Tennis team sweeps tournament

by Melinda Ropar

The YSU team posted a total of 64 points to sweep the first Mid-Continent Athletic Conference Tennis Tournament held last weekend at Northern Iowa. Northern Iowa was second with 40 points, followed by Western Illinois with 39, Eastern Illinois 28, and Northern Michigan 18.

Four Penguin netters captured singles titles. They include Bill Dunn, Brian Hunter, Rob Adsit, and Kurt Kamperman.

In advancing to the finals, Bill Dunn defeated Rich O'Sullivan

(WI) 6-2, 6-2, Brian Hunter beat Stu Cochrane (NI) 6-3, 6-0, Rob Adsit defeated Scott Frypyen (NI) 6-1, 6-2, and Kurt Kamperman beat Lastinen (NM) 6-3, 6-2.

In the title-winning matches, Dunn defeated Guy Mazula (NI) 7-6, 6-0. Hunter beat Scott McKissick (WI) 6-4, 3-6, 6-3. Adsit defeated Brad Patterson (EI) 6-2, 6-3, and Kamperman topped Andy Maurideas (WI) 7-5, 6-1.

Butch Thomas lost his final match and gained a runner-up finish, while Scott Miller placed third.

YSU also captured two out of the three double matches. Adsit and Dunn disposed of Hayden and Stumpe (EI) in the first round 6-2, 6-3, and Mazula and Froyen (NI) 6-3, 6-4 in the final round. Hunter and Miller advanced by beating Mattos and Foster (NI) 6-3, 6-2, and whipped Patterson and Wenzel 6-2, 6-2 in the finals.

Kamperman and Thomas, on the other hand, lost their title match 5-7, 3-6 to gain a runner-up finish.

The Penguins return to action today against Edinboro at their opponents' courts.

Tuition freeze is possible if Ohio Senate approves

by Toni DiSalvo

A tuition freeze, which would freeze tuition at the level of this quarter's tuition, has already passed the Ohio House and is now being reviewed by the Senate.

In the House, the legislators provided $40 million in additional appropriations for instructional subsidies. This reduces the amount students would have to pay for tuition. Along with this request, the legislators stipulated a "freeze" on tuition, indicating that the monies would be provided only if the freeze is put into effect. The freeze will be based on this quarter's tuition; therefore, an increase will not occur in September, if the bill is approved.

The bill (House Bill No. 204) is now before the Senate and a decision may be reached at the end of this week or the beginning of next.

If the Senate approves the bill as is, it will go to the Governor for approval or veto. However, if there are any changes to be made in the bill, a committee of both House and Senate members will be organized to review the amendments or deletions and after approval, the bill will go to the Governor.

Dr. John J. Coffelt, president of YSU, said the amount of money put back into the budget by the appropriation of $40 million "does not offset what we need." He continued, "If our fees are frozen at this level, it would be difficult to operate" because the budget would be unbalanced.

The only place where there can be an increase in YSU's tuition is in the general fee.

Coffelt said, "We made a commitment to the students that we would not increase the General Fee for two years." However, that commitment is up beginning fall quarter of 1980. Coffelt added, "I feel almost honor bound by what we said to the Board of Trustees and through the board to students a year ago."

Coffelt said, "I simply don't know at this point what's going to happen in the Senate; all concerned."

You will be towed!

Students block handicapped spaces

by Ed Shanks

"If you are parked in a marked handicapped parking space without proper identification, you will be towed at your own expense," said Cheryl Rice of the Handicapped Student Services of Developmental Education.

Students have been parking in the spaces designated for the use of the handicapped, said Rice, and when the handicapped, some of whom cannot travel great distances, want to park near their classroom building they cannot.

"There are 14 spaces to accommodate 35 handicapped students," said Rice, "and when they go to use the spaces, they can't because some non-handicapped student is parked there."

"Negligence is not an excuse," she continued, "because the spaces are identified clearly by the wheelchair symbol."

Anyone ticketed for parking in such a space will be "ticketed and towed," she said, and should a student choose to ignore the ticket the extra $5 will be added to his next YSU tuition bill.

