Committee proposes cuts for users of general fee

By JENNIFER T. KOLLAR
News Editor

If the YSU General Fee Committee's recommendations are accepted by the Administration, four student services may be completely wiped out for the upcoming year.

All departments funded by the general fee are expected to have significant reductions in allocations for next year, according to Dr. Charles McBriarty, chair of the General Fee Committee.

The hardest hit, if the Committee's recommendation is accepted, will be The Penguin Review, The YSU Evening Shuttle Service, Club Sports and the Special Lecture Series.

The Committee is recommending that these four services not get any allocation from the general fee next year. However, McBriarty said that if these services are cut, it will be only for one year.

Money that is generated from the general fee, according to McBriarty, is designed to fund activities and events that will benefit students. Currently, over 20 departments receive general fee allocations. This year's allocations totalled to over $7 million dollars. Some of the largest general fee users include: athletics, Kilcawley Center and Career Services, and Scholarship and Financial Aid, while smaller departments include: Marching Band, Student Escort Services, Recommendation 1 represents the original allocation for that department. Recommendation 2 represents the revised allocation amount.

University Theatre and The Neon. Even though four services are facing possible extinction next year, all general fee users will face anywhere from a 5-53 percent reduction in their allocations for next year.

One of the departments facing the largest percentage reductions in their allocations includes the YSU Marching Band. The Marching Band received $37,000 this year, and the Committee is recommending that Marching Band be allocated only $17,500 next year, a 53 percent reduction. Another area being hit hard is Student Support Services, which was allocated $196,590 this year and is recommended to receive $100,000, a 49 percent reduction.

Departments receiving the smallest reductions include: Scholarships and Financial Aid. That department currently is allocated $601,460. The Committee recommended a 5 percent reduction, which would take the total down to $570,000. Kilcawley Center may lose 6 percent in allocations. The Center currently receives $1,084,822. The Committee recommended that Kilcawley be allocated $1,015,000 next year. Athletics may see a 7 percent reduction in allocations. The athletic department was allocated $3,025,597 this year. The Committee recommended the department be dropped down to $2,790,000 next year.

The General Fee Committee is composed of one other administrator and six students, who are nominated by Student Government and appointed by the University. According to McBriarty, aside from getting the Committee started and accustomed to the process, the students were pretty much on their own.

McBriarty said the Committee sent out a series of questions to general fee users who were asked things like "What would you do with less money?" and "What kinds of programs would you cut?" After

YSU students examine campus race relations at open forum

By STEVE RANELLI
Staff Reporter

YSU students will examine campus race relations during an open forum meeting today in Kilcawley Center's main lounge area from noon to 2 p.m.

The meeting is being sponsored by the Pan African Student Union and will consist of a panel of students from different ethnic backgrounds who will discuss problems of racial diversity at YSU.

Pan African Student Union Programming Chair Shareef Ali said he hopes the meeting will improve communications and "rid YSU of negative stereotypes attached to minority students."

As a member of the Armed Forces, Ali has traveled extensively in the United States and abroad and said the Youngstown area is "filled with racial prejudice that stems from stereotyping entire races."

Ali said he hopes this meeting will begin to address the problem of making YSU a truly diverse University which will involve people of all ethnic backgrounds in its daily activities.

Ali also points out that the University's faculty must become "more aware and involved in reducing racial prejudices by following a multicultural curriculum."

Newly elected Student Government President Bill Burley and Vice President Pat Billet will also be panel members.

YSU police arrest man for multiple campus burglaries

By PAUL CURL
Assistant News Editor

A suspect in five YSU burglaries, Isam J. Mitchell, 31, of the Rescue Mission, was arrested on May 24 and will be arraigned today in the courtroom of Judge Patrick Kerrigan.

According to Lt. Ralph Goldich, who prepared Mitchell's voluntary statement upon his arrest, the suspect admitted to breaking into a construction trailer outside of Fedor Hall where he acquired tools in the breaking and entering of Beeghly Center on May 23 and Stambaugh Stadium on May 24.

According to YSU police reports, two vending machines in the north lobby of Beeghly Center had been broken into with its contents removed and a third one damaged on the morning of the May 24 between 12:35 a.m. and 7:30 a.m. The perpetrator gained en-

Cuts

Continued from page 1 that, each Committee member was given the budget of each department for the two previous years to see where they spent their money. Each Committee member then interviewed the various departments to ask any questions they had in order to prioritize the departments. According to McBriarty, this past February there was $143,000 less money available in the General Fee Fund than was available in the previous year. In addition a decision was made that $250,000 from the general fee was to go toward payment of University bonds or debt service (money borrowed to construct several of the campus housing and dorm units). At that point, according to McBriarty, the Committee was faced with more than $300,000 less money to work with. In early May, the Committee reconvened and was given a figure of $500,000 to be taken away from general fee monies. According to McBriarty, the Committee now was faced with $850,000 less to work with.

"The fiscal picture has not gotten any brighter. Everybody in the General Fee Fund has faced some cuts and some aren't funded at all. Overall, there was a 10 percent reduction," McBriarty said.

According to McBriarty, to his knowledge all departments have been informed.

"It's a shame everything is being cut. I haven't heard anything. It would be nice to know exactly what's going on so I could make some suggestions," said Dom Caruso, Penguin Review editor.

"It's unfortunate that we will have to make other plans for Club Sports," said Pauline Saternow, associate director of athletics.

"Club Sports receive such a small amount, it's a shame it may be cut," she said.

According to Saternow, Club Sports are sports that don't compete on an intercollegiate level. She said five sports comprise Club Sports: velo equip (cycling), soccer, co-ed volleyball, crickets and archery.

Saternow said that although the recommendation is not firm, "we have been trying to plan ways for Club Sports to exist if they are cut out completely next year."

According to McBriarty, these are just recommendations that will be reviewed by the YSU Budget Committee, which will accept, reject or modify the recommendation. The President will then make a recommendation to the Board of Trustees for approval. However, McBriarty said that it is likely that they will accept the recommendations.

Student escorts, ID checkers aid YSU PD

By DOM CARUSO
Staff Reporter

YSU Campus Escort Service volunteers and the ID checkers in Beeghly Center and Stambaugh Stadium carry radios which connect them to the YSU police department — a fact students should be aware of, YSU crises intervention officer Anne Lally says.

