Attempted assault, fire occur at Wick deck

In two separate incidents last Monday in the Wick Ave. parking deck, an assault attempt was reported and a fire destroyed a car in the lower level.

The assault attempt occurred about half an hour later and fifty feet away from the site of the fire, said Gale Mills, Assistant Director of Security. "A student, female, was rolling down her windows, when she noticed a muscular man with a nylon stocking over his face, standing nearby.

"She started rolling up her window, screaming, and the man stuck his hand in the car, but did not touch her. Some construction workers, hearing her screams, came to her aid, but the assailant had fled." Mills added that the

Appalachia seeks regulations

Blasting damages area

by Lisa Armour

Dr. Albert Fritsch, director of Appalachia-Science in the Public Interest, spoke at 11 a.m. Friday, May 4 before a small audience in Cushman Hall about the need to stop damage being done in Southern Appalachia, and the need to conserve energy.

Fritsch said "we (the Southern Appalachia group which is trying to prevent mining in its area) are at a town which has the largest coal-loading facility in the world, and we have trains coming in and out all the time, getting coal out of the mines in our section of town. We try to make sure the country stays as beautiful as it used to be, but of course we can't control that completely. The nation is in need of coal, and Ohio is in need of coal; and a lot of the badly needed coal comes from this area. But to get coal, explosives are used and the people who live in these areas suffer. Their homes and water wells are damaged."

He added that his group has been the first group to try to get regulations passed about blasting, and to try to cut down on the amount of damage done, "which is probably one to two billion dollars worth of damage. Once the damage is done the people can't prove that the damage occurred. We want a pre-blast survey, where the mining companies have to survey homes before blasting in that area," he said.

Fritsch added that his group also works to prove that flooding and road deterioration occurs because of blasting in mines. "Coal trucks are overloading our roads and cause our people to pay $.86 for every truck that goes across. It's tragic what is happening to our land because of the energy most people say we need. We all need to grow and develop, but not necessarily with the use of energy. We can grow in education and other ways."

He added, "This isn't so much an energy talk, but a philosophical one. We must change. We have to regulate ourselves and others. It

Worthless

This past campaign for the presidency of Student Government shows indeed that campus politics can stoop to the level of its national model.

Never before has a campaign been based less on the issues confronting the students. Who knows where anybody stood? X has done this and B says things will change, but what in God's name is going to happen? The students, given what the candidates themselves had said, won't know until speculation becomes reality.

Never before has a campaign been based more on personalities, rather than the issues themselves. By now, the entire campus knows what the candidates look like, but, again, what are they thinking?

And never before has a campaign been based more on promises of jobs, free drinks, candy bars, t-shirts, and whistles. The damn thing was more like a Halloween party than anything else. (Bobbing for votes?)

Hopefully, time will prove me wrong, but, as it looks now, this was a worthless campaign, a worthless election, and, regardless of outcome, a worthless decision.

Gordon speaks on sex education; says 50% of teens engage in sex

by Toni DiSalvo

"If you don't use birth control, you're not romantic, you're stupid," said Dr. Sol Gordon, director of The Institute for Family Research and Education and professor of Child and Family Studies at Syracuse University.

Gordon's appearance was sponsored by the Mahoning County Mental Health Center, and he spoke at a lecture/luncheon at the Embassy Room recently.

Gordon, writer, lecturer and educator, received his Ph.D. from the University of London in 1953. His popular class in Human Sexuality has an enrollment of 400 students each semester. He has been interviewed on popular TV and radio shows in most of the larger cities, including Phil Donahue, Lee Phillips, and Not for Women Only, among others. He speaks frequently on the subject of family life education as well as learning disabilities to many groups. He has also lectured in Canada, England, Japan, Australia, Singapore, Israel and a few more.

One assumption Gordon vetoed was that knowledge of sex in high schools is harmful because (some believe) that young people who are knowledgeable about sex will go out and do it.

Young people do know about sex and intercourse without proper education, but don't realize the disastrous results that usually follow. Gordon stated lightly, "I wish they didn't know about sex. I wouldn't tell them until they were 20 years old." The primary focus of the Institute for Family Research and Education is that ignorance, not knowledge, stimulates inappropriate sexual behavior.