To obtain permission to park in the designated handicapped spaces one has to go to the Auxiliary Services Office, room 100, Kilcawley Center, with proper proof that one is handicapped, either temporarily or permanently. This proof must be verified by a doctor before a permit to park in the handicapped spaces is issued. These permits are subject to renewal.

Rice said she urges all handicapped to obtain the parking permit, and not run the risk of being ticketed and towed. "This is the only way to assure the handicapped their right to park."

She added that as additional proof of a car's being connected with a handicapped person, the handicapped license plates are available through the department of motor vehicles in Columbus, Ohio at no extra charge. A person driving a handicapped student may obtain these plates, by applying to same. Medical verification is required.

For further information call the Handicapped Student Services Office, in Developmental Education.

Inconsiderate parking

Non-handicapped students have been observed parking their cars in the spaces reserved for the handicapped, in most of the parking lots on campus. Efforts to deter them, such as putting up barricades, have failed. The offending students merely move the barricade and park their car in the handicapped-reserved space anyway, or, worse, they simply run down the barricades.

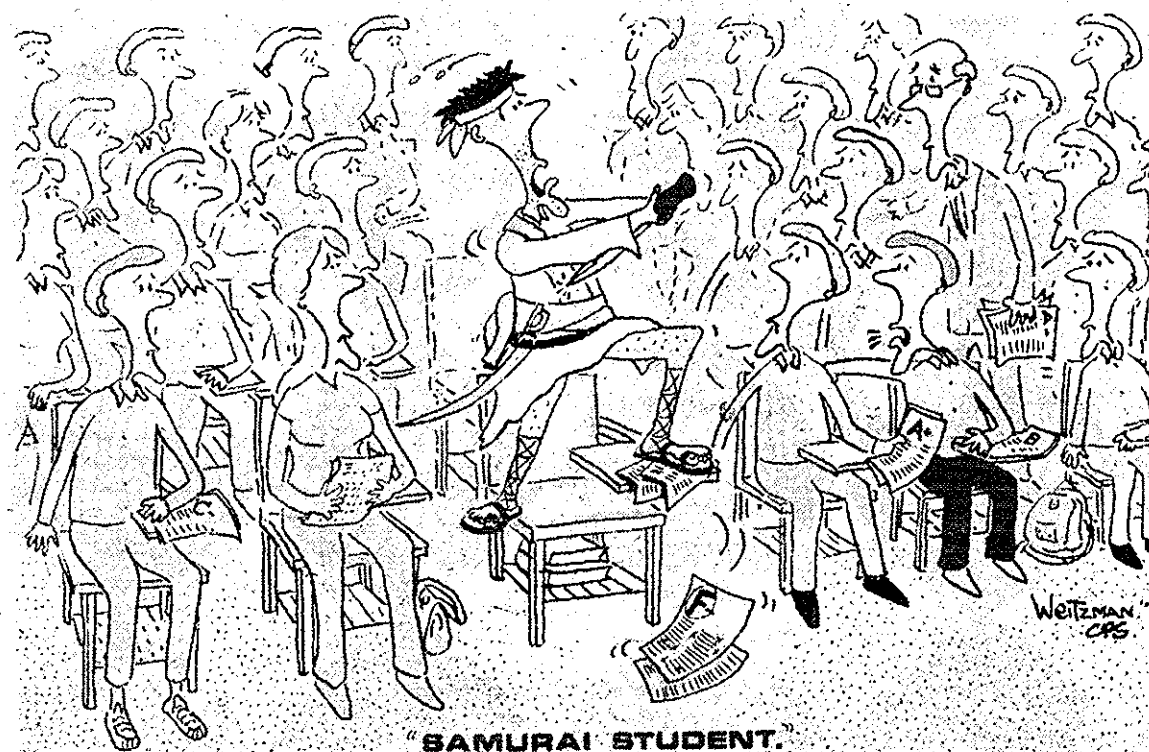

This has to come to a screeching halt. As it is there are 14 spaces for the 35 handicapped students who have been issued parking permits. When a non-handicapped student parks his car in such a spot, he is denying a handicapped person access to the building that person wants to enter.

