Williamson co-sponsors business plan competition

■ The winner will receive business development services and one year's free use of a completely furnished office suite.

ANGELA GIANOGLIO
Managing Editor

Not everyone who wants to start a business can be offered an office suite, advisory council, attorney and accountant free of charge for the first year the business is in operation.

But East Ohio Gas, the Youngstown Business Incubator and the Williamson College of Business Administration have joined forces to create a business plan competition that will make this dream a reality for a lucky group of students in the tri-county area.

According to the competition outline, to qualify, "students must complete a comprehensive business plan that convincingly demonstrates the ability and resources to successfully operate a new commercial venture."

All entries will be reviewed by a selection committee and the top five will be chosen to give an oral presentation to the committee. From the presentations the committee will choose a winner who will be awarded a "comprehensive package of business development services."

This package will include one year's free use of the newly built East Ohio Gas Launch Pad, which is a fully furnished office suite in the Youngstown Incubator, and access to the Incubator's services and equipment.

The suite will include everything necessary to run a business and the award also offers free consultation from an advisory committee consisting of YSU faculty members, an attorney and an accountant.

After the first year, the business will be eligible to move into another suite in the Incubator for up to four additional years.

Jim Cossler, director of the Youngstown Business Incubator, said 12 teams have registered in the competition so far. The deadline for submission of business plans is May 1.

Dr. Betty Jo Licata, dean of WCBA, said the key to winning the competition will be for the students to write a good plan for a viable business.

"A lot of students have dreams of starting their own business and this is a beautiful way to get started," she said. "Entrepreneurship is a great way for people to be self-employed. There are great risks, but also a lot of rewards."

Although the winner will be expected to run the business, Licata said it will not be used as an excuse to drop out of school. The winner will have to continue to attend school, at least on a part-time basis.

A workshop for interested students will be held from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Nov. 21 and 6 to 8 p.m. Dec. 1 in the Williamson Cafaro Suite.

For more information contact WCBA at 742-3064 or the YBI at 746-5003.

Fraternity sponsors clothing drive

■ Clothing can continue to be dropped off at the Sigma Chi fraternity house.

CINDY MILLER
Assistant News Editor

The Sigma Chi fraternity sponsored a clothing drive to help the Salvation Army replace items lost in a recent fire.

The Salvation Army warehouse, located on Mahoning Avenue, lost 10 tons of clothing items in a fire at the beginning of October.

The designated drop-off sites were the DeBartolo Hall entrance, Kilcawley Center and the Wick Bridge. Sigma Chi's collection began on Oct. 26 and continued through Friday.

Sigma Chi president, Brent Ross, said the fraternity is considering sponsoring other clothing drives in the future to benefit the Salvation Army.

Ross said, "So far it's going better than planned. People other than the fraternity members are contributing. We do certain community services throughout the year. We usually support Tod Children's Hospital and we thought we would try this, too."

“We've had a lot of faculty and students bringing things in.”

Santana Crespo,
Sigma Chi member

Fraternity member, Santana Crespo, said they collected almost 20 bags of clothes, which he said is quite impressive. Crespo said, "We've had a lot of faculty, staff and students bringing things in."

Crespo said the clothing drive was easy to organize and very effective. He said students can continue to donate clothing by delivering items to the Sigma Chi fraternity house located at 55 Indiana Ave.

YSU students take part in Accounting Student-Practitioner Day in Stambaugh

■ The event was held to offer students insight into an accounting career.

SABRINA SCHROEDER
Assistant News Editor

The department of accounting and finance, along with the Office of University Outreach sponsored an Accounting Student-Practitioner Day event Friday at the DeBartolo Stadium Club.

This is the fourth year for the event, which is designed to help students become better professionals and more effective graduates through exposure and involvement with accounting professionals.

Professor Dennis Bensinger, accounting and finance, said the event is well-received by both the students and professionals who participate.

He said "the idea for the day is to offer students an opportunity while they are in school to determine what is important to develop during their education."

