Stu Gov reps receive challenges from V.P.

By SHERRI L. SHAULIS
News Editor

Student Government Vice President Pat Billett issued two challenges to Student Government representatives.

At yesterday's meeting, the first regular meeting of the 1992-93 school year, Billett asked that the representatives serve their weekly office hour in the school they represent.

"What we're going to try to do is get the representatives in touch with the students of the school they represent," he said.

Billett also asked the representatives to come to next week's meeting with issues and ideas that students feel Student Government should address.

"We want to know how the students feel and what they think we should be focusing on this year," Billett said.

During the Second Vice President's report, Dave Hall announced that several positions had been filled prior to the meeting. Newly appointed as representatives were Lonnie Yancsurak of the Grad School, Frank Halls of CAST, Lisa Virgalitte as a representative-at-large and Brad Stephens of CAST.

Other position appointments filled by popular vote at the meeting were Malik Mostellar as Executive Secretary, Frank Halls as Election Committee chair and Michelle Oliver as Publicity Committee chair.

New members of the cabinet include Desiree Lyonette, who will replace Kelly Lanterman as the Secretary of Academic Grievances. Lanterman resigned from the position in July. Also, Jason Fleming will replace Laurie Magee, who resigned in Sept. as Secretary of Internal Affairs.

In his President's report, Bill Burley said he looked forward to working with a Student Government that is comprised mostly of new people.

University alumna returns as newest Board of Trustees member

Eugenia Atkinson

By JENNIFER T. KOLLAR
Editor-in-Chief

When South Carolina native Eugenia Atkinson arrived in the Youngstown area in the early '70s to attend college here, little did anyone know that years later she would be selected to serve on the YSU Board of Trustees.

Atkinson was recently appointed by Ohio Governor George Voinovich to fill a position on the Board that was left vacant when area businessman, Michael I. Monus, resigned from the Board in August. Atkinson will be serving out the remainder of Monus's two-year term.

"I am extremely excited about coming back to YSU, not as a student, but to serve on the Board," she said with a huge smile.

Atkinson described how much the campus has changed since her days as a YSU student when she was studying for an associate's degree.

"The growth has been tremendous. What a resource this University has become. When I was a student, there were only five or six buildings on campus."

In addition to being a YSU graduate, Atkinson when on to study Business Management and graduated from Hiram College.

She is very familiar with the Youngstown area and is currently the Director of Administration for the Public Housing Authority here in Youngstown. She has also served on several other Boards, including the Martin Luther King, Jr. State Holiday Commission.

Her impression of YSU? So far, Atkinson says she has been very excited and encouraged by the high levels of optimism being radiated from new YSU President Cochran and the goals he has for the students and wanting to put YSU on the map.

"To have a University like this in our community is important. We have to recognize that YSU is a valuable resource, not only for higher education, but for all the employment it brings to the area. The fact that our children can come right out of high school and not have to leave home and still get a quality education right in our backyard is wonderful," Atkinson explained.

When asked what she thinks the Board could do to boost its low image and perception among the University and community members, Atkinson responded: "I think that [the Board's image] was a concern of Governor Voinovich. I think I was selected because I had no political ambitions. I will be working to make the University as strong as it can be academically."

The campus's perception of the Board hit an all-time low after the Board selected area attorney Paul Dutton as YSU's new president behind closed doors a couple of summers ago.

As far as trying to change the University's perception toward the Board, Atkinson said she believes that will all change when Board members begin to work with President Cochran to develop programs that will help strengthen and lift the University up.

"I have no hidden agenda. I come to the Board with nothing that I want to make sure gets accomplished," Atkinson re-inforced.

She explained that the role of the Board should be that the Trustees should work together in order to strengthen YSU as an academic facility by using the resources available to exceed the standings of other universities.

"However, I see my role as an advocate and a recruiter to encourage other students to attend this University and to use my contacts to help the University."

Since her appointment to the Board, the local media has played up the fact that she is the first black woman to serve on

Pan African Student Union to register voters

By PIA BRADY
Assistant News Editor

Everyone can turn on the television or radio and be briefed on Presidential candidates, George Bush and Bill Clinton. However, more than an update on the Presidential election is needed to inform people about their right to vote.

The Pan African Student

Union is undecided on who they should support in the Presidential election. However, they are united in their efforts to help others exercise their right to vote. Therefore, the Pan African Student Union will be holding voter registration on Wednesday Sept. 30, and Thursday Oct. 1, in Kilcawley Center.

The official capacity of the Pan African Student Union is to serve and unify all black students at YSU by addressing their needs. The organization, which is advised by Sarah Brown-Clark, English and Karl Penn, Student Activities, is offering all YSU students an opportunity to take part in their voter registration project.

Chris Harris, the newly elected president of the organization, has been a member of the Pan African Student Union for two years. He is also a Deputy Registrar for the Mahoning Valley. Harris says it is important that they have voter registration because, "There are many individuals who don't know how to register to vote."

Harris says the organization hopes they can, "Show campus individuals the importance of voting, because so many people take it lightly."

Harris says the organization believes, "Everyone who is eligible to vote should vote. It is important to vote and get your point of view across." Harris will be registering students from Mahoning County and a registrar from Warren will also be taking part in the activities.

