White's lecture stresses the oneness of humankind

By DIANE TUCHEK
Staff Reporter

"There is no such thing as race — it's hogwash," Dr. John White, anthropology, sociology and social work, said when he addressed the Ohio Cultural Alliance in DeBartolo Hall last night.

In his talk, "The Oneness of Humankind," White said, "Trust me. Don't believe what we taught you ten years ago."

He focused on the similarities of humankind when he used both ancient and modern skulls to demonstrate, and he said there is no scientific method to determine whether a person was either black or white, male or female (unless you have the pelvis). Only the age can be concluded, he said.

White compared a skull given to him by the coroner and found on the East Side to one of an ancient Neanderthal. He pointed out the evolutionary differences, but he stressed the impossibility of determining either sex or skin color.

White said that 50,000 years ago, humankind began to move and settle in various parts of the world except in Antarctica. They adapted to the environments. In areas where the sun was very hot, they adapted by developing darker skin to filter out the rays of the sun, he said.

Their populations increased through intermarriage and caused different gene pools to develop that were different from others. This brought about physical and cultural divergences.

"We are all very different in many ways, but actually, aren't different at all," White said.

He noted that the age of exploration caused people to encounter others in the world. They quickly learned to treat each other differently because of ethnocentrism: measuring a culture by one's own.

There is no yardstick to measure the

First meeting confirms Government members

By KRISTINE HARRINGTON
Jambar Assistant News Editor

Student Government held its first official meeting of the year Monday, Oct. 2 at 4 p.m. Some of the topics of discussion were the progress of the Special Projects and Research Committee and the Financial Appropriations Committee. The Cabinet and four new representative members were confirmed and admitted to the government.

The four representatives are Jonathon Bryan, Scott Smith, Karen Beal and Christina Dzielski. The members were unanimously voted into their positions.

Also confirmed were the members of the cabinet. Brian Fry, president, informed the body of the nominees and the projects they are working on.

Steven Farkas, Secretary of Special Events, is working on bringing major events, like concerts, to campus. He is also responsible for a few of the Homecoming Week events.

Brian Schwalling, Secretary of Legislative Affairs, is looking into state and federal child care programs. He will sit in on Youngstown city council meetings and act as a liaison from the student body to the community.

Police reports include fire alarm, lost purse

By GARY HALL
Jambar News Editor

A false fire alarm and a recovered purse were among the reports listed at the Campus Police station.

At 1 p.m. on Thursday, Sept. 28, officers were sent to investigate the activation of an alarm signaling a fire in Fedor Hall.

The report stated that upon their arrival, the alarm panel showed the signal to be coming from the second floor hallway. One officer proceeded to the second floor with a member of the maintenance department, only to discover that the center smoke detector had been activated by someone who had been smoking. Maintenance then reset the smoke alarm and the policemen vacated the building.

In another report, at 6 p.m. on the same day by a student discovered a small blue and white handbag, valued at $20, in the first-floor women's restroom (Room 215) in Beeghly Center. The report stated the owner could not be located on campus at that time.

Doug Sherl, External Affairs, is coordinating the Great American Smokeout and a five-kilometer race with the American Cancer Society.

Mohan Subramanian, in the newly established position of Secretary of Minority Affairs, is visiting the inner-city schools to inform students of YSU minority scholarships.

Keith Rubenstein, Internal Affairs, is coordinating the Bethany conference and co-sponsoring Alcohol Awareness Week.

Paul Conley, Academic Grievance, has reopened six previous cases and has received six new cases, three of which have been resolved.

The position of Special Assistant to the President is not held by Timothy Guju as previously reported. The position has been filled by Will Miller.

Two committees gave reports. The Special Projects and Research Committee is investigating allegations that the bookstore has a 12-15 percent markup above the suggested retail price on its books, said Second Vice President James Herrholtz.

Also, the Financial Appropriations Committee reported that it has rescinded funding for club sports because the organization receives funding from the Athletic Department.

Three organizations have failed to register this year and will lose funding if they do not register by Oct. 6. They are the India Student Association, Society of Women Engineers and Tau Beta Pi. Monies will be distributed to all registered organizations for publicity purposes.

