

OEA executive endorses faculty evaluation proposal

The Faculty Evaluation Proposal was submitted to YSU faculty by Everette Abram, president of YSU-OEA, last month. Abram said the OEA executive committee had unanimously endorsed the proposal.

An OEA chapter meeting is scheduled for Thursday, April 10, in which agenda time will be made for a question-and-answer session concerning the proposal. On April 14, a referendum will be held on the proposal. "The Executive Committee considers itself to be morally bound by the vote of the Chapter members," said Abrams in the report.

The proposed evaluation would measure teaching ability, scholarship, and university service. The measure of teaching ability would be taken partly by consulting colleagues, partly by asking students to fill out a questionnaire. The emphasis of the student evaluation in the total evaluation would not be less than 40 per cent nor more than 60 per cent.

Abram's report revealed for the first time the questions that would be included in the student evaluation.

The questionnaire would be broken up into four different sections. The "General Instructor Rating" would be used in deciding promotion and retention. It would ask the student to rate the instructor according to how he compared with other instructors at the University, and according to his over-all effectiveness.

The other three sections would ask more specific questions to give the instructor a detailed opportunity for self-improvement.

The instructor would be required to give a brief description of his course, stating the principal learning objectives and the basic instructional approaches employed. He would also be required to specify how grades are determined and how many exams and papers would be assigned. This information would be published in a handbook to be distributed to the student body.

The proposal also calls for the institution of an office of instructional improvement, which would manage the student section of the evaluation and would provide counseling and instruction to those faculty seeking self-improvement.

Heide to speak April 9 on 'Feminism Today'

Wilma Scott Heide, former president of the National Organization for Women (NOW), will speak at 2 p.m. Wednesday, April 9, at YSU's Kilcawley Center presented as part of the 1974-75 Artist/Skegges Lecture Series.

The lecture, "Feminism Today," is free and open to the public.

Heide, a behavioral scientist and writer, is at the forefront of NOW, the largest feminist organization in the world.

She is an equality activist who insists that human rights must be indivisible by-sex. The problems of discrimination, she feels, are too massive for individual solutions. She states "it's going to take systematic changes, a profound, universal behavioral revolution. And it's starting to happen. Call me a confirmed optimist, but things are changing."

Heide will speak on women's rights, redesigning jobs, daycare centers and working at home. "Feminism is central to humanism," she is quoted as telling her listeners and calls for needed social reforms.

3rd Campus day for women set; 'Project 75' to be held April 18

The program theme of the third annual campus day for women is "What Do You Do With Your Time?" and is being sponsored by YSU's Committee on Women with the cooperation of the department of continuing education and public service.

Project '75, the program's title, will be held on Friday, April 18 in Schwebel Auditorium and area women as well as students are invited to attend.

There is no cost for the luncheon or program but the reservation deadline is April 12 and is limited to 200 women. Reservations for the event may be made through the department of special studies, 746-1851, ext. 401.

Guest speaker at the luncheon will be Caryl M. Kline, director of continuing education for women at the University of Pittsburgh. Kline is a former Special Ambassador to Sierra Leone, where she conducted a Peace Corp feasibility study both there and in Liberia and Ghana.

OIG panel concludes many fail to get aid

The Ohio Board of Regents was told that thousands of eligible Ohio students are failing to get state aid grants for college, while not all money appropriated for the program has been spent, according to an article which appeared in the Youngstown Vindicator last Wednesday.

A blue-ribbon panel studying the Ohio Instructional Grant program (OIG) made that conclusion, and was very critical of many phases of the OIG, which is supposed to help lower and middle-income students pay higher learning costs.

Students from families with adjusted "effective" income up to $15,000 a year are eligible for grants if they are Ohions attending Ohio colleges or universities.

The committee, comprised of 23 prominent educators throughout the state, charged that the OIG program has failed to tell its story to Ohioans and has intentionally maintained a "low profile." Its application procedure is too complex, the committee said, and its standards contain references to Ohio law much too complicated for the average family to understand.

The committee urged that independent students be treated more fairly. Red tape and legal obstructions have made it difficult for students not dependent on their parents to get

The day's schedule will begin with registration at 8:30 a.m. in the Engineering Science Building lobby and continue at 9 a.m. with Dr. John Loch, director of continuing education and public service, speaking on YSU's adult education offerings.