Just do it

As the new school year gets under way, and everyone is getting adjusted to their new schedules, this seems to be the perfect moment to discuss the topic: attitude.

After seeing the turnout at the past YSU football games, I have been impressed. This is a perfect example of how getting involved with campus activities and events can build fun, enthusiasm and a good attitude towards yourself and everything around you.

What is your attitude towards school and towards life? Could you be one of the new freshmen who is shy or afraid to get involved? Or are you the old senior who has allowed three of the four or five years pass without making the most out of your college experience?

Yes, you are probably thinking, this sounds just like one of your parents.

But wait, seriously think about your attitude for a moment.

If you are an individual who does get involved and will have a million activities and honors listed on your resume, well bravo! That is terrific and we admire you. You don't have an attitude problem.

But, if you are happy just to exist and can't find a single good thing to do or say about YSU, then maybe you need to re-evaluate your attitude and re-think why you are letting life pass you by.

Ask yourself every now and then, "Do I live a passive, predictable, routine life?" If the answer is a slight nod indicating a yes, then ask yourself this: "Don't I want something more from my life?"

It might be a rebel-kind-of-thing, but what could possibly be more dull than always being predictable, always doing things like clockwork?

No way, Jose.

No can do.

Now, please don't get the wrong idea, no one here is saying that you should go parachute out of airplanes (well, maybe you should).

So, what's the point?

Each day offers a totally new set of circumstances and experiences which allow you to grow, learn and achieve. And there is nothing like learning and achieving to make you feel good about yourself.

The years are passing by quickly.

Approach these remaining college years with zest and enthusiasm. Seize the opportunity to be a better student, a better club member, a better athlete. Be alive and active. Pour your whole self into your studies. Be full of school spirit.

Question. Think. Experience. Laugh. Live!

Take life by the throat and do everything you always wanted to do but were too lazy or afraid to try.

Do it for yourself, you'll be a better person for it.

Now, go for it!

GREAT MOMENTS IN PRESIDENTIAL LEADERSHIP

FDR, THE FIRST 100 DAYS

JFK, THE FIRST 100 DAYS

BUSH, THE LAST 50 DAYS

It's a whole new YSU; be part of the change

Bill Burley

YSU Student Government President

Welcome to a brand new year and a brand new YSU. My name is Bill Burley and I am the new Student Government President. After a long summer of preparation, I am confident that we will have a lot to offer to you, the students of YSU.

What makes this year more significant than others? A new president at the University, Dr. Leslie Cochran, who has already proven his willingness to change, and has proven his dedication to making YSU a number one academic force in the State of Ohio. You, the students, also have an 80 percent new Student Government dedicated to listening and meeting your expectations.

To fulfill these expectations, many Student Government representatives will be holding a pouring of their office hours in the individual schools. Each week, Student Government will advertise in which schools they will be holding their office in your education. Take the initiative. A lot of hours. Both Vice President Pat Billett and I will be in one school per week, each quarter.

Although, should you have any questions, I encourage you to stop in or phone your Student Government offices. We are in Kilcawley Center on the second floor, and our phone number is 742-3591.

To help make Student Government more accessible to you and your busy schedule, we have instituted a new Comment and Information Line.

This service can be reached by phone on or off campus 24 hours a day at 742-3592. This phone line will give you current Student Government events and also allow you to give us comments and direct input on what's going on.

Finally, I have a request. PLEASE GET INVOLVED. We are a very different YSU today. The days of coming to class and going home are over. Our campus is transforming before our very eyes. Don't just stop and watch-- be a part of the change. There is nothing more terrible, in my book, than someone who simply complains and doesn't offer a solution.

Last year, during election, Pat and I asked you to get involved. We told you that if you were going to vote for us, you personally committed to help make things happen. So let's do it. Get involved in Student Government and get involved in your education. Take the initiative. A lot of people are counting on you.

Clinton/Gore ticket is good for Youngstown

Michael Cervone

Staff Reporter

It is evident from the amount of time the Clinton/Gore ticket is spending on their bus tours that they are serious about their presidential candidacy and would do a top-notch job if they were elected.

The two candidates stopped at the Southern Park Mall in Boardman last month and spent a lot of time talking about the issues.

At least they have some definite plans for the future, unlike their opponents who believe some undefinable set of "family values" will get them re-elected.

Clinton's health care plan makes sense because many employers are cutting their budget by eliminating health care benefits. Employers should either provide it or have to pay the federal government to provide it.

In defense, the Republicans say that government shouldn't tell business what it should be doing. I find this to be hypocritical because the conservatives usually don't have a problem with telling Americans what they shouldn't be allowed to have abortions. The Republicans want morality only when its convenient.

Another strength of the Clinton/Gore ticket is that their presidency will make area Congressman Jim Traficant's work much more effective. Traficant works hard for this part of Ohio, but he will get more done if we have a Democratic president on our side.

Right before Clinton took the stage at the Southern Park Mall, Traficant was already trying to get some new jobs for this area through Clinton.

I would assume that the crowd's choice of the Democratic party was partly motivated by the party's stance on environmentalism. Well, it didn't seem like there were many environmentalists in the crowd because there was trash all over the parking lot that day.