Ramsey succeeds in classroom as well as on the athletic field

By RICK GEORGE
 Jambar Editor

YSU. Ramsey coached only basketball and volleyball. For seven seasons she was the head coach for basketball while she coached volleyball only for two seasons.

While pioneering female athletics on campus, Ramsey said she did not encounter any prejudice.

"Dom Rosselli was the basketball and baseball coach and he was very supportive," said Ramsey.

After the 1981-82 basketball season, the administration adopted a new rule that a faculty member could not be a coach for a sport.

"I chose the teaching because I always have been a teacher at heart," said Ramsey. "I do miss the association with the players."

Ramsey said her biggest thrill as a coach was the 1979 Ohio Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women championship game against Ohio State in which the Penguins lost 62-56.

"That was for the whole thing," she said.

She said her induction into the YSU Hall of Fame came as a surprise.

"I think Bob Dove (who was inducted also) said it best: 'When you get older the awards you receive mean more,'" said Ramsey. "This award is something I will always cherish."

Drug battle begins with society

The problem is there and people know it, yet they do nothing.

One of the problems that plagues our society is drugs. A recent survey in The Plain Dealer revealed that nearly one-third of United States adults know someone who is currently taking cocaine. And still many say the problem is not serious.

Sixty percent said that treating the user will be more effective than punishment.

Maybe treatment is more effective, but how can it come about if people will not admit they or a friend has a problem.

For the past few years, the United States government has started programs to educate the country about the dangers of drugs.

The nationwide "Just Say No" policy was helpful, but not the answer.

The Reagan Administration tried to defeat the problem, but only watched it get bigger.

President George Bush is starting his "war" on drugs with a multi-billion dollar proposal.

Like Reagan, Bush will probably not accomplish his goals against drugs.

The only logical solution to the problem is for everyone in the country to work together. First, people should help someone who is on drugs, even if they are an occasional user.

Second, the courts of the land have to get tougher on drug offenders.

Third, the country and states should spend money to help the youths of the inner-city before the drug pushers can convince them to take drugs.

China's anniversary not glorious

On Sunday, China celebrated its 40th anniversary of the founding of the People's Republic.

The city was in a festive mood with fireworks exploding, but there was deception behind the festivity.

Soldiers and police set up roadblocks to prevent any non-local residents from trespassing into Tiananmen Square.

The memory of the students who occupied the square had to be present. The streets that had merriment on it on Sunday, only months earlier had bloodshed caused by Deng Xiaoping's order to the army to stop the students.

Since the demonstrations, military rule has been in effect because of the fear of another uprising.

Communist China has survived for 50 years, but uprisings and unrest by students may not allow the Communist leaders to celebrate 50 years from now.

COMMENTARIES

Theatrics help Zsa Zsa in court

Zsa Zsa Gabor called her recent conviction "ridiculous, dahling."

Hey, I can't think of a better word to sum up Gabor's little attention-getting scam using her fame and wealth while using our tax dollars.

No, wait. Yes, I can, but they're not suitable words to print.

Just in case you've been hiding out in a room cut off from the rest of the world, the Gabor case charged the infamous many-times-married Zsa Zsa with slapping a police officer, driving without a valid driver's license and carrying an open container of alcohol in her white Rolls-Royce Corniche.

And, get this, while the officer was checking for other violations, she drove off.

Like she had somewhere really important to go — perhaps there was a limited screening of her great box-office smash Queen of Outer Space? At least her sister had a hit TV show and knew when to call it quits.

Gary Hall

Gabor's courtroom antics splashed her name across headlines, stories detailing her account of how the policeman was so handsome, what she called her "best lesbian outfit," and her crocodile tears as she ran out of the courtroom.

It irks me that people like Gabor think their fame and wealth entitle them to be above the laws that us "common folk" must observe.

And it irks me that people like Gabor can manipulate the press into making this event a media field day just for the sake of getting her name back in the news.

But what really irks me is that after See Gabor, page 8

Killer bees create chaos for studentbody

Have you noticed the lovely flowers and landscaping that surround the YSU campus? Well, I have, and apparently so have the bees.

It has come to my attention that there is a growing bee problem on campus and I'm not talking about just one or two bees that have been bugging me, I'm talking about swarms!

I try to act civilized when one flies up my jeans or in my hair, but it's a bit difficult. I wouldn't say that getting stung by a bee is any fun at all!