Most students don't realize that there are people on campus who are able to contact the police when they need to report a crime or ask for assistance. "There are people out there they can contact if they don't see someone in uniform," Lally said. ID checkers and campus escorts can offer students that service, she said.

She went on to say that there are ID checkers at every entrance in Beeghly Center and Stambaugh Stadium after 4 p.m.. Moreover, a separate police officer patrols the area in and around Beeghly and Stambaugh from 5 p.m. to approximately 9 p.m. every evening.

The campus escort service has also been useful because its volunteers help students to move from one area on campus to another in safety, Lally said. In addition to this, 24-hour a day service is offered to handicapped individuals. Campus escorts typically handles many specific situations— assisting 65 to 70 different people per week, dispatcher John Steigauf estimated. The escort service can be reached by calling ext. 1515 on campus at any time.

When asked how campus security could be improved, Lally said that the employment of more full time officers to aid the current 15 officers and 5 lieutenants would improve security. She also added that campus escorts and ID checkers have both very good in aiding police crime prevention efforts.

As V-Day approaches, campus awaits cutbacks

The entire campus community has been frantically preparing leaner budgets and searching for innovative cost-cutting avenues that may help the University survive the dreaded V-Day (Governor Voinovich Day) — that dismal day in the immediate future when Governor Voinovich slowly tightens the yoke around Ohio's higher education neck.

During these days, hours and final moments, we wait for the judgement to see how much we will lose in state instructional subsidies — will it be a 9, 15 or "X" percent loss? Our fate is in the hands of our Governor (YSU administrators believe that Governor Voinovich will be making a 15 percent cut which means that YSU could lose $6.4 million dollars).

And in these final hours, as YSU Budget Committees scramble and deliberate who and what will or won't get cut, as they tackle and reassess issues of academics and athletics, we must remember to keep a strong grip on our priorities. The primary priority must be that we are an institution of higher education.

Everyone on committees and having decision-making power must remember that every decision and every single penny distributed is crucial and will directly and indirectly affect the lifeblood of this University — the students, the faculty, the staff and the support programs.

Although there is a sphere and host of other problems that envelope us along with dark clouds that contain tough issues floating above us, we, the people at YSU, must remember to constantly evaluate and reevaluate our priorities and decisions because the priorities that are on our agendas ultimately determine the decisions or course of action we take.

As priorities are set and decisions made in these campus committees, and in these times of uncertainty, we must never abandon our academic mission: that at YSU academics are number one and that: "The University is dedicated to superior teaching, rigorous scholarship, research and responsible public service." (stated in the YSU Strategic Plan of the 1990s).

Seniors say goodbye

"These are the days of our lives"

Kelly Lanterman
Editor-in-Chief

As I was cleaning out my desk at The Jambar, taking down the numerous Joe Montana posters, the posters of the YSU football team that I've accumulated since 1988 and the pictures of all my friends that are plastered around my desk, I realized that these past few years have been some of the best of my life.

There are so many people that have been a part of my life for such a long time now that I feel the need to thank them, and in the process bring back some old memories.

So, in the immortal words of Queen, (kind of) "These are the days of my life." I'll try to keep this as short as possible, because I know that most people reading this could really care less who I want to thank! There is no special order, and everyone and everything is probably going to be arranged in a haphazard manner, much like my own flow of consciousness (which is usually pretty messed up).

First and foremost, I wish to thank Mrs. Eileen Kolat, my 10th and 12th grade English teacher at Hubbard High School. She is the person who first got me interested in English and composition, and I hope to someday be as wonderful a teacher as she was to me, and as she continues to be. I could never say enough good things about Mrs. Kolat.

Jim Klingensmith
Managing Editor

Goodbye YSU. I have finally graduated. So, in the immortal words of Dennis Miller I would just like to say, "I am out of here."

Yes, the journey to achieve greater intelligence that began six years ago has come to an end. I have successfully battled the numerous obstacles and reached that plateau indicating, hopefully to future employers, I am smarter. I actually received that significant piece of paper.

However, my quest for the mystical elusive diploma was not a one-man mission. I had tons of help along the way. These probably shaken individuals deserve to be recognized.

The first people I need to thank are my parents. I appreciate their constant incentives and for giving me a place to live in order to conquer the mighty giants at YSU. Without them, I might be currently flipping burgers and living out of my car. I am thankful for everything they have given me.

I would also like to thank both my brothers. There is really no particular reason for thanking them since both of them are buttheads. It just seems like the right thing to do (just kidding).

Also, I couldn't have succeeded in completing my education without the help of several professors. During my college career, I have learned much needed information from these in-

The YSU Board of Trustees. Thank all of you for giving me a lot to write about during my time as Editor. If your dealings weren't underhanded, I would have been bored.

Professor Thomas Gay, Dr. Sandra Stephan, Dr. Stephanie Tingley and Dr. Virginia Monseau. You have all offered me some of the best classes I have taken at YSU, and all of you are excessively knowledgeable. Dr. Stephan — I think someday I'll write my dissertation on Jane Austen!

Dr. Richard McEwing. Thank you for all of your help breaking into secondary education. Without your help, I wouldn't be as far as I am, and I probably wouldn't know where I was going.

Rick George. If it weren't for you encouraging me two years ago to become active on The Jambar staff, I probably wouldn't even know there was such a thing as The Jambar! Thank you for all of your help.

The entire 1990-91 Jambar staff. It was never easier to work with a group of people, and none ever got along as well as this staff. You taught me the true meaning of friendship and teamwork.

Desiree Lyonette. Thanks for being a friend. You were (and still are) the only "sorority sister" who is trustworthy, and who doesn't carry a pack of sharpened knives in your backpack! We'll have a darn good time next year (after I move my belongings from one office to the other). Good luck next year, and try to have fun!

Brian Fry. (How could you NOT make my list?) We've known each other ever since we were little freshman peons, and we've had a lot of good times over the past four years (need I mention Scotty Baird's, "I can go get my bat if you need one," bus trips, celebrating July 1st and July 2nd dividuals and I know I would be clueless if I never had the opportunity to meet them.

Since there are quite a few, I will just mention their names with a brief synopsis.

Dr. David Robinson: The first professor I had at YSU. He acted as an icebreaker as to what should be expected at the University. By the way Doc, where do you carry that card again?