If we can rationally expect our leaders to hold the line on environmental standards, we should be prepared to help them by doing our part. The Democratic supporters failed that Saturday.

Other than the problem mentioned above, the rally was very informative. Hopefully, the Democratic candidates will remember their visit to the Mahoning Valley after the election and help an area that is in dire need of assistance.

It is a good bet that they will, partly because Traficant will keep reminding them.

This is a good ticket for Youngstown.

Humans beware: you're not as smart as you think

Matthew Deutsch
Jambar Assistant News Editor

The human race is rather arrogant. We like to proclaim that we're the greatest species on the planet, based solely on the fact that we have the ability to reason. Just because a three-toed sloth is incapable of playing a game of tic-tac-toe, we strut around with our fingers in the air chanting, "We're number one! We're number one!"

Now just for a moment, let's disregard this great and hallowed Ability to Reason and explore other aspects of our existence.

Let's start with birth. It's a logical place, I would imagine. Let's look at the human infant. It is totally and absolutely helpless at birth, relying on its parents to get what it needs. That's not the case with other animal species. They're off and running as soon as they're born. Well, maybe not running, but at least they're standing, anyway.

I saw a killer whale born on television once, and it just started swimming around, with no trouble at all. Now, I understand that some human infants have been born in water, but I sincerely doubt that any of those babies could hunt down their own supply of food. There are exceptions to this rule, of course.

Newborn puppies and kittens look like the most helpless things on the face of the planet. But they come around rather quickly, too, so for the most part, we just about come in last place in the category of infant autonomy.

There are other categories that we are best in as well, such as organization and work ethic. Sure, we all think that we're hard workers, and maybe some of us are. But we still can't hold a candle to bees or ants. They're like machines, going through their paces with fine-tuned precision and an almost telepathic ability to work together in harmony. In fact, insects in general fascinate me. They outnumber us by such a large amount that I'm surprised they haven't taken over by now. (Thank God for the other animal species and environmental factors which keep their numbers down).

There have been quite a few movies about animals taking over the planet. Granted, films such as The Beasts are in the Streets and The Day of the Animals, (starring Leslie Nielsen, if you care to know), have practically no cinematic value, but they do raise an interesting question.

What if animals decided they were sick and tired of watching us pollute and desecrate their planet? What if they decided it was time to take some action, time to take some drastic measures? Would we stand a chance? I doubt it.

It's a mute point at best, you say? Maybe, maybe not. Because in order for the other animal species on the planet to turn against us, they don't have to possess the ability to reason, just have a reason. Just remember that the next time your dog starts to bark angrily at nothing, for no apparent reason, or when your parakeet bites you on the hand when you try to feed it.

Are we the superior species?
Or just an arrogant one?

Stephanie Brush/Syndicated Columnist

Sit! Don't bite! Don't eat that! It's still a dog's world out there

Im sitting here wringing my hands, trying to find a way to type the sentence, "I don't like dogs very much." This is not an easy thing to admit in print. After all, dogs like me. But then, that's just the point: If a dog likes you, how can you take it as a personal endorsement? To be liked by a dog is like getting a Christmas card from your dentist.

Some dear friends-of-friends asked me to look after their dogs for two weeks, while they took a 50th anniversary trip across the United States. The only catch was, I had to live in their house; a magnificent palace on the edge of a lake with a Jacuzzi, a boat dock, three decks, two VCR's, a microwave, a full liquor cabinet and all meals included. I had to think long and hard about agreeing to do them this favor. After all, dog saliva would touch my flesh.

I was forewarned that walking the dogs followed a very strict regimen, and that one could not waver in it. Every morning, I had to walk them to the end of a dirt road to fetch the newspaper, feed them a biscuit and trot them home again. It was also my job to act in a generally supportive dog-person manner: to pat them and so on.

During this time, it was their assigned task to a) perform frisky antics, b) dive into brackish, poisonous swamp water and drink it, c) chase after smaller, swifter mammals and d) meet their friends along the road and bite their heads.

The head-biting part was the most weirdly fascinating for me. I almost never bite my friends's heads when I run into them on the street. But then, I'm a cat person. You've probably figured that out by now. When I run into my friends on the street, I hiss at them and hide under a car.

I will not be using the dogs's real names in this column just in case. I'll call them Sparky and Barky. They are identical Labrador Retrievers. I'm sure, as Labrador Retrievers go, they are darn winsome and cute. But bright? All I know is, I saw them eat a roll of camera film the other day. And it hasn't noticeably helped them develop.

I just had to type that sentence all over again, because Sparky just ran through the room chasing a small insect at about 120 mph, and disconnected the computer cord.

And now, I've had to type it again, because word just got out to Barky, and Barky has signed a written contract to do exactly everything Sparky does, only 1/15 of a second later.

I guess the thing, after a week, I find so disturbing about dogs, is that they always seem, profoundly, to expect something from humans. It's written in their eyes.

If you make eye contact with a dog, you've made a pact, in spite of yourself, of some kind. A dog almost always expects to be in motion, and it is a dog's expectation that you accomplish this motion along with the dog (even if it's only, "Wow! Let's go see if there's something worth drinking out of the toilet"). If you look away from the dog, you will then have utterly and irrevocably broken a heart--and sometimes for as long as 3.9 seconds.