Dawn Marzano

The other day before class I decided to read outside for a change, and what a mistake that turned out to be!

As I began to read I noticed there was a bee sitting beside me. It started to buzz around me, trying to get my attention, I assume, and I would have to say that it did.

Before I had the chance to move out of its way it was flying up the hole I had in the knee of my jeans.

I, of course, freaked out and began to scream and jump around like a complete fool, only to find that a fellow student, who also happened to be a guy, was watching me make an idiot out of myself.

Where is all the furniture?

The Lindberg baby?
Gone.
Jimmy Hoffa?
Gone, though he has been spotted in a New Jersey football Stadium.
Patty Hearst?
Gone, but later returned.
Today's topic: Kidnapping.
You say it can't happen in Youngstown, right?
Well, it has happened in Youngstown. In fact, it's happened right under our noses in Cushman Hall.

No, a person wasn't kidnaped, but furniture was.
For the past week I've noticed that the furniture on Cushman Hall's third floor was missing, but I didn't think much about it.
Then, last Thursday, I saw the note written on the chalkboard in the third floor's lounge area: "Okay, we have paid the ransom. Now bring our furniture back."

I was shocked...stunned...dismayed.
A kidnapping...on our campus.
The ransom...already paid. But still...no furniture.
I stood there wiping the tears from my eyes.
Now, I'm all for someone making an easy buck, but hey, a deal is a deal. Where's the furniture?
Before going any further, let me make one thing perfectly clear: I was not involved in this kidnapping. I neither staged this kidnapping so I could have a column for today's newspaper, nor did I pay the ransom.

I guess you could say I'm like former President Ronald Reagan. I don't deal with terrorists.
Believe me when I say I had nothing to do with this kidnapping. In this particular instance, you probably could say I finally have something in common with Tom Selleck — I am an innocent man (pun very much intended).

GEORGE WILL / WASHINGTON POST

Bentsen hopes to play his cards right in Senate

When Lloyd Bentsen steps out to lunch he steps lively, down the block and across the street and straight up the steep steps to the second-floor entrance to the Senate side of the Capitol. "That," he says of the climb, "is part of my discipline."

There is little other discipline in town. The leaves are turning colors and the government is turning somersaults to feign compliance with the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction "law." Under Gramm-Rudman, the deficit has increased for two consecutive years, according to the Senate Budget Committee. Bentsen is decorously disgusted about the way policy is being distorted for cosmetic deficit reductions.

Debate about whether to repeal catastrophic care for the elderly is being influenced by the fact that the program would, in the short run, produce a surplus of contributions over outlays. Also, Congress may approve a "yo-yo" capital-gains tax cut—down now, back up in a few years—to generate some revenue by accelerating sales of assets. Never mind the violation of the sacred (as it was described during the 1986 tax-reform debate) principle that economic rationality, not tax avoidance, should drive investment decisions.

The executive branch, too, is practicing now-nowism. It is fudging forecasts, using creative accounting to shove expenses out of one fiscal year and slosh revenues into another. It is collaborating with Congress in putting part of the savings-and-loan bailout off-budget, thereby raising by billions the real cost of it. And so on. Happy New Year! (Fiscal year 1990 dawned at midnight Saturday.)

Last spring such frauds provoked Bentsen, alone among those attending a White House "summit," to refuse to troop outside to pose for a picture with the President in celebration of the (wink, wink) deficit reduction. Bentsen's absence made Bush cross: Read his pursed lips.

Bentsen's focus is on the far horizon, on raising the nation's anemic savings rate. That would help lower interest rates to levels enjoyed by commercial competitors abroad. If, says Bentsen, Americans saved $20 more per week per household, the savings rate would rise 30 percent, back to what it was not long ago. In this decade, it has been less than half what it was in the three preceding decades. In 1986-87, it was less than one-third.

Bentsen acknowledges that America's disinclination to save may have deep cultural roots that cannot easily be treated by tinkering with the tax code. A cultural contradiction of the welfare state is this: Its entitlements reduce fear of the future, and thus the inclination to save for a rainy day. And weak savings weaken society's ability to make productivity-enhancing investments that make the economy strong enough to finance the welfare state.

