Mailed December 22, 1980

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio - A slice of Americana, Edgar Lee Masters' "Spoon River Anthology," will be the second production of the Youngstown State University Theatre's 1980-81 season.

Performances will be at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 7, through Saturday, Jan. 10. All performances will be in the Spotlight Experimental Theatre of the YSU College of Fine and Performing Arts, Bliss Hall, Wick Avenue.

$1 parking will be available in the adjacent Wick Avenue parking deck.

The show, from the 1963 Broadway production of "Spoon River Anthology," is a stage dramatization based on the heart-warming sketches of which was supplemented with an ample dose of free verse.

Theatre goers are introduced to the ghosts of Spoon River, whose secrets have gone with them to the grave. There are over 60 characterizations and vignettes in this constantly interesting entertainment. They offer an amazingly varied array of roles and impersonations, from young lovers and preachers and teachers to the funny chronicle of the poor mixed-up man who winds up in the wrong cemetery. Both the sordid and humorous sides of life are portrayed with fetching ballads and Masters' free verse form at its best.

This production is under the direction of Dr. Frank Castronovo, Boardman, assistant professor of Speech Communication and Theatre at YSU. The 60-some characterizations will be portrayed by six actors and actresses:

Tom O'Donnell, a senior theatre major from Youngstown; Don Ausby, a freshman theatre major from Youngstown; Mark Goral, a freshman theatre major from Hermitage, Pa.; April Smith, a graduate student in Business Administration from Boardman; Denise Alfredo, a junior theatre major from Youngstown; and Branka-Maria Ruzak, an English major from Youngstown.

The music for "Spoon River Anthology" will be handled by Joe Higham, sophomore graphic art major from Youngstown; Mary Kolar, freshman theatre major from Austintown; and Pam Melvin, junior music performance major from Poland.

Assisting Dr. Castronovo are Dennis Klase, a junior theatre/speech major from Youngstown, and Charlotte Good, a sophomore music education major from North Lima. Costume design and coordination is by Polla Paras, YSU costume designer. Lighting design is being done by Jean Riddell, a senior theatre major from Youngstown, and the scene design is being done by Dr. Castronovo.

The YSU theatre season will also include a March production of Schmidt and Jones' "The Fantasticks," Manhoffs' "The Owl and The Pussycat" in March, and a dinner theatre production of LaBiches' and Michels' "An Italian Straw Hat" in May.

Admission is by reserve seat tickets only. Tickets for "Spoon River Anthology" are $2.50. For reservation, tickets, and information concerning "Spoon River," call the University Theatre Box Office, (216) 742-3105 between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. weekdays.