And the thing about dogs is, I have no way of knowing that a dog cannot communicate this heartbrokenness to his owner, when his owner returns. ("I let you use my Jacuzzi--and you broke Sparky's heart nine times on the evening of the 20th..." I can already see the dogs's owners confronting me, poignantly, when they land back in town).

So, I guess what I'm saying is, there's more to this dog-sitting business than meets the eye. There's no free house-on-the-lake; that's for sure.

There's walking-down-to-the-edge-of-the-lake to get the mail, (it's delivered by boat), with Barky and Sparky.

There's barking at the mailman, and then diving into the water after the mailman, then swimming around in circles hysterically in the frothy wake of the mailman (and I don't think that this is really fair to ask me to do, in shoes, and especially after Labor Day, but the dogs insist on it).

Then there's trudging up the path after getting the mail, and shaking off the drops of water in all directions.

Then there's discovering a snake in the bushes. Then there's barking at the snake. Then there's picking the snake up in our teeth and waving it around, and skinning the snake like a carrot, and then losing interest in the snake, and then running back down to the lake and getting all wet again, and then barking at the mailman on his return trip, and then running back up the path again and trying to remember where we left the remains of the snake, and then losing interest in that project, too.

Maybe you're saying, "She'll learn to enjoy this after a while. After all, it sounds like the dogs really like her."

And I'm counting the days until I go home to be faithfully ignored by my cat. Who has never, by the way, bitten my head.

Olympic gold medalist to visit campus this week

Walking for the gold: Ron Laird shows the style, form and determination that won him an Olympic gold medal. Laird will be on campus Thursday and Friday.

By MATTHEW DEUTSCH
Assistant News Editor

The Olympics may be over, but later this week an Olympic great will be on YSU's campus. Ron Laird, a four-time Olympic race walker, will be here Friday, Oct. 2 and Saturday, Oct. 3 courtesy of the Women's Health Information Network and the YSU department of Health and Physical Education.

Laird, who won a gold medal in 1987, will be giving a free clinic to faculty and to health and physical education majors on Friday. The next day, a community-wide event called "TAKE A HIKE--FOR HEALTH" will be held in front of Beeghly Center.

Festivities include a competitive 5K run and a 5K walk, (Laird will conduct a clinic beforehand), and a one-mile, non-competitive walk through the center of campus. Pre-registrants receive a T-shirt and gift packet and everyone who enters is eligible for door prizes.

A resident of Ashtabula, Laird's credentials are impressive. He holds 81 race walking records, 65 titles in the United States, four titles in Canada, has received the Outstanding Race Walker Award six times and was inducted into the Track and Field Hall of Fame in 1986. His accomplishments have also landed him in the Guinness Book of World Records.

A Health/Fitness Expo will occur during the races, which will include thirty demonstrations and tables of information from various community health organizations and agencies.

Race participation is not necessary to attend the Expo. Janie Ehrman is the president of the Women's Health Information Network, (WHIN), and a limited service faculty member in health education at YSU. She explains the reason behind the event: "The proceeds are going towards helping women in the area who can't afford adequate medical insurance, mainly working women with children."

Ehrman, a recovering breast cancer patient, has found that women do not want to undergo chemotherapy treatments because it would "Take food out of their children's mouths." Proceeds will also be used to help women's educational programs such as: stress management, osteoporosis and breast health.

The promotion of health and fitness is, of course, another objective. "We want to get people out and moving as a lifetime fitness activity," said Dr. Kathie C. Garbe, assistant professor of health and physical education. "WHIN and the Physical Education department are motivated to increase the level of knowledge and participation in health and fitness activities."

Race forms are available at the Youngstown YMCA, Second Sole, the YSU Health Education Office (102 Beeghly), the Kilcawley Information Center and many area sporting goods stores. For information, call 742-3742 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. and ask for Dr. Kathie Garbe or Janie Ehrman.

Garbe comments, "This is an opportunity for people in our community to contribute back to the community in a very healthful way."

"And have fun doing it," adds Ehrman.

Stu Gov opens year with alcohol program

By MATTHEW DEUTSCH
Assistant News Editor

Last Wednesday, the Student Government observed Alcohol Awareness Week in the Kilcawley Pub. Local radio station CD-106 did their morning show out of the Pub as part of the festivities, joining Student Government in their promotion of responsible drinking.

Included in the activities was an experiment involving the effects of alcohol on a person's nervous system. "Fast Freddy" Woak, disc jockey for CD-106, and Sherry Amendolea, a Student Government volunteer, each consumed a glass of beer every 15 or 20 minutes. They later tested their reaction times by running battery-operated cars obtained from the PAC office.

Shannon Sweeney, Secretary of External Affairs, explained the purpose of the event: "We want the incoming freshmen to know that we're not against drinking and having a good time, but we do think that students should know their limits. We at Student Government lost a friend to a car accident involving alcohol, so we're doing what we can to inform people." Various brochures and fact sheets were also distributed in an attempt to achieve this end.

In addition, suckers were passed out to students on Thursday. Each sucker was accompanied by a note which stated that 74 people a day die due to an alcohol related-incident.

Those who accepted suckers represented one of the 74 people who would die that day.