Bentsen also acknowledges that demography has an improved destiny in store for us. True, the aging of the population will increase welfare-state costs (pensions, medical care). However, as the work force ages it becomes more productive and saves more.

Still, Bentsen favors forgoing, for now, a capital-gains cut and instead proposed enhancing Individual Retirement Accounts to speed the growth of the savings pool. Many economists say IRAs primarily produce a shuffling of monies that would have been saved anyway. Bentsen counters with the opinions of other economists.

His economists cite, among other problematic evidence, Canada, where the savings rate tracked the U.S. rate until the mid-'70s. Then Canada's rate jumped. That coincided with (there are too many variables to allow certainty about what caused what) an increase in the amount Canadians could contribute to IRAs.

To pay for revenues lost by expanding IRAs, most Democrats want to increase taxes on the wealthy and salt some of the surplus revenue into a deficit-reduction trust fund, thereby looking responsible. Bentsen winces at the tax-increase talk, remembering the 1988 campaign and perhaps contemplating a 1992 campaign, at age 71.

Pardon my language, but: Iowa caucuses. They are only about 850 days down the road and, strange but true, Bentsen loved the 1988 campaign. No wonder: He dug out from under the landslide with his stature enhanced.

Suppose (he can be enticed into supposing) California moves its primary up to, say, March. That would weight the nomination process the way it once was and should be weighted — in favor of well-known veteran players of the political game. Bentsen notes that an early California primary, which would swallow money, would favor someone (like, ahem, the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee) who is good at raising money. He also notes that in 1988 some California polls showed him preferred over Dukakis and Bush.

So: "An IRA in every pot!" The slogan needs work, but there is time for that.

Leader praises people for their assistance

Dear Editor:

Speaking on behalf of the brothers of the Alpha Phi Alpha and Omega Psi Phi Fraternities, I would like to thank Phil

Hirsch, director of Kilcawley Center, Mohan Subramanian, secretary of Minority Affairs, and Brian Fry, Student Government president for making our Fall Quarter Ice Breaker a great success.

Mr. Hirsch allowed us the use of Kilcawley Center for an extra hour which allowed us to draw a larger crowd, and make the dance a huge party. He trusted us and for that we are grateful.

Mohan Subramanian worked tirelessly to ensure the dance became a reality. During the summer quarter Mohan worked with our fraternities and gave us cooperation and guidance. Since his appointment as secretary of Minority Affairs, he has strived to make the African-American students an active part of YSU. The extended hour would not have been possible without his efforts.

Before his election Brian Fry promised to make YSU a University for all students, regardless of race or color. He has held up to his promises. His administration should be applauded for their efforts.

Again, we thank these gentlemen for their help and support. YSU needs leaders like these for its future.

Association plans to aid Hurricane Hugo victims

Group asks for student support

By GARY HALL
Jambar News Editor

Imagine for a moment that everything you hold dear in your life was suddenly ripped away in a violent storm.

It is not easy to visualize this type of disaster, but for the people who have had their lives torn apart by Hurricane Hugo, it's not an easy reality.

According to Renee Markovich, co-president of the Newman Catholic Student Association, and Sally McGreevey, campus minister at the Newman Center, it is important that everyone try to help the victims of this disaster.

In doing their share, The Newman Catholic Student Association will be asking for donations this week to send to the hurricane victims in South Carolina.

According to Markovich, the association will have a table at the "Fall Organizations Fair" from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Wednesday, Oct. 4.

Markovich said they will be collecting clothing, can goods and non-perishable items, and that anyone interested in donating can drop the items off at their table.

If anyone is unable to leave their donations on that day, Markovich said contributions can also be dropped off at the Newman Center, which is located on the corner of Wick and Rayen behind Williamson Hall.

The group requests that all donations be given to them before Oct. 6, if possible.

For more information on how you can help, contact the Newman Center at 747-9202.

What do you think can be done on campus to get students more involved?

Bernadette Martyak
Junior, A&S
"They ought to have a concert and some more activities that will interest students."

Toni Rossi
Junior, Biology
"Let more people know what is going on. More advertisement about events, not just in Kilcawley Center."

Sharon Dobyne
Freshman, Education
"Upperclassmen should help freshman get better acquainted with the different things on campus."

