Ensemble will perform a concert "Chamber Wind Classics, Pictures, and More" at Powers Auditorium, in Youngstown, Ohio. This performance will also feature repertoire performed at the CBDNA convention.

These performances are free and open to the public.

Dance Hall Crashers
Lockjaw
510 Records

With ska rhythms and catchy pop/punk lyrics, Dance Hall Crashers are a combination of Rancid and the Go-Gos. The 14 song disc is full of fast, lively tunes that are bound to make you jump in the pit. The band has two singers, Elyse Rogers and Karina Denike, who harmonize with each other on every song. With tunes more fun than Prozac, this disc is a nice departure from angry bands like NIN, Alice in Chains who seem to have a monopoly on the music scene.

Clarissa
Silver
Mammoth Records

Silver, the debut album from Clarissa, contains raw guitar sounds and low, almost spoken, vocals. With an unproduced sound, the three-piece band does well with more of a song-writing approach, rather than the typical riff-based rock. Though the songs are well written, the music never seems to completely lift off the ground. Overall, this disc is not a complete failure, its not a bad effort for a debut album.

Joanie Murphy named first women's soccer coach at YSU

Joanie Murphy, a native of Youngstown, OH, and a 1983 graduate of YSU, has been named the first head coach of the newly organized women's soccer program, announced Jim Tressel, executive director of athletics.

The appointment comes on the heels of the announcement that the University will be adding three women's varsity sports to its existing 15 intercollegiate programs (eight men's and seven women's). In January, Roseann Schwartz was named the first women's golf coach for the Lady Penguins.

"Joanie Murphy is one of the most knowledgeable soccer coaches around, and we are happy to be adding her to our athletics family," Tressel said.

She received her undergraduate degree from YSU in 1983, lettering for the Lady Penguins as a member of the women's basketball program from 1978 to 1980. She earned her M.S. degree in guidance and counseling from YSU in 1991.

She was hired as an assistant women's soccer coach at Virginia Wesleyan College for two years and has spent the last two years as the head coach of the Norfolk Youth under-19 and under-11 Girls Travel Soccer Club, as well as serving as head girl's soccer coach at Granby High School the past seven seasons.

Her most recent position was serving as the head coach of the Hampton Roads Piranhas, a member of the United States Women's Independent Soccer League, which is the highest level of play attainable other than the women's national team play.

Involved in a myriad of soccer associations, she is licensed by the National Soccer Coaches Association of America and the U.S. Soccer Federation and is a member of the Southeastern Virginia Women's Soccer Association, while serving as vice-president of the Eastern District Coaches Association where she was named "Coach of the Year" in 1995.

Penguins jam Western Illinois to end three-game losing skid

"We beat a good ballclub on a night when I felt that we had everything going for us both offensively and defensively."

Dan Peters, head coach, men's basketball team

By Michael Grazier
SPORTS EDITOR

After losing three straight Mid-Continent Conference matchups, the YSU men's basketball squad came alive Monday night to post a convincing 73-48 victory against Western Illinois University.

Junior David Henderson was the man in charge offensively as he poured in 21 points and hit eight of 12 from the field, including five of seven from three-point range. He also collected a team-high eight rebounds.

Junior Matt McMurray pumped in 14 markers, while junior Marcus Culbreth added seven caroms to go along with his 14 points.

"We took a long look at ourselves after Saturday night's loss to Missouri/Kansas City, and we knew that if we were to make a run for position in the standings for the Mid-Continent Conference's post-season tournament, then it would have to start against Western Illinois University," said Dan Peters, head coach.

Peters' results were instant as the Penguins excelled in all phases of the game, but, most importantly, on the offensive end where YSU has been less than consistent through much of the season.

As a team, the red and white finished the game shooting an even 50 percent (28 of 56) from the floor, while netting 10 of their 18 three-point attempts (56 percent) without having their usual long-range ace, junior Hank Raber, in the lineup due to an ankle sprain.

Defense also was not a problem for Peters' squad as they held the Fightin' Leathernecks to just 19 of 56 from the field, including a dismal seven for 30 in the second half and just two for 17 from beyond the arc.

"We beat a good ballclub on a night when I felt that we had everything going for us both offensively and defensively," Peters said.

George Milsap led all Fightin' Leathernecks with 13 points, while Clint Ford and Garrick Vicks each cashed in 12.