Dr. Gary Salvner: The first individual to strongly reinforce my belief that teaching English can be fun. It takes a lot of courage to put up with 20 plus English education majors in one room.

Mr. Mark Lyden and Dr. Thomas McCracken: Thanks for making my student teaching experience at South educational. Believe me, I learned more than just everyday teaching and I know I will be more successful because of this experience.

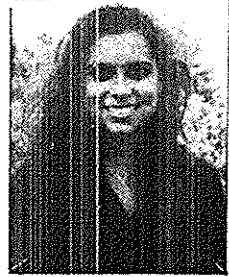

Dr. Jim Henke: I never fully understood that Shakespeare was so meaningful, especially all the profanity. Plus, I still believe that Frank, Gary and I should have received an "A" for our newspaper project.

Dr. Donna McNierney: Who would have thought that teaching could be so much fun. Got to love those focal situations. I probably gathered the most knowledge that I will need for the future in this class.

There are also two other professors that need to be given special thanks.

First I would like to thank Dr. Barbara Brothers. Not only did I find her class educational (although there might have been too much work) she also is a great help to English majors at YSU. Her assistance has strongly improved my chances for employment in the future.

When it came time for me to finally write this farewell commentary, I was a bit apprehensive for a couple of reasons. First, I didn't know if I could find just the right words, or if I could adequately describe what the Jambar and my whole college experience has meant to me.

I know, I'm a Professional Writing and Editing major and words should come easy, but this commentary is probably the hardest thing I've ever had to write.

As much as I want to graduate and start a new phase of my life, I just can't imagine not being a part of the Jambar and all of the wonderful friends and memories associated with it. As much as I and many others have complained about the Jambar (no outing was the same without Jambar bashing) it has always been a source of intellect, fun (sometimes too much fun), inspiration, friendship and imagination for me.

For someone who didn't view YSU as a number one prospect when searching for colleges, I definitely was in for quite a surprise. Everyone I have come in contact with at YSU, from teachers, to friends, to advisors, have been so wonderful and helpful to me throughout the years. I'd especially like to thank Mrs. Martindale (if you're reading this) and Dr. Bowers for being so patient and for giving me the best advice and guidance anyone could ask for. Thank you both so much. I'd also like to say goodbye and thank you to everyone in the Allied Health department (Patty & Helen) for being so wonderful and making my work experience so enjoyable. I will miss you all so much.

I'd also like to thank Norma, Debbie and Jim in News Service for all the great times and conversations while I worked there. I'll always remember all our downtown trips and Jim's prank when I was going to sell my car. I still laugh about it. I'll miss you all.

Most of all, I'd like to thank my family and Rich for always being there for me through everything and anything. You all have to be saints for putting up with all my crazy emotions. I love you all so much.

Now what all my crazy friends at the office have been waiting for.

Next year if you're missing me (which I hope you all do desperately), open the file drawer under Spring '92, pull out this issue and read the following:

JENN: My partner in crime and fellow fashion guru. I hope your year as editor is fulfilling, fun, enlightening and an all-around great experience. (Don't forget to put our picture on your desk). I don't even have to say "good luck" because I know you will do a great job. You care so much about the paper and it shows. I'll miss working with you, chatting with you and all the other crazy things we chickies do.

APRIL: For two people as opposite as me and you, (you're a little bit country and I'm a little...oh well) I can't believe how close we've become. I know you look back on your arrival here a little skeptically, but I want you to know that having you on the staff has been so great. You add such a special touch everytime you walk through the door. I'm glad I got at least one year to work with you. Don't forget our Jimmy's runs and all our goofy sayings. And especially, don't forget me (you no I.D. havin', Garth Brooks lovin'....)

BARB: You little chicklet. I hope you have a great year. I'm so glad we shared a desk and so many great memories- (Choices, Mr. Ogilvie, technical difficulties, swapping clothes, food runs...) You will always be one of my best friends. Keep up all our sayings and share the phone next year!!! I'll miss you so much. (Schwing!)

SHERRI: You were the greatest assistant I could have ever asked for. I know that you will do great next year at news and this summer at the Vindicator. Thanks for being such a good friend. Good Luck next year. I'll miss you.

MIKE: Or should I say Vinnie. Good luck at the sports desk. I'm sure you'll replace me at the Jeopardy group (BET IT ALL), but don't forget, if you don't know the question, try — Who is Mister Ed? (Oooh, I'm sorry). I'll miss you. Bye, Cindy.

Since I'm running out of room, I'll keep the rest of my messages short.

KELLY AND JIM: I know I lumped you two together in one message but you two just go together in my mind. Good Luck in your futures and I hope you both experience a lot of love and happiness.

PAUL: Don't forget me — Mrs. T. — I won't say much more because I'm feeling a little verclept (ha-ha).

FAITH: Keep wearing those crayons and making those hard-rock brownies. I'll miss you so much. (Bye Bill. Good Luck at OU.)

CHARLIE: Thanks for telling us about the road trip — doing favors. I can just think of it and laugh. You are such a talented guy (and you have the chubbiest hands in the office). I'll miss you.

BRENDA: Thanks for making me feel like a movie star at that photo shoot. Good Luck in whatever you do. I'll miss you.

MARYANNE: My favorite Penny. Good luck with Darrin and I'll miss you a bunch.

DESIREE: Sue-B will miss you. Don't forget me.

GREG: Keep jammin' G-Donut. I'll miss you, M.C. Creamy Cupcake.

MICHELLE: My dancing partner. I'll never forget our Choices night. Keep slidin' and keep the good music alive next year. I'll miss you so much.

DR. MULLEN: My fellow New York lover. Good Luck next year.

JOE: You staff whatever you are. Good Luck in the entertainment world.

Okay, I'm done everybody. Now shut the file drawer, look over at my desk and think of me. Believe me, I'll be thinking of you, too.

Another academic year has come to pass and sadly most of us must say goodbye to our friends for the summer and congratulate those who are graduating.

This is the time for me to explore new horizons as I leave the world of Jambar darkroom tech. behind and venture further into news media. How sweet it is!

I'd like to thank the Jambar staff, including Kelly, April, Barb, Faith, Jim, Paul and Mike for making my time here quite entertaining, to say the least, and simply a home away from home. If there is anything I could ever do for you, just say the word. Since I don't graduate for a while yet, I must warn you, I Will Be Back!

