Ferraro raps president's policies in downtown rally

By DAN LEONE
Jambar Editor

It rained. She was late. It was hard to see. It was hard to hear.

Still, throngs of people flooded Federal Plaza Tuesday afternoon to listen to Geraldine Ferraro, a "Woman of Steel," as a huge banner above the podium identified her.

The democratic candidate for vice president blasted President Ronald Reagan's steel policies, to the crowd's delight, and also spoke out in support of education.

"You had a right to expect your schools to help your children face the problems of the world," she said. "Walter Mondale and I promise to make this the best-educated generation in American history."

Although pro-life banners protesting Ferraro's stand on abortion speckled the crowd, the predominant response to her related comments was positive.

Her statement that passage of the Equal Rights Amendment would be a "patriotic act" superior to Reagan's "commercial" patriotism started members of the crowd chanting, "ERA . . ."

ing to the Olympic games "to congratulate our athletes — including the female athletes."

At the same time, she charged, his administration was back in Washington "siding with those who had discriminated against women in court."

"I want to help women get to the starting block," she said, "not just pat them on the back when they cross the finish line."

The president also got flak for his failure to live up to campaign promises made here four years ago. Reagan said then he would work to revive the area's ailing economy.

"What you got instead from the Reagan administration after four years," Ferraro said, "is a picture postcard inscribed, 'Everything is great in America, Youngstown. Wish you were here.'"

"I think you expected more from your president," she said. "You had a right to expect a steel policy that boils down to more than, 'Let it rust.'"

She said Mondale has offered a plan to "raise capital, retain workers, modernize our plants and boost competitiveness."

"He'll stop talking about getting government off our backs and start talking about getting government on our side."

Ferraro also referred to state statistics showing that 30 percent of the people in the Youngstown area want work but can't find it.

"Ronald Reagan says, 'Read the want ads,'" she said. "The problem is, you don't get all those foreign papers where your jobs are now being advertised."

One reason Youngstown has received such little attention from the president, Ferraro said, is that he is too busy

Study reveals errors in local jobless statistics

By GEORGE NELSON
Jambar Copy Editor

If a recently released study conducted by Dr. Terry Buss, director of YSU's Center for Urban Studies, is correct, federal unemployment statistics grossly underestimate the number of jobless people in the Youngstown/Warren area.

Findings from the study, which was conducted in June 1984, were released during a press conference Monday.

After he allowed for a 2 percent margin of error, Buss announced the results of the survey. According to his findings, Youngstown has a 29.3 percent unemployment rate, as opposed to the 15.2 percent figure reported by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The study placed Warren's rate at 17.0 percent, instead of the federally reported 12.1 percent.

The unemployment rate for Mahoning and Trumbull counties combined was estimated at 16.5 percent. The federal government placed the rate at 10.7 percent. The difference in figures was estimated to represent over 14,000 unemployed people.

The $50,000 survey, which was suggested during Gov. Richard Celeste's "Capitol for a Day" visit to Youngstown in January, was conducted under contract with the Ohio Bureau of Employment Ser-

Former student is now Affirmative Action director

By CLARENCE MOORE
Jambor News Editor

Barbara C. Bacon, a former YSU student with a history of job experiences in the field of fair employment practices work, has succeeded Hugh A. Frost as the University's director of Affirmative Action.

Bacon, whose position became effective Sept. 4 said that although she has been the affirmative action director for only three weeks, she is anxious to get started. Her work will include drafting a new affirmative action plan for the University.

The University had come under recent criticism from local black social leaders, who complained that the University did not hire enough minorities in key faculty positions and that the University did not afford minority businesses the opportunity to work on University — related projects.

Her duties will also include overseeing the hiring of more minorities and recruiting potential minority faculty and staff to the University.

Bacon said that she was aware of the criticisms leveled at the University for its past affirmative action stances and said she hopes that she can help alleviate some of the problems.

"Affirmative action is still important to the University," said Bacon. "Dr. Humphrey wants us to be active and quite vocal so more people will know that we are here."

Bacon brings with her an extensive background in equal opportunity work.

From 1980 to 1981, she served as job technique instructor for Mahoning County Transitional Homes. In 1980, she was an equal opportunity consultant to both the Mahoning County Transitional Homes and the Mahoning County Diagnostic and Evaluation Clinic.

She was also the equal opportunity specialist for the Smithsonian Institution, where she implemented civil rights programs and policies and developed an equal employment opportunity program. She has also done work as a field representative for the Youngstown City Fair Employment Opportunity program from, 1967-71.

