Committee plans future of university

■ The committee is divided into stages that will conclude 2008.

EILEEN CATANZARO
Assistant Copy Editor

In preparation for the new millennium, the YSU 2008 Planning Committee is in the process of assessing the successes and shortcomings of the Campus 2000 project and developing strategies and plans to carry YSU into the next century.

The process involves three task forces and five stages and takes input from all areas of the YSU community.

"The planning committee is made up of all four divisions of the university," said Janice Elias, assistant provost and co-chair of the committee. "All six colleges, alumni, students, administration and classified staff are represented, as well as the Youngstown community," she said.

Three task forces for the YSU 2008 program are already working toward their deadline of Dec. 30, 1999, assembling information to prepare their reports.

"The YSU 2000 Review Committee is using the historical approach. The purpose is to look at the program to see what's been accomplished, what's not been done and what needs to be continued, expanded, revised or deleted," Elias said.

The second task force is the Needs Assessment Committee, which uses a current approach to completing its tasks. Elias explained that the committee will "synthesize the strengths and needs as identified in the North Central Accreditation process" as well as other reports and surveys.

This committee will review the documents and assess the implications of these documents for further planning at YSU, and pull all the information together.

The third task force is the Environmental Scanning Committee, which uses a look to the future approach. This committee will do studies through focus groups and interviews to determine where YSU fits with local, state, regional, national and international events.

"All three task forces have begun their work, and must present their reports by the end of

Rollin receives recognition

■ The music professor was awarded for composition writing.

GERALD BENSON
Assistant News Editor

Dr. Robert Rollin, an honors professor of music, has been chosen as an American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers Award recipient.

Rollin began composing at the age of 8, being touted as having amazing ability and talent by the distinguished composer Enrich Leinsdorf.

Evidence for Rollin's love of music is captured in his words to describe it.

"The greatest thing about music is how it organizes time in a way that is both intellectually and emotionally appealing. There are plenty of intellectual things to listen for and to try to hear, and you can get swept away by the beautiful music as well," he said.

Rollin's wife, Gwyneth, said her husband is very serious about his work. "Everything he has written is carefully constructed with the audience in mind," she said.

In his quest to expand his musical abilities, Rollin said he continues to learn every day.

"As a composer I like to try different things," said Rollin. "You get so involved, and you start to learn

Swing dancing popular among young people

■ YSU offers ballroom dancing courses to feed the craze.

TRACEY GURA
Contributing Writer

Young people across the country are getting caught up in the latest dance craze. No, it's not the Electric Slide or the Macarena - it's ballroom dancing, or more specifically, swing. The dance form that reached the peak of its popularity 50 years ago has resurfaced with amazing fervor among young adults.

"The current popularity of swing dates back to the 1996 independent movie 'Swingers,' about a bunch of guys in their 20s living the night life in Los Angeles," writes Ann Cortissoz of the Boston Globe. "But recent songs and videos by such big band-inspired groups as Big Bad Voodoo Daddy, Cherry Poppin' Daddies and Squirrel Nut Zippers, and the current Gap khakis ad, featuring a group of acrobatic swing dancers, has pushed interest to near rage level."

Christine Cobb, assistant professor of human performance and exercise science, said the ballroom dancing course she teaches at YSU is very popular among students. According to Cobb the class has been filled to capacity every quarter since the class began in 1996.

"It's filled every quarter. People always come to me on the first day of class wanting to get in, and they have to wait for someone to drop," said Cobb.

Cobb said the university currently offers Ballroom I, in which students learn the waltz, foxtrot, swing and cha-cha. This fall the university will offer Ballroom 2 for the first time. The meringue, salsa, rumba and tango will be taught in Ballroom II.

The reasons behind the recent interest in ballroom dancing vary. Many people believe the Gap khakis commercial revived the dance form. Dr. Martha Pallante, associate professor of history, said she does think the rapid spread of trends is a product of mass media, which spread new information faster and wider through society, but doesn't agree with the "Gap commercial" theory.

"I don't think the Gap commercial had anything to do with it. The interest in the music started about six to eight months before the commercial," said Pallante.

Cobb said she believes movies such as "Swing Kids" and "Dirty Dancing" have fed into the phenomenon - but a general nostalgia for the past and better times may be a bigger factor.