I extend my congratulations to Jennifer and Sherri for their promotions and wish you the best of luck for the coming year. I am confident that your talent will ensure your success.

Congratulations Sue, my favorite model, you're graduating and it is time to take those giant steps on the road of opportunity. I am certain that your skill and bubbly personality will get you far in life. Good luck to you, even though I know you won't need it.

Saving the best for last, I would like to thank Maryanne and Desiree. Sometimes situations seemed bleak and many times our accomplishments went unnoticed and uncommended but both of you taught me to stand up for my morals, to believe in myself and to make a stand for what I believe is right. Thank you. I will always cherish your friendship.

I would also like to thank the staff at the Media Center, especially Carl Leet, for making me gain confidence in my work. I will never forget what you have taught me, or at least I better not! Maybe someday I might know as much as you, NOT! Thanks for being my coach.

Goodbye

[which, by the way, is right around the corner!!!], just to name a few. Thanks for some excellent times. (I still have it in me!)

Everyone who made the first 3 1/2 years of college life the best (you know who you are). The pre-game, post-game, weeknight and weekend parties pretty much made my first few years at YSU exciting — to say the least.

Craig Kertesz. Even though you're included in the last paragraph, you still need to be recognized on your own! You've been one of my closest friends ever since you were "a little recruit." You've also been the most sincere (remember Pal Joey's? You were right!). In fact, you were always right. Especially recently when you told me "don't get mad, get even." Thanks, Craig! And by the way, you'll never have to hitchhike home from my house again!

Raquel Mayle. How can I possibly fit all that you've done for me and helped me through in one paragraph? You've been my closest friend since eighth grade. You've been there through everything, and you always seem to be able to say the right thing, make me see clearly, and make me feel better. Just think — this time next year, you'll be a Mrs.!

My sister, Kristin. Thanks for taking my clothes, rattin' on me, getting me in trouble, getting better grades, and just being a general pain in the ass. Good luck next year, and try to have fun in college — which may be difficult with our parents. Think of it this way: at least I broke them in a little bit for you!

Jim Klingensmith. Queen sums it up best (is this turning into a tribute to the late, great Freddie Mercury, or what?): "You're my best friend."

You are the one person that has remained constant in my life. You've laughed with me through the good times, and you've stood by me during the bad. I know I can be a pain in the butt sometimes, but I want what's best for you. So go get 'em in Cleveland. You'll make a wonderful teacher and coach! (Even though you are a butthead!)

Last, but certainly not least, I'd like to thank Mare and Tom (my parents). They've given me love, support, stress, grief, food, shelter and MONEY. If it weren't for you guys, I'd probably be answering an intercom with a catchy saying like "Good morning and welcome to the home of the 100 percent pure soy bean hamburger, where you get more bun for your money. Would you like to try a breakfast pizza?" Thanks for everything, dudes! By the way, dad, I want my putter back!

Well, I could go on a lot longer, but I guess I have some sympathy. Besides, even though I'm graduating this month, I'll still be around — I'm just transferring offices and sticking my hands into other cookie jars.

So maybe next year, Jenn will give me a page or two to write some more in the last issue of The Jambar (just kidding).

By the way, good luck Jennifer. May you have as many wonderful and insightful times as I have as Editor-in-Chief.

"Those were the days of our lives/the bad things in life were so few/Those days are all gone now but, one thing's still true/When I look and I find I still love you." Queen.

I'm gone

Secondly, I must thank Dr. Randy Hoover. He is a great asset to YSU and has helped me understand that I should not take crap from anyone. He has also made my current and future employment easier. He knows what I mean.

Two other YSU employees that I need to thank are Mrs. Jane Sainato and Mr. Gary Kirkland. Their assistance at Career Services is greatly appreciated.

Students that don't take advantage of this service are idiots. It's a good thing the students that ignore this student service are at YSU trying to get an education because it is obvious that they need to further their learning.

Jane, thanks again for taking care of me and my numerous trips to your office. Also, say "Hi" to Rock for me.

Also, what would YSU have been without any friends. Two individuals I really want to thank for allowing me to get to know them are Rick George and Frank Melillo.

I don't have much to say to these two except Rick, lose the goatee and Frank, start returning your calls within a 24-hour time period.

The final person I want to thank is Kelly Lanterman. I've known Kelly for two years and we've been dating about a year and a half. Although she puts me through hell and can't seem to make up her mind, I still enjoy spending time with her.

Why, I really don't know, but I hope to continue doing so for a long period of time. That is if she doesn't put me in a mental institution. Just kidding honey. Also, don't worry about what happens in the future. I've told you numerous times I'll be around no matter what happens and I truly mean it. You've taken too good a care of me in the past to let anything happen.

Anyways, all in all, attending YSU was not as bad as I initially thought. I had a great time when I look back on the experience and would do it again. Only if it is cheaper the second time around.

Student Government holds final year-end meeting

By PAUL CURL
Assistant News Editor

The last Student Government meeting of the year was held yesterday with the bulk of the meeting's remarks involving congratulations.

Student Government President Scott "Gus" Smith thanked the entire body and commented on how he had treated some of the members.

"I know I was hard on a lot of the reps this year, but it was just that I wanted everyone to work as hard as I did," he said.

Smith briefly recounted his first day in his post, when The Vindicator called his home at 7 a.m. to ask his opinion on the selection of Paul Dutton as YSU president.

According to Smith, since that moment he has had many opportunities to participate in the political arena of YSU, including involvement with the University's budget dilemmas and presidential search among others.

A resolution proposed in an earlier meeting by Representative Matt Ditchey to punish students who engage in the sale, use or possession of illegal narcotics was discussed further.

Dr. Charles McBriarty, vice president of Student Services, told one of the representatives that since there is already a provision in the student code, it is not necessary for Student Government to have such a provision in their code.

"If it is already in the code then it shouldn't be a problem to put it in our own code to reinforce it," said Ditchey.

trance after breaking the lock tumbler on the westernmost north lobby door of the building.

A total of $500 damage was sustained by the machines and an undetermined amount of cash was stolen.

The burglaries carried over to May 24 when, at 4:22 a.m., it was discovered that someone had broken into the South Tower of Stambaugh Stadium where two vending machines were forcibly opened and removed of their contents. The damage to each machine was estimated to be $500.