College Board says SAT scores reflect modest rise

From the College Press Service
New York, NY — After slipping slightly last year, students' scores on the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) show modest increases this year, according to the College Board, which runs the nationwide SAT program.

However, educators' happiness about the improved test scores was quickly dampened by U.S.

Secretary of Education Terrel Bell, who credited President Ronald Reagan's education policies for the good news.

In a news conference called in Washington, D.C. the same time the College Board was releasing the scores officially in New York, Bell told reporters "the gain in S.A.T. scores reflects the concern for excellence in schools that is sweeping the nation," and added that he was glad the recommendations made by a presidential commission on excellence "are being followed."

Bell went on to imply Reagan's call for excellence in the nation's schools and his support for more stringent disciplinary policies, have helped SAT scores rise over the last four years.

College Board and other education officials immediately complained that Bell's press conference was "a breach etiquette" and "political," and stressed that better teachers and schools — not presidential pronouncements — helped improve SAT scores.

Nationwide scores on the math portion of the SAT increased three points this year, for an average score of 471, the College Board reports.

Although scores remain far below the 1963 record highs of 502 for math and 478 for verbal, educators see them as hints that the long decline in SAT scores finally has been reversed.

Bell's claim that Reagan's policies are responsible for the score increase is "simply impossible," College Board spokesman Fred Moreno said.

Because the SAT tests a wide array of aptitudes developed over a student's lifetime, there is virtually no way to improve scores in a year's time, he added.

This year's minor increases probably are due to a combination of such things as accelerated curricula in elementary and junior high schools, better teachers and teaching methods, an classroom computer invasion, College Board officials point out.

Moreover, "the increase in math scores is largely attributable to (the improved performances of) women," College Board President George Hanford said, while the increase in verbal score was largely among males.

Math scores for female students increased four points this year, up from 445 last year, Moreno said. The average score for male students increased only two points.

In contrast, the average verbal score for females held steady at 420, while the average score for males went up three points.

ROTC Cadets attend summer camp

By JO ANN KOLARIK
Jambar Staff Writer

Some YSU students went to camp this summer, but it wasn't to weave baskets or make wallets. With summer camp.

ROTC students attended basic training camp, advanced camp, nursing camp, and airborne school.

Students who have not completed ROTC coursework in their freshman and sophomore years may take basic camp instead. After completing either coursework or camp, the student becomes eligible for the ROTC advanced program.

Seven students chose to attend basic camp at Ft. Knox, Kentucky, in lieu of the classroom. But Glynis Hems felt she was better prepared for the advanced program by taking her coursework at YSU.

"In actual testing (at advanced training camp), I scored higher because of the training I received at my home school," Hems said.

Twenty students attended a six week advanced training camp at Ft. Lewis, Washington. All students in the advanced program of ROTC are required to attend the camp, usually between their junior and senior years.

The advanced program is offered at three camps in the country, but "the camp at Ft. Lewis is the most strenuous," said Maj. Richard E. Pletcher of YSU's ROTC program.

Students are assigned to different battalions so the YSU cadets seldom saw each other.

"The cadets are put in various leadership positions (perhaps seven or eight) and then are evaluated on their performance in that position," Pletcher said. Those positions ranged from squad leader to company commander, and each time the student was responsible for the care and movement of all their people.

A rating of five displayed performance in the top ten percent of the platoon; a four in the top 33 1/3 percent and a rating of three was given to the rest of the cadets.

Of the twenty YSU students, one was rated highest in his platoon, another rated in the top ten percent, and eight in the top 33 1/3 percent of their platoons.

Teresa Beaver, sophomore, participated in a specialty training camp to become certified as a parachute jumper. In addition to her advanced training at Ft. Lewis, Beaver went to Ft. Benning, Georgia, for airborne training.

"It was the hardest thing I ever did in my life," Beaver said. "We did a lot of pushups and exercises."

The first week the cadets learned how to fall when they hit the ground after a jump. The second week they learned to land after a free fall from a 250 foot tower. The final week the students had to make five jumps, the final jump being into the graduation ceremonies to receive their diploma.

"You learn to overcome all your fears at advanced camp," Hems said. She said she overcame her fear of heights when she had to make a 40 foot drop into water. Another cadet likened it to the Demon Drop.

"YSU students always do well at these camps," said Mark Cockrell, a senior who also attended advanced training camp. He said YSU cadets are known for their expertise in tactics.

"You have to think of it (camp) as a game or test," Cockrell said. "You have to keep a sense of humor, and not take it all too seriously."