Many of the handicapped cannot travel great distances, and should not have to do so. It is inexcusable that non-handicapped students are allowed to park in spaces that are so obviously marked for the handicapped that a two-year-old would know better than to park there, and they only get a five-dollar ticket. The offending car should be towed on sight, at the owner's expense.

Anyone with a bona-fide handicap that needs the extra-wide space the reserved spaces afford can go to the Auxiliary Services Office and get a permit that allows them to park in those spaces. Anyone that doesn't need the extra space and parks there anyway should be glad they didn't have to park in those spaces and leave them for those that do.

Students' attitude

To the Editor of the Jambar

With interest and some amusement I read the letter from the gentleman who found the roach in the ketchup container at Hardee's. He seemed quick to blame the management of Hardee's and Kilcawley Center for the situation, when in fact the real culprits are the students who use the Center. The way some students throw garbage around the Center it is no wonder there's not a more serious problem than just roaches.

I have seen people throw unwanted food on the chairs, floors, and ashtrays in Kilcawley instead of using the proper trash cans. I've seen others stomp out their cigarettes on the carpet causing holes to be burned in it. There is only one word for people like this—PIGS. People like these have no respect for themselves let alone other people's property. Perhaps the University should offer a course in self-appreciation and personal hygiene. Then maybe the problem will correct itself.

R. William Naples

Politics

To the Editor of the Jambar

Politics, as usual, is what got this country and city into the problems we now have.

I think it's about time our social science, political science, and government instructors took their heads out of the sand.

We now have thousands unemployed in Youngstown, factories closing down, inflation running wild and we have to practically beg to get an opportunity to hear the candidates running for mayor and their issues. This could be solved if our instructors would en-

Campaigning

The election of a new president and vice-president of Student Government is an important decision made by the student body. The persons elected to these jobs should be able to handle university, state, and even national issues.

They also must be able to negotiate with the administration and faculty. They should be intelligent, trustworthy, and honest individuals who do not wheel and deal their way to student government positions with promises of jobs, free drinks, and other unethical tactics.

I cannot condone this style of campaigning because I feel it degrades the credibility of student government via the people it has to work with to accomplish its programs. To think that two candidates could buy their way into the presidency and vice-presidency makes me wonder about the morals, ethics, and values of our student body. Should these tactics allow the students to be swayed into voting for a smile, handshake, and unfulfillable promise, then it is my feeling that student government will take a backslide for the worse.

When you see the candidates soliciting your vote, take time and ask them where they stand on the issues and problems of the University, not how much Coke they can buy you. Give the job to the people who will do the job and not the people who will use any means to achieve the ends of office.

Crude remarks

To the Editor of the Jambar

This is in response to the "Hardee's Animals" letter of May first.

I am employed by Hardee's and the remarks made by some of the students in response to the letter, which included: Can I have a roach sandwich? Roach fried, etc., seem very crude. It is partly the students themselves who have brought the roaches out of the closet by throwing their food around, dropping it on the floor and not bothering to pick it up. Knocking drinks over and not wiping them up, not cleaning up their tables when finished, etc.

The fact is that there are no roaches where the food is prepared, only where the students are.

I am not saying it is totally the students' fault, but there is an (cont. on page 8)

Nation should cease development of nuclear weapons, warns Coffin

by Lisa Armour

"Before the atom bomb was created, seven scientists, who were advising the atomic energy commission, instead of being happy with the thought of the great, new weaponry they might create, recommended against making the atom bomb; but as we all know the bomb was created," said Rev. William Sloane Coffin, former anti-war activist, who spoke before a semi-large audience at 12:30 Tuesday, May 1.

He added, "that was only the beginning of a very strong race with the Soviet Union to see who could make the biggest and better bomb."

Coffin said, "When is enough? McNamara, secretary of state in the mid 1960's, asked and answered this question, too. McNamara stated there must be a point at which we have enough. In other words, McNamara was saying the important concept is not superiority, it is sufficiency, and he set about answering 'When is enough?' The answer he came up with, at least it made some rational sense, was that we should have the capability of delivering a second strike instead of a first strike which would eliminate 30 per cent of the Soviet Union population and 17 per cent of the Soviet's industry. And in order to defend and protect that second strike capability, we should have a triadic defense, that is, three legs.