At 9:15, the Dana Madrigal Singers will perform and at 9:30 Mrs. Marguerite Foley, chairperson of special studies and chairperson of the event, will explain the day's activities.

From 9:45 a.m. to noon, five discussion groups will be presented featuring panel groups: "What Are your Plans?" a lecture designed for students and attending high school seniors and guidance counselors from 15 local high schools; "Would You Like to Come to School";

Hot wax: Bargain concert

by Steve Furgas

Tomorrow night at Beeghly, Major Events will put on the biggest concert it has ever sponsored. There are a few important aspects which students should be aware of concerning this concert.

The first aspect concerns the groups signed to play. REO Speedwagon, Aerosmith and Rush are all big name groups, so much so that it would be hard to choose the headliner. All three have had albums released which have become big sellers. Each group does a fantastic job of rock and roll, both in concert and on the albums. Of 25 groups playing at a recent festival, REO Speedwagon was praised as third best. In the first five months of release, Rush's album has sold over 75,000 copies. Aerosmith's two albums have sold very well and their popularity grows with each month. A number of the concerts that Aerosmith has given have turned into jam sessions, going far beyond the time they had been paid to pay for. Each group is of very high caliber and promise to give YSU the biggest and best concert the campus has ever seen.

Another aspect of this concert is the price. While most other production companies in this area charge between $6 to $7 for only two groups (one of which is usually of inferior caliber), Major Events offers three top name bands for only $4. A bargain by any standards.

A main aspect to this is the dedication, responsibility and sense of professionalism shown by the Major Events people. Most of the chairpersons spent the past two months and their Spring Break in the Student Government Offices making the final arrangements. John Pete, chairperson of Major Events, and all the members should take a well-deserved bow for a concert that will be fantastic, technically as well as musically state aid.

The committee also asked that grant calculations be expanded to include families with up to 10 children. Presently grant calculations only take up to five children into consideration. The committee also wishes that part-time students and nursing and other hospital-based professions be granted aid.

Finally, the committee recommended that the amount of aid given to individuals be increased to better cover the costs of education.

Sixty-nine million dollars would be needed to carry out the committee's recommendations. In the past two years, the OIG has been given a bit more than $36 million.

Applications being taken for Kilcawley office space

The Kilcawley Board Room Assignment Committee is presently taking applications from University groups who feel they need office space in the Center, and who meet the requirements set up by the Committee.

Along with filing an application for an office, organizations must turn in a copy of their constitution, a copy of their University organization recognition sheet, and a list of their officers' names and phone numbers.

Deadline for filing an application is April 15 and forms may be picked up and returned to Nonnie Chatman in the staff offices on the second floor of Kilcawley Center.

To be eligible for office space, a group must meet the following guidelines:

The organization must be open to all students and not exclusively related to any University department or major;

The organization cannot be affiliated with any recognized religious group; and

The organization cannot be an associate group of any larger University group.

Don McTigue, junior, A&S, and a member of the Room Assignment Committee, stated that "even if a group does get called in for an interview that does not mean that they will get an office. The Committee will rank the groups according to certain priorities."

Tentative room assignments will be announced by May 5, said McTigue, and any group wishing to challenge these assignments may do so in writing by May 15. Final room assignments will be announced May 30.

Drawing board

It's back to the old drawing board for members of Student Council. Their failure last quarter to recommend adoption of a new constitution is hardly surprising. In fact, we fully expected that the draft constitution, which would have turned Student Government here into a parliamentary system complete with opposition leader and minority party, would be dealt a quick death-blow by Council, which naturally became indignant, and developed a mild case of hurt pride, when some of its own undertook a sweeping self-improvement course. Anyone would be steamed.

All is not well with Student Government. Somehow, somewhere along the way, government representatives have ceased to represent and begun to caretake. Defeat of the proposed constitution is only the latest in a series of decisions which have been made for students, not by them. This notion that Student Government knows what is best and can be trusted to do what is best for its constituents is dangerous. (The in loco parentis doctrine works the same way, and even that has been undermined since eighteen-year-olds were emancipated from status as children).

It's been said before in this space, and we're a little sorry we must repeat ourselves: Student Government should be replaced with a union. It's the only answer now that all other hopes are killed. No one on Student Council liked the idea of organizing government by departments; they didn't like the idea of becoming a parliamentary-styled body.