The win drops Western Illinois to 9-10 (6-5 in the conference), while the Penguins improve to 9-11 (4-8).

Next up for the Penguins will be the Chicago State Cougars at 5 p.m., Saturday, Feb. 10 in Chicago.

Lady Penguins overtake Westerwinds, move into second place in Mid-Con

By Michael Grazier
SPORTS EDITOR

The YSU women's basketball team eked out a tough Mid-Continent Conference battle Monday, taking the Western Illinois Westerwinds to the buzzer before notching a 81-76 decision.

Leading the way for the Lady Penguins was junior Liz Hauger. Hauger jammed home 21 points and had seven rebounds and five steals, continuing her outstanding play so far this season. Her heroics also included a 10-for-11 performance from the foul line.

Sophomore Ann Marie Martin contributed 18 points as she went nine for 13 from the floor, while another sophomore, Shannon Beach, threw in eight of 10 from the charity stripe as part of a 10-point contribution.

Beach also secured a game-high 11 caroms.

Sophomores Caroline McCombs and Colleen Cook added nine and seven points respectively, with Cook dishing out eight assists and collecting six steals.

"I'll take a win any way I can get one," said Ed DiGregorio, head coach, confirming that his team's play did get a bit sloppy in the latter stages.

YSU fought off a late rally to hold on to a three-point advantage late in the contest, only to turn the ball over on three consecutive possessions, giving the Westerwinds various opportunities to take control of the ballgame. Fortunately for the red and white, Western Illinois failed to capitalize and the Penguins pulled off the victory.

Western Illinois' Lori Haskett led all scorers with 22, while Karen Block added 19 in the losing effort.

Once again the Lady Penguins turned up the intensity in the second half on the defensive end as they held Western Illinois to just 12 of 32 from the field in the stanza.

Also helping the YSU cause was their ability to get to the foul line where the Lady Penguins finished the evening canning 28 of their 34 attempts (82 percent).

With the win, YSU improves to 11-7 overall, (8-3 in the Mid-Con) and is now in sole possession of second place in the conference. The Westerwinds fall to 6-13 (4-7).

The Lady Penguins will suit up next against Chicago State at 1 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 10 in Chicago.

DID YOU KNOW?

The 1920 season was less than a month old when a reminder was served that even though the deadball era was over, a whiff of it still lingered. On May 1, in Boston, the Brooklyn Dodgers hooked up in a 26-inning 1-1 tie with the Braves that will probably always stand as both the longest game in Major-League history and the longest game not played to a decision. What made the game most seem like a throwback to an earlier time, however, was not its extraordinary length, but the fact that both starting pitchers, Leon Cadore of the Dodgers and Joe Oeschger of the Braves, went all the way. The following day the Dodgers played 13 innings against the Phillies and then went into overtime again on May 3 against the Braves, losing to them 2-1 in 19 innings. Brooklyn's three-game total of 58 innings played (the equivalent of six-and-a-half games) is a record that has never been even remotely challenged.

Longest Game in Organized Baseball History

33 innings--Pawtucket 3, Rochester 2, International League, April 19, 1981. The game was suspended at 4:07 a.m. after 32 innings with the score 2-2, then completed that night, with Pawtucket pushing across the winning run almost as soon as the game was resumed. The longest game that was not interrupted by suspension was played on June 14, 1966, between Miami and St. Petersburg of the Class A Florida State League, Miami, managed by Billy DeMars, winning 4-3 in 29 innings over Sparky Anderson's St. Pete Club.

Indoor track team off on both feet at West Virginia's Brooks Classic

YSU's men's and women's indoor track program traveled to the West Virginia indoor facility this past weekend to compete at the Brooks Classic and got their first taste of national caliber competition.

Maryland, Virginia Tech, George Mason, Ohio University, Pittsburgh and Kent State were all in attendance, and while there was no official scoring for the meet, the Penguin program had many incredible individual performances.

The most impressive performance came from freshman, Miranda Fellows from England, who was a nationally ranked jumper in high school.

Fellows, in only her third indoor meet of her career, set two school records in both the triple and long jump. She smashed the triple jump record with a distance of 36' 1", a full foot longer than the previous mark. She then bested sophomore teammate Marcella Scaife's long jump mark of 17' 1" set earlier this year by jumping 17' 5".

"Both ladies working together have the capability to take the school record well over 18 feet," said Brian Gorby, head coach, of his two national caliber-jumpers.