The day began with students participating in joint sessions with professionals who discussed the responsibilities of an accountant and the certification exam for accounting, as well as round table discussions with representatives from various accounting firms in the area.

The 50 students who participated were divided into two groups based on class rank.

Freshmen and sophomores were treated to a joint session with Dr. David Law, accounting and finance, on what an accountant is, followed by round table discussions concerning the importance of writing skills, verbal communication and computer skills.

He also discussed what the accounting profession is looking for in graduates and the process of planning a career in accounting.

Juniors and seniors took part in a joint session with a representative from the Ohio Society of Certified Public Accountants on the CPA exam.

They were then involved in a round table discussion covering the importance of written and oral communication and computer skills; what the accounting profession is looking for in graduates; developing professionalism in business practice and marketing yourself as an accounting graduate.

Following the joint sessions, a wide-ranging discussion of topics related to accounting was held, which included written and oral communication, computer skills, career planning and professionalism.

New networking connects non-traditional students

■ The Adult Learner Directory will help non-trads find other non-trads with similar experiences and interests.

LISA M. HUGHES
Contributing Writer

In the spring of 1998 The Center for Student Progress assembled an Adult Learner Directory, providing a networking tool for non-traditional students.

Through this directory, Adult Learner Services hopes to assist students in finding other non-traditional students with similar interests, experiences and concerns.

Non-traditional students usually balance college, work, family and career.

The directory includes information such as major, minor, career goals and ways to be contacted. All information is conveniently listed alphabetically and by major. Of the 3,000 students now enrolled at YSU, 250 of them have volunteered to list their information in the Adult Learner Directory.

"This is a one-person office," said Kim Olive, coordinator for the Center for Student Progress. "There are many challenges that need to be addressed and some I can't help with."

When the program began in the spring, letters were printed up and sent to all non-traditional students.

"We were overwhelmed by the response," said Olive.

A mentoring program is also made available to those who would like to participate.

This is made up of non-traditional students who are willing to share their time and experience with other non-traditional students.

"Our best resource," said Olive, "is to draw on ourselves."

The only copy of The Adult Learner Directory is kept in The Center For Student Progress. It is made available only to current members, assuring confidentiality.

Because of the interest in the directory, Olive will be starting a similar project to help students with their college and career planning. This will include a mentoring program, providing guidance and helping with problems and questions.

More information can be obtained by calling The Center For Student Progress.

WYSU-FM raises $64,000 in fund-raiser

■ The week-long, fund-raising campaign ended two days early.

SABRINA SCHROEDER
Assistant News Editor

YSU's radio station, WYSU-FM/Classical 88.5 Radio, ended its semiannual fund-raising campaign after receiving more than $64,000 in pledges.

The campaign began Oct. 16 following the news program, and was scheduled to run for seven days, according to WYSU-FM director Robert W. Peterson. The station set a goal of $58,000 and decided to end the drive early upon accomplishing it. The goal was achieved just after 4 p.m. on Oct. 21, two days before the scheduled end of the campaign.

"Clearly, our listeners appreciated the opportunity to have a direct impact on the length of the on-air campaign," Peterson said.

"Not only did they show an eagerness to support the programing financially, but they also expressed that support in record time. We are most grateful for their generous commitment to WYSU-FM," he said.

Members of the station support it financially, with the on-air drive being used as a chance to ask new people to join the group of members who support the station. More than 1,000 pledges were received from current members, as well as non-members during the drive.

The next campaign will take place in late March or early April, Peterson said.

WYSU-FM broadcasts at 88.5 FM in Youngstown; 90.1 in Ashtabula; and 97.5 in New Wilmington, Pa. The format of the station is primarily classical music, and it carries National Public Radio news.

The last challenge of a socially conscious society?