But YSU's 13,000 students must-right now-take back the power they have lost, the power which their tuition buys them, the power a student government rightfully owes them. For all intents and purposes, those 13,000 have no power save the power to unionize, and they ought to use it.

All other ways have been tried. A student union would present a united front on pressing issues. Presently, Student Council can hardly muster enough strength to unite on the less important issues. Put the power back where it belongs—in the hands of students who, in effect, have bought and paid for it. Student Government is not likely to budge an inch from its current position of caretaker body. It's enough to make a student want to stay away from the polls on election day! Of course, that would not accomplish a thing. The only way is to unionize. Now.

Publishes evaluation survey

To the editor of The Jambar:

In regard to the Faculty Evaluation Proposal, a petition supporting the concept of evaluating faculty members was circulated among a portion of the YSU student body. The objective of the petition was to determine to what degree, if any, the students sympathized with the evaluation concept.

My analysis of the numerical results is not intended to represent a scientifically-arrived-at conclusion, but merely to give you some indication of the scope of the project, attitudes of the respondents, and the significance of the results.

Of the 11 per cent of the student body actually contacted, 90 per cent acknowledged their support with their signature. 90 per cent of the supporters signed the petitions without any questions, 5 per cent required a verbal summary of the proposal. On the other hand, those not supporting the concept can be grouped into four areas. One, students opposed to the concept (three per cent); two, students not well enough informed (four per cent); three, students who "don't sign anything" (2.9 per cent); and four, students with other reasons (one per cent).

Due to certain restrictive and limiting circumstances, only 11 per cent of the student body was actually approached. Of those approached, 90 per cent support the concept of faculty evaluation. In my opinion, the question of "consistent student attitude" has been answered. Furthermore, the wording of the petition implies support for the concept of faculty evaluation rather than any particular instrument of evaluation.

Says Student Govt. is powerless

To the editor of The Jambar:

The power of Student Government is nonexistent. This so-called powerful organization has just been delivered a severe blow to its basic Constitutional power.

President Coffelt has seen fit to place two students on a very powerful faculty-student committee without even notifying Student Government. This action is in direct violation of the Student Government Constitution which states: Student Government has the power to appoint all student members to joint faculty-student committees. Student Government was delegated this power by none other than President Coffelt and faculty members.

Evidently President Coffelt

feels Student Government is something that can be trifled with. I hope Student Government does not sit back on this very important issue for if we are railroaded on this point other rights that we have as students are in jeopardy.

Warns ERA in 'grave danger'

To the editor of The Jambar:

The women's rights movement is in grave danger. Attempts are being made to repeal the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) in Ohio. Last week joint resolutions were presented to the Ohio House and Senate which will attempt to nullify Ohio's previous ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment. This amendment seeks to end discrimination against women.

Great strides have been made by females in the past several years. Governor Ella Grasso of Connecticut and Prime Minister of Great Britain Margaret Thatcher are two dynamic women who have convinced others that they and other women are ready, willing and able to take as active a role in society as do men. The recognition by employers that capable women are needed at all organizational levels is further evidence of the gains made recently by women. It would be a serious setback in the struggle for women's rights if the Equal Rights Amendment were to be repealed in Ohio.

Therefore I urge everyone to write to their representatives and senators immediately after reading this letter so as to prevent negative action by the state legislature on the ERA.

YSU, Thiel exchange art; seniors take part in project

A student art exchange exhibition project has been initiated between YSU and Thiel College to help foster an awareness of art.

This is the first inter-university exchange exhibit YSU has undertaken and the only such venture in northeastern Ohio and western Pennsylvania.

YSU's exhibit at Thiel will be in the Student Center throughout April and features 30 works by seven selected senior art majors who work primarily in drawing medias.

YSU students participating are: Stacey Begalla, Ken Yacavone, Joe Romano, Mary Ann Dunne, Ed Hallahan, John Rymer and Dave Bashline.

The exchange program enables students of both schools to expose their work in a different academic environment while viewing trends in the exchange school.

Thiel's exhibit will be in YSU's Kilcawley Center Art Gallery from late May through June.

The project was initiated by Dr. Louis Zona, assistant professor of art at YSU, and Ron Pivovar, assistant professor of art at Thiel, and is being supervised by the Kilcawley Center Art Gallery committee.

Kilcawley Center director Phil Hirsch announced Thursday that the Center will sponsor a contest for a mural to cover the north wall of the pub.