David Morris
Sophomore, CAST
"More housing on campus to give students a sense of belonging. It's a commuter campus and everybody takes off after classes."

Mike Uhrin

worth of any group, White said. One must understand why people do what they do.
Comparing two jungle headhunting groups who practiced that activity because of hunting boundaries to modern society, White showed how the loss of two tribesmen a year is actually much less savage than this country's deaths of thousands on highways and rapes that occur every six seconds.

White appealed to his audience to be more tolerant of different life ways.

"If you need to discriminate among people, do it by blood types," White said. People can be separated by putting type A's together or type O's. But even then, all types occur in every cultural group, he said.

New cabinet position created for minority students

By MIRIAM KLEIN
Jambar Copy Editor

In the last Student Government election YSU's student body voted to upgrade to a cabinet position, Secretary of Minority Affairs to which Mohan Subramanian, senior, A&S, has been appointed. Subramanian recently took some time out to talk a little about what he hoped to accomplish this year in Student Government.

Enthusiastic about the upcoming year,

Subramanian wanted to "commend the student body for their foresight" in the creation of such an important and much needed position.

"I'm there as an active voice," said Subramanian. Now part of the executive branch his position will be included in the decision making processes of Student Government.

"I will be able to [support the] allocation of funds to minority groups and projects," said Subramanian.

To ensure attention and support to on-campus minority groups Subramanian said his position as Secretary is a "direct liaison with Student Government with somebody they can deal with on a student level rather than an [administrative level]."

Two years ago the Marvin Robinson administration saw the need for a new minority affairs cabinet position. The McFarland/Walls administration pushed the issue along and got it on the ballot and the students did the rest, said Subramanian.

One goal that Subramanian saw as particularly important was the promotion of campus activities. "I want to see YSU become a truly integrated campus on the social level and the [minority] groups really taking an active part in the [mainstream] campus events like Homecoming," he said.

And Subramanian said he has the experience to accomplish his goal. "I have had PAC experience, I've been in and around the campus and administration and I know how it works," he said, adding "I've already gotten great responses from the students I represent."

Some long distance companies promise you the moon, but what you really want is dependable, high-quality service. That's just what you'll get when you choose AT&T Long Distance Service, at a cost that's a lot less than you think. You can expect low long distance rates, 24-hour operator assistance, clear connections and immediate credit for wrong numbers. And the assurance that virtually all of your calls will go through the first time. That's the genius of the AT&T Worldwide Intelligent Network.

When it's time to choose, forget the gimmicks and make the intelligent choice—AT&T.

After I regained my composure, I picked up the books I had flung into the air and attempted to sit down again. Of course my efforts were to no avail, as another possible relative of the first bee decided to crash land into my hair!

After that, I was totally fed up and went to seek shelter inside DeBartolo.

Dude, it isn't just myself that has been having nightmares about swarms of bees attacking me, I know a lot of other students who share my sentiments.

Luckily, with the coming of winter, the bees will be gone and we will be safe on campus once again. Hopefully the cold weather will annihilate quite a few of them so we won't have to deal with as many next year.

Just remember dude, if a bee starts to bug you, run—don't walk.

Rumour has it that the building on the corner of Lincoln Ave. and W. Rayen Ave. might be jinxed. The building has been the home for many business, however none of them have been too successful in that particular location.

Over the years, the building has housed the Adventures Bar, The Blarney Stone and Campus Lounge.

As of October 20, the building will have a new occupant. Kinkos is planning to move their business from their current shop a block down from their new home.

Shane Roginski, said the move into a much bigger building will allow them to offer more services such as business cards, rubber stamps, business and wedding stationery and Cannon color laser copiers.

Roginski said that the new move will increase customer service. One of the biggest advantages of the move will be having a parking lot, said Roginski.

Recruiting minority students from the local high schools is a project Subramanian said he was already working on with Admissions. He said that before spring quarter he is planning to take some people from admissions and talk to those high school students who may not be aware of opportunities available like the Dr. Martin Luther King Inner City Scholarship Fund. "I like to make them aware of the opportunities at YSU," said Subramanian.

Subramanian said it is unfortunate these students don't know or perhaps feel they are ineligible for these funds. "They have about $150,000 to spend and only about $47,000 has been used this year. There are a lot of kids that could be going to school and make something better for themselves."