At 4:11 p.m. YSU police were notified of two other vending machine break-ins, this time in the north side basement of Stambaugh Stadium. An undetermined amount of cash was taken from the machines.

According to Lt. Gregory Clementi, Chief John Gocala became concerned with the break-ins and made arrangements to set up surveillance in areas where the person or persons may strike again.

"We recognized we were having a problem over there," said Clementi.

However, the surveillance never got under way since a third break-in at Stambaugh occurred at 9:55 p.m., an hour and five minutes before the surveillance was to begin at 11 p.m.

Officer George Hammar was on a routine patrol when he noticed a door in Stambaugh was closed tighter than usual. He investigated and discovered the door had been blocked to prevent entry. He then proceeded toward a dumpster from where he felt a slight breeze coming. Upon reaching the dumpster, Hammar noticed someone roll out the west end of the dumpster. He notified the other units that a suspect was on the run.

Officer Bob Clark responded to the call and chased the suspect into the grassy lot behind the McDonald's on Fifth Avenue where he was apprehended.

According to Clementi, the department believes Mitchell entered the building the same way.

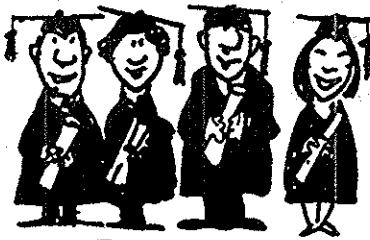

"We think he crawled in through the dumpster," said Clementi.

Mitchell is being charged with burglary, resisting arrest and carrying a concealed weapon. He is being held in Youngstown City Jail pending his preliminary hearing.

According to Goldrich, Mitchell, who had a crack pipe in his possession, said in his statement that he was stealing the money in order to get high.

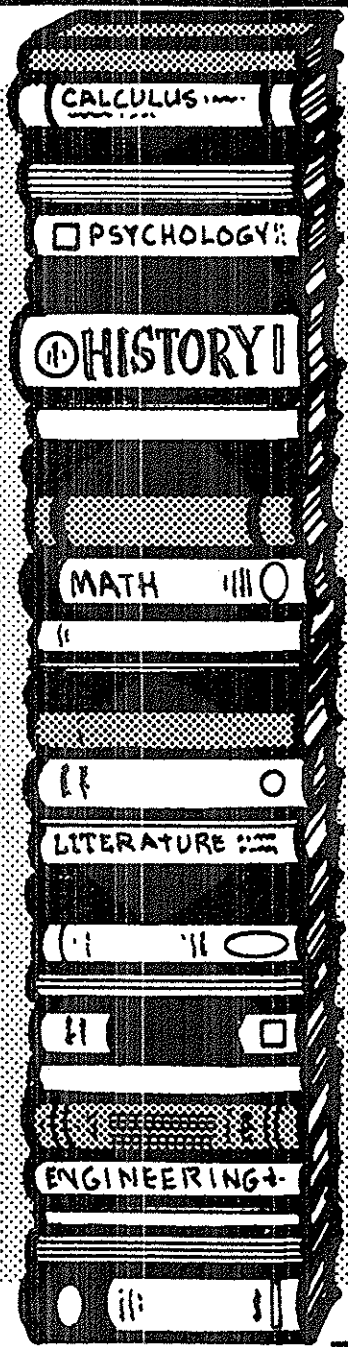

"We're glad we got him," said Clementi.

Graduation announcements for June ceremonies are now available at the YSU Bookstore, Kilcawley Center.

Ensemble tours in local schools

YSU— YSU's Modern Dance Ensemble, a student organization funded by Student Government and under the direction of Christine Cobb, health and physical education, has been touring with an educational dance program in surrounding Youngstown schools in April and May. The 70-minute program is designed for school-aged children in kindergarten through sixth grades. The program's format is that of an informative lecture-demonstration which includes improvisation and choreographed dances. The children learn about the basic elements of dance — space, time, and movement quality — through observation, discussion and participation.

In addition to choreography by Cobb and her husband Thom, who teaches at Slippery Rock University, student choreographers include Paula Mays, a senior in engineering; Dawn Dill, a junior in CAST; and Mary Torok, a sophomore in A&S. Themes for the dances are especially relevant for children and include a take-off on "square dancing" and dances which utilize props to create interesting visual effects.

Twenty-four students from YSU are involved in this endeavor and will be performing this program in the main gym at Beeghly Physical Education Center on YSU campus on Friday, June 5, at 10 a.m. This dance concert is free of charge and open to all interested YSU faculty, staff and students as well as the Youngstown area community.

Voices of Praise plan workshop, concert

YSU— Voices of Praise, a YSU student organization, will conduct a concert and a one-day workshop about the importance of the individual in a choir on Saturday, June 6.

The workshop is scheduled from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Kileawley Center Chestnut Room. The concert will begin at 7 p.m. at the Nevel Temple Church of God in Christ, 939 Elm St.

Workshop instructors are Kenny Eldridge, Phyllis

Franklin, Jeff Brown and Greg Jordan.

Valerie Hale, president of Voices of Praise, said the workshop is open to the public, especially young people.

"We want to teach young people about the important positions of each person in a choir and how they can work together in harmony," she said.

The workshop and concert are sponsored by YSU's Student Government.

Shillelagh Law 'was all the rage' at Pyatt Street Down Under

By CANDICE SINISTRO
Staff Reporter

YSU's all-English department faculty folk group Shillelagh Law was all the rage last Thursday night at the Pyatt Street Down Under Lounge. The crowd, consisting of mostly YSU students, listened as Dr. Philip Brady, Dr. Steven Reese, Dr. William Greenway and Dr. Sherry Linkon crooned traditional Irish folk tunes.

The band began the first set with "The Star of the County Down," a tune about a slovenly Irish girl who "looked so sweet from her two bare feet to the sheen of her nutbrown hair." The cheerful song got the crowd to join in as students and professors sang to the chorus.

The first set ended with a folk tune from which James Joyce's novel, Finnigans Wake, takes its title. Brady belted out the verse as the audience sang and clapped to the chorus. At this point, rookies in the audience were detected by their failure to stop clapping when the music abruptly stopped.