The Institute is also dedicated to strengthening the American family by encouraging honest communication between parent and child. Gordon believes sex

Uncalled-for axing

To the Editor of the Jambar:
I have recently become aware of the sudden and uncalled-for axing of yet another television program of excellent quality, courtesy of "Big Brother" Nielsen. I refer to Battlestar Galactica, a series which was expected to be long-running not only by those involved in its production but by many of its audience as well.

I am by far not alone in believing that Battlestar Galactica combined commendable acting, realistic storylines, and of course outstanding special effects, sets, and costuming. Battlestar Galactica far outdistanced its television and film predecessors in offering exciting and well-produced science fiction.

It is very obvious that Nielsen and Company's version of "public opinion" and the viewers' actual choice of programming are

Bliss Hall inadequate

I am a student who uses Bliss Hall. In fact, as a theatre major, I spend a great deal of my time there. The INPUT by Jim DeGarbino in the May 1 Jambar informed us about the facilities in Bliss Hall. I would like to comment on the lack of facilities in Bliss Hall. Specifically: atmosphere.

As YSU's fine arts building, what distinguishes Bliss Hall from any other building? If you remove the students and the sounds of practicing, the answer is: NOTHING!

Bulletin accomplishments? Fine Art majors have quite a few things to show for their achievements. The Speech Team has several trophies and nowhere to display them. Spotlight Theatre does not have anywhere to display their production pictures. The art department does not have a suitable gallery. And Dana also does not have any type of display case.

I realize that this seems a trivial gripe, but we (Fine Art majors) work hard and our talents should be recognized. I have been in other fine art buildings at other universities and their accomplishments can be seen on every wall and in every spare space. And spare space is not a problem in Bliss Hall, on the contrary! In consideration of the empty lobby, empty first floor gallery and empty second floor bridge; wasted space is a more appropriate term. In short, barren Bliss Hall appears to be just another building and not the Fine Arts facility that it actually is.

In his article Jim DeGarbino said that Dean McGraw will order more benches if we take care of the existing ones. Was behavior monitored before the other buildings were furnished? We had to wait a year to even have a place to sit down (aside from the floor)! Our patience brought us charming hard wood benches here and there, that make you just want to curl up on them and study. You can always sit on the floor and use a bench as a desk top, as many students do. This is hardly a studying atmosphere.

I'm glad that Mr. DeGarbino is trying to get a change machine. Let's hope he is successful.

It is also interesting to note that Bliss Hall's restrooms are the only ones on campus without a place to set your books down.

What I'm trying to say is, it's a real shame that a fine arts facility that houses some of the most exciting people, who have many tangibles to show for their talents, has to be as boring, uncomfortable and poorly equipped as Bliss Hall.

Relationship with God

To the Editor of the Jambar

I tend to agree with much of what Dr. Eminhizer stated in his letter to the Jambar on May 4, 1979. An experience or relationship with God is definitely more important than arguments relating to "big bang" theories, etc.

The Bible talks about a relationship with God in many places and in many different ways. This is the heart of the message of Jesus in John 3.

When such a relationship is established it causes a change in a person's lifestyle for as it is written, "Therefore if any man is in Christ, he is a new creature; the old things passed away; behold, new things have come." (2 Corinthians 5:16). Science and many other things may point toward God, but more intellectual acknowledgement of the existence of God is not sufficient to establish a relationship with Him, nor will it be particularly satisfying to the individual.

Dr. Eminhizer is also basically correct that one person cannot accurately evaluate another person's experience, as there are definite limitations to communication in this area. This does not mean, however, that all experiences are valid relationships with the true Creator-God and any experience must be tested for its validity.