Program offers free education for students over sixty

By LAURA CAVUCCI
Staff Reporter

Many of the organizations on campus are geared toward the traditional rather than the older, non-traditional students. One program that doesn't fall into this category is the College for Over Sixty.

The College for Over Sixty enables non-traditional students to enroll in credit classes on a non-credit, space-available system. Students must be 60 years of age or older and have lived in Ohio for 12 months prior to enrollment.

In 1976, the program began through an act of the Ohio Legislature. The students can attend school free of tuition although they are responsible for books, parking and studio fees. They are not required to take exams and do not receive a grade or credit for the classes.

The 60 plus program began with only 10 students and has increased to 94 since last fall. This year there are about 164 students enrolled.

Teddi Guju, Continuing Education and Education Outreach (CEEO), said that these people want to be "participants in life" and not just drop out because of their age.

Dr. John Loch, director of CEEO, attributes the success of the program to the fact that the American population is growing older. He said that soon senior citizens will be the majority and not the youth. Today, one in nine Ohioans are over 60 and it is predicted that by the year 2030 one in five will be over 60.

Loch describes the program as a "people helping people process."

He said that one of the problems for these students is lack of knowledge about campus life. In order to help the 60 plus students become familiar with classes and activities, a group known as the Senior Mentors was formed in 1988. There are 13 Senior Mentors, who are part of the 60 plus program, who act as an advisory board on such matters as policy, registration and activities. The officers for this year are Larry Gentile, chair; Edward Manning, vice-chair; John Ramsey, vice-chair and Vivian Tamarkin, secretary.

One of the major jobs of the Senior Mentors is to help with registration. Many of the 60 plus students aren't sure what classes to take and the mentors are there to help them. Also, for the first year an orientation day was scheduled to help answer questions about campus life.

"What we're trying to do is creatively and constructively have them involved in the further development of the program," said Loch.

Guju said, "The essence of the 60 plus program is the investing the students make not only in themselves but within classroom dynamics. That's what's so interesting because you have all of these varieties of experiences and they can add to it. They've lived through [a lot]."
Some students are college graduates while others have never attended a university. The highest enrollment in classes is primarily in the history, philosophy and religious studies areas.

The program has many committees which include monthly meetings, a newsletter started by Guju and the mentors, a membership and orientation program, a travel committee and a speakers bureau.
At the monthly meetings, which are held on campus, students and guests have the opportunity to meet with other 60 plus students and hear a guest speaker from YSU's faculty and administration staff.

This month the speaker will be Wilma Loveless, a retired

Hubbard teacher and a 60 plus registrant, who will discuss her experiences in Beijing, China during and after the protests in Tiananmen Square.

Dr. Pei Huang, history, will also speak from a historian's viewpoint and as a native of China. The luncheon will take place at noon Thursday, Oct. 12 in the Ohio Room.

note on the chalkboard, I went home that night and sat and sat and sat and asked myself why? Why? Why furniture?
What kind of society do we live in where we have to kidnap furniture for profit?
I know we humans like to kidnap our fellow man occasionally, and we've even been known to kidnap an animal or two, but furniture?
What's it going to take to stop this senseless act? What kind of kidnapping is it going to take to bring man to his senses? What are we going to see kidnapped next? First furniture, next a clock/radio, then a toaster... hammers...nails...non-returnable bottles...and finally, the worst, a lottery machine.

If this is what the future holds, count me out.
I am begging the kidnapper(s): Please return the furniture... unharmed.
If you turn yourself in now I feel you will be dealt with fairly. Heck, I'd even be willing to have the lights turned out on Cushwa's third floor for a few hours just so the furniture is returned. That way we won't know who stole the furniture and at least it will be returned.

Please, kidnapper(s), do what I have said, because if the rumors are correct, McGruff the crime dog is suppose to be entering the investigation later this week.

And McGruff, I am sure you already realize, has been known to take a bite out of crime.

Club Coca-Cola lacked support of student body

JOHN CHARIGNON/THE JAMBAR

Struttin': These students danced to the hottest groups on a giant television screen. All proceeds from Club Coca-Cola were to go to Special Olympics. The dance was sponsored by Student Government, Greek Activities Council and Coca-Cola. Prizes were also being given out from Reebok and Coca-Cola. Even though the dance wasn't a big turnout, these students seem to be having a good time.

