Jennings files defamation suit; Fernandez files grievance

■ Lawyers for the dean of the College of Education have asked Palmer-Fernandez to "cease and desist."

ANGELA GIANOGGIO
 Managing Editor

A double-edged sword ripped through campus last week when the dean of the Beeghly College of Education filed a lawsuit against the director of the Dale Ethics Center almost 11 months after he accused her of committing plagiarism.

Dr. Gabriel Palmer-Fernandez, associate professor of philosophy and religious studies and director of the Dale Ethics Center, also filed a grievance against Dr. Clara Jennings, dean of the Beeghly College of Education, that same week.

The lawsuit filed by Jennings is based on one count of defamation, one count of intentional infliction of emotional distress and one count of tortious and/or intentional interference with employment contract and/or employment opportunities.

The lawsuit reads, "Defendant Gabriel Palmer-Fernandez maliciously, egregiously and with reckless disregard for Plaintiff's rights and with intent to injure Plaintiff, published false, defamatory and scurrilous allegations that Plaintiff 'plagiarized' a speech in 1995, and that Plaintiff was guilty of other wrongdoing."

However, the "other wrongdoing" is not specified.

Palmer-Fernandez took his initial accusations to Dr. James Scanlon, provost, in August. Six months later, when no action was taken against Jennings by the university, Palmer-Fernandez "went public" with his accusations.

He accused Jennings of plagiarizing almost one-third of a speech she had given to the Trumbull County Children's Services Board in 1995.

His official grievance is filed under Article 15, academic freedom, of the faculty contract, which states, "The faculty member shall have the freedom to pursue knowledge and report the truth as he/she sees it."

Election campaign ends with close call

■ Harvey and Carano won by 16 votes

CHAD E. HOLDEN, THE JAMBAR

SABRINA SCHROEDER
 Assistant News Editor

As has become tradition in Student Government elections in the past few years, this year's race ended in a close call.

The team of Robert Harvey and Marla Carano received 348 of the 1,185 votes cast at the polls Tuesday and Wednesday. They edged out Kipp Boone and Angela Chasebi, who received 332 votes and Joelle Sahyoun and Mike Ray, who had 312. The team of David Weiss and Ryan Cincic received 87 votes, with Chris Pribiski and Ben Keck drew 45 votes. The write-in team of Matthew Furrie and David Armite received 48 votes.

Last year's election led to this year's term of David Myhal and Carrie Wilson, who edged out the team of Jason Katz and Brett Miller by 11 votes. The 1997 election put Hana Kilbarda and Dan Moss in position after receiving 16 votes more than Mike Benedek and Bob Begley.

"I went through the roof when I found out that we won. We have been working at our campaign for two months and we were unbelievably excited and relieved that our hard work ended in a positive way," Harvey said.

Carano said, "I am glad to be given the opportunity to demonstrate my experience in a way that I know will benefit all students. I am looking forward to working with all students and student organizations."

Harvey and Carano's platform included enhancing the relationships between YSU students and the city of Youngstown and being the students' voice in the Campus Gateways Project. They also said they would use their past experience in Student Government to serve the students and student organizations to the best of their abilities.

Harvey said he and Carano are looking forward to their year in office and "mending the broken parts of Student Government."

"We want to establish lines of communication with the people on campus who have concerns and re-establish Student Government in helping students with problems rather than being adversaries," he said.

"We plan to begin immediately on establishing the cabinet and filling the vacant positions in Student Government, so things can get started before the summer break begins, and we are not rushing to do

Classified Staff Banquet honors retired staff

■ The banquet was established in 1981.

YSU showed appreciation to many of the retired and long-term employees who have served the YSU community at the Annual Classified Staff Awards Banquet Friday in Kilcawley Center's Chestnut Room.

The awards dinner was established in 1981 to honor outstanding retirees and staff members who have provided 10, 20 and 30 years of service to YSU.

Carolyn Kordupel, human resources, said the event is a special means of honor and thanks.

"The 10-, 20- and 30-year awards are given to our staff for that number of years service and when [employees] reach that milestone, they are recognized," she said. "It is our way of thanking them for their service and dedication."

Honored as outstanding retirees were Ellen L. Devine, Barbara L. Gibbs, Rita K. Roncone and Celesta W. Dennison. Marlene Dailey was honored for 30 years of service.

