

Dedication is planned for medical facility

Dedication of the basic medical sciences campus of the Northeastern Ohio Universities College of Medicine will take place Friday, April 14 at the new facilities in Rootstown, Ohio.

Only those who have invitations may take part in the festivities because of space limitations in the College auditorium.

A scientific program for invited guests will be held at 9:30 a.m. Members of the charter class of medical students, the basic sciences and clinical faculty of the College and invited university representatives will hear speakers of national reputation.

A reception and dinner for invited guests will be held in the new facility at 5 p.m. Following dinner, guests will hear another featured speaker.

The College will hold "open house" on three consecutive Sundays, April 16, 23, and 30 from 2 to 5 p.m. for the public. There will be dedication ceremonies and campus tours.

On April 16, the open house will feature "Youngstown Day," with the public from Trumbull, Mahoning and Columbiana Counties particularly invited to attend at that time.

Sunday, April 23, will be "Kent-Canton Day." The public from Canton, Kent, Portage and Stark Counties are invited.

April 30 will be "Akron and Summit County Day."

Faculty and staff of the College of Medicine will be on hand on each of these occasions to guide tours and answer questions.

Persons unable to visit the College on the Sunday applicable to their area are invited to come on whichever Sunday is most convenient.

"We invite the taxpayers of Ohio, whose tax money has constructed this new facility, to see the facility they have provided for the education of Ohio students who are studying to become physicians and who will increase and improve health care for the residents of Northeastern Ohio," commented Stanley W. Olson, M.D., provost.

Will improve 4-year program

Nursing dept. receives grant

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare has presented a $69,055 grant to the YSU Nursing Department in an effort to aid the department in their attempt to establish a nationally accredited four-year baccalaureate nursing program. The financial boost from the Federal Government is expected to strengthen upper division nursing curriculum by increasing course offerings and student enrollment. It is projected that HEW will provide additional funds through 1981 to complete the 3-year grant program.

The new accredited baccalaureate program is endorsed by the Ohio State Board of Nursing, the Ohio Nurses Association, the Ohio Board of Regents and various nursing schools and service agencies in the community. It will also permit those nursing students who have already attained associate degrees to broaden their educations. The improved curriculum which will result in a BSN degree is expected to better prepare nurses to function as professionals in a variety of health care settings, qualify nurses in beginning leadership roles and facilitate vertical care mobility opportunities for those nurses whose basic preparation was attained in associate degree or diploma schools of nursing.

The upper level nursing program will also assure availability of nurses on a regional basis, meet criteria for National League for Nursing (NLN) accreditation and supply requirements necessary for ready acceptance into graduate nursing programs.

The program's primary educational facility will be located on the YSU campus, but will include utilization of a variety of clinical settings such as acute care hospitals, skilled nursing facilities and community agencies.

Buckley, Anderson, Millett top roster of spring Special Lecturers; 6 slated

YSU's Special Lecture Series announces a most impressive lineup of speakers for spring quarter.

Dr. Harold H. Bloomfield, Director of Psychiatry at the Institute of Psycho-physiological medicine in San Diego, California will open the series on Tuesday, April 11 with his lecture entitled "TM (transcendental meditation) and Holistic Health." The lecture will be held in Kilcawley Center's Multipurpose Room at 2 p.m.

As founder of San Diego's Holistic Health Center, Bloomfield has taken what he calls "a scientific approach in determining how we might all become healthier, happier and more productive individuals." He has lectured worldwide on the mastery of stress, the expansion of happiness and the development of full human potential.

On Monday, April 17, the YSU Special Lecture Series will continue with its presentation of one of the most eloquent voices in "feminism," Dr. Kate Millett. Her lecture, "Women and Violence" is scheduled for 8:30 p.m. in Kilcawley's multipurpose room.

Dr. Altinger appointed to position as new Honors Program director

by JoAnn Nader

Dr. Joseph Altinger, mathematics, was recently appointed director of the Honors Program by Dr. Earl E. Edgar, vice president of academic affairs.