Fortunately, God has provided us with a standard by which we can test our experiences. This is the Bible, which states, "Test yourselves to see if you are in the faith; examine yourselves! Or do you not recognize this about yourselves, that Jesus Christ is in you-unless indeed you fail the test?" (2 Corinthians 13:5). There are many voices speaking about God in the world today, and it is obvious that they cannot all be correct. Many of us who talk about "prime movers", etc. do so only to point to the necessity of establishing that essential "Born-again" relationship with the living God. This does require faith, which is a non-tangible thing, for the Bible notes that "without faith it is impossible to please Him (God), for he who comes to God must believe that He is, and that He is a rewarder of those who seek Him" (Hebrews 11:6). Prophetic and ethical religion, with all of their great value for mankind, spring from this bedrock of faith.

Belloto makes transition from mother to secretary

by Anifa Joy Castronovo

Mary Belloto, secretary for the department of speech communication and theatre, and mother of 10, has made the transition from years of diapers and formula to the world of typing and interpersonal communications appear easy.

As secretary for all of the full and part-time speech faculty, Belloto must utilize and understand a variety of speech terms and techniques.

A native of Struthers, Belloto attended Holy Trinity elementary school, and graduated from Struthers High in 1949. In high school, she worked in the office and took coursework in business.

The rest of her formal education was completed much later. In the fall of 1978 she completed a two-year degree at YSU in applied business. "This degree is preparation for an executive secretary position, which is pretty much what I am right now," she stated.

"But I missed my calling; I should have been a pediatric nurse," she added, "I adore infants; my own infants were the most wonderful thing in my life."

While attending Struthers High, Belloto met her husband, Robert. They were a year apart in school, he a senior and she a junior. Upon graduation, Robert joined the 11th Airborne paratroop division. When he was home on leave in July of 1949, he and Mary became engaged. They were married the following November.

After being discharged, Robert worked at a variety of jobs and entered YSU in 1954, graduating in 1958 with an accounting degree. He has been an accountant ever since, and became a CPA in 1973.

Meanwhile, Mary was quite busy being a wife and mother. Their first child, Kathy, was born in 1950 while Robert was still in the service. Mary said that the military hospital provided more advance methods of delivery than civilian hospitals did. Because they received military care, this was the couple's least expensive child.

The other 9 children were born in Youngstown between 1952 and 1965. Belloto said, "I felt disappointed that Robert wasn't able to participate in the childbirth procedure as husbands today can. The hospital policies at the time did not permit it."

Mary took all of this in stride. "We made our choice to have a large family; I don't feel as though I do more or less than anyone else," she said. When they were married, the couple planned to have five or six children.

Mary was the youngest of a family of eight. "As a child, I felt very lonely; the sister closest to me was five years older, and we had little in common," she stated. Robert was the next to the youngest in a family of six.

"I feel sorry for the child in one-child families," Mary commented, "The children miss a lot of sharing, and lack empathy for others. They find it hard to look at situations from another person's point of view," she added.

Mary worked for about 10 years in her home doing book-keeping and filing for her husband. Working has been a matter of course and necessity for her. She does not feel overburdened.

In September of 1974 she began working as a student assistant employed in the YSU history department. She enrolled at the same time as a full time student. She worked as a secretary there until January of 1976, when she joined the speech communication and theatre department.

Belloto enjoys working full time because it allows her to help her husband financially. "For so many years he had two jobs; I'm glad I can help out now," she said.

Working keeps her busy as her children get older and go out on their own. She thinks of her job and family duties as doing what is expected of her. She feels little pressure because she is happy doing it, she says. Her youngest child is now 13, she has three children attending YSU, and six still at home.

In addition, Belloto likes working with the students who come to her for information and advice. "I admire some of these students so much," she remarked. "So many of them just have loads of potential." She said that she loves being around students.

The only thing Belloto dislikes about working is getting up and getting to work. "It can be a real chore," she stated.

In what little spare time she has, Belloto does latch hook rugs. Her future plans include going for a bachelor's degree, but that will not be possible for a while because of her family commitments.

Her job, which she likes, has (Cont. on page 11)

Sex education

but have to pretend they are." This pretending is based upon peer pressure and curiosity.

"Fifty per cent of all teenagers participate in sexual intercourse," says Gordon, whether or not their parents or their church or even themselves like it.

Concerning present sex education in schools Gordon said, "I don't know of a single school district in the whole country that has a good sex education program." He continued, "If I was to characterize the sex education in the country, I would say the course was either plumbing or a relentless pursuit of the Fallopian tubes."