Honorees for 20 years of service were Virginia F. Chiarello, Janet L. Mitchell, Mary Jo Repasky, Sharyn E. Fees, Marianne C. Anderson, Gwendolyn M. Latessa, Gary J. Dipasquale, Clark C. King, Rosemary Dubos, Judith E. Ferret, Carl B. Leet, III, Mary Mislav Hake, Cleo Nastropoulos, Mary Ann Johnson, Ann M. Reed, Richard M. Mularchik and Bonnie K. Riley. Ten-year service honorees went to Joanne C. Eiselstein, Edwin L. Taylor and Larry F. Tooker. Certificates were given to 10-year honorees. Twenty and 30-year honorees, as well as the retired staff, received plaques with their names and number of years of service encribed on the front.

Pamper yourself with a free massage

■ Pamper Yourself Day will take place in the Women's Center on the second floor of Kilcawley Center.

SABRINA SCHROEDER
Assistant News Editor

The event has been so well received this quarter's day requires advance sign-up times for the free massage.

Women's Center interim director Cynthia Beckes is closing out her year of work with a third Pamper Yourself Day to be held from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. June 2 in the Women's Center.

Beckes' term as director of the center will come to a close at the end of the quarter. She will be moving on to Kent State to do an assistantship in the school's financial aid office.

The event includes a free facial by a Mary Kay cosmetics representative, as well as a free 15-minute massage.

Three massage therapists will be on hand to relieve the stress many students have at this time of the quarter.

Messages will not be given without an appointment. The facial does not require a sign-up time.

"Last quarter, there was a young man who came in on a $10 bet from some of his friends and ended up staying and taking the questions people asked him about it."

"He was the only man here in a room full of women," Beckes said. Beckes pointed out there is no need for a bet to come pamper yourself for the afternoon.

Anyone interested in setting up an appointment for the massage should stop in or call the Women's Center at 742-2311.

The Women's Center is located on the second floor of Kilcawley Center by the bookstore.

"This event has been so successful in the past. We had 50 students participate in the first event and 100 during the second."

New YSU trustee brings long list of credentials

■ Knecht said he would like to expand the university Scholars Program.

CINDY MILLER
Assistant News Editor

Involvement and devotion (two vital qualifications for a university trustee. Bill Knecht III, YSU's newest member of the Board of Trustees, offers the YSU community these qualifications and then some.

Knecht is a YSU alumnus, a local native, an area businessman and an active community member who continued to work with YSU long after his graduation. Knecht served on the Athletic Council, the search committee for head football coach and was a key participant in the YSU capital campaign, serving as the co-chair of the YSU Stadium Division.

President Dr. Leslie Cochran said, "Bill's generosity and support of our recent capital campaign was critical to its success."

Knecht said he would like YSU to become "the university of choice for our region."

Accomplishing this means taking the university to the next level, a level that has not yet been defined, he said.

The trustees will have to decide what is in the best interest of the university in the years to come.

"I'm concerned about cyber education and distance learning and how we're going to provide these to the students."

Bill Knecht III
YSU's newest member of the Board of Trustees

As the university grows and changes, Knecht said we should expand the university scholars program because it is a great asset to our university.

"The tremendous competition among regional universities cannot be ignored," he said. "We must work hard to meet the needs of both traditional and non-traditional students."

"The role of YSU is to provide high quality education. The semester transition that will be instituted next year will be a great boost to the revamping of the curriculum and the students will benefit greatly from that," he said.

Extensive community involvement provides Knecht with an array of experience that can benefit YSU. He is a board member of the Mahoning Valley Historical Society and the president of the Boardman Civics Association.

He has been honored and recognized by several organizations. In 1992, he was named the American Cancer Society's Man of the Year. He was a regional finalist for Inc. Magazine's "Entrepreneur of the Year."

In 1995, he received the Boardman Civics Association's community service award. Thiel College awarded him a distinguished service award and the Youngstown Hearing and Speech center, for which he serves as an ambassador, honored him with the 1996 Great Communicator Award.

Knecht is the chairman and chief executive of Wendell August Forge, the nation's oldest and largest operating hand forge company. He said his business background will help him to be an effective trustee.

He said previous boards and a successful capital campaign have set the basic groundwork. The job of the trustees is to set policy and the administration will carry out those policies.

Panel explains Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act

■ FERPA was enacted in 1974 to protect the privacy rights of students.

ANGELA GIANOGLIO
 Managing Editor

Imagine a university where anyone can find out a student's grades, social security number or PIN numbers without the student's consent. Well, that is what it would be like without the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act, which went into effect in 1974.

A forum took place Friday in Tod Hall that discussed several aspects of FERPA and how it affects the way staff and faculty deal with students' educational records.

A four-person panel, including Sandra Denman, YSU General Counsel; Laurie L. Miraglia, YSU legal assistant; Dr. William Countryman, university registrar and Susan Walker, assistant attorney general, education section, explained the FERPA act to members of the YSU faculty and staff.