The band stopped between sets only to wet their whistles and mingle a bit, and in no time they were back on stage entertaining the multitude of partiers in the lounge.

The second set began with several melodic tunes sung by Reese. Greenway and Reese also created a beautiful harmony, that was followed by the poetic styling of Brady.

In the third set the group played popular tunes like "Wild Mountain Thyme" and an anti-British Scottish national anthem called "The Flower of Scotland." Linkon's voice was beautiful as an Irish flower as she serenaded the audience and harmonized with the band.

The fourth and final set was a compilation of poetry and song. Brady recited poetry by Patrick Kavanagh and sang a ballad about an Irish immigrant in his hometown of Queens, N.Y., that created a serene atmosphere. The songs and poetry performed by the band defined a strong heritage that is evident in each of the performer's hearts.

The singing was precise and the mood was cheerful as Shillelagh Law entertained the patrons on Pyatt Street. Their performance is one that can be enjoyed by young and old, lovers of folk music and lovers of poetry. Shillelagh Law should not be missed. For more information on performance dates contact the English department at 742-3415.

Actors overcome 'lackluster' script in latest production

Open wide! Joe Mineo stars as Cal and Kathy Dravecky stars as Ellen in the Youngstown Playhouse's production of The Art of Dining. The play runs until June 13. Call the Playhouse box office for further information and tickets.

By STARR E. McCLURE
Staff Reporter

The Youngstown Playhouse's final mainstage show of the 1991-92 season, The Art of Dining, opened Friday with a very well-rounded production despite a lackluster script.

The play centers around an evening at the Golden Carousel, a restaurant owned by Ellen (Kathleen D'Amato Dravecky) and Cal (Joe Mineo) and operated in their home. Their customers for the evening include a married couple (Bill Rees and Linda Bacic Fiorelli) who get great pleasure out of their meal, a near-sighted short story writer (Lynn Nelson Rafferty) and an anxious publisher (Eric Kibler), and three friends celebrating the one's birthday (Regina Rees, Jill Trimble, and Terri A. Wilkes). Unfortunately, very few of the characters ever progress beyond a cardboard cutout, thanks to an uneven script.

Tina Howe's script, although meant to be an insight into everyone's eccentric or neurotic dining habits, lacks the intensity and free-flowingness of a well-polished play. At times it is too wordy, and the rapid pace of the play causes many exchanges to be incomprehensible. Conversely, the script drags in spots, prompting the audience to become restless. Luckily, the actors and the production crew were able to overcome this.

Rafferty literally brings the stage to life as Elizabeth (the writer). Everytime she is featured, she provides the added spark that makes the play worthwhile. It seems her character is the only one to which the playwright has given some depth. Rafferty plays to perfection Elizabeth's social ineptness and shyness. Kibler proves to be a match for her as Paul, the publisher.

Dravecky and Mineo have a definite chemistry as Ellen and Cal. Their physical comedy over-compensates for what the script is lacking (as does Rafferty's). In fact, some of the best moments on stage happen when Mineo (as an exasperated waiter) and Rafferty interact.

Shelton proves he's no simple man at Ponderosa on Sunday

By MARYANNE J. MATYSIAK
Darkroom Technician

In the cold and gloomy weather Sunday, Ricky Van Shelton and Wild Rose brought a bit of brightness to Ponderosa Park in Salem.

Wild Rose, an all-female band that hit the charts with the release of three albums in a row, opened the show. The band's up-and-coming tunes satisfied the fans. The threat of rain did not scare away the fans who came to see Ricky Van Shelton. Shelton gave them a show that was everything and more of what could have been expected. Some of Shelton's hits that he played included "From A Jack To A King," "Keep It Between The Lines" and "I Am A Simple Man." Shelton also played hits by various other artists, including a country rendition of the Beatles' hit "Yesterday," a Patsy Cline tune "He Got You" and Roy Orbison's "Pretty Woman," which he played to close out his show.

Shelton came back for an encore playing his latest hit "Back Roads." Many fans called out requests for this song during Shelton's show but he jokingly replied, "I can't play that song yet, you'll all go home after that song. I have to save that for the end so you'll stay for the show."

Shelton joked with the audience and his band throughout the show, giving his show a personal touch. Occasionally Shelton's band would break out playing the theme from Batman as a joke.

Absent from Shelton's show were his hits "I Meant Every Word He Said" and his duet "Rockin' Years" which he sings with Dolly Parton.

Tickets for this Sunday's show featuring Asleep At The Wheel are available by calling the Ponderosa Park box office at 332-0044.

Summer Concert Preview

By MARYANNE J. MATYSIAK
Darkroom Technician

This summer boasts a hot concert line-up at area parks and amphitheatres. Blossom Music Center, Ponderosa Park and Star Lake Amphitheatre released their summer schedules. This year, once again, the range of musical selection goes from pop-rock to classic rock, country to jazz and anything in between.

Blossom Music Center will host former Beatle drummer Ringo Starr and his All Starr Band. Pop music star Paula Abdul will appear in July and country star Reba McEntyre will play Blossom in August.

If you go to Blossom, don't forget your blanket and binoculars. Also, if there is a threat of bad weather, don't forget your raingear and umbrella because shows are not cancelled due to inclement weather.

Blossom offers pavillion and lawn seating. For tickets and information you can call Tickets Unlimited at 533-4611.

If country music is more to your liking, Ponderosa Park will host a variety of artists this summer. Classic performers such as Dolly Parton will perform along with newer faces such as Billy Ray Cyrus.

Ponderosa offers weekend camping packages at $15 per night. Don't forget your camera because at Ponderosa you can go to the photo line and get right up front to take pictures of the stars as they perform.

You might also want to check with the Park about meeting the stars after the show. Many artists are available to sign autographs.

The park opens for each show at 10 a.m. and all shows begin at 2 p.m. For tickets and more information you can call the Park's box office at 332-0044.

Star Lake Amphitheatre, just outside of Pittsburgh, will feature artists such as Rush and the Greatful Dead. They will also have special events which have multiple stars performing together for one show.

Star Lake Amphitheatre offers pavillion seating as well as lawn seating. They also have binocular and lawn chair rentals. Groups may call for special seating arrangements.