"The first leg would be the ICBM project in Colorado. The second leg would be given to the Navy, and the third to the Air Force. Each of these three would have the capability of knocking out 30 per cent of the Soviet's population and 17 per cent of its industry. But that was the last time any secretary of state, or any president seriously took the question of 'when is enough', or seriously dealt with the concept of sufficiency."

He added that we have abandoned sufficiency for military superior weaponry. "We have increased our military superiority immensely. We now have enough to wipe out everyone in the world 13 times over. And we're going on to 14 times over, because every day we produce three nuclear missiles. You have to stop and ask yourself, why do we go on like this? And I'm afraid one of the answers is simply national pride."

Coffin said the United States has an irrational love of loveless power, and we are not trying to achieve national security, but military power, and at the expense of national security. And no one dares argue that we are not more vulnerable than we were years ago. "Einstein was right when he said that the offense is always two jumps ahead of the defense. We're able to wage lethal war, but our weapons are no longer able to do the one thing weapons have traditionally been able to do—defend the nation. There is no defense of this nation," he said.

He added that one of the main reasons we have so much unemployment and inflation in our nation is because the arms industry provided jobs for people, but now it has changed. Now the Arms Race has created unemployment. "We should stop the Arms Race and use the money we would spend on it to create jobs."

YSU grad in entertainment

Maluso's show business career blossoming

by Paul Prosser

Mary Jo Maluso, a recent YSU graduate in broadcasting, is a rising star in the Youngstown entertainment field.

Maluso has been appearing in concerts under the auspices of CYG Productions and also making numerous commercials for local radio and TV.

She is a graduate of Chaney High School, where she was featured soloist in the choir and starred in numerous musicals. She had leads in Oklahoma, Fiddler on the Roof, and Man of La Mancha.

Maluso attended Mary Baldwin College in Staunton, VA for her freshman and sophomore years. It was during her sophomore year she began making commercials for various local companies. She is best remembered for the promotional campaign she did for the Schwebel's Bread company during the bicentennial year. She also did commercials for Hartzell's, Rose and Son's jean shop, Rhythm and Blues.

She returned to Youngstown in the fall of '78, and was promptly cast in the Youngstown Playhouse's 20th anniversary production of West Side Story. The show not only won the award for the best musical of the season, but Maluso, in her first Playhouse show, won the award for best performance by an actress in a musical for her portrayal of Maria.

Since that time Maluso has played a variety of roles at theatres in the Youngstown area. She has appeared at the New Castle Playhouse as Laurie in Oklahoma! and at St. Christine's Summer Theatre in the part of Lucy, in You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown.

Mary Jo Maluso

She has returned to the Playhouse twice since West Side Story. In '77 she played Polly Brown, the ingenue, in The Boyfriend, a spoof of the 20's. This year she played one of the daughters in Fiddler on the Roof.

It was in Fiddler that she was spotted by the man who is now her agent. When Sergio Franchi's sister was unable to appear in her brother's show in Youngstown because of sickness and a replacement was needed, Maluso's future agent immediately thought of the girl he had seen a few weeks earlier at the Playhouse.

With only a few days' rehearsal, she not only impressed the audience with her talent but also the men of CYG Productions. They immediately asked her to appear in their next two concerts.

The first concert was with Johnny Diamond and the Four Lads, at Powers Auditorium.

In the second concert she appeared with Enzo Stuarti. In this concert she was given equal billing with Stuarti and had her own dancers and back-up singers.

Since the conclusion of these concerts she has been busy with many radio and TV commercials for local businesses. She is making commercials for Carpet Warehouse, Masters Tuxedos and The Gentlemen of Olds.

In the future Maluso hopes to use her degree in broadcasting, but in the meantime she is immensely enjoying her venture into show business.

Voelpel exhibits interesting works

by Rich Hagan

The Fred Voelpel exhibition at the Butler Art Institute was an interesting display of art as applied to the theater. It featured set and costume designs; and three actual costumes designed by Voelpel.