According to a handout given at the discussion, the purpose of FERPA is to "afford certain rights to students regarding their education records."

Miraglia said, "An education record is any record held by the university about a student, and that is very broad."

Education records include, but are not limited to grades, entrance exam scores, ACT and SAT scores, reinstatement forms, grade-change forms and evaluations. However, although grades are confidential, student employment, honors and awards do not fall under FERPA laws.

Students' rights regarding these records include: prohibiting disclosure of education record material to a third party without written consent from the student, permitting a student access to his/her education records and allowing a student to request an amendment to their education record and the right to a hearing if the request is denied.

Students also have the option of putting a "hold" on any directory information, which the university is legally allowed to give out, Countryman said. If a hold is in place, no information indicating the person was ever a student will be divulged, he said.

However, students can give written permission, complete with a full signature, to another person to collect education record information.

The most common problem Countryman said he encounters is parents who request their son or daughter's grades without the student's written consent. In order to obtain the grades, the parents must prove the student's dependence by providing a current 1040 tax form with the student listed as a dependent.

In the event of an emergency, Denman said the university would locate the student and send a messenger to avoid divulging personal information to the caller.

YSU should initiate standard grading scale

Grades are very important to students. Some students do just what they need to to pass, others are obsessed with maintaining an excellent GPA. But either way, students cannot escape from grades.

Grading at YSU can sometimes cause confusion for students because grading scales can vary from department to department or even from class to class.

For example, most classes in the English department are on the most widely-used grading scale — a 90 is an A and an 80 is a B. In the Art department, a 92 is an A and an 82 is a B. There are also some classes where an 89 is an A. This makes students have to work harder for the same grade in different classes.

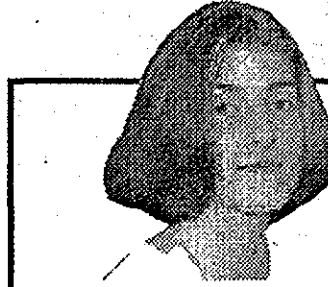

Granted that may be the case anyway because of the nature of the classes, but many students still get confused even though a grading scale is outlined in every course syllabus. Many students can get discouraged when they work really hard to get a 90, but still end up with a B. Two percentage points may not seem like much, but in a difficult class, it can be almost equivalent to 10 percentage points.

The university could at least make an attempt to ease the confusion by instituting a university-wide grading scale and making students' lives a little easier.

This should not be a difficult task. All academic deans could meet together to decide what the best grading scale would be. This could also eliminate the need for the grading scale to be outlined on every course syllabus. It could be presented to students once as incoming freshman. This would save time and effort by individual teachers and departments.

College is not easy, and YSU should do everything it can to make students' lives a little easier. A university-wide grading scale would help do this.

A STAFF VIEW

What can society do to prevent atrocities?

I believe all crimes are horrible things to happen. But in light of recent news events, it is always worse for me to think of a child who has been murdered or been sexually assaulted or both.

Turning on the news these days requires the viewer to have the toughest of stomachs and the softest of hearts for the poor families who have to cope with the loss of a loved one, especially a child, due to another person's ignorance. The latest story is a man named Foster who took it upon himself to reach the epitome of stupidity when he kidnapped a 10-year-old little girl, sexually assaulted her and then killed her for no other reason than the fact that he must have been nuts.

What possesses a person, young or old, to want to kill? Is it something in their genes or a bad childhood. But more to the point where does the blame for these horrible acts fall?

To answer these questions would mean going into the minds of the killers, victims, and family members. But more often than not in our society we tend to place the blame on the police (because sometimes these killers are repeat offenders and they are let out of jail or given probation).

I am not a professional law student, but I know enough about the law because my boyfriend is in law enforcement to know they do their part to arrest the bad guys and it's up to courts and their laws as to who gets punished and who gets to walk with a slap on the wrist.

The world will always be a hectic place to live. But it should not have to be a dangerous one in which to live.

So what should we do as a society to protect our children from the dangers that lurk, sometimes right in our own backyards? I don't think there is just one answer to this question. To begin with, we can attempt to educate and understand the situation. So few of us understand all the laws and regulations that are out there and I know I definitely can't begin to comprehend the mind of a criminal but I can definitely know how to prepare myself if a situation arises. And so should the children.

The world will always be a hectic place to live. But it should not have to be a dangerous one in which to live. So until someone can devise a way to abolish crime, we all need to work together to ensure that protection for the children and others out there is readily available.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Greek System does include NPHC

This letter is in response to the front-page article on May 18 about race relations at YSU. Tamica Green, who was speaking on behalf of her sorority as well as for the other members of National Panhellenic Council, has several misunderstandings about the relations between Interfraternity Council, Panhellenic Council and NPHC.