The position of director of the Honors Program is a new post at YSU.

Altinger has been a member of the Honors Committee for a year and a half and is one of three instructors for University Honors Seminar courses 701, 702, 703.

As the program's director, Altinger's new responsibilities include encouraging departments to offer honor sections, recruiting students and teachers for the program, conducting talent searches through local high schools' National Honor Societies and representing YSU at the National College Honors Council (NCHC).

"The Honors Program at YSU is based on the fact that there are great differences among individual students. To avoid wasting human resources, we are seeking to cultivate the gifted and talented student within the structure of YSU," explained Altinger.

Any student may enter the Honor Program by registering for an honors course or seminar, according to Altinger. But to graduate with a certificate of honors, the student must have 21 hours of honor courses distributed among at least two departments. In addition, two student must complete one University Honors Seminar sequence (nine hours) and maintain a grade point average of at least 3.5 in honor courses and at least a 3.4 overall, he added.

Presently, the Honors Seminar is in its second quarter and will run to the end of fall quarter 1978. Instructed by Altinger, Dr. Stephen Sniderman, English and

Dr. Gilbert Atkinson, psychology, the seminar's topic is "Stimulating Creative Behavior." Altinger commented that "We are trying to get students to break out of the molds that often block their thinking."

In addition to further developing the honor sections, Altinger hopes to create a community-based mentorship program for the gifted and talented at YSU. Still in the planning stages, the program would allow students to work with professionals in their major field of study. "It works on the same means as an apprenticeship would with the mentor serving as a contact outside of the University," Altinger said. Students can either be paid by their mentor or receive college credit, he added.

For more information on the Honors Program, any student or faculty member can contact Altinger by calling 742-3306.

statesman Abba Eban will be on the YSU campus Monday, May 1 and will give an address that evening at 8:30 p.m. in Powers Auditorium. As Israel's former foreign minister, Eban has also served as that nation's ambassador to the United States and chief delegate to the United Nations. He is widely known as a scholar, writer and lecturer. Eban's appearance will be one of two spring lectures of the YSU series which are named after the late Leonard T. Skeggs, Sr.

The second Skeggs lecture will follow Eban's visit three days later. On Thursday, May 4, syndicated columnist William F. Buckley, Jr. will speak at 8:30 p.m. in Stambaugh Auditorium. Buckley's weekly column called "On the Right" appears in more than 300 newspapers across the country. He also hosts a weekly television show, "Firing Line," in which he challenges those who dare to hold a viewpoint other than conservative.

The fifth speaker announced for the spring quarter's Special Lecture Series is famed criminal lawyer F. Lee Bailey, who has represented such news notables as Patricia Hearst, Dr. Sam Sheppard and the Boston Strangler. Bailey's address on "The Future of American Criminal Law" is scheduled for Thursday, May 18, at 8:30 p.m. in Stambaugh Auditorium.

The YSU lecture series will conclude with syndicated columnist and broadcast journalist Jack Anderson's appearance on Wednesday, May 24 at 8:30 p.m. in Kilcawley Center's multipurpose room. Anderson, a Pulitzer Prize winner in 1972, is regarded as one of America's top investigative reporters.

Open meeting to be held on campus security today

An open meeting for all interested persons, called by the Ad Hoc Committee on Campus Security, is being held today at 10 a.m. in the O.W.L. office.

Laura Moore, a member of the Committee, said the meeting is being called to discuss the problems with campus security arising from comments made by Campus Security Director Paul

Med school receives $10,000 for Trumbull County students

Trustees of The William J. Bruder Trust have announced a gift of $10,000 to Northeastern Ohio Universities College of Medicine (NEUCOM).

Mary E. Banks, assistant trust officer of The Union Savings and Trust Company, Warren, Ohio, said the funds were given to assist medical students from Trumbull County.

Trustees of the Bruder Fund, Paul A. Guamieri, Ralph E. Hoffhines and Howard G. Hall, meet once a year in December to distribute the trust funds. The $10,000 gift to the College of Medicine is the trust's largest bequest for 1977.