"It's one more way to attempt to hit an emotional chord with people, to let them know that it's not always someone else, that it could be them," said Sweeney.

Unfortunately, there were other plans associated with the event which did not materialize. Due to insurance reasons, a wrecked car was not able to be secured from Pasquarelli's Wrecking Service and then placed on Spring Street for students to see. Also, budget cuts did not allow for Breathalyzer tests to be administered during the drinking experiment.

"We had this planned since July," commented Bill Burley, student government president.

"Things just didn't come together like we had hoped."

Nonetheless, an enthusiastic and conscientious effort was made to enlighten students, freshmen and others, about facts concerning the abuse of alcohol and the dangers of drinking irresponsibly.

the Board.

How does she feel about that? "Yes, I am an African-American woman. I can't deny that. I needed the qualifications even to be considered. Many people will probably see me first as an African-American woman, but beyond that I hope they will see me as a Trustee who is willing to make this University a great institution," Atkinson stated.

Dollar Bank manager dies, campus loses friend

Barbara Phillips

By SHERRI L. SHAULIS
News Editor

Everyone who ever passed by Kilcawley Center's branch of Dollar Bank lost a smiling face and helping hand Aug. 6, when Barbara Phillips died of cancer.

Phillips was born Oct. 16, 1937 in Fort Worth, Texas, and had served as Dollar Bank's YSU branch manager since the office's opening in 1978.

Her contributions on-campus far exceeded the banking world, as she was thought of as a mom by many students, and was one of the biggest fans of YSU sports.

"Barb went out of her way to make the kids feel at home," said Jim Tressel, YSU football coach. "When freshmen moved into the dorms, she would be there to help them set-up checking accounts with their parents.

But it wasn't just a job, it was a daily thing for her. She even kept in touch with them after they graduated. Barb really made our kids feel important — both on and off the field."

Off-campus, Phillips was a member of the American Institute of Banking and the Penn-Ohio Chapter of Financial Women International.

Before coming to Youngstown in 1967, she attended the University of Dallas in Texas.

She is survived by her husband, Dr. Richard C. Phillips, who is a professor in the chemistry department, three daughters and two grandchildren.

Barbara Phillips's smile, energy and support will be missed by all.

Government

"This year's Student Government is 80 percent new," Burley said. "I look forward to an aggressive and productive year."

Also at yesterday's meeting, several announcements were made regarding upcoming events.

Beginning today and running through tomorrow, Student Government will sponsor voter registration on the second floor of Kilcawley Center.

"Pan African Student Union will be holding voter registration on the first floor, so we'll get them coming and going," Burley said.

Also during the next two days, Student Government will sponsor "The YSU Message" on the first floor of Kilcawley.

"The YSU Message" is a video tape that will consist of two-minute messages from YSU students, who will voice their concerns over budget cuts.

Any interested student can speak on the tape, which will be edited, copied and sent to Governor George Voinovich and state representatives.

In an earlier interview, Burley said he hoped the taped messages would have more of an impact on the Governor than the petitions that were signed and sent last year.

"We thought the petitions were good in their time, but this should give him [the Governor] a better opportunity to see the frustrations of the students," he said.

Another event announced at yesterday's meeting is Waddle Palooza, an on-campus rock concert. The concert will run from 6:30 to 10 p.m. Friday in the parking lot by Buechner Hall.

"What we're trying to do is bring a night life back to the campus," said Burley.

Although the concert is free to YSU students, T-shirts are available for $5. Also, students attending the concert are asked to bring canned goods and clothing, which will be donated to the St. Vincent de Paul Society.

Burley and Billett closed the meeting asking that anyone interested in joining Student Government should come to the meetings, call the office or talk to their representatives.

"More than ever, this year young people are becoming involved in politics and trying to make a difference," Burley said. "Our main goal is to get more students involved in Student Government and put Student Government in a better position in the students' eyes."

Banana Rodeo showcases two new exhibits

On Saturday, Sept. 26, Banana Rodeo, Youngstown's premier alternative art gallery, began its latest show with exhibits by Guy Shively and Deb Ross.

Guy Shively's love of automotive art is legendary. Since 1975, this great love has taken his work far beyond the garage and has placed it before literally thousands of people across the United States. In addition to his exhaustive experience as a professional race car, street rod and antique car decorator, Shively has shown his illustrative airbrush work in several traveling automotive art shows including The Car, The Art in Los Angeles, and Hot Rod Heritage, which travel annually throughout the states of Michigan, Nevada, Kentucky, Ohio, Minnesota, Oklahoma and Texas. Originals and prints of his work have been displayed in one-man shows throughout the region by hosts such as the Hoyt Institute and Insignia Gallery and many works have a prominent place in numerous private and public collections, including those of The Butler Institute of American Art, Beckett Aviation and Beverly Hills Peddle Cars. In Oct. 1991 Shively was featured on "The World of Speed and Beauty" which airs weekly on cable television's

TNN, The Nashville Network.

In Oct. of this year, as his show picks up steam at Banana Rodeo, Shively will have his work featured in Street Rodder Magazine for the sixth time since 1990. Automobile Magazine mentioned the artist in its pages this past April.