First, the three aforementioned organizations are three separate entities nationally. Therefore, we have no control over how they or other organizations formed or how they are run. Also, it's absolutely absurd to think, as Tamica said, "When they think about the Greeks, they don't think about us."

Who is doing the thinking?

Green's sorority expressed interest in participating in Greek Week last fall. We even put her Zeta Phi Beta letters on our T-shirts.

However, not one person from her sorority showed up to participate. It was like a slap in the face to the rest of us who were there and planned everything.

How can we be expected to be so inclusive of these groups when they repeatedly have either not acknowledged our invitations or simply have not shown up? Sure, more can be accomplished if the groups were to work together, but this working together is a two-way street.

In addition, never once have IFC or Panhel been invited to any NPHC functions. If we were, I'm sure I can speak for all involved when I say that not only would we participate, but it would be a success. Maybe if Green was not so ignorant in everything she is complaining about, she would see that everything that could have been done on the part of IFC and Panhel was done, and the fault lies within her own council. I suggest she stop blaming other parties for failures that go on in her own organization(s).

Rock history

I congratulate The Jambar for taking a stand in opposition of using the YSU rock for commercial advertisement.

With regard to the statement in the May 4 article concerning the rock "is rumored to have risen from the first mud lot," the rock is a Precambrian gneiss that is more than 570 million years old. It was transported to YSU by glacial ice during the Pleistocene epoch, which ended approximately 10,000 years ago. Professor Ann Harris, who was present during the emplacement, sorry make that excavation, saw the original rock and would be glad to answer any questions about the geology of this important YSU landmark.

THROUGH EBONY EYES

QUANTIA D. WATSON
Contributing Writer

Do our teachers really care?

I've often wondered if our teachers care about us as students outside of the classroom. The answer I seem to keep getting is that some do, some don't and some choose particular students with whom they will share their affections.

I guess the bottom line in college is that our teachers teach, the students show up to class and learn, and anything else is optional.

Gone are the days of our teachers tattling to our parents if we miss a homework assignment. And here, there is no attendance office to call and check if you had a valid reason for missing class or being tardy.

Some of the teachers do go an extra mile, though, but what makes the difference between them and the ones that don't?

Since the beginning of this quarter, my son has been in the hospital twice, to an emergency room once and to his doctor's office countless times.

My teachers have dealt with my absences in different ways.

One of my teachers left me a message telling me he hoped my child felt better, advised me how I could get my make up assignments and reminded me that every class I missed over two would result in my grade being lowered by half a letter.

Another of my professors called me personally, gave me all of my assignments, assured me that under the circumstances my attendance would not affect my grade, wished my son well and said he looked forward to my returning to class.

The third professor has not said two words to me about it, but he did call a colleague of mine to make sure her golden retriever was feeling better.

I haven't run into many professors like the second one who genuinely seemed to care.

More often than not, the professors are like the first one who express sympathy, but want you to know that illness of a family member will not make you exempt from any previously stated rules.

I can respect that, though. What is unacceptable are the professors like number three on this campus, although I will admit that I have not had many of them.

I spoke to another student on campus, who like me, has a handicapped child.

She talked about a professor who didn't want to give her a grade of incomplete. The reason she needed it was because her daughter had been having a series of seizures that kept her home from school.

How could that professor sleep at night? Did he or she think this student should leave her child in daycare like that?

My son attends a special needs preschool, but they aren't equipped to handle that for longer than it takes for me to get to school to pick him up. They still have other students in the class.

My point is, things happen. Anybody who calls himself or herself a teacher should learn about compassion. Actually, if they have to learn it, they should have chosen a different profession.

Teaching isn't all about handing out a grade. Sometimes, it is simply about caring.

Support National Youth Sports Program

DR. MARCIA MATANIN
HPES Department

It's almost that time of year again. You know what I'm talking about. When 300 children converge on YSU for the National Youth Sports Program. Before they arrive, I'd like you to get to know them a little. Let me introduce you to some children I've met as director of the NYSP. The names of the children have been changed but their stories are real.

April came to the NYSP because her cousin did. About two weeks into the program, the educational specialist discovered April loved to write. During the last week of NYSP, as was customary, participants wrote thank you notes to the university president, elected officials and others who make the program possible. April's letter was so good, expressing her deep appreciation for being "allowed" to come to YSU for the summer, it was selected to be sent to Dr. Leslie Cochran to represent all NYSP participants.