William Bruder, founder of the trust, died June 18, 1953; his wife, Jennie Bruder, died in May, 1972. Earnings from the trust go to local charities.

The trustees feel that scholarships to students from Trumbull County fulfill the intent of the trust.

The Bruder Trust was gratefully received by the NEUCOM Board of Trustees at the March 20 meeting.

The fund will be invested by the College of Medicine and the income used for scholarships for Trumbull County students who are not receiving state or federal scholarship funds.

Trumbull students currently enrolled in the 6-year combined B.S./M.D. degree program include charter class members Michael V. Carano, Karen E. Jerry, and Anthony S. Pentz.

Members of the class of 1982 from Trumbull County are Patricia Pierko, Charles J. Anderson, Rochelle A. Broome; and Peter A. Leone.

Receives Marshall award Stanislaw is honored

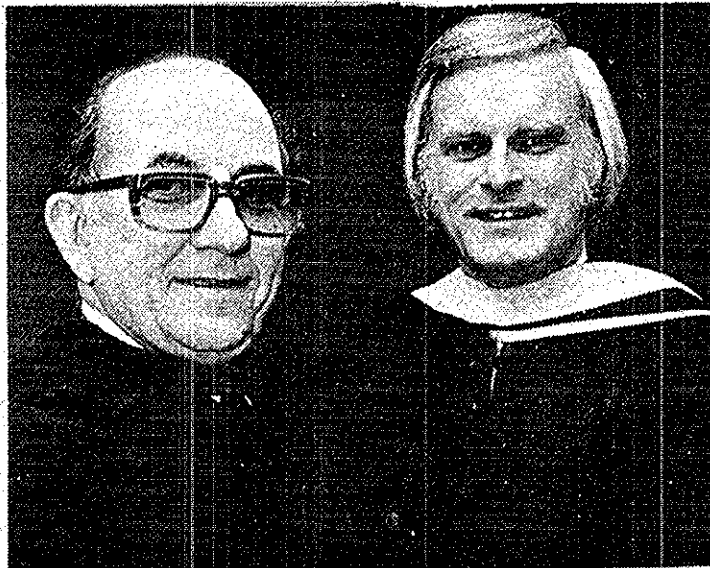

Robert A. Stanislaw, senior, Business, has been chosen as YSU's George C. Marshall award winner for displaying outstanding leadership qualities in the ROTC program.

Along with winners from 280 additional colleges and universities, he will attend a conference on national security to be held April 20-22 in Lexington, Virginia. Speakers for the program include former Secretary of State Dean Rusk.

Stanislaw, a resident of Hubbard, will also receive a certificate of merit and a bound volume of General Marshall's biography from the Marshall Foundation.

Earlier in the year, Stanislaw was the recipient of a one-year Amry ROTC scholarship, which provides full tuition, fees and book costs and living expenses. He is the commander of the ROTC Cadet Battalion and vice president of Scabbard and Blade, the ROTC honor society.

Search committee

The choice of a new Chief of Security to replace the retiring Paul Cress has been the recent concern of many members of the University community. Last week President Coffelt appointed a search committee to help in the selection of a new chief.

One of the major concerns in the choosing of a new Chief of Security was that a student would be put on the selection committee. Coffelt has managed to fulfill this desire by appointing John Carano, chairman of Student Council, on the committee. Carano also served on the committee which drew up the job description for the Chief of Security position, which was posted last week.

It is written in the newly developed job description that the head of security must "demonstrate ability to empathize and relate to the University environment as it differs from the traditional police role," and must possess the "human skills necessary to relate to faculty and students in an urban university."

Such intangible qualities as empathy and the ability to relate are difficult to determine. Yet hopefully such qualities are not mere rhetoric on the job description, but will in fact be used as a standard for the person who will become the new chief.

the position of Chief of Security are: "Master's degree in Criminal Justice or related area, a minimum of five year's experience in campus security, three of which must have been in a supervisory capacity."