All of the parks offer concessions and are open to audiences of all ages. They also have facilities for handicapped, but it is recommended that you call ahead of time to make arrangements. For tickets and more information you can call 412-947-7400.

do a fine job on stage. Unfortunately, they are grossly limited due to the script. However, they are able to overcome it and turn in two solid performances.

The three friends, Rees (Herrick), Trimble (Tony) and Wilkes (Nessa), are also limited by a script that tries desperately to be comical but fails. They, however, do not fail and make the best possible situation out of what they were given to work with.

In addition to the wonderful performances, the audience is also treated to an exquisite set. Scenic designer Paul Kimpel's set is gorgeous, complete with three carousel horses, as well as a stove and refrigerator. Amy-Ann Todd's costumes also added to the impressive effect on stage.

The production crew, led by Stage Manager Ann Peay, should be given credit for such a smooth run. The show is technically difficult, and the crew definitely rises to the challenge.

The 'Colonel' heads to Calgary

Calgary, Canada— YSU quarterback Ray Isaac has signed with the Calgary Stampede of the Canadian Football League, according to Stampeder General Manager and Head Coach Wally Buono.

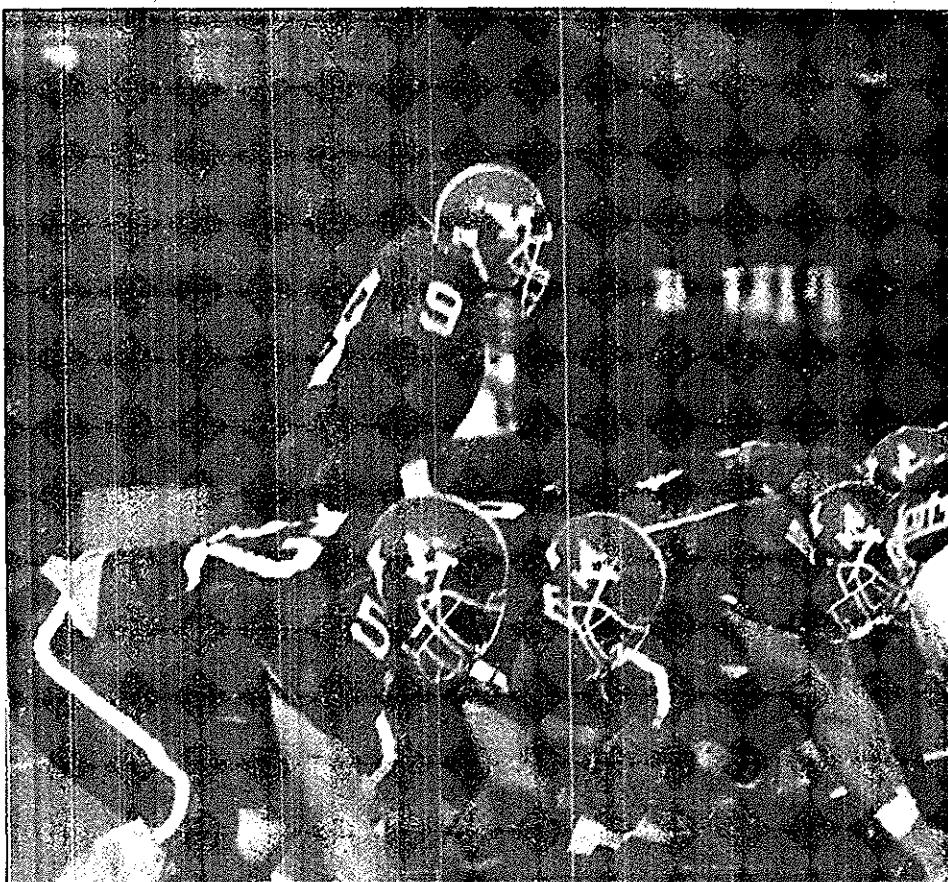

"He [Isaac] has great athletic ability and has the arm strength to pass the ball at the pro level," said Buono. "He comes from a very impressive program and knows all about winning," he finished.

Calgary was impressed with Isaac's ability after watching him work out at camp.

In his four years as a Penguin, Isaac racked up 32 touchdown passes and 23 rushing TDs. He was a three-year starter who saw action in 52 games. As a senior, Isaac passed for 1,383 yards and rushed for an additional 789 yards as he helped YSU capture the Division I-AA championship crown.

"He is a good young man who is very intelligent," said Assistant General Manager Roy Shivers. "After I worked him out, I realized that Ray would be able to compete at our camp. He also has a terrific attitude to go along with his outstanding athletic skills," Shivers finished.

In addition to Isaac, the Stampede will have three other quarterbacks in training camp, including Heisman Trophy Winner Doug Flutie, Steve Taylor and Bob Torrance.

UWM joins MCC as 10th member

Milwaukee — Mid-Continent Conference Commissioner Jerry A. Ippoliti announced earlier this week at a press conference that the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee has officially been accepted as the newest member of the Mid-Continent Conference.

"The Mid-Continent Conference is very pleased and excited to offer membership to the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, an institution that brings many fine qualities to our Conference; a committed, broad-based program for both men and women, superb facilities, a major media market and a history of academic excellence," stated Ippoliti.

"Under the guidance of Chancellor Dr. John Schroeder and Athletic Director Bud Haidet, I feel positive that Wisconsin-Milwaukee will make a very significant contribution to the future development of the Mid-Continent Conference. With the addition of the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, the Mid-Continent Conference now has a population base close to 19 million; approximately 7.5 percent of the entire population of the USA," said Ippoliti.

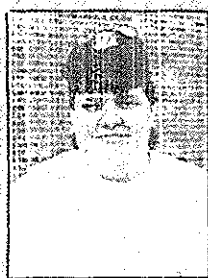

The move to admit Wisconsin-Milwaukee into the Mid-Continent was finalized on May 21, during the league's annual Spring Meetings. The Spring Meeting came shortly after a Conference delegation, headed by Wisconsin-Green Bay Chancellor David Outcalt, made a review visit to the UWM campus.

"The University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee is a fine institution that we believe will reflect well on the Mid-Continent Conference," stated Dr. Outcalt. "It was evident during our visit that they are developing a first-class athletic program to go along with an already fine academic reputation. We believe they will be competitive immediately. Geographically they present the possibility of some great rivalries, not only with UWGB but with other Conference schools as well."