Depression strikes millions— indiscriminately. Depression is simply a suppression of brain activity that makes life unbearable. And even though depression is readily treatable, only 1 in 5 ever seeks treatment. Why do so many just drag themselves along or eventually seek relief through suicide? First, there's the lack of awareness of depression— as an illness and as the threat that it is to each and every one of us. Second, there's the unwarranted negative stigma attached to it. You know, the "mental" thing. It's time to collectively face depression. To know it's an illness, not a weakness. And it's a challenge that's long overdue. It's taken too many of us already.

Take the time to vote

Election time has arrived once again. Unfortunately, this means very little to most students.

Many times it may seem like whether or not we go out and vote will make little difference in the long run, but that's really not true. Hundreds of people think this way and choose not to vote. What they don't realize is that if they had all voted, the election might have turned out differently.

This election is especially important for Ohio citizens because of the race for governor and the senate. These are two major positions that will no doubt have a tremendous impact on everyone that lives in Ohio.

Granted, the race for governor has turned into a heated mudslinging battle, with each candidate claiming the other has lied or been dishonest. Fisher has sponsored ads publicizing the investigation into Taft's campaign, and Taft has sponsored ads claiming Fisher is lying about his tax policy. It's not surprising that many students simply get fed up with the whole thing and decide not to vote.

A more effective way to show this displeasure would be to go to the ballots and write in a candidate. At least that way you're letting the politicians know that you care enough to vote.

These people are going to be making decisions that will affect you in one way or another. Let them know you care about these decisions. Go out and vote today.

A STAFF VIEW

Angry drivers anger staffer

ANGELA GIANOGGIO
Managing Editor

When I got my driver's license I thought I was on top of the world. It meant freedom, independence and responsibility. No more calling mom and dad for a ride or interrupting dinner to be picked up from basketball practice. It was the greatest feeling in the world to be able to go out to the car and drive myself wherever my heart desired.

For the first few weeks I was in heaven when I was behind the wheel. I was a courteous, yet defensive driver and all was right with the world.

Then someone cut me off. It was for the soul intent of getting ahead of me and as his engine revved beyond its six-cylinder ability, I wondered what the whole point of the spectacle was.

Since then it has become more and more apparent that a good portion of the drivers on the road are irresponsible idiots who are out for the thrill of speed and power with no respect for either. It is a sad case of "It won't happen to me."

And I am not just talking about the 16-year-olds who just got their license and want to impress their friend with their superior driving skills. It is also the college kids and people in their 20s and 30s who think they have enough experience to drive recklessly without consequence because, "I know my car."

I've seen drivers change lanes five times while going 65 mph on a 45 mph road just to get ahead of the other cars. Then they get caught at the same red light as everyone they just passed only to peel out and slam on their brakes at the next light. It honestly makes me laugh.

And then of course you have the intensely competitive souls who suffer from what is now becoming a disease called road rage. These are the people who will speed up to prevent someone from passing them in the right lane or slow down to 15 mph when they are being tailgated in a 40 mph zone. But it's okay for them to ride the bumper of someone whom they think is not going fast enough. And God forbid they get cut off because then they have the uncontrollable need to reciprocate the action for revenge.

I've suffered my fair share of frustration on the road, but playing spite games is not my idea of a solution. The state doesn't provide adequate police coverage, and many of the occurrences are virtually undetectable by an observer.

Everyone has made a mistake as a driver, be it by accidentally running a red light, speeding, or even going too slow, so no one has room to get mad at another driver and then feel the need to "punish" them.

I love to drive, as do most of the people I know, and putting up with rage-induced drivers is becoming an unnecessary hassle I could do without.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Student says deer hunting editorial was uninformed

I would just like to let you know that your editorial on deer hunting in Mill Creek Park was completely uninformed.

You make it sound like a bunch of drunken lunatics armed with dangerous crossbows will be making their way into the woods to massacre poor, defenseless, harmless animals.

First of all, these hunters have to pass tests to even be able to hunt in the park, so it's not like anyone with a pulse and a shotgun can wander in there and start blasting away. No innocent children or bystanders will be endangered.