"It is the prettiest place in the world," Hems said of the camp's location in view of Mt. Rainier, "but when your crawling in the weeds you never see it that way."

Life and death

It is possible to present a reasonable argument for or against abortion. It is not possible to justify choosing a presidential candidate based on that issue alone.

Pro-lifers everywhere are taking issue with Geraldine Ferraro's pro-choice stance. Ferraro, a Catholic, has said she personally opposes abortion, but could not, as a politician, impose her personal views on others.

That's reasonable.

Now many anti-abortion groups and individuals are condemning Ferraro, protesting at her rallies and calling for Reagan's re-election, based on that issue alone.

That's not reasonable.

Reason, for example, can have nothing to do with the statements made by pro-life banners at Ferraro's campaign speech downtown Tuesday.

"Protect the unborn — elect Reagan," one placard read. Stop and think, please. What has Reagan done since taking office in the interest of future generations?

Because of his lax environmental policies and rampant defense spending, future Americans will be born into a world of exhausted natural resources, contaminated drinking water, acid rain and nuclear warheads.

Lots of nuclear warheads.

Some of the posters at Tuesday's rally had drawings of bloody babies accompanying pleas to vote for Reagan. What they didn't have were bloody Nicaraguans, killed by American guns, or dead fish, washed up on the shores of our polluted lakes.

Make no mistake about it: Ronald Reagan is not a "pro-life" president. Mondale and Ferraro are far more committed to the cause of "life," in its fullest sense.

Mondale and Ferraro support a nuclear freeze. They are committed to protecting our environment, for the sake of all life.

Before counting them out on the basis of one issue, pro-life advocates should take a closer look at all the issues.

It's important that they do this — especially now, since this election, thanks largely to Reagan, is more than ever a matter of life and death.

COMMENTARY

Once a performer . . .

Do you remember Sept. 11? No, it's not any kind of great historical date that you should know, but if you were all set to watch something on television at 8 p.m. that night, odds are that you were just a bit surprised to find President Reagan's smiling face staring at you.

Like many viewers, your surprise was probably accompanied by some consternation. ("To hell with this, Grace! I'm switching to cable!") I chose to stick it out. How long could one political commercial last? And I admit to some curiosity. Besides, I didn't want to chance missing any of "The A-Team."

I've always appreciated a good production, and Reagan's was a marvel to behold. The imagery used in the program, which spotlighted the incumbent's vision of America, might well have been taken from a collection of Norman Rockwell paintings.

Houses in the country, complete with white picket fences, steelworkers hard at work in the mills (some of whom may be in unemployment lines, due to Reagan's recent decision on no import quotas) and even amber waves, right from America, the Beautiful.

I realize that this has been said before, but the Reagan advertisement bears this out especially well — our president's vision of the U.S. is painfully outdated. In the '80s, most Americans live in cities, not on farms.

You know, cities. Those places with all the smog, traffic and crime. And a lot of factory workers are now in unemployment lines.

If you like the imagery, you've got to hear the man himself. Why, the way he tosses around God and morality, you'd swear that the Republican Party has the copyright on the concepts. Kinda makes you wonder if God really is a Republican. I'm not complaining about this show at all. In fact, I found it pretty amusing, at certain points. Like Reagan's assertion that Nancy Reagan, his wife, was his First Lady before he entered the White House. What does this make Jane Wyman, his first wife?

During the course of the commercial, Reagan also spoke with pride about those Americans who died at Normandy on D-Day, asking his audience what kind of nation could produce men such as these.

Funny, I could swear that other countries fought at our side during World War Two — France, England and even Russia, among others. (Oh, darn my socks! We actually helped those godless commies!)

Besides, good men on both sides died in that conflict, just like in other wars.

Reagan's supporters are almost as much fun to listen to as the man himself. Yes, they wholeheartedly endorse his "going back to basics." Personally, I'd like to know how increasing the budget for a military that thinks it's okay to spend over seven grand for a coffee machine fits into that philosophy.

Besides, getting bit by a dog is a pretty basic thing but I don't recommend it as being useful or fun.

Even if Reagan manages to lose the election he shouldn't be too discouraged.

With his performance in that commercial, he just might be up for an Emmy.

LETTERS

Says sheriff's being tried twice

To the Editor of The Jambar :

Let's not let the good attributes within our government blind us to the evils that reside within.

There is nothing, per se, evil about the American flag, but the environment in which our beloved flag waves is polluted with injustice and hypocrisy.

This letter is neither an endorsement for nor a condemnation of the Democratic candidate for Congress, Sheriff Jim Traficant. This is an endorsement for justice to transcend one's emotional bias toward a citizen that has been unfairly treated.