"Shively's 'Chrome-n-Composition' is sure to attract quite a positive response," said Banana Rodeo curator Chris Yambar. "It's very exciting to be able to spotlight his talents as a detailer and airbrush artist. Don't be surprised to find a few peddle cars and a street rod or two in and around the gallery during our reception for Shively and Ross."

Deb Ross will be showing her exhibit of hand-crafted avant-jewelry which includes pendants, earrings and pins, the majority of which are one-of-a-kind items. Materials used in her work include acrylic clays, Indian arrowheads, bones, buttons, miscellaneous found objects, rhinestones and semiprecious stones.

Her involvement with jewelry stems from her introduction to the trade by her father, Ronald Cattoi, in 1976. Since then, her work has surfaced in several jewelry collections. The Banana Rodeo showing marks the artist's first appearance in a gallery setting, one which is sure to be remembered for its unique beauty and expert craftsmanship. All of Ross's work will be available for purchase throughout the show. Ross has worked as a freelance graphic artist since 1978.

Both exhibits will run through Oct. 31.

Banana Rodeo is located at 32 W. Wood Street in downtown Youngstown, Ohio. Additional information, interviews and photo opportunities may be secured by calling 216-743-5513.

Standard gallery hours are Tuesdays and Thursdays from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m., Wednesdays from noon to 3 p.m. and Saturdays from noon to 5 p.m.

New theater professor brings positive change to University

By BARBARA SOLOMAN
Entertainment Editor

EDWARD VICOLI

With all the changes taking place in the University over the past few months, one of the more positive ones is the new assistant professor of theater design and technology, Edward Vicoli.

A northeastern Ohio native, Vicoli received his BGS from Ohio University in electronics, computer science and multi-media design. He also received his MFA in design and technology and an MA in arts administration from Ohio University.

Vicoli has worked in New York, Los Angeles and Chicago, in all aspects of the theater as well as Toma, Japan. While in Japan, Vicoli was a technical director for one of the first fully enclosed amusement parks.

"It is a very high, high tech industry," he said regarding the park.

So, after such extensive travel and work on various projects, why come to work at the university level?

"In the entertainment industry there is very little approach for design integration," Vicoli said. "Here there is an opportunity for students, under guidance, to explore new and effective ways of performance."

Vicoli also said that since the entertainment industry is so involved in technology, a designer must respond by becoming more high tech.

"You have to find ways to complement the theater experience to make it financially rewarding for the producer and rewarding to the audience as well," he said.

One aspect a designer must deal with is limitations. According to Vicoli, a designer must take the given limitations such as time, money, space and personnel and then design.

Along with teaching classes, Vicoli is supervising and executing all the elements of design, except costumes, in the musical and two of three plays presented by the University Theatre this year.

After coming to YSU in the midst of change, what does he think? "It seems like an environment of transition ready to embrace new approaches," he said.

MOVIE REVIEW

Rambo in buckskin describes Last of the Mohicans

By Charlie Deltch
Darkroom Technician

Did you ever wonder what would happen if Rambo was a Mohawk Indian living in 1750?

Director Michael Mann, the creator of Miami Vice, obviously wondered that when he undertook the screen adaption of James Fenimore Cooper's novel The Last of the Mohicans.

Oscar-winner Daniel Day-Lewis (My Left Foot, A Room With a View) portrays Hawkeye, the adopted Mohawk hero, one of the last three Mohicans.

Lewis plays the character as an 18th century Rambo. Lewis displays an awesome chiseled physique and a modern action-hero attitude. Lewis is suave and cocky, which is definitely out of the norm for a period film, especially when it is an adaption of a classic novel like Cooper's.

The whole movie plays like a modern action film. There are the cocky one-liners and the larger-than-life action sequences that are the mark of any studio money maker.

This brings about the question, does this type of characterization work?

The answer is a resounding yes.

Normally, I am not a fan of period movies. I didn't care too much for Dances with Wolves, or Dangerous Liaisons but for a fan of Lethal Weapon and Die Hard, The Last of the Mohicans is one way to expose me to culture.

For those of you who like the big epic dramas with the period costumes and enjoy taking the trip to the past, have no fear because Mann and the Mohicans deliver.

Mann uses the panoramic background of the North Carolina Blue Ridge Mountains to create a beautiful, breathtaking panoramic vision that takes you back to Colonial America.

The battle scenes are incredibly realistic except for one small flaw that my 10th grade History professor pointed out; cannon balls didn't explode then, but hey, it did look good.

See Mohican, page 12

Could it be Rambo?

Daniel Day-Lewis stars as Hawkeye, the frontiersman, in Michael Mann's epic romantic adventure, The Last of the Mohicans. The film is now playing at area theaters.

Mohican

The evil Huron Indians looked incredibly real and truly evil. The scenes involving the native-American war-partys were well choreographed.

Lewis was remarkable as Hawkeye and proves himself to be one of the top character actors in cinema. His unique portrayal of the character will put him in contention for the best actor trophy at the academy awards this year.

Madeline Stowe (Unlawful

Entry, The Two Jakes) plays the daughter of a british officer and the Love interest of Hawkeye. Stowe was incredibly strong and likeable as a character torn between forbidden love and family loyalty. Again look for her name at Oscar time.

The only flaw in this movie was a tendency to drag in places.