There is one other child I would like you to meet. His name is William. Three years ago, when he first came to NYSP, he was living with a relative because his mom was addicted to drugs and his father was in jail. Two years ago, when he attended the program, his father had been released from jail, and he and his brothers were back together with the family. Last year, William did not return to NYSP. When I made inquiries, I found William and his brothers had been taken into protective custody by Children's Services. I don't know what happened to William after that.

It's easy to look around campus in the summer and just see a bunch of kids running around in red NYSP T-shirts. So, I wanted you to get to know a little bit more about some of the children inside those bright colored shirts. They all come from Youngstown. The majority of them reside in low-income households where parents or single moms are struggling to make ends meet. Many live within walking distance of YSU but have never visited the campus.

The mission of the NYSP is to provide quality sport and education enrichment activities for participants. The staff also includes a full-time nurse, a liaison officer who handles all discipline, an activities director who oversees day to day operations and a project administrator.

The NYSP works closely with the Youngstown Area Community Action Council to ensure participant's needs are met. The YACAC has been responsible for providing thousands of dollars to enhance the program through field trips, additional staff, sports equipment giveaways for children and a culminating experience at Geauga Lake one year.

The university is committed to strengthening its ties with the Youngstown community. An illustration of this commitment is the President's Diversity Task Force, which includes representatives from a number of prominent community organizations as well as members of the university community.

The NYSP is often cited by the university as an excellent example of diversity at work and it is our desire to continue to make the program better each year. These children represent the future of this community and this university. We ask for your help, understanding and cooperation in making their experiences at YSU as enjoyable as possible.

As Activity Director, I am responsible for any complaints or concerns related to the NYSP and can be reached at ext. 3652 or 4002 during operational hours. I will continue to provide direction to this program as we enter our fifth year. Program dates are June 21 through July 29.

The NYSP is often cited by the university as an excellent example of diversity at work and it is our desire to continue to make the program better each year. These children represent the future of this community and this university.

Allegations against Greek System aren't true

This letter is in response to the article written in the May 18 issue of The Jambar, regarding King's speech a few weeks ago. Comments were made about the Greek System not including African Americans in its activities on this campus. This is not true.

With each event the Greek System has sponsored, we have consistently attempted to include the NPHC groups by contacting each president and waiting for a response. Time and again we have not been contacted.

Greek Campus Life just held its annual Greek Week last fall, and the members of NPHC were asked to participate. Our only response came from Zeta Phi Beta — their letters were added to our shirt and information was given to them regarding the week's activities.

They did not participate at all. We were in contact with Tamica Green, and she did not pass on the information to others.

Consistently, members of the Greek System have reached out to NPHC to participate. We can only do so much. We must be met halfway.

We also hold Greek Sing each spring and have encouraged the NPHC groups to participate the past few years.

Again, our offer was turned down. We can only assume the NPHC groups feel they are not wanted at these events, and that is the reason they do not participate with us. They are wrong.

In regard to the Greek Rush booklet that was passed out this fall, it was compiled and paid for by the Panhellenic Council and Interfraternity Council funds. NPHC groups were invited to assist us with this publication and to submit information for it. No information was received.

Consistently, members of the Greek System have reached out to NPHC to participate. We can only do so much. We must be met halfway.

We do not feel it is our responsibility to beg these member groups to participate in Greek activities.

We will continue to invite NPHC groups to our events in the future, just as we have in the past. We now challenge those groups to accept those invitations and meet us halfway in our attempts to better relations between the Panhellenic Council, Interfraternity Council and National Pan Hellenic Conference.

Two losses send YSU home from Mid-Cons

■ No. 2 seed, Valparaiso gave the Penguins their second loss in the tournament after YSU defeats Valpo 14-12 in the opening round.

JAMIE LYNN REESH

TULSA, Okla. — The men's baseball team's hopes of a Mid-Continent title were stopped short with losses from Chicago State and Valparaiso, after a mighty showing against Valpo in the opening round of the tournament.

No. 2 seed, Valparaiso, handed YSU a 10-5 loss, to give YSU its second loss in the double-elimination tournament.

Valpo started things off with six early runs. The Penguins made a late surge, but two Crusader runs in the ninth sealed the Penguins' fate.