"There's a recent trend in society for people to want to become more couple and family oriented," said Cobb. "You want to be able to go to a wedding and dance with your mom and dad."

Guy Schiavone, owner of Fred Astaire Dance Studio, said he can't explain the renewed interest in swing, but he's very glad to see it.

Schiavone said there is resurgence in interest in all dance forms, but the younger generation is most interested in swing. Schiavone said the addition of ballroom dancing as an Olympic exhibition sport at the Sydney games should cause interest to "really take off."

Ron Stewart, a senior in video production at Cleveland State University, said he took dance lessons because, "It just looked like a lot of fun." Stewart said he thinks swing is so popular now because "it's a chance for guys to dress up and meet girls - it makes it really easy for guys to meet girls and it's a safe, 90s way to meet girls."

Swing does bring back memories of a kinder, gentler dating scene.

Michael Snyder writes in the Herald Sphere, "Some women like to go to clubs on swing nights because often the only pick-up line they hear is 'Would you like to dance?'"

NEWS Nuggets

Disney offers educational jobs

■ Qualified students learn Disney's practices through seminars.

Earn money while rubbing elbows with Mickey and Minnie in Orlando for a semester. Recruiters from the Walt Disney World College Program will be in Kilcawley's Ohio Room Thursday, Oct. 21, to inform YSU students of job opportunities in the sunny state of Florida.

Students must be present at the hour-long presentation at 10 a.m. to be eligible to interview for jobs ranging from lifeguarding and attractions to culinary and house-keeping. Interviews will be conducted the day of the presentation.

All undergraduates in any major can apply for these jobs. Applicants must be full-time students in good academic standing and have completed at least one quarter of college. The program takes 2,500 students per four-month period.

Susan Devanny, senior, marketing, worked spring quarter in outdoor food and beverage services at Disney/MGM Studios. "It was the best time I've ever had in my life," she said.

Students stay in apartment complexes that they pay for themselves. Work is around 40 hours per week.

"It is a good opportunity for commuter students because they can get away from home," said Devanny.

Perks of the program, besides seeing Mickey and friends, include pay slightly above minimum wage, free entrance to the four main parks, and discounted admission to the other parks.

The program works in three parts — living, learning, and earning. There are various seminars the participants attend showing Disney practices, current business trends, and personal development. Participants also have the opportunity to shadow and network with cast members in their related field of study.

Open house presents college to community

■ Festivities include speakers, display and alumni dinner.

EILEEN CATANZARO
Assistant Copy Editor

The Bitonte College of Health and Human Services is holding its first annual open house from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Friday, Oct. 22. The open house will be held in the Cushwa Hall atrium.

Alice Burger, assistant to the dean of the Bitonte College of Health and Human Services, said the open house is "especially good for the undecided students. They can come and see each program for themselves."

Each department in the college will have a display in the atrium that tells about its program. The open house will begin with a welcome statement from Dean John Yemma.

Diane Hritz of Career Services is slated to give the keynote address. Refreshments will be available, prepared by the hospitality management program of the college.

Another event scheduled in conjunction with the open house is an alumni banquet held at 6 p.m., Oct. 20, in the DeBartolo Stadium Club.

Burger said she is hoping to have about 150 alumni present at the dinner.

Two alumni and YSU professors, Dr. Tammy King, chair, criminal justice, and Joe Mistovich, chair, health professions, will be the guest speakers at the dinner.

"My speech will be geared to my achievements as a student at YSU and how well YSU prepared me for my career," said King.

King also is preparing a "memories" display for the banquet.

"I am asking each department for any memorabilia they have, like catalogs, posters or pictures, to show the history of the departments. We have a statue of Justice that was donated in 1973 that is part of our display," said King.

In addition to the alumni dinner and memories display, the college is hosting a breakfast for high school guidance counselors from 8 a.m. to 9:30 a.m., Oct. 22 in room 3112, Cushwa Hall.

"This is a good recruitment tool," said Burger. "A representative from each department will discuss the programs and prepare packets of information to be given out."

Invitees to the breakfast include the Choffin Career Center, Trumbull County Joint Vocational School, the Metro Campuses and all departments and advisers.

All food, refreshments and centerpieces for all events will be prepared by the students of the hospitality management program.