Second, every hunter gets one deer. The idea is to "control" the deer population, not eliminate it, as you seem to think.

Third, nature is very sensitive, and, contrary to popular belief, we are very sensitive to nature.

The decision to allow hunting in Mill Creek Park was not made by some out-of-touch bureaucrat, but by well-informed, well-educated, in-touch people. People who know the environment. People who understand the delicate balance of nature.

Let's look at our options for controlling the deer population.

First, you could do nothing. All the happy deer get to run and play and do happy deer things. That is, until the food supply runs out.

Vegetation does grow back — but only if given a chance. When there is overcrowding in a certain consumer population, the food supply runs thin.

Then, deer start eating people's plants. They overrun the whole area. People start hitting them with cars. They become a nuisance. But they're happy, right? Wrong. They're suffering and starving to death. And as an added bonus, we can't use their meat.

Second, sterilize the deer with dart guns. That's about the stupidest idea I've ever heard. Think about it a minute. Put aside your tree-hugging tendencies for a moment and just think about it. It makes absolutely no sense.

Third, transport the deer to another, less crowded region. How, may I ask, are we going to do this? We don't have the money.

Besides, there's a good chance that the displaced deer might not survive, given their new terrain and habitat. Remember — there are no natural predators around here.

Fourth, allow controlled hunting. The best solution for the area. We can use the deer meat and thin the population at the same time, creating a more comfortable habitat for the rest of the deer.

Everybody comes out a winner. I don't care if you think it's violent. Nature is violent.

Really, the best way to control the population would be to introduce wolves into Mill Creek Park to get a natural predator-prey balance going. I don't need to tell you why that's not feasible.

So for now, humans will have to serve as the predators.

Adam Messner

Musical comedian comes to Peaberry's

Rich has previously opened for Godfrey, Roseanne and Seinfeld.

NICOLE TANNER
Editor in Chief

A friend's push turned out to be the best thing in the world for comedian Chris Rich, who was a little apprehensive about entering show business.

"My friend knew this was what I wanted to do and that I didn't have the guts," said Rich. "She signed me up for this course, which she said was a comedy writing course. It turned out to be a comedy performance course. She went with me the first week, then dropped out."

Rich said the teacher of that course was so encouraging that she dropped studying musical theater and chose stand-up comedy as her profession. But she hasn't dropped her musical roots entirely. She incorporates them into her show in the form of singer imitations and song parodies, like "We All Read the Inquirer," a parody of Billy Joel's "We Didn't Start the Fire."

"I have such a strong background in music that I couldn't just forget it," said Rich. "Besides, it gives me an excuse to sing."

Rich describes her brand of comedy as a "mixture of everything you've seen." She has a variety act that offers the woman's point of view and political commentary without being insulting. And it has gotten her pretty far. She has opened for comedy greats such as Roseanne, Gilbert Godfrey, and had an interesting experience opening for Jerry Seinfeld.

"When Jerry introduced me, he put his arm around me," said Rich. "I was so shook up, I couldn't remember a thing he said."

Rich also said the fact that she's female has been a mixture of blessings and challenges.

"It's split right down the middle," she said. "Sometimes someone will hold it against me, but other times someone will hire me because I'm female."

Rich said Oprah Winfrey's line, "The best defense is a good performance," has been an inspiration to her.

Rich will perform from noon to 1 p.m. today in Peaberry's. She said the first reason YSU students should come to her show is because they've already paid for it with student fees.

"But seriously, everybody needs a laugh in the middle of the day," she said.

Grounds crew keeps campus beautiful

The crew consists of 10 staff workers and six intermittent workers.

LISA M. HUGHES
Contributing Writer

The campus grounds are constantly evolving. Every season brings change, and every day there are new concerns. But whenever you step outside, you're surrounded by impeccably kept grounds.

"We've been cited in several feature articles, including National Park and Grounds Management in 1986," said Tony Siracuse, director of campus grounds.