It has been reported by the national news that our government has engineered the assassination of foreign leaders. To kill one's adversary is one way to silence his tongue. It seems to me that our government is attempting character assassination of Jim Traficant.

Why? I believe this is a subtle method to silence Traficant's tongue. Is the government afraid that Traficant's message will wake up the "little man," the senior citizen, and other trusting, victimized Americans?

When the government keeps Traficant busy defending himself, he has less time to campaign. When he speaks about an issue, a few people will ignore his message because they will have been brainwashed into believing an innocent man is a crook.

According to the Aug. 25, 1984 edition of The Youngstown Vindicator, U.S. District Judge Ann Aldrich said "...if the jury found that (Traficant) was not bribed, the jury must find him innocent of the tax charge." The jury found Traficant innocent, yet the IRS has the chutzpah to claim Traficant owes $50,000 back taxes and schedule him to appear in Federal Tax Court Nov. 7, one day after the general election. It seems to me that he is unfairly being tried twice. And double jeopardy, no matter how disguised, is against the United States Constitution.

Asks students to make a stand

To the Editor of The Jambar:

If asked, "Do you stand for peace?" almost everyone would reply, "Yes, I do." But who really knows that you do? How do you demonstrate that conviction?

One major way, of course, is in the way you live and relate to persons every day. But at the larger level of world peace, who knows where you stand?

Since last April, persons have been gathering each Monday from 11:50 a.m. to 12:10 p.m. on the grass by the large rock outside Kileawley Center to silently stand for peace. In a world that lives everyday on the brink of disaster and annihilation, our world leaders claim to work for peace by carrying a bigger nuclear "stick."

You are invited to join many of us who believe there are other nonviolent ways to work for peace, at every level of life. Join us Monday, Oct. 1, 11:50 a.m. Come and let others see that you stand for peace.

Jobless

vices (OBES) and coincided with the work of the Ohio Senate Task Force on Unemployment.

To conduct interviews, Buss hired over 50 unemployed people with experience or training in interviewing techniques.

"In essence, the workers were taken off the rolls of unemployment and actually employed in something meaningful that related directly to their lives," Buss said.

The interviewers managed to collect 3,983 valid questionnaires.

Ohio State Senator Harry Meshel explained that studies like this one "are aimed at trying to bring out the actual conditions that exist (in economically depressed areas), as opposed to the cosmetic ones we generally hear and read about from experts from afar."

Since federal funding is distributed from these statistics, Meshel estimated losses in millions of dollars for the region.

The unemployment rate determined by the survey included some people who no longer look for work — "discouraged workers," people who due to the unavailability of full-time work hold part-time jobs and individuals forced into early retirement.

Although Buss suggested that it wasn't "necessarily bad" that discouraged workers are not usually included in determining the unemployment rate, he believed that they should be represented in some figure. He also thought that some sort of study should be conducted on discouraged workers.

Meshel said that he hoped that this survey and others similar to it would encourage the Department of Labor to conduct more comprehensive studies. He blamed part of the department's inefficiency on defunding by "the present administration" and hoped that his view would be seen as "non-partisan" and not "election-year politics."

Buss expressed hopes that a survey could be done with the same subjects in June 1985.

REVIEW

Comedy launches Playhouse season

By PAMELA GAY
Special to the Jambor

My 3 Angels, this season's opener at the Youngstown Playhouse, is a semi-successful attempt at fast-paced comedy.

Since this comedy has a plot that would seem very unfunny, it is the job of the actors to pull it off. And for the most part they do.

The plot centers around three convicts who see a French family through two murders, a jilted love affair and an attempted suicide. Unbeknownst to the family, the convicts' actions change their lives for the better — thus the convicts show off their angelic qualities.

As Joseph, one of the three angels/convicts, Ray Dohar always looks as if he is enjoying every moment that he is onstage and so you can't help having fun along with him. He is simply lovable as the good-natured con man and ends up stealing every scene that he is in.

Jack Hales and Robin Van McCreary portray the other two angel/convicts. They work well together and have the timing that is important in a well-executed comedy.

The two lovers of the show, Gary Hanson and Rhonda

DeFélice seem to have been made for each other because they both give mechanical performances. DeFélice is energetic and likes to scurry around the stage but she never really develops her character. Hanson, who plays the obedient nephew, is boring and rather lifeless.

Dick Kepley, as the money-conscious uncle, Henri Touchard, gives a performance that shows his extensive acting experience, as does Glenda Drotleff, who plays Emilie Ducotel. These two have been seen on the Playhouse stage many times and their experience is evident.