The purpose of the contest, according to Hirsch, is to "get as much student art work into the Center as possible." A $50 prize will be awarded to the winner.

A scaled-down mural or graphic art design should be submitted by April 18 and the winner will be selected by a committee comprised of students, Center staff representatives, and Kerry Forbes, interior designer for Campus Planning.

There will be no planned activities; these are left up to the student. However, information and suggestions will be provided if requested.

For reservations, contact Dr. Dorothy Hwopek or Dr. Thomas Copeland at ext. 261 or at the English department as soon as possible.

to cover the north wall of the Pub, excluding the portion of the wall falling behind the stage. It may terminate at the return wall at the northeast steps or it can flow all the way to the northeast door.

Forbes suggests that students submitting entries should take into account the existing color scheme, the traffic flow, furniture layout, the lighting and mounted speakers which will remain on the north wall, and various points from which the design will be viewed. He also noted that Glidden and Pratt & Lambert standard paint colors will be used in painting the design on the wall and that students should take the required use of a premixed paint into consideration in their design. Hirsch emphasized, however, that the rules are "not inflexible."

The winning student will paint his/her design on the wall, and the Center will supply the paint.

For specifics, students are asked to contact Ed O'Neill in the Pub between 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The committee will make its decision about a week after the closing date, and the actual mural is expected to be painted in May.

Remote control airplane built by electrical engineering senior

by Angela Mamonis

The first remote control airplane on the YSU campus has been designed and built by Peter Ashouri, senior, electrical engineering.

Ashouri constructed the model to fulfill his thesis and project requirement for graduation with a Bachelor of Engineering degree. His thesis advisor, Samuel Skarote, electrical engineering, had told Ashouri that no one had ever built a transmitter and airplane for a project here at YSU.

Ashouri attributed his ability to plan and construct the airplane to "a good engineering background from YSU."

48 days

Ashouri built the plane in 48 days at his house, but said this figure does not include the research and planning time. He stated the total cost of the plane came to $48.

The plane is red with black and white checked wings. Ashouri said he used fireproof oil paints.

Ashouri described the plane as three feet long with a wing span of two and one half feet. It is made out of light plywood except for the wings which are styrofoam. Ashouri said he used light-weight plastic to give the plane better flexibility and maneuverability.

Peter Ashouri

The entire plane weighs only 11 ounces and Ashouri pointed out that the power of the engine keeps the wind from blowing it away. He noted that it can travel up to 25 mph.

Ashouri said the plane usually runs for 30 minutes on an eighth of a pint of fuel and this averages out to about 12 cents an hour. There is also an extra fuel tank that can be connected to the main one, Ashouri stated.

500 feet

The plane can reach an altitude of 500 feet and travel within a one mile radius of the controller. It has three wheels and can take off and land smoothly on the ground, Ashouri said. He also noted that the plane lands on its front wheel unlike real planes which land first on their back wheels.

Ashouri described the transmitter system as consisting of 24 resistors, 13 transistors, 18 capacitors, 3 variable coils, 3 inductors, 1 crystal and 1 nine-volt battery. The transmitter has one antenna and the plane has two helical (spiral) antennas.

Transmitter

The transmitter sends out a pulse which is received by the plane and sent to the rudder. "This pulse is changed into mechanical energy by the electro-magnetic actuator," Ashouri said. When the pulse is heaviest on one side, the plane is able to turn either right or left, Ashouri explained.

Ashouri states that he can pilot regular airplanes and hopes to soon get his pilots license.

LaRocque to speak on national defense

Rear Admiral Gene R. LaRocque will speak at 2 p.m. today in the Kilcawley Party Room on the question of National Security and Military Spending. His talk is sponsored by the Community of Concern.

LaRocque was awarded the Bronze Star Medal and the Commendation Medal for his World War II service in the Pacific.

As an admiral, LaRocque's sea commands included two Cruiser-Destroyer Flotillas in the Atlantic and a Task Group in the Mediterranean Sea.

LaRocque is currently Director of the Center for Defense Information in Washington.

The Defense Monitor, the organ of the LaRocque's Center for Defense Information recently stated that "the declining usefulness of military power to cope with economic, social, and political problems must be recognized. The Pentagon's budget is filled with old-fashioned remnants of an era of affluent funding and military interventionist inclinations. Military policies and assumptions need to be modernized more than weapons."

The talk is free and open to the public.