Overall, this is an incredible adaption of an already established masterpiece. The Last of the Mohicans is culture for the action fan. So if you ever wanted to see what would happen if Lethal Weapon met Dances with Wolves or if you like the standard epic drama, this movie is one to see.

Penguins drop to 3-1 after 52-49 shootout

CHARLIE DEITCH/ THE JAMBAR

Another six. Junior wide receiver Trent Boykin (number 6) makes a dash for the end zone in YSU's 52-49 loss to James Madison Saturday at Stambaugh Stadium.

By CHARLIE DEITCH
Sports Staff

Ask any football fan if 49 points are enough to win a football contest and their answer would probably be an unsurprising yes.

Ask the Dukes of James Madison that same question and you'll get a totally different response.

JMU journeyed to the Ice Palace and handed the Penguins their first loss of the season and snapped the Penguins' 11 game winning streak Saturday night with a score of 52-49.

Offense was the buzz word as both teams combined for 1081 total yards.

YSU head coach Jim Tressel had these thoughts on the Penguin loss.

"Any loss is a tough one. It was a hard fought game from the onset and we could see that both teams wanted to win badly," Tressel said.

Tressel said the high score was a surprise.

"I don't like to predict the scores, but if someone told me over 100 points would be scored, I wouldn't have believed them."

The Touchdown-fest began when senior quarterback Nick Cochran, who had a total of 233 yards passing, connected with a 37 yard pass to junior wide receiver Trent Boykin. Wilkin's PAT gave the Penguins a 7-0 lead.

JMU would begin their scoring roll on their second possession.

Quarterback Eriq Williams gave the ball to senior tailback Kenny Sims for a 22 yard touchdown run.

JMU would score once more before the end of the first quarter to make the score 14-7.

YSU would even the score on their first possession of the second quarter.

Cochran hit Herb Williams with a 25 yard reception that moved YSU to their own 45.

Cochran would hit Williams again for a 16 yard snag that would set up Tamron Smith for a three yard scoring run.

The score remained even throughout the remainder of the half with both teams scoring on every one of their possessions.

The halftime score had JMU in the lead 28-21.

YSU received in the second half and marched 70 yards for the score off of a one yard run up the middle for Smith's third of four touchdowns.

JMU was forced to punt on their next possession allowing the Penguins to start at their own 12 yard line.

Junior running back Darnell Clark took a pitch up the right side for a 62 yard touchdown run and Wilkin's PAT made it a 35-28 Penguin lead.

JMU scored again to tie the game at 35 at the end of the third quarter.

McKenna, Conroy accept new jobs in athletics

YSU — John McKenna, who for the last seven seasons was the head coach for YSU's women's volleyball team, left the head coach position Friday to become YSU's new Academic-Athletic Counselor.

Assistant volleyball coach Joe Conroy will replace McKenna as head coach. Both assume their respective positions immediately.

According to YSU Athletic Director, Joe Malmisur, the job of Academic Counselor was an important one to revive.

"Because of the financial constraints that we've had to accept over the past several months, we're making this move to shore up a very important area of ours," said Malmisur. "These are not new positions, we're just making several changes. We feel it is most important to have someone on-line in the academic end of the athletics department."

McKenna ends his reign at YSU as the second winningest volleyball coach in Penguin history with an 80-129 record. Only John Takash, (1978-83), has won more volleyball games (87) for YSU.

Conroy, who won his first three games this past weekend, is now looking forward to this new challenge in addition to duties as strength coach.

"This is another challenge for me," said Conroy. "I'm excited and happy to be coaching this team."

Both moves in the Athletic Department are complying with President Leslie Cochran's policy to have everyone pick-up the slack that has been created by budget cuts that YSU has incurred.

Williams snags initial Student Athlete award

The Jambar is very pleased to sponsor the Student Athlete of the Week for the 1992-93 academic year. The awards, to be announced every Tuesday in The Jambar, will not only highlight the athlete's prowess on the athletic field for that week, but will also showcase their academic standing and service to the community.

Spikers win three straight in Conroy's debut

By MICHAEL YONKURA
Sports Editor

Say goodbye to the John McKenna era, and say hello to the Joe Conroy era.

With only three games completed in YSU's 17th season of volleyball, a coaching change has already been made. On Friday, McKenna, after seven years as the Lady Penguins' volleyball coach, has been moved to the Athletic-Academic Counseling chair while Conroy, an assistant under McKenna, was promoted to head coach.

Conroy inherited a very young team that had dropped its first three contests going into three weekend matches at the Beeghly Center. He made the most of that youth in his debut as YSU took all three matches, defeating Niagara on Saturday and Buffalo and St. Francis on Sunday.

The first win of the weekend, and the first for the Lady Penguins this season, came at the expense of Niagara College, 15-10, 15-7, 15-7.

Overall, Conroy said that the first win was an important obstacle to overcome.

"We tried to challenge the girls all the time in practice," said Conroy. "They responded well and gave us a good win."

Freshman Jill Raslevich, who leads the Mid-Continent Conference in digs, added 16 more to her total against the Lady Eagles.

On Sunday, YSU faced two very different teams in the "Ice Box." The first game saw YSU defeat an experienced University of Buffalo squad in five sets, 15-3, 7-15, 15-2, 5-15, 19-17. The first four sets saw each team dominate in its wins.