The YSU grounds crew consists of 10 staff workers and 6 intermittent workers.

There is much more involved in the maintenance of the campus grounds than what can be observed on a trek across campus.

Early every morning, while everyone else is crawling out of bed, the grounds crew is out and about policing the campus for the debris left behind from the previous day. Cigarette butts that never found their way to ashtrays are the biggest offenders, especially in front of the building entrance ways.

When asked what a normal day's work entails, Siracuse said, "We really don't have normal days here." He went on to say, "We get problems that just pop out of nowhere and we get to them as soon as possible."

A major concern for the grounds department is the maintenance of the irrigation systems covering 95 percent of the campus grounds. The systems are automated and require a great deal of attention.

The Grounds Department is also responsible for maintaining the athletic fields. "That could include anything from dragging the ball diamonds, setting bases, repairing fences and painting lines, to designing the end zone," said Siracuse.

The grounds have changed dramatically in the last 10 years. Outside of Tod Hall, the trees had grown so dense that the grass wouldn't grow. The beds there were replanted and redesigned by the groundskeepers as the work was being done.

"A lot of perennials are being added," said Siracuse. "It's a natural renewal that we want."

"I enjoy the flowers... and the Ivy that grows on the side of Bliss Hall is so pretty," said Jennifer Johnstone, YSU senior, music performance major.

Johnstone enjoys relaxing outside on the benches in front of Maag Library. "It's really beautiful there," she said.

Siracuse feels the grounds are greatly appreciated by students, as well as visitors and alumni.

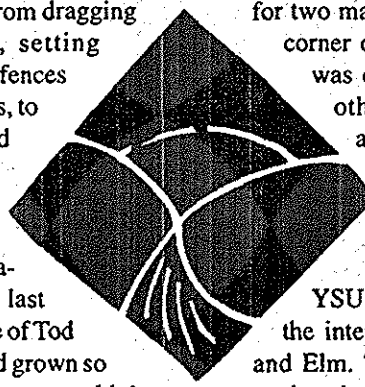

"I have to give the crew a pat on the back," said Siracuse.

Presently the grounds department is involved in the bed work for two marquees. One on the corner of Wick and Rayen was contracted, and the other at the stadium and 5th, was designed by the grounds department.

The granite YSU sign was put in at the intersection of Lincoln and Elm. The steps were removed and the beds were connected and redesigned.

Although the campus has grown, the staff has not. Siracuse stressed the need for more student employees, especially during the winter months.

"We are heading toward getting some of the high-maintenance areas down," said Siracuse. "The trend is toward lower maintenance of the grounds, while maintaining the beauty of the campus."

Giving Tree helps area families

The gifts will be distributed the week after Thanksgiving.

LISA M. HUGHES
Contributing Writer

Every year, for the past 5 years, The Giving Tree program has helped to provide Christmas presents to children of low-income area families.

The Giving Tree was organized by The Non-Traditional Student Organization, and has become well known and greatly appreciated.

The prerequisites for eligibility are; the child must be 12 years old or younger and the parent must be able to provide proof of financial need. Such as, ADC, Medicaid or WIC. All information must be current.

Each family is asked to fill out a form naming each child and indicating individual needs and wants. The information is then transferred to a paper star.

There will also be a craft sale. The money from the sale, and any donations, will be used to buy teddy bears and stuffed animals for the children whose stars did not get chosen.

"It's a nice position to be in... like playing Santa Claus," said the Director of Protestant Campus Ministry and treasurer for the organization, Rev. Kathy Adams.

This year it will be possible for people to buy for whole families. This would alleviate the problem of children getting more or less than their brothers or sisters.

"In the past people were pre-wrapping presents, but this year we ask that they are brought unwrapped," said Rhonda Arnold, President of the organization.

Gifts should be put in a large, black garbage bag. Any wrapping paper can be included in a bag with the gifts. Gifts should be returned to the organization at the table set up in Kilkawley Center during the week of Thanksgiving. If no one is at the table, gifts can be left behind the candy counter. The presents will be distributed the following week.