Another area Gordon addressed were the lines men use to seduce women. Gordon, with the assistance of Ann Landers, collected lines that boys use on girls. They received letters from 13,000 girls and six boys. Not only are lines printed but also responses that girls can use. The name of the book is If you Really Loved Me, You Would... and is published by Bantam Books. The book even has a section on pregnant lines, for example, "You can't get pregnant. It's your time of the month." and "I won't let you get pregnant, I'm impotent."

"Almost every boy will abandon almost every girl if he makes her pregnant," said Gordon, so the best thing to do is not to have sexual relations at all. If one does participate in sexual relations, birth control should be used.

According to Gordon, the 10 most important things in a relationship before marriage are: 1) Love and caring for another human being; 2) sense of humor; 3) Communication-biggest problem in sexual dysfunction; 4) *; 5) *; 6) *; 7) *; 8) *; 9) Sex and 10) Sharing household tasks. Where is 4, 5, 6, 7, and 8? I left room for curriculum development."

"Sex is never a test of love- Never!"

One point Gordon expressed emphatically was, "Sex is never a test of love- Never!" Gordon helps people distinguish between sex and love. There is immature and mature love. "Immature love is exhausting. Being in love means you're too tired to shower, study or take out the garbage. A hostile-dependant relationship occurs where there are fights and arguments. You can't stand to be without that person," says Gordon. He continued, "Mature love is energizing. You find time to take a shower, study and take out the garbage. You don't tell anyone about it, people can observe it just by the amount of energy you have. When you're together, you enjoy each other. You discover very quickly a good relationship, even more so a marriage, is a beginning of a journey together and apart."

Gordon believes in the women's movement. The movement will be the "liberation of all of us," he stated. He continued, "The best and most

Bushwhackers alive and well

by Larry Detwiler

How many of you hard-core YSU students (over 150 hours and under 325) are familiar with the notorious YSU north side Bushwhacker?

You know...he always wears a red baseball cap, baggy multicolored naugahyde pants, tight kooches, and canvas tennis shoes with his name inked in on the sides.

Bushwhacker hides behind short trees, fat parking meters, and pregnant women until an unsuspecting victim approaches, whereby he jumps out and demands nickels, pennies, or nylon stockings while pointing a cocked wooden stick at you, shaped like a 45.

First of all, he can barely talk or think and is quite harmless. But it is worth ones' nickels, nylons, and radishes to hear Bushwhacker ask you for your bucks whilst he trips over his shoelaces, or notices that his fly is undone, in which case he flees in semi-reckless abandon, towards the security of his classes and YSU's version of Chinese wit.

Bushwhacker, when followed from behind, also has the nasty habit of fouling up the air, but this is not like it sounds. Many times it is silent and Mother Nature's little air pressure equalizer refrains from downright, outright embarrassment.

On the other hand, his sister, Opal Bushwhacker, is nearly as bad, but has longer hair and a green baseball cap. She is a wee bit taller than he, but has a complexion similar to a compacted 48-hole golf course and a nose that would make Karl Malden weep with laughter. She aspires to be a model and already has been accepted in YSU's School of Modeling and Truck Driving.

The male Bushwhacker wants to be a K through 12 teacher and was readily accepted (as any dog will testify) because he had the innate ability of being able to breathe, the main qualification for the job.

Bushwhacker said that it is not hard to teach K or 12, but is having trouble minding his P's and Q's and cannot master 33.

Bushwhacker insists that if he does not graduate, he is prepared to enter the real world by opening up a jack shop, for changing tires, since there are so many area flats.

He plans to sponsor a "car raising" contest at YSU, and the winner of the "jack-off" will receive a chrome-plated jack, to be placed in any trunk of his choice.

YSU is responsive to both Bushwhackers, and spokesmen said they feel both of them will go far if they remain at YSU, since it is geared intentionally for this type of student. They also said the weather is nice in the summer, and "worsen in da wintatime."

Both Bushwhackers, however, feel that they will go all the way, due to the fact that they will graduate from YSU and become certified "yes man," much in demand from corporate firms and vegetable farms.