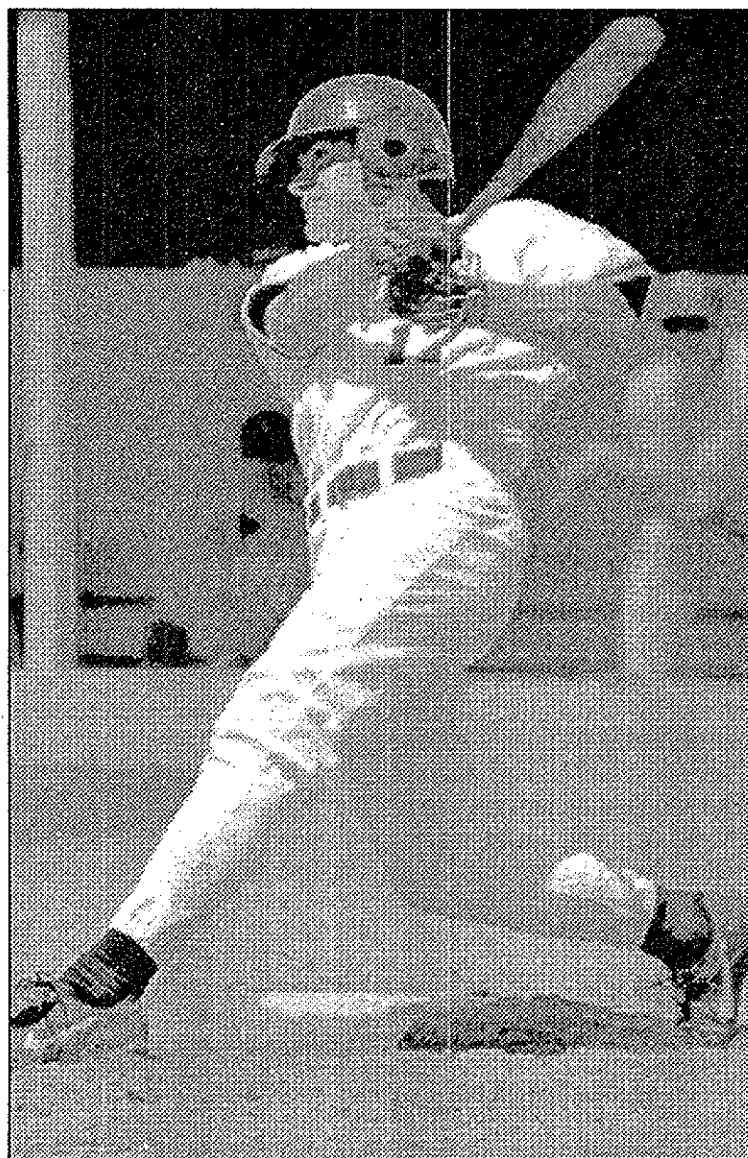

Senior Ray Farcas ended his YSU career with a great offensive performance, blasting his 18th home run of the season, while batting 4-for-4. He scored two runs and drove in one RBI.

Junior Andy Clough collected two hits to go with his run and RBI, while juniors Travis Easterling and Mark Thomas each had a hit and an RBI. Thomas and Clough both nailed triples.

Senior Derek Nelson started for his last time on the mound as a Penguin, pitching 3.2 innings. He allowed seven hits, facing 23 batters and striking out two. Sophomore Rusty Bendle sat down seven batters in his 4.2 innings.

Farcas again led YSU's offense in the 9-6 loss to No. 4 seed Chicago State. He clobbered a home run to go with a triple, three RBIs and two runs.

Senior Andy Brag belted a home run of his own, scoring a run and driving one in, as Thomas went 1-for-3 with two runs and Clough hit 1-for-4 with a run and two RBIs.

HOME RUN HITTER: Senior Ray Farcas connects on a hit at an earlier Penguin home game. Farcas hit two home runs over the weekend at the Mid-Continent Conference Tournament. YSU won its opening game with Valparaiso, but fell to Chicago State and Valpo later in the tournament to end the season. They finish with a record of 20-36.

Sophomore Steve Mefferd had a double to go with his two hits.

Junior Brian McFarland pitched five innings in the effort, with freshman Matt Brumit tossing the last three innings.

In the opening game, YSU toppled Valparaiso with 11 runs in the eighth inning, to give the Penguins the 14-12 win.

Clough smashed a home run, to drive in two runs and score one. Thomas batted 2-for-4 with two runs and two RBIs. Farcas went 3-for-5 with three runs and two RBIs and Mefferd recorded two hits.

Sophomore Todd Santore batted 2-for-4 with two runs and an RBI, and Bragg, sophomore Jason Lowman, freshman Eric Jones and Easterling each had a hit.

Freshman Corey Ohalek started the game on the mound for YSU, pitching 4.2 innings. He gave up 10 hits and struck out three. Freshman Kyle Sobecki was credited with the win for his three innings. Clough came in for the close.