The description further states that a candidate should be able to "demonstrate ability to empathize and relate to the University environment as it differs from the traditional police role."

McBriarty said that the ability to relate to the University environment and to the faculty and students would be stressed.

Listed as duties of the Chief of Security are "the developing, implementing, and maintaining of a comprehensive program of protection, law enforcement, security and safety at YSU."

The Chief of Security oversees a staff of one assistant director, one clerk and 17 patrolmen.

The deadline for applications is April 22.

Guz Says

by Guz Scullin

We're off....

It was on again last Sunday, one of my favorite movies of all time (no, not Sex in the Seattle Circus). I'm speaking of The Wizard of Oz.

Most folks out there in the world don't have an inkling of knowledge about the making of the movie, so please allow me to give you an inkling. If you don't want an inkling, go to bed.

First off, the munchkins were actually played by giants. You read right, the munchkins were all over eleven feet tall. That fact has always amazed me—why would they get giants to play midgets? But they did. See, the reason they looked so small is that after the filming, the shots were reduced. In real life, Judy Garland came up to one of the Lollipop Boy's kneecaps.

The movie did have one midget, though. Toto was in fact a midget in a dog outfit. Speaking of Toto, in the original version of the script Toto was to be a walrus, not a dog. The change came about when the director found out that walruses in Kansas are few and far between.

Many feel that they had to build a set for the city of Oz. Balogna! (Remember that is a food that leather-clad vikings refuse to eat.) There actually is an Oz. It is about eight miles east of the YSU campus. If you don't believe me, follow the yellow brick road, follow, follow, follow, follow, follow the yellow brick road. Because, because. . . .

A lot of people also believe that the movie was not filmed with cameras. Now that is really dumb. It was filmed with cameras!

Judy Garland was not the first choice of the producers to play the part of Dorothy. Shirley Temple was the first choice. Shirley refused the part because "It's not cute enough for me, poopsie-poo," she said. Next, the producers tried to get Mae West. Mae accepted, but the director decided she was too big (?) for the part.

The producers then tried to get Bob Hope to play the part. Hope tried out, but just didn't look right in the dress. He had bad legs. Finally, Judy Garland was chosen.

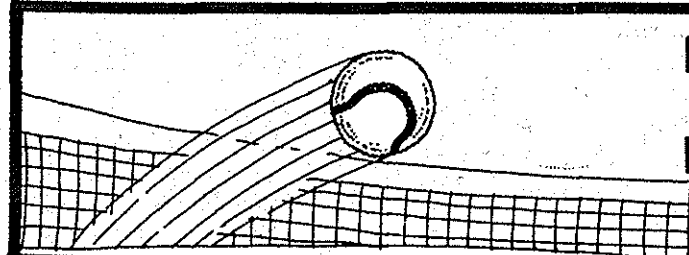

The film took almost six hours to shoot, and over ten minutes to edit.

Many people think that the actress who played the wicked witch of the West is the same woman who now plays Cora in the coffee ads. Wrong! The woman who tried to push Dorothy out of her slippers is now pushing coffee—not Cora, but the woman who now plays Mrs. Olson in the ads. On the grounds that most people don't know that, I have come to the conclusion that most folk don't know beans about the making of the movie.

Finally, about those slippers. They were not slippers. They were, in fact, Judy Garland's feet, painted red. That was why the witch could not get them off. Yes, Judy was a shoe-in for the part of Dorothy. Her dancing had the sole (and I don't mean that as a fish tail), her singing had the tongue. She was very tied-up in the movie, she was no heel, she was straight-laced, and sure-footed. Judy fit the part perfect, and got off on the right foot by finding the scarecrow in a field of corn—she lent her ears, and never got husked. And she was just a mere nibbler of an actress, who at first they wanted to can.

Case closed. The Wizard of Oz is the best movie ever made about midgets, witches, Aunt Ems, and Lollipop Boys. Any arguments?

It's your return that counts!