Although their roles are small, Loren Schryver as Felix and Alice Weiss as Madame Parole are worth mentioning. These two Playhouse regulars give their usual fine performances.

Director Bob Gray has picked a cast that for the most part knows what it is doing and keeps the action moving at a fairly brisk pace.

Once again scenic designer Paul Kimpel has done a wonderful job. His setting of a bungalow in French Guiana is intriguing. The set is just interesting enough to make you want to study it while not distracting from the action of the play.

Dana begins music series on Sunday

YSU's Dana School of Music begins its Dana Concert Series this weekend with recitals by faculty members Robert Hopkins and Ronald Gould.

Robert Hopkins will present a piano recital at 4 p.m., Sunday, September 30 in the Bliss Recital Hall.

The recital will include works by Mozart, Debussy and Chopin and will feature a performance of Beethoven's "Sonata pathétique, op. 13."

Hopkins last appeared locally as piano soloist in concert with the Youngstown Symphony Orchestra in 1980.

Dr. Ronald Gould will give the first of this three-part recital series of representative organ works in honor of the 300th Anniversary Celebration of Johann Sebastian Bach at 8 p.m., Monday, October 1 in the Bliss Recital Hall.

Music will include the "Tocatta in D Minor," S. 565, the chorale prelude "O Lamm Gottes Unschuldig," S. 656, the "Sonata in C Major," S. 529, a chorale partita "Sei gegrüßet, Jesu gütig," S. 768 and the "Tocatta in C Major," S. 564.

Gould is beginning his 24th year at YSU. In the spring of 1978 he studied with Harold Vogel at the North German Organ Academy in Bunde, West Germany and did research on the surviving Arp Schnitger organs in West Germany and Holland.

Both recitals are free and open to the public.

Showing at the Butler Institute is the Olijnyk sculpture installation.

Olijnyk installation ends this weekend at Butler

This is the final weekend to view the sculpture installation by Michael Olijnyk at the Butler Institute of American Art. The installation conforms to the existing architectural structure of a gallery in the museum.

About his work, Olijnyk said he indicated "columns to support the wall's arches with black vertical stripes painted on the wall." He added, "These four stripes visually relate to four stone beams suspended from glass structures whose placement on the floor (was) determined by a diagonal line struck from corner to corner, bisecting the gallery."

The artist has shown his work in exhibitions throughout the U.S. including the "Paper Shape Invitational, 1979" at the Akron Art Institute, "Beaux Arts Designer/Craftsman" at the Columbus Museum of Art, the "Invitational Contemporary Fiber Exhibition 1979" at the Southern Alleghenies Museum of Art, Pennsylvania and "Works on or of Paper and Clay 1978," at Memphis State University, Tennessee.

YSU artist exhibits at Kilcawley Angels

YSU's Kilcawley Center Art Gallery has opened its 1984-85 season with "Mark Lysowski Recent Works," an exhibition of 21 works of various media. The exhibit will continue through Oct. 26.

There will be a reception for the artist from 6-8 p.m., today in the gallery. The exhibit and reception are free and open to the public. Gallery hours are 10 a.m.-4 p.m., Mondays and Fridays, 10 a.m.-8 p.m., Tuesdays through Thursdays, and 11 a.m.-3 p.m., Saturdays.

Lysowski is a YSU student who has received honors in the Butler Institute of American Art's Student Art Show and recently exhibited a piece in the May Show at the Cleveland Museum.

"I have been trying to create a feeling in my work so that it holds a playful, fast movement," Lysowski says in his artist's statement. "I worked two dimensionally at first, creating the activity I wanted with color and shapes. I realized that I needed more out of my work, so I started to work three dimensionally using the same shapes and activity within those works by incorporating color.

"The shapes and markings in my work are not symbolic. They are acquired by reaching a point of subconsciousness. The colors I use determine shape and the variation of shape in the area around it."

My 3 Angels does have a few problems but all in all it is enjoyable.

The comedy will continue this weekend at 8:30 p.m. today and Saturday, September 28 and 29 and at 7 p.m., Sunday, September 30. Tickets are $6 for adults and $3 for YSU students who obtain a voucher from the Student Government office. For reservations phone 788-8739 between 9 a.m.-6 p.m.

Auditions set for musical

Auditions for YSU's first major University Theatre musical production, Kiss Me, Kate, will be held at 7 p.m. Monday, October 2, and at 4 p.m. and 7 p.m. Tuesday, October 2, in Ford Auditorium, Bliss Hall.