In the fifth and deciding set, YSU took the early advantage at 8-5 using, for the most part, a lineup of five freshmen, (Tracie Bender, Janie Cebula, Lisa Gregor, Cindy Neubauer and Raslevich), and sophomore Tina Gregory. The Lady Bulls came back, however, to take a 12-11 lead.

YSU kept it close with some hustling saves to tie the set at 14. It went back and forth until Buffalo scored a point to take the lead at 17-16. Thinking that was the match because of an old rule making 17 points the limit in deciding sets, the Buffalo players began to leave the court.

The referees, however, stated that a new NCAA rule gives no limit to the amount of points scored in a deciding set (as long as one team wins by two) and brought Buffalo's team back.

YSU wound up winning the set and the match, 19-17. Lady Bulls coach, Bob Maxwell, protested to the officials at the game, but it fell on deaf ears.

In the third and final match of the day, and the second for YSU, the Lady Penguins easily handled the Red Flash of St. Francis in three sets, 15-1, 15-10, 15-8.

The first set belonged entirely to YSU, scoring ten unanswered points to start the game. From there the Lady Penguins only allowed one point from the Red Flash, dominating them in every aspect of the set.

The second set saw YSU starting mostly second string players. St. Francis scared them a little by jumping out to an early 7-1 lead.

It was then that Raslevich led the YSU charge with several devastating spikes and some outstanding serving, including a pair of jump serves that scored YSU's last two points.

In the third set, St. Francis took the lead until Neubauer served three straight points to put the Lady Penguins up for good. Conroy said that with each passing game, the teamwork gets better and better.

"The more we've played, the more we've seen this team grow," said Conroy. "We've learned to put the right people in the right positions."

In the second match on Sunday, Buffalo beat St. Francis in straight sets, 15-5, 15-6, 15-7.

YSU hits the road for the first time this season when it visits Northern Illinois on Friday and Western Illinois on Saturday in two key Mid-Continent Conference match-ups.

The Lady Penguins next home game will be Oct. 6 when they face Cleveland State in the "Ice Box" at Beeghly Center.

Quarterback Nick Cochran did not see the game as a disappointment.

"Sure it hurts to lose, but it wasn't a disappointment," he said. "No one gave up and our offense played a lot better than the week before."

The Penguins will be on the road this week at Indiana State in Terre Haute.

CHARLIE DEITCH/THE JAMBAR

Waaaaaaay up there! Freshman Jill Raslevich leaps up high to drive a spike to a Lady Penguin opponent. Under new head coach Joe Conroy, YSU went 3-0 this past weekend.

The YSU Swami

Yes folks, he's baaaaaaack! It's the infamous YSU Swami, and he's ready for more bold predictions.

Last year, the YSU Swami took on students who thought they could do better on NFL games. This year, the YSU Swami takes on some of the "brightest" sports-minded people in the Youngstown area.

The first challenge comes this Friday when the YSU Swami takes on, none other than WYTV Sports Director Bob Hannon. Hannon has been known to pick some NFL games on the air on Channel 33's newscasts, but is he ready for this?

"The Swami may have done well last year," said an overconfident Hannon, "but that was only because he didn't pick against me. I'll kick his butt!" Tune in Friday to see who kicks whol YSU — The first Student Athlete of the week, ending Sept. 27, is wide receiver Herb Williams. In YSU's 52-49 shootout loss to James Madison, Williams made 10 receptions for 143 yards. The senior captain now has made 18 catches for 346 total yards.

Williams, currently is majoring in organizational communication with a minor in management. He plans to graduate in the Spring of 1993. Williams spent this summer working for Youngstown's Department of Parks and Recreation and spoke at several elementary schools urging the kids to stay in school and educating them about the dangers of drugs.

Williams was a recipient of the Student Athlete of the Week last year.

Shootout

more defensive back Reggie Brown intercepting Williams's pass at the YSU 15.

Cochran threw an interception of his own two plays later to set up a JMU score by fullback Steve Agee to put the Dukes up 42-35.

Smith scored on the next possession on a two yard run to tie the score at 42.

Both teams would score again before the end of the quarter to tie the game at 49.

JMU's Trey Weis kicked a field goal with six seconds left on the clock, to put the Dukes up for the last time, 52-49.

On the ensuing kickoff, Malcolm Everette fumbled the ball; it was recovered by JMU to end the contest.

YSU Police Blotter

SEPT. 16

Frank Bodak, health and physical education, reported a .22 caliber rifle missing from Beeghly basement. According to Bodak, the rifle was "part of a group of weapons being turned over to his department."

Police followed and stopped a vehicle that broke the entrance gate to the F5 parking lot, hopped the sidewalk and ran over the newly sodded area east of Fedor Hall. The vehicle traveled north on Elm Street, turned west on the west-bound service road, and continued past Fifth Avenue. Police stopped the vehicle on the west-bound service road near Belmont Avenue. Police could not determine whether the gas pedal stuck or the steering wheel jammed. The broken gate has since been replaced.

SEPT. 21

Report filed for burglary of a dorm room in Lyden House. Cordless phone reported stolen.

SEPT. 24

Fire alarm activated at Ward Beecher Science Hall. Determined to be a malfunction.

SEPT. 23