His set designs consisted of three-dimensional models and paintings, which demonstrated a wide range of ability. The three-dimensional models, despite their small scale, were very detailed and showed a draftsmanlike quality. Voelpel's watercolor paintings depict the way the finished set should look. The paintings done for "Henry Winkler Meets William Shakespeare" were realistic (art) well done. This was not the case for several other paintings such as "Eight Ball" and "Folly Conve," which appeared to be sloppy and vague.

Voelpel's costume designs showed a vivid imagination. Proof of this was "Seascape," which depicted a half-man, half (cont. on page 7)

Meatyard's photos to be shown in Kilcawley through May 18

"Ralph Eugene Meatyard: Photographs", an exhibit sponsored by the Visual Studies Workshop, Rochester, New York, will be opening at Kilcawley Center Art Gallery, May 7-18. An opening reception is scheduled for 4 p.m. May 9 in the gallery. All of the works in the show are untitled.

Meatyard, who understands the mechanical and physiological aspects of human sight, artistically utilizes the malfunctioning aspects of vision to turn images into photographic art. The knowledge and skills of an optician served as the basis for the developed talents within Meatyard's photographs.

Born in 1925, Meatyard spent his early years as an optician in Illinois. In 1954, he began to study photography under Van Deren Coke, a natural photographer who undoubtedly had a great influence upon Meatyard's style techniques.

Unlike others who have attempted similar photographic techniques and were described by the critics as "Having miserably failed to produce art." Meatyard's ability to utilize the "mal-functioning eye" was a sparkling success.

In a review in The New York

Times, A.D. Coleman said, in describing a Meatyard exhibit, "Meatyard was able to purify and vitalize his use of optical 'error' and direct it to the making of beautiful yet often frightening images whose very lack of clarity becomes—in the context of the photographer's other, deliberately grotesque images—the source of ominous and occasionally ecstatic power. I suspect the understandings of human vision..."

Primarily, Meatyard concerned himself with such subject matter as dolls, masks and statues and through the employment of these items, often times produced a fine line between dream and reality—life and death.

Within his subjects masked as rotting ghouls, Meatyard creates the "living dead". His photographs are alive with textures and often crawl with peeling paint, aged wall paper and decaying wood. The image of life decomposing is what gives action and motion to his art.

Meatyard's "creative eye"—his camera, captures the layers of life, of family generations that have occupied home life environment. He uses families as an infliction; always precisely directing each generation to inflict their own particular tastes upon the surfaces of a house. No matter where he takes his "eye"—inside or outside the environment, Meatyard captures life in layers and always permits the very first beginnings to show through.

Today, Meatyard prints are in such public collections as: The George Eastman House, Rochester, New York; Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Cambridge, Mass.; Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York City; University of Florida, Gainesville, Florida; University of Louisville, Louisville, Kentucky; University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Nebraska; University of New Mexico, Albuquerque, New Mexico and the Visual Studies Workshop, Rochester, New York.

Special arrangements for group visits can be made through Kilcawley Center by calling (216) 742-3575. Gallery hours are: Monday-Thursday, 10 a.m.-8 p.m. and Friday 10 a.m.-3 p.m.

Although this exhibition demonstrated Voelpel's skill as a designer, you could hardly call his designs a work of art, as applied to the field of Fine Art, since it's intended purpose was to convey his idea for a particular set or costume and not a developed painting.

Club to visit Vegas, Hawaii

"If students show enough enthusiasm in the Hawaii/Las Vegas trip, we'll plan an annual trip to Florida during spring break," stated Bob Wasko, sophomore, CAST, trip coordinator for the newly-formed YSU Travel Club.

According to Wasko, anyone interested in obtaining more information concerning the Hawaii/Las Vegas trip, scheduled for August 28 to September 7, should contact him at 747-5257 as soon as possible. He said he hopes to have all seats filled by June 30.

Cost for the trip is as follows: $677 per person based on three sharing a triple room; $695 per person based on two sharing a double room; and $776 for a single room.

A $50 deposit check is necessary for reservation.

In addition to a yearly trip to Florida, the club may sponsor a Caribbean Cruise next year, Wasko said.

The club's president is John Diamandis, sophomore, Arts & Sciences.