Kiss Me, Kate is the rousing and tuneful Cole Porter musical based on Shakespeare's hilarious comedy The Taming of the Shrew.

Many actors, singers and dancers are needed for this fall production.

Auditions are open to all YSU students, regardless of their major area of study. No previous theatre experience is necessary.

All those who audition should wear loose and comfortable clothing to facilitate movement and singers are asked to bring two contrasting songs to sing (one fast, one slow).

For additional information, please call the University Theatre office at 742-3634.

triumphs and sorrows in its first four contests

After four games the YSU football team has a record of two and two. The Penguins opened the season at home against Eastern Michigan and then went on the road for three straight games against Eastern Kentucky, Cincinnati and Western Illinois. Photos from the home opener and the road trip include (clockwise from upper left) a YSU cheerleader watching the action, parachuters dropping into Stambaugh Stadium during pre-game activities, the YSU players watching their team take a commanding lead over Eastern Michigan, a determined Pete the Penguin, a group of tailgaters living it up before the opener, fans receiving their free "Arby's Shakers" to cheer on the home team, linebacker Pat Toler making the stop on an Eastern Kentucky ball-carrier and John Murphy picking up yardage against the University of Cincinnati.

YSU students probed various aspects of Arctic ecology in a recent field trip to the region led by Dr. Lauren Schroder, biology professor.

In the field: Students take working vacation

By MARK PEYKO
Jambar Managing Editor

When most students were dripping from the sweltering heat of August or sitting poolside sipping iced tea, Dr. Lauren Schroeder, biology professor, and 10 field ecology class students were gathering specimens in the Arctic.

Schroeder and his students were based at the Churchill Center for Northern Studies. The center is located outside of Churchill, Manitoba.

The group included Tim Bakos, Stephen Gustafson, Constance Hill, Milton Lenhart, Anthony Lorelli, Brian Reeder, Robert Repasky, John Usis, and Daniel Withers, a Jackson-Milton School District teacher.

Each were from field ecology 506 and received five hours credit for their work in the upper northern region.

The focus of their trip included gathering various forms of plant life and vegetation. In collecting the various mosses, lichens, sedges and grasses, the group brought back samples for both YSU's herbarium and Carl Chuey, associate professor, biology.

YSU was the only American university participating in the twelve-day excursion, which began August 27 and ended September 6.

The group spent time in various environments and gathered samples from each for both class activities and individual projects.

In the field studies, four different arctic environments were explored. Students studied the diversity of plant life in the dry tundra, a moss and lichen tundra, inland sedge-willow meadows and a forest area dominated by white spruce and larch, a deciduous coniferous tree.

The students sought to determine what effects the temperature, moisture and nutrients had on growth patterns of the vegetation.

Independent study included viewing soil arthropods, owl pellet analysis (to determine diet and food consumption quantities). The effects of the wind and snow on tree growth and the aging process of the arctic trees were also studied.

Because of the climate and weather conditions, Schroeder noted that some spruce trees tend to grow "sideways — low to the ground." A tree of this type can reach ten or 12 feet if it can avoid the weather which kills the buds and vertical growth.

Schroeder said the group's findings will be offered in a slide presentation/seminar at YSU in the next three weeks.

Penguins even at 2 and 2

By DARREN CONSTANTINO
Jambar Sports Editor

After a three game road trip, the YSU football team will return to Stambaugh Stadium Oct. 6 to face Tennessee Tech University at 7:30 p.m.

With four games under their belt the Penguins stand at 2-2 on the season with a conference mark of 0-1.

YSU is idle this weekend and will use their extra time to prepare for the Golden Eagles.

Next week's game is an important one for the Penguins, who will be looking to even their conference record and win their second game in two starts at Stambaugh Stadium this season.

YSU exploded in the home opener defeating Eastern Michigan 31-7.

The Penguins scored 21 points in the second quarter and coasted to victory. A Mark Finlay 67-yard interception return of a Trenton Lykes pass with 8:13 remaining in the game spoiled the shutout.

Lykes was 11 of 16 passes on the day for 145 yards and three touchdowns. Joel Cuffman and Frank Pokorny combined for seven of the 11 receptions.

Robert L. Thompson paced the Penguin attack with 160 yards on 18 carries.

Penguins

The Penguins took to the road for the second battle of the season and their first Ohio Valley Conference tilt. They dropped a tough decision to Eastern Kentucky University 22-7.

It was the 16th straight home opening victory for the Colonels and the fifth straight time that EKV has defeated the Penguins.