"The majority of people in our community aren't aware of the number of needy families in the area," said past secretary, Pat Hickel.

Fraternities and sororities are encouraged to take a whole family as a project for the year.

"Everyone wants to help where there's a need," said Adams. "This will help turn good intentions into actions."

YSU gives great effort, but could not stop Culpepper and UCF

JAMIE LYNN REESH
Sports Editor

ORLANDO, Fla. — The Penguins gave Central Florida a Halloween scare Saturday, in the Knight's 44-32 win over YSU at the Florida Citrus Bowl.

Pannunzio

The Red and White fought back from a 28-3 deficit to come as close as a 38-32 in the fourth quarter, before the University of Central Florida scored on a one-yard Dante-Culpepper touchdown run with under five minutes left to play.

"Our team has great character, they never stopped playing — they competed for four quarters," said Head Coach Jim Tressel. "When we were down 28-3 we could have quit, but we didn't. I am extremely proud of their effort."

Culpepper ruled the day, as expected, tossing four touchdowns and running one in. The Heisman Trophy candidate led the Knight's charge, throwing for 347 yards on 41 attempts.

UCF got busy early, scoring on the opening drive. The Penguins only score of the first quarter came from a Mark-Griffith-field goal from 45 yards out — his career best.

The battle back from 28-3 began with sophomore Chris Glantzis intercepting Culpepper, for Culpepper's third of the season, at the YSU 34-yard line. Glantzis returned the ball for six yards and YSU stormed up field with the help of two big UCF penalties. A two-yard run by senior Jake Andreadis capped off the drive to bring the score to 28-10 at the half.

The big play that kept YSU in the game came courtesy of senior corner back Anthony Pannunzio in the fourth quarter. Pannunzio stripped UCF's Eric Leister at the Knight 24-yard line and returned it for a touchdown to get YSU as close as 38-32.

The Penguins took the momentum and forced UCF to punt on the next drive, the Knight's only punt of the game.

Junior Renauld Ray caught a 33-yard touchdown pass from freshman Jeff Ryan on the drive before Pannunzio's touchdown, to open YSU's fourth quarter surge.

Ryan made a little magic of his own, throwing 12 complete passes for 148 yards. He rushed for 60 yards, including a 23-yard run for a touchdown in the third quarter. YSU capitalized on a UCF penalty on the touchdown, moving the ball to the Knight two-yard line, where junior Adrian Brown ran the ball in for the two point conversion.

"Our kids just kept digging and made some big plays to keep us in the game," said Tressel. YSU's offense moved the ball a total of 327 yards, including 179 rushing. Brown led all rushers with 67 yards, while Andreadis became YSU's fourth All-Time rusher with his 64 yards.

Ray caught for a total of 82 yards to lead the receivers. Senior Matt Richardson and junior Elliot Giles both collected 24 yards.

YSU's defense met the challenge of UCF's offensive line and their quarterback god. The Penguins forced UCF to kick two field goals, with kicker Fred Waczewski connecting on a 25-yarder and missing the other from 24 yards out. Along with Glantzis' interception and Pannunzio's forced fumble, freshman LaVar Green sacked Culpepper for a loss of four yards. Green also made a tackle for a loss of five yards, while senior Mike Stance had a tackle for a loss of three yards.

Senior Jake Anderson led the defense with 11 tackles. Stanec followed with nine, while Pannunzio had seven.

"Our team has great character."

Jim Tressel
Head Coach

Despite YSU's effort, the Knight's offense finished with 575 yards, a season high, and six touchdowns.

YSU's kickoff returners, junior Andre Cook and freshman Andre Coleman compiled 72 and 52 yards, respectively, after UCF touchdowns.

The Penguin's record falls to 5-3, as UCF improves to 7-1. YSU will be at home Saturday for their final home contest of the season against Northern Iowa. Game starts at 1 p.m.