Coffin added, one of the reasons we are reluctant to face the truth about the Arms Race not providing us with security, and contributing to inflation and unemployment, is because of our fear of the Russians.

He said it is mainly the Right Wing in our country that has spread this fear.

"We're being told that the Soviets are ahead of us, because they have just arrived at the place we were ten years ago. They also say the Soviets have more missiles than we do, but you don't kill people with missiles, you kill them with war heads. This is the kind of propaganda that's around in order to plant fear in this country, and keep the U. S. no. 1.

"Not in decency, not in employment, not in medicine, not in low infant mortality, but in military. What can we do to stop the U.S. from being in the Arms Race? Well, we can simply refuse to engage in any more new weaponry systems,"

Former footballers

Four follow famous footsteps

by Ron Anderson

Four members of the Mid-Continent Conference champion YSU Penguin football team will be hoping to follow in the footsteps of former athletes Ron Jaworski, Cliff Stoudt, and Craig Cotton this season.

The Penguins will have four representatives in the training camps of two different National Football League clubs in July, following the end of the collegiate draft last Friday.

Although the Penguins were shut out in the first six rounds of the draft, linebacker Greg Fitzpatrick became the first YSU draftee in the seventh round as the Marysville, Ohio native went to the Dallas Cowboys. But the Cowboys did not stop there, as the former Super Bowl champions also selected defensive end Quentin Lowry as the next to the last choice in the entire draft. Dallas also is seeking to sign running back Marschell Brumfield to a contract as a free agent.

The other Penguins with a chance at pro ball is center Ed McGlasson, who was selected in the tenth round by the New York Jets.

Fitzpatrick, this year's MCC Defensive Player of the Year, has put twenty pounds on since the end of the season to bring his size up to 6'3", 235. He is the career leader in tackles for the Penguins, and an honorable mention selection on the AP All American Team.

"I've always wanted to play for Dallas, I've dreamed about it, and now it's happened," said

Softballers are seeded 4th for state tourney

by Bill Snier

Even though two games still remain on the regular season slate, the YSU women's softball team are now setting their sights on the Ohio State Women's Tournament to be held this weekend at Wright State University in Dayton.

The seeded Teams for the event were released yesterday, with YSU being seeded fourth in the 16-team field, with current overall record of 9-2. Miami of Ohio (9-3) were seeded first, Dayton (12-9) second, and Wright State (17-8) were seeded third. The Penguins are the defending state champions.

According to head coach Pauline Noe, the seeding committee based their selections on how the teams fared against the six top teams in the state. In addition to

Fitzpatrick. "I only know the harder I work, the more of a chance I'll have to play."

McGlasson, a 6'4", 245 pound performer, has been selected to numerous All-American squads as well as being named the Penguins Most Valuable Player during the past season. He was also named the MCC Offensive Lineman of the Year.

Lowry, a 6-2, 230-pound defensive end, will be tried at linebacker by the Cowboys. An AP All-American, he was also named the MCC Defensive Lineman of the Year.

Brumfield, a 6-0, 190 tailback, was an outstanding rusher for the Penguins during the past campaign. Always a threat to score from anywhere with his breakaway speed, "Broomer" has been one of the top scorers in the nation for the past two seasons.

the four previously mentioned teams, Akron and Cedarville College fit into this category.

"Frankly, I was shocked by the committee's selections because we are the defending state champions," stated Noe. "There is no way Miami should be ranked above us. Their three losses all came against us and Akron and we beat Akron the three times we played them."

It was hinted to Noe that the selection committee seems to think that "southern Ohio teams play a better brand of ball than the northern squads. This can be seen in that YSU is the only northern team-to be seeded while Akron, who does own two victories over the number one seed, was ignored.

The Penguins are in the same bracket with Miami in the tourney. The Penguins will open defence of their title in the double elimination tourney at 9 a.m. Friday, when YSU will tackle Capitol University.

In weekend action, the Penguins managed a split of a double-header with Miami, winning the first game 6-4 before dropping the nightcap 1-0.

In the opener, Jill Harmon won her seventh in a row despite pitching with a hurt right hand. Har-