"We didn't want to overload the students with preparations for the open house," said Burger. "But this is good hands-on training. It's what they are training for," she said.

The open house is open to all students and faculty.

Decrease hate crimes and support campus organizations

One year ago today, University of Wyoming student Matt Shepard died after being kidnapped, robbed, beaten and tied to a fence in a pasture Oct. 7, 1998.

Four students were held responsible for the death, which occurred after Shepard revealed to two of his attackers that he was gay. Those students were charged with the crime, including two females who were charged with accessory after the fact, for first-degree murder.

Russell Henderson received two life sentences after pleading guilty in April to felony murder and kidnapping. Jury selection began yesterday for the trial of Aaron McKinney, charged with first-degree murder, kidnapping and aggravated robbery, who could face the death penalty if convicted.

With Gay Awareness Week being observed across the country, it is important for everyone to realize that what happened to Shepard could happen anywhere. Hate crimes are becoming more prevalent across the country with each passing day.

Oct. 12, 1998 brought University of Wyoming President Philip L. DuBois to speak of Shepard's death. DuBois commented on the fact that the tragedy brought the community together "in unity and in purpose" and reminded everyone that each person makes a difference in actions and attitudes. This is true across the country.

The University of Wyoming released an official "Anti-Discrimination Policy" in 1990, which "denounces, within First Amendment rights, expressions in word or action on campus that reflect prejudice or hate based on gender, color, disability, sexual orientation, religious preference, national origin, ancestry or age."

YSU's Equal Opportunity and Affirmative Action policy states that YSU "is committed to a campus environment that values all individuals and groups, and to non-discrimination and equal opportunity for all persons without regard to sex, race, religion, color, age, national origin, sexual orientation, handicap/disability, or identification as a disabled and/or Vietnam Era veteran."

The University of Wyoming has a program called "Safe Zone," a project for students, faculty and staff which trains them in awareness and providing a safe environment for gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgendered members of the campus and community.

A similar program has been started at YSU and will be running full force by the beginning of winter quarter. The program will be geared toward the faculty and staff of the university and workshops will be held this quarter to train those interested.

The unfortunate death of Shepard is an example of what can happen to those who are just a little different than others and are hurt because of it. Don't let this happen here — become involved in whatever you can to support everyone on campus, not just those who agree with your own personal preferences.

All student organizations should be treated with the same amount of respect from both members and non-members. This is just one step that will lead to the decrease in the number of hate crimes that occur nationwide.

A STAFF VIEW

Responsibility lies with family

In 1994, four guys mimicked a scene from the movie "The Program" in which four college students laid down in the middle of a two-lane highway while cars sped by going 40 to 50 mph. One of the copycats didn't live to tell about it. That incident forced the producers to remove that scene from the movie.

A few years later the MTV adult cartoon "Beavis and Butthead" came under attack when a 4-year-old set fire to his livingroom after seeing it on the show.

Likewise, fingers pointed to the musician Marilyn Manson when two Colorado high school students killed 15 people at Columbine High School last April.

The scary part is, except for the 4-year-old, all of these incidents involve people who are old enough to realize the difference between reality and fiction, unless someone never explained it too them.

All of this brings me to my point.

Last week as I was watching television with my parents, my 8-year-old sister was in her room watching cartoons and playing by herself. Patty is a very levelheaded 8-year-old. She can watch scary movies and know the blood is only "ketchup," or that Superman flies because there are invisible strings attached to his cape.

But on this typical night she did something I never thought she would do — she mimicked something she saw in a movie.

No, she didn't try to create vines to swing from like Disney's Tarzan. Nor did she try her hand at knife throwing because she saw it in a movie I was watching.

She watched what now might be considered a very dangerous movie for kids, "The Parent Trap." And after seeing this corrupter of American youth several times, she tried to pierce her own ear using a needle and an ice cube.

Many would say, "So what, kids do that all the time." True, but do they do it as a direct result of a movie?

So yes, appalling as I think it is, I guess I must concede that movies do have an affect on children.

So my mother should sue Walt Disney for passing off such a dangerous movie as being for children and demand it be edited for potentially dangerous content. Her little girl put herself in harm's way because she saw a movie character do something. Right?

Wrong!
It is my parents and I that should be blamed for not recognizing this as something my sister might do. I really should call Children's Services and tell them that my parents are neglecting my sister and allowing her to watch movies that can influence her to commit bodily harm.