In the running events, Marcella Scaife has started right where she left off last outdoor-track season when she was named the Mid-Continent Conference's Newcomer of the Year. She improved both her times in the 400 meters (59.74) and the 200 meters (26.34), and she placed sixth and seventh respectively in her events.

In the shot put, freshman Meressa Cornwell continued to move closer to the record as she hurled the shot 42' 1/2", good for third place in her event and a foot improvement over her best toss.

On the men's side, freshman Kofi-Owusu-Ansah continued to improve his sprint times.

There was national-caliber field for the 55-meter dash, which included the likes of Olympian sprinter and wide receiver for the Oakland Raiders, James Jett. Kofi, who had run 6.52 seconds the past two weekends and was injured with a pulled quadricep muscle, rose to the occasion.

He focused on beating Jett and in the process dropped his time to 6.44 seconds, right behind Jett's 6.39.

Kofi's time is only .16 tenths off the Division I national qualifying standard for the 55-meter dash.

Sophomores Matt Folk and Chris Emory both ran personal bests in the 3,000 meter race, posting times of 8:48 and 8:49 respectively, an improvement of over 15 seconds for each of them.

Freshman J.B. Ritchie broke the two-minute mark in the 800 meters with an indoor best of 1:59.6, while senior Ben Kipp ran a solid 50.9 to place third.

Next up for the Penguins will be a scored meet at Kent State University on Saturday, Feb. 10 at the Kent State indoor facility.

LPGA star Michelle McGann to appear at Beeghly Center

Michelle McGann, the defending 1995 Youngstown-Warren LPGA Classic champion, will make an appearance at the Beeghly Center/Dom Rosselli Court on Saturday, Feb. 17 as the Penguin basketball teams play host to Valparaiso University in Mid-Continent Conference action, announced Marc Gregory, LPGA Classic operations coordinator and Paul McFadden, director of athletic development.

"The LPGA is happy to team up with YSU by bringing defending champion Michelle McGann to the YSU campus to not only remind people that the tournament is just around the corner, but to root on the respective YSU cage teams as they prepare for the Mid-Continent Conference's post-season tournament in early March," Gregory said. "There will be plenty of golf instruction with local pros also available to the general public attending the game, while prizes and give-aways are also slated to be given away that night as well," he added.

Some of the events that are on tap for the night include a net set up on the long deck where instruction on golf will be given (local pros will offer various tips and instruction) and a simulated hole with prizes going to the top three contestants for their "closest to the pin" shot (they will compete prior to the game with the finals slated for halftime). Prizes will include two season tickets to the 1996 YSU football season with another of the prizes set to include four weekly badges and a parking pass to this season's LPGA Classic, a $150 value.

McGann is a three-time Florida State junior champion, and has been on the tour since 1989. A native of West Palm Beach, FL., she earned $449,296 last season on the tour and has earned $1,442,403 in her career.

The LPGA "Night With the Penguins" is made possible through the efforts of Schwebel's, sponsor of the night's give-away item, and Patella Carpeting.

For further information, contact Marc Gregory at the LPGA Offices at (216) 742-3192.

The women's game against Valparaiso is slated to start at 5:20 p.m., while the men's action will get underway at 7:40 p.m.

addition to the detailed budget plan for 1995-96, a less specific budget is formulated for 1996-97 and 1997-98. This year, the University attempted to end YSU's reliance on Contingency Reserves and Fund Balance Brought Forward (or backup money). Through the 1997-1998 fiscal year, the use of the Contingency Reserves will dwindle yearly.

Mears concluded, "YSU must operate on a balanced budget each year - and we do. Some years have required the use of reserves in addition to current income."

In an ideal world, we wouldn't need to march against violence because there would be no violence to protest against, but we don't live in an ideal world. And it's a shame that something had to hit so close to home for us to take notice.

Maybe that's why it happened. It seems like we've become immune to the killings that have been happening constantly, and maybe this was a wake-up call to all of us that something has to be done. Violence is not the answer.

What was truly moving about the whole experience was the people's reactions as we marched by—sadness, hope, awe and surprise were etched on their faces. One of the marchers said it best: in times of tragedy the human spirit "seeks to be consoled, as to console."

As fellow human beings, we need to help each other through the tough times. This was one of those times.

I want to thank everyone who took the time out of their busy schedules to attend the vigil. Honestly, I didn't think so many people cared. Thank you for proving me wrong.