In a closing note they also insisted, while pointing two cocked 45 wooden sticks, that I gave them all my pennies and take my egg and beat it.

Added English Classes

The English department is adding a new class for fall quarter that did not appear in the recent bulletin. The class is English 520 and is available for students having difficulty with basic sentence structure, mechanics and editing.

The class is four credit hours but meets six hours per week (three hours in class, three hours in the Writing Center).

Students wishing to sign up for English 520 should obtain a permit from the English department, second floor, Arts & Sciences Office Building. There will be five sections of this class offered Fall Quarter, 1979.

Catalogue No.	Course Code	Credit	Days	Time
0895	520	4	MW	16:40-19:30

			TF	11:00-11:50
0899	520	4	MW	13:00-14:40

This is not a substitute nor a mandatory prerequisite for English 550. It is simply a writing workshop class that counts as an elective towards graduation.

One player outshines cast in 'Tartuffe' play

by Greg Garramone

It's not unusual in theatre for one player to out perform the others. It happens often, and for any number of reasons.

Occasionally, one member of the cast turns in an exceptional performance in contrast to the mediocrity of the rest of the cast. Or it may be that the assigned character the actor has assumed is livelier than the others. Finally, it's possible that, while the cast for the most part shine, one player outshines them all. This last was the case with YSU's Spotlight Theatre production of "Tartuffe", which opened Wednesday at Ford Auditorium in Bliss Hall.

There were a few exceptions in this fine presentation. Julius Delisio, portraying Danus, used the same gestures, the same bearing regardless of situation or tone. One felt he knew not what to do with his hands. His character should have been a bit more assertive, a bit more overbearing rather than the befuddled fool he seemed. The less said about the fellow who portrayed the police officer the better.

As Valere, Chuck Beilhart could have been a bit more consistent with his accent and a good deal more convincing in his indignation.

The music, too, was ridiculous. It did nothing for mood, nothing for setting, did nothing in fact, but intrude upon the audience, and clip some of the players' lines.

Now for the good news. The rest of the cast can be divided into three categories: very good, excellent, and Heidi Jo Kraeck.

The leads, Elmire, played by Janet Sieff and Tartuffe portrayed by Larry Kale were done very well. Kale, as the hypocritical leech, turns in a typically professional Kale performance. His gestures, his face, his every move hides slick cleverness beneath thick piety.

Sieff, as the wife of the aforementioned leech's patron, was fine with her scheming smile, and her cagey cajoling. In the scene in which she tries to trap Tartuffe, she's perfect.

As Marianne, Karen Roberts, though possibly a bit too meek, is touching as the daughter about to be given against her will to Tartuffe. Lawrence Latsko puts in an excellent performance as Orgon, the beleaguered sucker, and head of the family. He makes the transition from willful naivete to woeful indignation without flaw. As Cleante, Bob Phillips expresses his fussy indignation well, and dispenses advice as a statesman, as he must be. Christina Webb, in a difficult role as aged Madame Pernelle, is vintage Webb. She becomes the crotchety cane-wielding old lady, and devastates the audience with her caupleted one lines.

It is Hiedi Jo Kroecks, however, that makes Tartuffe the experience that it is. She makes her character, Dorine, a salty-tongued maid, into the common sensical arbitrator that helps keep sanity within the household. Her accent is delightful, her timing perfect, her characterization full of life. The play, rightfully so, belongs to her.

The set and lighting design, supervised by Tony Award-winning guest artist Fred Voelpel shouts quality and professionalism such as belong to a Broadway stage. It is a tribute to the cast, and the excellent direction of Bill Hulsopple, that it fit here.

Art exhibition displays impressive student talent

by Georgiana Carfano

Run, grab your hat, and get to the 43rd annual Student Art Exhibition of YSU which is being held at Butler Art Institution now through May 20.

It's a very good representation of art from YSU. A selection of paintings, prints, photographs, sculpture, ceramics, weavings, and miscellaneous media are presented in a rather crowded, but well hung exhibit.