The circumstances in the movie were real enough, kids do it all the time and it is far from life-threatening. But the fact remains that she did something she saw in a movie. So what now? Should she stop watching movies? Are my parents horrible people? Or was this an unforeseeable occurrence with no one to blame?

I vote for option C. People can only do so much to protect their children and explain the difference between right and wrong. What counts is that they try. Every once in a while something is going to slip through the cracks. You can only pray it is as harmless as self-earpiercing.

The point is that you try to teach children and encourage them to know what is right and not blame others for personal negligence. When society holds entertainment accountable for an adult's actions, it is only an excuse, and a poor one at that.

The women's volleyball team made an impressive showing at home Friday and Saturday, as they took down Mid-Continent foes Valparaiso and IUPUI.

"Our team is playing very well at this time," said Head Coach Joe Conroy.

Saturday, the Lady Penguins went three straight sets of 15-13, 15-9, 15-12. Senior Vickie Robinson and freshman Michele Batton pounded 12 kills each. Robinson made seven blocks.

Junior Amber Nagy and sophomore Rebecca Sylak each recorded 11 kills, while Sylak had six blocks and Nagy registered a match-high 22 digs.

Friday night in Beeghly Center, the women came back from a 11-0 deficit to win the first match against IUPUI.

"We came from behind and just played tough," said Conroy.

The women scored six points to only have the Jaguars extend their lead to 14-9 before Robinson served three straight, bringing the women within two. Sophomore Melissa Lyczkowski topped it off with four straight service points to seal the 16-14 win.

YSU won the remaining matches, 16-14, 15-7.

Robinson led with 19 kills and seven blocks, while Sylak finished the game with a .423 hitting percentage. Batton nailed 13 kills, with 11 digs and five blocks.

Nagy collected 11 kills and 19 digs, while Lyczkowski added 53 assists, two aces, 12 digs and three blocks.

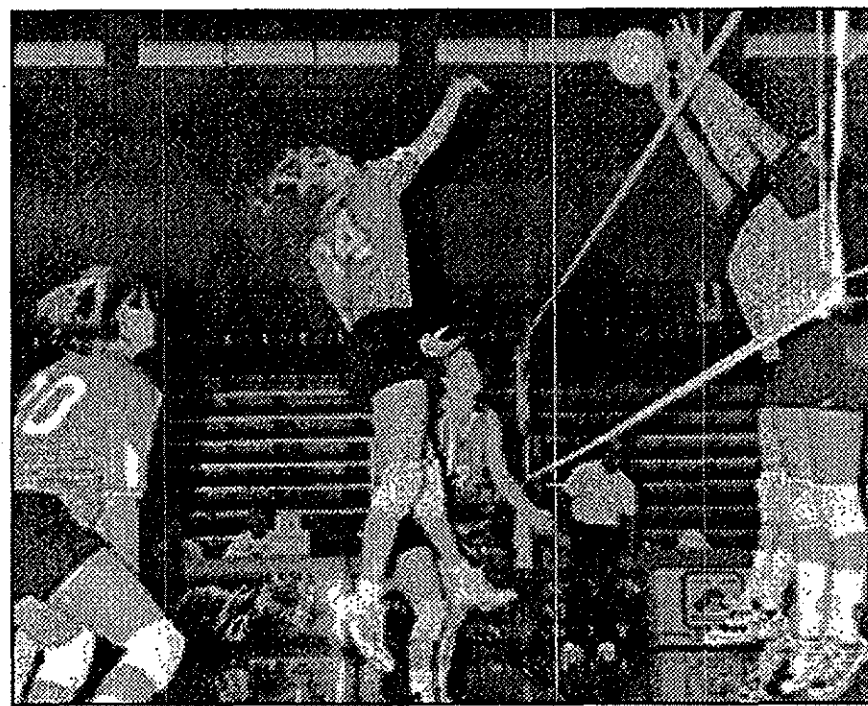

YSU volleyball has made national news as well, falling second in the nation with 3.81 blocks. The Lady Penguins have 198 team blocks in 52 games, while sophomore Kristen Meech is ranked third in the nation in blocks for the third-straight week with 1.83 blocks per game. She's collected 95 total blocks.