The University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee is situated on Milwaukee's northeast side and boasts a student enrollment of 25,000.

The Mid-Continent Conference is comprised of the following member institutions: Cleveland State University, Eastern Illinois University, University of Illinois at Chicago, Northern Illinois University, Valparaiso University, Western Illinois University, University of Wisconsin-Green Bay, Wright State University and Youngstown State University.

The dream of a lifetime costs 5 cents

Charlie Deitch Charlie's Angles

One man's trash is another man's treasure. I have heard that statement a million times but it never pertained to me until last weekend.

I attended a sports card show at the Southern Park Mall when I saw him sitting there sweaty in that plastic envelope. He was beautiful, not a mark or a bent corner on him, my favorite basketball player of all times. Kurt Rambis was sitting there waiting for me to take him home.

I approached the lady behind the table and at that point was willing to pay any price that she asked. I was excited, but not crazy and decided I was going to talk her down to a reasonable price.

I put on my best game face, looked her in the eye and showed no fear.

"How much for the Rambis?" I asked.

"Let me look it up," she said.

I got worried at that point. When they say let me look it up that usually means you have to get a bank loan to buy something.

She put down her copy of the Beckett (the bible of card collectors), and looked at me in a real devilishly manner.

I knew her big pitch was coming, and I braced myself for the bomb.

"Five cents," she said.

"Five cents?" I replied, shocked.

"Well that's all he's worth," she replied snootily.

Kurt Rambis is the most underrated forward in the game, and all his card is worth is a lousy nickel.

I got a little revenge though. I paid for it with a $20 just to show her what she could have gotten.

Actually I was mad and wanted to take all of her change.

It's just kind of ironic that a guy who was seventh man on the Lakers for years and still plays for the Phoenix Suns has his career unfairly summed up in the middle of a mall in Youngstown, Ohio by a lady with no sports knowledge and an attitude that could choke a horse.

Rambis is great. He is goofy, ugly (or so some say) and uncoordinated. The fact is the man can play. He is an animal on the court. No one can match his heart or his love for the game.

Most people won't attest to the greatness of Rambis, but he is out there now and hopefully he'll be there for a long time.

Until everyone sees what an asset he is to the game I guess I'll be buying my cards at bargain basement prices. If you run across a Rambis card in your collection, don't throw it away. Give it to me, because if that card is trash then I am proud to be a garbage man.

YSU athletes deserve respect as students

Mike Yonkura
'Yonks'town

Trying to pick a subject for my final Yonkstown this year was really a tough task. After all, there is a lot going on in the world of sports. You've got Chicago and Portland in the NBA Finals (Yawn), Pittsburgh rolling over everybody in the NHL playoffs, and the Cleveland Indians are actually on a bit of a hot streak.

But with all that going on, I decided to do my final commentary of 1991-92 on student athletes and grades.

Last week, The Vindicator presented YSU volleyball player Sandy Steiber and football player Ron Strollo with its Student Athlete of the Year Awards. Please note the word student in front of athlete.

Student n. 1. One who attends a school, college, or university. 2. One who makes a study of something. (From The American Heritage Dictionary.)

With that in mind, I can safely say that The Vindicator gave out those awards with both definitions to be taken to heart.

And it doesn't stop at Steiber and Strollo, either. In all, 107 athletes posted a GPA of 3.0 or better during the quarter they were playing.

Okay, I'm willing to bet that most of you don't care or aren't impressed. You're probably saying, "Big deal. I have two jobs, 16 credit hours, and can still carry a 3.0. Why don't they honor me?"

The reason they don't honor you is because, more than likely, you don't have to perform in front of hundreds of people (and in some cases thousands) at least once a week. It's also unlikely that you don't practice your jobs in what is normally spare time.

But, alas, these students do exactly that by participating in athletics and they take their full loads, too. That's why they're being honored.

Perhaps this is what makes YSU such a unique University. Whereas many schools of this size or bigger will recognize the best athletes in their various sports, YSU takes a look at the whole package. How well are these athletes going to perform once they step off their respective playing fields? Obviously, not everyone is going to excel (about seven percent were in academic "trouble"), but there are plenty who do.

It's something I've noticed not only in the athletes who are already here, but also in the athletes who came here in the fall.

In talking to about seven athletes from this year's recruiting class, words like "accreditation" and "degree" came up as often as "coaches" and "players." Whenever we get a press release about YSU inking another recruit, that recruit always seems to have a GPA in the stratosphere.

All of these efforts with student athletes here is not just to brag. It's a serious attempt by YSU's athletic department to prove that athletes aren't all dumb and that they can indeed succeed off the field as well.

People can say what they want about how those good grades were achieved, but of all the athletes I know here, none have ever done less than earn what they got in class.

What do all of my ramblings mean? It means that even though athletics seem to be in a vaulted position in the eyes of many here at YSU, the students involved in athletics are just like the rest of us: students trying to make the grade and get our degrees.

Just like the rest of us, they have to take tests and write papers and do all of the work we have to do. But unlike the rest of us, they also have to deal with workouts, practices, travel and the sheer pressure of playing.

With all that in mind, 107 athletes still did better than a lot of us. For that, we should give them at least a little respect.

According to softball head coach Ed Strauss, any woman interested in playing softball next year should report to room 1049 in Stambaugh Stadium on Thursday, June 4, at 3 p.m for a brief meeting regarding tryouts.

Each set of blanks below represents a famous name (like Sammy Davis or Ronald Reagan) with the same number of letters in both names. The letters that appear in any puzzle are listed in alphabetical order to the right of the blanks. Under each letter is a number, its letter-value for that name. Notice that a number also appears under each pair of blanks in a name. That number is the total of the two letter-values above it. So, for example, Henry Fonda would look like this:

 A D E F H N O R Y
 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9
 _ _ _ _ _
 9 10 12 10 10

In some puzzles, one pair has been filled in to get you started. Your challenge is to reconstruct as many names as possible.

1. _ _ E _ _
 A B E G O R T
 1 2 3 4 5 6 7

_ _ R _ _
 8 7 9 9 6

2. _ _ _ L _ _
 A B D L M N O R
 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8

_ _ N _ _
 7 9 9 10 10 13

3. _ _ N _ _
 A D E H I N O R S
 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9

_ _ O _ _
 11 9 13 9 7