The ceramics department is represented with some distinctive pieces including Raku, Stoneware and Earthenware. The pieces are glazed or pit fired. Maryann Cox has six attractive goblets glazed with a red rust. Robert Camp has a Raku piece with a crackle glaze covering a section of it. Eileen Scraggs has three sculpture ceramics which are untitled, however, very good.

The weavings are varied and show a great deal of time well spent. There are several items which are not only works of art but are also wearable, a coat by George Beard and a shawl by Jackie Garvin. June Bennehoff has two tapestry weavings which are beautiful and represent many hours of labor.

The two wood sculptures, by Barbara Buchman and the other by Charles Van Gilder are complemented with quite evident great care.

The photographs are as varied

Baseball Penguin winning streak ends at 13

by Ron Anderson

The YSU baseball team managed to extend its winning streak to thirteen games before being untracked Wednesday by the Akron Zips, 10-3, in the first game of a twin-bill at Akron.

The last four Penguin wins came in doubleheader sweeps over Pitt-Johnstown on Monday, and Clarion State on Tuesday.

In the opening game of Monday's doubleheader on the Pitt-Johnstown campus, Dave Baker led the Penguins to a 9-2 victory by limiting the opposition to two runs on just three hits.

Mike Young led the hitting attack with three RBI's on a double and a triple. Dave Zeigler also drove in three runs with a bases-loaded double.

The second game was another in a long line of pitcher's battles this season as the Penguins battled to an extra-inning win. The winning run was supplied by the bat of Dave Zeigler who homered in the top of the eighth inning. It was Zeigler's fourth home run of the season.

Tuesday's doubleheader with Clarion State was another dual win for the Penguins although the opposition took them into extra innings before succumbing.

In the first game Bob Hasely started and went the distance in leading the Penguins to a 7-3 victory. Bill Hardy had two hits and Mike Nittoli chipped-in with a homerun to lead the Penguins hitting attack.

Lee Rudibaugh started and went the first six innings for the Penguins. The win went to Bob Moliterno in relief.

The winning run scored in the bottom of the ninth as Bill Hardy scored from second on a single by Mike Young.

YSU's thirteen-game winning streak then ground to a halt Wednesday as they traveled to Akron and were handed a loss by the Zips in the first game. Joe Sekora took the loss for the Penguins.

The Penguins got back on the winning track in the nightcap by upending the Zips by the margin of 5-2.

Bill Sattler started and went the distance for the Penguins while limiting the Zips to two runs on just five hits while striking out seven. The win was the fourth of the season for Sattler, and his earned run average now stands at a dazzling 1.80.

The Penguins are now boasting a record of sixteen wins and just three losses in what has been one of their best seasons ever.

The team's outing will be tomorrow in a doubleheader against Behrend with the first game slated to begin at 1 p.m. at Pemberton Park.

Softball YSU to defend state title

by Bill Suier

The stage has been set, and it's now time for the YSU women's softball team to either put up or shut up.

Penguins are slated to begin the defense of their state title this morning with a game against Capital University in Dayton. YSU, much to the distaste of head coach Pauline Noe and her squad, was seeded fourth in the sixteen team tournament field.

Noe has been quoted as saying the "there is no way the number one seed (Miami of Ohio) should be ranked above us." "Miami has suffered three losses, one to us and two to a team we have beaten five times (Akron). I can't figure it out," said Noe.

The women tuned up for their tournament defense by sweeping a twin-bill from the Akron Zips by scores of 8-6 and 13-1. The sweep marked the fourth and fifth times this season on the Penguins have beaten the Zips, acknowledged to be the fifth best team in the state.

Jill Harmon hurled both victories for the Penguins, boosting her personal mark to 11-1.

In the first contest, Linda Pagnagna, Shirley Barnett, Andrea Zbydnieski, and Linda Sikora paced the women with two hits apiece. In the second contest, the seniors took over as Zbydniewski belted a three-run homer and Roni Prince went 4-for-4 with a double to pace the Penguins 22-hit barrage.

YSU also posted victories over

Baldwin-Wallace College on Monday and Mount Union College on Tuesday to close out their regular season with a mark of 12-2.