"Meech, as a sophomore, has come into her own," said Conroy. "Our defense sets up around her."

The women hit the road this weekend, facing Western Illinois Friday and Chicago State Saturday in two Mid-Con matches.

"It will be a long trip to Western," said Conroy. "They're ranked fourth in the conference and have a couple of good players you should not take lightly."

Soccer picks up first conference win against WIU

Women's soccer notched its first conference win Saturday with a 2-1 victory against Western Illinois University.

YSU put points on the board first, as junior Shelly Kaydo assisted senior Jen Argiro on her goal from 20 yards out, giving the women the lead, 1-0.

A foul on YSU led to a Western score to tie it at one. The Lady Penguins continued the effort as senior Missy Laforet got the ball past the Westwind's goalie on an assist from senior Alicia Scopelite to give the Red and White its first Mid-Continent Conference win.

The win puts YSU's record at 4-7-1 and 1-1 in the league. The women will see action again tonight against Howard University in Stambaugh Stadium at 7 p.m.

CARBONDALE, Ill. — Once again, the Penguin gridiron pulled out a win in dramatic fashion, taking a 43-37 overtime win from Southern Illinois.

On the final play of regular time, the Salukis' Nick Wafford capitalized on a 4-yard pass from Sherard Poteete Dominelli to tie the game at 37 with no time left. YSU's defense and a 12-yard run by senior Adrian Brown in overtime sealed the win for YSU.

"We gave them a chance to get back in it," said senior linebacker Ian Dominelli. "We pulled it out when it came down to it."

Brown was the offensive leader for YSU as he racked up three touchdowns, while recording 198 rushing yards. Sophomore Ime Akpan ran for 73 yards as he returned to action after an injury, breaking through with a 55-yard touchdown run and another TD on the six yard run.

YSU's offense collected a season high 492 yards, including 295 rushing yards. Sophomore quarterback Jeff Ryan threw 24-16-1 with a touchdown. Senior receivers Renauld Ray and Elliott Giles both caught for 50 yards, with Ray scoring on a 15 yard pass from Ryan.

"I give credit to our offense," said Dominelli. "They kept us in the game."

Other Penguins coming up big were junior Eddie Blizzard, who caught an interception for nine yards that led to a YSU touchdown, while sophomore Andre Coleman totaled 103 yards on four kick off returns.

SIU's own offensive arsenal sparked with 188 yards and a touchdown from Cornell Craig, while Poteete threw 33-23-1 with three touchdowns.

The Penguins improve to a 5-1 record and 3-0 in the Gateway Conference while the Salukis go to 3-3 and 0-2 in the league.

and, become really interested in works by other people that you begin to get this library of sounds in your head as well as different styles."

Rollin's compositions can be considered "classical," but that doesn't mean his musical tastes are limited.

Rollin cites Paul Simon's Graceland as one of his favorites and credits the Beatles with being multi-talented musicians. Rollin said he developed a love for folk music in graduate school and has incorporated it into some of his works.

Composing music isn't Rollin's only ardor, pointing out his need for teaching.

"I love teaching. I adore teaching. I enjoy the whole classroom experience," he said. "I would not be happy in front of a computer in an office."

Rollin is a native of Brooklyn, NY, and studied under the direction of many great composers, including Mark Brunswick, Elliot Carter and Hall Overton.

Rollin's educational background includes studying at the Juilliard School of Music, the Third Street Settlement Schools, City College of New York, and Cornell University.

A sample of Rollin's work can be heard on his most recent CD release, The Wandering Bird. He will conduct the "New Music Concert Series" starting Nov. 17 at the McDonough Museum of Art.

December," Elias said.

These three task forces comprise stage one of the project.

Stage two begins January 2000 and runs through June. It will include preparing the draft, "Toward 2008," which will be used as source material to develop the actual plan.

"This stage will include a profile to include topics such as what we want to be in 2008, reviewing the mission statement to see if it needs revised, and the mission and vision statements of the university to see what the goals of the university are and what needs to be done to reach the goals," Elias said.

Stage three will run from July to December 2000. This stage is presenting a written YSU 2008 document.

Once the draft is completed, it will be circulated to the YSU community. After distribution, the document will be refined according to campus reaction, followed by the writing of the final draft and presentation to the board of trustees for approval.