EKV jumped out to an early 13-0 lead on a 65-yard touchdown pass and a 30-yard interception return of a Lykes pass.

YSU came back to take a 17-16 halftime lead. Eastern then scored with 6:26 remaining in the game to pull ahead 22-17, but the Penguins moved close to victory on their final drive.

YSU moved to the EKV 12-yard line with 20 seconds remaining and then Lykes hit Rick Shepas at the eight. The Penguins were forced to take a penalty on the following play to stop the clock.

YSU was penalized again on the next play and with only five seconds remaining the Penguins found themselves at the 18-yard line.

The game ended when Mike Mims intercepted a Lykes desperation pass.

Penguin fans quickly forgot about the disappointing loss to Eastern Kentucky after YSU upset Division 1-A opponent Cincinnati 27-23 the following week.

Freshman tailback Rod Love, in for the injured Robert L. Thompson, rushed for 107 yards on 23 carries and freshman quarterback Trenton Lykes completed 13 of 20 passes for 187 yards and two touchdowns.

The Penguins fought back from a 17-7 halftime deficit and linebacker Mark Derthick intercepted a Cincinnati pass late in the game to ice the YSU victory.

YSU would rather forget about the fourth game of the season. The Penguins traveled to Western Illinois in the final contest of their three game road trip and dropped a 48-15 contest to the Fighting Leathernecks.

The Penguins turned the ball over eight times and were penalized 111 yards. Lykes finished the game completing only seven of 26 attempts for 83 yards and five interceptions.

YSU stayed close throughout most of the contest, but 21 fourth quarter Leatherneck points put the game out of reach.

The Penguins played well in their first four contests, for a team which was expected to finish seventh in the Ohio Valley Conference.

University receives offer for presidential mansion

If the Board of Trustees and the state give their approval, the University's off-campus presidential mansion at 1010 Colonial Drive will be sold for $180,000.

At a public auction held by the University on Sept. 19 at the mansion, the Mark Lyden family posted the $180,000 bid. The University opened bids for the house at $175,000.

Its appraised value was estimated to be $205,000, said Jim Mineo, director of purchasing.

By selling the mansion, the University will save money on annual maintenance and upkeep. Last year, when former president John J. Coffelt occupied the mansion, the costs for maintaining the nine-room house and landscaping its grounds was approximately $50,000 a year.

According to an article in The Vindicator, the University will compensate YSU President Neil Humphrey with a $24,000 housing subsidy, to be used for his home in Poland, in addition to the salary and benefits that he already receives.

It was reported that half of the $24,000 stipend can be used by the president to pay federal, state and local taxes on his Poland home.

According to Humphrey, the housing stipend is not unusual, because the University includes a housing allowance in the contracts it sets with the president.

In the past, workers from the University had landscaped and maintained the Colonial Drive mansion and grounds. YSU also paid for maid service. Humphrey will not be provided with maintenance workers at his Poland home.

At other universities where a presidential mansion is located on the campus, it is the responsibility of the university's maintenance department to take care of the property.

It is expected that Humphrey will use his home in Poland to do the entertaining that is expected of a University president.

The Colonial Drive mansion was first purchased for about $85,000 in 1967 when YSU became a state university. The bid made by the Lydens is $95,000 more than the University paid for the Colonial Drive property.

Pass/fail system is below par

From the College Press Service

Pullman, WA — Pass/fail grading systems have failed, and students who have a chance to use them generally reject them, according to a survey of over 1600 colleges using the pass/fail system.

Dr. C. James Quann, registrar at Washington State University and author of the survey, said students do worse when they're given pass/fail grades instead of letter grades.

"Many institutions are beginning to realize students perform on a lower level with pass/fail systems," he said. "Students come to class late, skip classes, don't do assignments and hold other students back. Performmance is below par in many cases."

Quann viewed the system as a vestige of the more experimental sixties and early seventies.

Even so, "only a small percentage of schools that initiated pass/fail options abandoned them altogether on the theory that if you give the students something, it hurts to take it away," Quann added.

Northwest Missouri State University, for example changed its pass/fail system in 1979, letting students use it in a maximum of nine credit hours.

"It's not overused anymore," reported Registrar Linda Girard. "People were taking advantage of it: using it for hard major classes and GED requirements. Faculty is much happier now."

Quann's own Washington State still offers pass/fail options.

 "boasting about his economic recovery."
 She accused Reagan of presenting rosy interpretations of a bleak economy. "He has the habit of taking bows while his true love lies strapped to the railroad tracks," she said.