All that remains for the Penguins in their final year of slo-pitch softball competition is to bring home another state title. Next year, the women's team will participate in softball on a fast-pitch level because of the decreasing number of slo-pitch teams in the state.

Tennis

The YSU tennis team will host Wright State, today, at the Hubbard Racquet Club at 4:00 p.m.

Coach Steve Edwards' Penguins are enjoying a winning season as they stand currently at 8-2, including the Mid-Continent Conference Championship.

That second loss came at the hands of Edinboro State last Tuesday as the Penguins fell 6-3, at Edinboro.

All the Penguin netters are having seasons. Junior Bill Dunn stands at 7-4, senior Butch Thomas has a 9-2 mark, senior Brian Hunter is 8-3, junior Rob Adsit has a 9-2 record, junior Kurt Kamperman stands at 9-2, and junior Scott Miller has a 7-4 mark.

The doubles tandem of Dunn and Adsit are 8-0 and the team of Thomas and Kamperman are currently 8-0.

Edwards, in his first year as head coach, was disappointed with the Edinboro loss and explained, "The Edinboro loss was disappointing because I felt we were the better team. After winning the Mid-Continent Conference Championship and not receiving a bid to the Division II nationals, that kind to took the wind out of our sails."

The Penguins will conclude their 1979 season at Kent State on May 15.

in subject matter as can be desired. Dennis Ryan's series, "Within a Smaller Circle" and "Brodren Heros" are very strong and can easily be the best in the show. Most of the others are too crowded to do them any justice. Many of the paintings are large again, as if to say, big is better! No way, as some of the smaller ones are outstanding. For example, Rosemary Bremman's acrylics are quite professionally done, and the only pure watercolor is just beautiful, a very small still life with fantastic washes. Carl Dominic's surrealistic paintings will haunt you for a while.

And now! the most interesting, amusing and entertaining corner has to be Daniel Marlos' "Lucky Lily". The beautifully begowned sculpture sits in a wicker chair. There also is a tape recording to go with her. Marlos has a portfolio that has to be the wittiest, most revealing one you will read for some time to come.

The faculty show is in the other gallery; some of the works were unsigned and it gets tiresome running over to the wall to look at the list. There are many good works displayed.

The judge for the show was Linda Cathcart, curator of the Albright Knox Gallery in Buffalo, N.Y. She is a Fulbright Fellow and recipient of the National Endowment for the Arts and Humanities Award. Professionally she has been with the Whitney Museum of American Art, the Brooklyn Museum, Los Angeles County Museum and has been a correspondent for Studio International Magazine.

I fail to understand how a verifiably well-liked program can be "rated" near the bottom of the heap. Someone's statistics have been padded with a lot of felgerkarb, and they're not mine. Stephanie K. Kana, 1977 alumnus Graphics Technology

Her role is very much as though she were a parent to the students. It is perhaps the YSU students whom she helps who now need her most.

building was sealed in an attempt to catch the assailant, but he couldn't be found.

The car, an older model Cadillac, was totally destroyed when a fire, originating in the back seat, spread throughout the car, blowing out its windows. "We had a man on the scene, and he fought the fire with an extinguisher until the fire department arrived," said Mills. "We cleared the area because we were concerned about the gas tank exploding. The fire department came with a pumper, and put out the fire."

Some structural damage occurred in the form of a scalded t-beam, but was not serious. The fire department is investigating.

interesting girls are the ones who are liberated." By liberated, Gordon means that women have self-esteem and freedom of decision. They feel secure with themselves. He said college women are influenced by the women's movement. Women in the movement don't fall for lines, if women are inferior, they make themselves available for exploitation and they are also vulnerable.

College people tend to marry because they want to. They are mature enough to make a big decision such as marriage "and most important of all, they love each other and not money or sex," says Gordon. He continued, "Women are not dropping out of college to support their husbands in college anymore." They are getting degrees first. Gordon also said that college marriages are going to be more stable because the people marry for the right reasons.

In conclusion, Gordon stated the following values: "It is wrong to exploit another; It is wrong to spread VD; It is wrong for a teenager to become pregnant; It is wrong to bring a child into this world without support, knowledge, understanding and best of all, two parents."