Stage four is the dissemination of "YSU 2008" after the approval by the board of trustees in January 2001, and stage five is implementation of recommendations.

Alice Burger, assistant to the dean of the Bitonte College of Health and Human Services and co-chair of the planning committee, said this project is "an opportunity to hone in and focus on our strengths and where we want to be."

"The beauty of the planning process is that Dr. Cochran has enabled everyone to plan. Every constituency is represented. It is important for every institute and organization to assess their strengths," said Burger.

While all the planning and research are in progress, Elias was asked about the timing of the project coinciding with YSU's next president.

"These reports are resource for the new president, whoever he or she may be. I can't imagine we would select a president who would ignore the collective wisdom of the people here. I don't think a good leader does that," she said.

She added, "The president of the university is the catalyst and facilitator of new ideas. Whoever the new president will be will be able to enhance the vision of Campus 2008."

"This is a collaborative, collegial representative process. No plan is finalized without the president's ok. I don't think a new president would choose to alienate [the campus community]. The new president will shape the process with a new style. It will be to his or her benefit to get involved," said Burger.

The year 2008 was chosen as the target year for the new program because it coincides with YSU's 100th birthday.

AT TIAA-CREF, LOW EXPENSES ARE A HIGH PRIORITY.

All financial companies charge operating fees and expenses — some more than others. Of course, the lower the expenses you pay, the better. That way, more of your money goes where it should — toward building a comfortable future.

As the largest retirement system in the world,¹ we have among the lowest expenses in the insurance and mutual fund industries.²

In fact, TIAA-CREF's 0.35% average fund expenses are a fraction of the expense charges of comparable funds.³ It's one reason why Morningstar says, "TIAA-CREF sets the standard in the financial services industry."

A focus on your future

Of course, expenses are only one factor to consider when you make an investment decision. Morningstar also noted our commitment to "consumer education, service" and "solid investment performance." Because that can make a difference in the long run, too.

At TIAA-CREF, we believe people would like to spend more in retirement, not on their retirement company. Today, over two million people count on that approach to help them build financial security. So can you.

Ensuring the future for those who shape it.™

KSU editor banned from press conference

■ The athletics department was upset over an editorial cartoon.

ANGELA GIANOGGIO
 Managing Editor

The sports editor of Kent State University's student newspaper, The Daily Kent Stater, was recently banned from an athletic press conference held by the head football coach, according to an article by The Akron Beacon Journal.

Kent Stater editor in chief David Basler said Mike Rasinski, sports editor, was prohibited from attending a weekly press conference in the athletic department following an editorial and cartoon that criticized the football team.

When representatives of four newspapers were gathered for the press conference, the coach cancelled it and asked the reporters from The Plain Dealer, The Akron Beacon Journal and The Record Courier to join him in a private conference, Basler said. The Daily Kent Stater was excluded from the second conference.

Laing Kennedy, KSU athletic director, said the incident was resolved following an explanation of the newspaper's procedure regarding editorial cartoons.

In a meeting with athletic department officials following the banning, Basler explained the sports editor and the editorial cartoonist do not collaborate on cartoons or stories and therefore punishing one for the other's action in the paper is not justified.

"It was a violation of open-meeting policy, but we've talked about it and we're at an understanding," he said.

Basler said the editorial criticized the athletic administration for its use of student fees to pay for the football team's trip to the Holiday Inn the night before a home game.

The cartoon depicted devils playing ice hockey with the caption saying the KSU football team must have won a game.

Buechner Hall Truly Has Everything

This beautiful residence hall for women, located mid-campus at YSU, is truly first-rate. Single and double occupancy rooms are completely furnished, including linens, telephones, and free cable. The building is fully air conditioned, and staff and guards provide professional, 24-hour security. Weekly maid service, exquisitely decorated lounge areas, quiet study environment, on-premise dining room and home-cooked meals, fitness room, and laundry rooms are other features supplying their share of full-comfort living.

Sound expensive? Not at all. Thanks to the large bequest of the Buechner family, which completed the building in 1941, more than half of all residents' room rental is still absorbed by the Buechner fund. The remainder required from residents including 15 meals per week, is $837 per quarter for double occupancy and $907 per quarter for single. Payable weekly. Your inquiry is solicited.