 Also targeted by Ferraro were Reagan's policies toward the elderly, the poor and the disabled.
 She knocked the current administration for paying $2,000 to defense contractors for a 13 cent nut while insisting that the minimum benefit of $122 a month for elderly women on social security must be cut.

 "If you're homeless," she said, "they say you like it that way. If you're hungry they say, 'Eat cheese.'" She noted a sign in the crowd reading, "Gerry, we need jobs, not cheese."

 Ferraro knocked Reagan's "cruel" social security disability policy, which, she said, creates a Catch-22 situation for the disabled.

 The "thousands" of victims of this policy are told, "Sue us," she said. "And then they cut funding for legal services so that you can't sue them."
 Ferraro's speech lasted 20 minutes.

Humphrey gives report on the future of YSU

In a "State of the University" report Sept. 17, YSU President Neil D. Humphrey said the institution "is generally mature and stable, but at the same time vital and willing to entertain new ideas and new approaches to the problems we face."

Looking ahead as he addressed some 500 faculty and staff in the traditional fall meeting, Humphrey said, "I want us to continue to do what we are now doing, but discover ways to do it better, and to seek additional resources to do other things which need to be done."

Humphrey said YSU will reach out beyond its primary area of Mahoning, Trumbull, Columbiana counties in Ohio and Mercer and Lawrence counties in Pennsylvania for students.

He added that while the primary emphasis will be on undergraduate education, the graduate program should be nurtured and helped to grow. "We should remember the truths we all learned in graduate school: good teaching and good scholarship are companions, not mutually exclusive activities," he said.

"I believe we must experiment and find new ways to modify the curriculum so that students might receive a liberal education and be prepared to earn a living," he said.

He said the new DeBartolo Endowment Fund of $300,000, raised through the YSU Alumni Association's Distinguished Citizen Award banquet honoring Edward J. DeBartolo, will be used to assist the University in activities related to updating the curriculum.

He announced the 1984-85 earnings from the fund will be devoted to activities in the Warren P. Williamson, Jr. School of Business Administration to determine the feasibility of initiating courses or a curriculum in property management as it relates to shopping malls.

"We are informed by the DeBartolo and William Cafaro organizations that nowhere in the U.S. can they find university graduates with the right training for this work," he said. "What more logical place for it to occur than in the home town and corporate headquarters of the first and fifth largest mall developers and managers in the United States?"

To serve YSU's diverse student body, Humphrey said he will place increased emphasis on programs in the Student Services-Student Retention area. With projections based on the University's Strategic Plan showing continued enrollment declines, Humphrey said solutions include improved retention and attracting more non-traditional students — those over 22 who are new or returning students.

Humphrey praised the full reaccreditation of the University's chemical, civil, electrical and mechanical engineering programs and the teacher education program, in addition to the continued accreditation of the associate degree program for medical laboratory technicians.

In conclusion, Humphrey said the University is renewing and expanding efforts to protect all persons on campus with additional manpower for patrolling. Two additional women police officers are being hired and the number of student monitors patrolling parking decks is being expanded.

Trustees rename building

During their August 24 meeting, the YSU Board of Trustees renamed the Arts and Sciences Building after Edward J. DeBartolo. In honor of the developer's accomplishments and continued support of YSU, the building was named Edward J. DeBartolo Hall.

The board authorized three new academic programs — a Bachelor of Arts degree with a major in Telecommunications, a new study concentration in the area of art education and a Bachelor of Science in Business Administration or Bachelor of Science in Applied Science with a major in Retailing, all pending approval by the Ohio Board of Regents.

The board accepted $306,266 from the Alumni Association from proceeds on the 1984 Distinguished Citizen Award dinner. The Edward J. DeBartolo Endowment Fund, the annual earnings of the fund to be devoted exclusively to funding activities that relate to updating YSU's curriculum. The income of the 1984-1985 school year will be used to determine if beginning courses or a curriculum in property management relating to shopping malls is feasible.

A reward fund of $5000 was appropriated from unrestricted gift monies and placed under the control of YSU President Humphrey, authorizing him to post a reward for information leading to arrest and conviction of anyone committing or attempting to commit any life threatening physical action toward another on the campus.

The board also accepted $1,377,231 in gifts and grants to YSU.

64 A.D. EMPEROR NERO COMES UP WITH A BRIGHT IDEA FOR ENDING URBAN BLIGHT.

Nero's fiddling around with bright ideas wouldn't have been necessary if Bud Light had been served at all those toga parties. It's the less-filling light beer with the first name in taste. So, friends and countrymen, bring out your best. Serve Bud Light at your next toga party. Or ask for it at your favorite beeratorium.