The men end the season with a record of 20-36.

ATLANTA — Three YSU outdoor track and field athletes competed in the Reebok Invitational

Friday and Saturday.

Senior Mark Brady placed third in the 5,000-meter run with a time of 15:29, while senior Paul Carter finished 13th in the 800-meter run with a time of 1:51.12. Junior Kofi Owusu-Ansah crossed the finish line in the 200-meter event with a mark of 21.35.

Basketball recruit

Former Massachusetts guard Rafeal Cruz announced today he is transferring to YSU, according to YSU Head Coach John Robic.

In accordance with NCAA transfer requirements, Cruz will sit out a season and will have two years of eligibility beginning in 2000.

Cruz, a 6-foot-2-inch, 185 pound guard, played at UMass for head coach James "Bruiser" Flint. In two years as a back-up, Cruz appeared in 37 games and averaged 1.9 points, 0.8 assists and 0.7 rebounds per game.

"I like the way everybody at YSU treated me when I visited," said Cruz. "Jim Tressel and the players made me feel comfortable. I also have a great relationship with Coach Robic. He recruited me to go to UMass. I just felt YSU was a good situation, both for basketball and academics."

Students conquer the rapids of New River

■ The trip was part of a class covering the mechanics of a river system.

ANDREW DEAK
Contributing Writer

What do 35 YSU students, the New River and Whitewater rafting all have in common? They are all part of the Geologic and Human History of the New River Gorge, a class directed by Dr. Ray Beiersdorfer.

For the past three springs, Beiersdorfer has taken a group of students down to West Virginia's New River for a first-hand look at the growth and development of a river. The class is not a class on whitewater rafting. Instead it covers the development and mechanics of a river and river system.

The students started the 300-mile car ride down to the New River on May 7. Most of the students got to the campsite around 8 p.m. and promptly began setting up camp due to rain.

The New River, which the students were to raft, is the second oldest river in the world. Its 53-mile stretch begins in North Carolina and ends in West Virginia, where the New River and the Gauley River combine to form the Kanawah River.

The New River was virtually inaccessible prior to the railroads in 1873. The railroad stretched both sides of the riverbank, making the shipment of coal to the rest of the world much easier. With railroads, towns popped up and flourished, but were soon abandoned when the mines left. Many of the students were able to see and explore the remains of towns and mines.

The class met at Mountain River Tours headquarters the following morning around 9 a.m.

day, "Surprise." The rapid "Surprise" was one of the first rapids to fling students and guides out of the boat. Five students and one guide ended up in the river.

The afternoon rafting session

“All of a sudden, I was tossed out of the boat when we hit a rock. I went under the raft. When I surfaced I was 10 yards down current of the raft.”

Lucas Henn
Student

The students watched a film describing the safety techniques surrounding whitewater rafting. They were then fitted for wetsuits, given lifejackets, safety helmets and paddles.

The students piled into a bus and drove down to the shore of the river.

The YSU class had five rafts with seven to eight people in each raft. Each raft also had a guide who told the students about the river, the rapids and historical information about the national river and gorge.

The five-hour, 16-mile journey began with a few small rapids. The highlights of the morning raft were jumping off a 15-foot boulder, swimming through a rapid and experiencing one of the hardest rapids of the led to some of the toughest rapids on the river. When determining the difficulty of a rapid, the North American Whitewater Rafting Association has a set of guidelines by which each rapid is judged, and then the rapid is given a number one through seven. The number a rapid receives depends on the hazards the rapid presents, the ease of navigation and the size of the rapid.

A rapid given a No. 1 is the easiest of all the rapids, while a rapid earning a No. 7 has never been successfully navigated by a rafter. The highest level rapid that the students encountered on this trip was a No. 5.

As in the morning session, the rapids in the lower part of the river also claimed some swimmers. Almost every rapid that afternoon sent at least one YSU student overboard.

One student who was flung overboard was Lucas Henn, who said, "All of a sudden, I was tossed out of the boat when we hit a rock. The water was very wet and the rock was very hard. I went under the raft. When I surfaced I was 10 yards down current of the raft."

The rafting portion of the trip was finished around 6:30 p.m. All the students were bused back to Mountain River Tours headquarters where they were able to shower and then watch a video of the trip.

The next morning the students watched a slide show on the river.

Beiersdorfer also set up time for a hike down into the valley to an old coal-mining town, where the students explored the factories, rails and houses that once flourished in mining times.

The students had one last stop at the Summersville Dam before returning to YSU.

The students got a tour of the dam, which was built in 1964.

The class has been offered for the past three spring quarters, and the New River is open for rafting anytime between mid-March and mid-October.

If any student has questions regarding the class, future trips or the New River, please contact Beiersdorfer at 742-1753.

YSU Web site update slated for summer quarter

The YSU Web site will not be updated until summer quarter, said Linda Lewis, director of public relations and marketing.

Lewis said she has several students interested in being Web master, and she plans on hiring more than one.

"We have a lot of talented students out there who know how to work with [Web pages]," she said. "We want to get some students to do work/study."

Lewis said she wants to have students employed as soon as possible.

Dana Chorale will spread harmony throughout Europe

■ The Chorale will tour Europe in June and July.

NANCY DUZZNY
LISA HUGHES
Contributing Writers

The angelic harmonies of The Dana Chorale filled the sanctuary of the First United Methodist Church May 3 in downtown Youngstown. The concert was given as a benefit to help the choir raise money for an upcoming tour of Europe.

Under the direction of Dr. Wade Raridon, the group performed a number of religious and secular pieces, such as selections from "Missa and Secunda," by Hans Leo Hassler, and "The Creation," by Franz Josef Haydn. According to Raridon, the Hassler piece was selected specifically for the group's performance in Milan, Italy.

Craig Raymaley, a member of The Dana Chorale, said, "Dr. Raridon has been the backbone of the vocal department."

Raridon has been instrumental in organizing a number of events, especially the Madrigal Dinners and Carols and Cocoa during the holiday season.

The Dana Chorale will be leaving June 23, accompanied by Dr. and Mrs. Raridon. They will be performing in churches and concert halls throughout Europe, as well as at a cathedral in Milan. They will also perform at San Lorenzo in Florence, Italy, at the 6 p.m. Mass, followed by a formal concert and Sunday at High Mass at Il Duomo, which is the largest church in Florence.

There will be a performance at Maria Plain in Salzburg, Germany. The choir will meet with an Italian choir for dinner in Saronno, Italy, where they will perform at the Church San Francesco. There will also be a formal concert near Venice, in Mestre.

In Modling, Austria, the Dana Chorale will perform a benefit concert, with an Austrian Choir, for the Kosovo refugees. They will also perform Anton Bruckner's Motet's at St. Florian, where Bruckner worked and performed.

The choir has prepared all year for its tour of Europe, and is still learning more pieces, according to Ramaley.

After returning from its tour on July 5, the Chorale will perform a Gala Homecoming Concert. They will then report on their tour.

Raridon will be retiring shortly after, on July 17. Raymaley said, "It will take quite a few people to fill his shoes."

Palmer-Fernandez requested a letter from Jennings, "stating that I have not made false statements about her and so is not, and will not pursue [ing] legal action against me."

Palmer-Fernandez received a letter from Jennings' lawyer telling him to "cease and desist your public attacks on Dean Jennings and her character."

Palmer-Fernandez said he has made no false statement, which, he said, gives her lawyers no foundation for their order.

"They are infringing on my right of academic freedom," he said.

Students set their sights on scholarships

■ The winner is a journalism ICP major.

EMILY D. CRONK
News Editor

YSU students are working hard for the finer things in life and it's paying off. One YSU student has been recognized for her academic excellence.

The Zell Hart Deming Scholarship worth $3,000 was awarded to Cindy Miller, junior, journalism ICP, for her scholastic performance and other achievements here at YSU. This is the first year the award has been offered.

"I was really nervous when I first applied for the scholarship because I knew the competition was going to be steep," said Miller. "I knew this scholarship would be an exciting thing to win because it would help out financially."

The Deming Scholarship is a specialized scholarship for those interested in pursuing a career in journalism. It is awarded to one candidate after an application process and interview at the Tribune Chronicle. Although the funding will be available for courses here at YSU, it is still unknown where the money will be dispensed.

"I've already begun to make arrangements for the scholarship through Financial Aid, but I am looking forward to being able to take some courses here this summer. It really is a great thing to be recognized for doing so much hard work."

The scholarship was open to both YSU and Kent State students interested in the field of journalism.

There were six applications total and the competition was narrowed down to three finalists: two students from YSU and one from Kent.

"All the applicants have worked hard and it's a shame only one person can win," said Linda Lewis, director of public relations and marketing. "We spent about half an hour with each finalist and Cindy was chosen unanimously."

The decision was based not only on the interview, but also a lengthy application process, which included essays and several other requirements like GPA, financial need, maintaining at least a sophomore status and being a student in Mahoning or Trumbull Counties.

"Cindy was chosen because she simply had a good handle on the field of journalism and what it means in today's society," said Lewis. "We are very proud to give the scholarship to someone who truly deserves it."