By DAWN MARZANO
Entertainment Editor

Dancing the night away with Club Coca-Cola was definitely not what most students had in mind for this past Friday night in Kilcawley's Chestnut Room.

The event was sponsored by Coca-Cola, YSU Student Government and Greek Activities Council. All proceeds were to go to Special Olympics.

The turnout was not as good as I expected it to be. When I arrived, only a handful of people were on the dance floor, and to my surprise, most of them were guys!

As I sat at a table, I tried to think of reasons why only about 50 people had showed up.

First I thought it was because YSU is a relatively small campus and not dorm-oriented. Then I thought it was the music, but that was highly unlikely because they were playing popular dance tunes by REM, Roxette, Information Society, and even Winger.

A minute later, I realized what the real reason had to be. NO ALCOHOL!

It's too bad that most people need alcohol to have a good time. But what the heck, having a good time is what college life is supposed to be about.

Overall, there was nothing wrong with the Club Coca-Cola dance except lack of student participation. The sound system was definitely worth being there for and so was the giant television screen. In addition, special lighting effects made the evening a bit more enjoyable and interesting.

I asked Janie Stoops and Stephanie Thomas, both students at YSU who were serving refreshments at the dance, why they thought so few people showed, and they said that "the event didn't receive enough publicity." Stoops also said that "there aren't enough special events such as this one to keep the people coming back for more."

That may have been true in the past, but now the newest members of Student Government have plans to sponsor more activities like this on campus.

Pianist part of Dana Concert Series

YSU — World-class pianist Gary Wolf, a distinguished professor in the department of music at the University of Central Florida, will perform as guest artist in the Dana Concert Series at 8 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 12 in the Bliss Recital Hall.

Wolf has received excellent reviews for performances at Carnegie Hall, had an equally successful concert tour of Europe and performs through the United States in chamber music, concerto and recital. He has performed live recital broadcasts on New York's WOXR radio station.

He conducts workshops, master classes, and clinics and colleges and universities. Wolf is past president of the Florida State Music Teachers Association and the American Matthey piano organization.

Wolf holds a Doctor of Music Arts Degree from the Eastman School of Music, where he studied with Cecile Staub-Genhart. His earlier piano study was with Gordon Terwillinger and Adrian Pouliot at Wichita State University. As a Fulbright Scholar at the Mozarteum in Salzburg, Austria, Wolf studied with Kurt Neumueller.

Egan's poetry has been translated in at least seven different languages including Italian, Greek, Japanese, and Swedish versions.

He has also published numerous books of his poetry which include: Collected Poems, Poems For Peace, Snapdragon, Seige, and Midland.

All of Egan's books have come highly recommended by journalists and poets throughout the world.

Butler to host children's day

The Butler Institute of American Art will celebrate young people Saturday, Oct. 7 by hosting the "Sweeney Children's Gallery Second Birthday Celebration" from noon to 3 p.m.

The annual event commemorates the opening of the museum's children's gallery which is located on the lower level in the Education wing.

The afternoon's events will feature "hands-on" activity stations where kids can create art through the methods of silk screening, stamp printing, watercolor painting, and collage.

Highlighting the celebration will be guest performances from the Youngstown Playhouse Youth Theater at 1 p.m. and the Western Reserve Ballet at 2 p.m.

The Youth Theater will present a part of an original play set in the Mahoning Valley entitled, "One Who Falls: An American Indian Legend."

The current children's gallery exhibit comes to the Butler from the Touch Foundation of New York City.

Exene makes first musical effort as solo artist

By PHILIP CEPLICE
Staff Reporter

YSU — Since 1980, the world has come to know Exene Cervenka as the lead singer and co-song writer for the groundbreaking band X. By incorporating hard rock, funk and country elements into their music and combining it with poignant, hard hitting lyrics, X redefined the boundaries of rock and roll, and by doing so, had developed an extremely devoted following.

Old Wives' Tales marks Exene's first musical effort as a solo artist. Produced by X-band mate Tony Gilkyson (who replaced X guitarist Billy Zoom in 1987), Old Wives' Tales reveals a side of Exene Cervenka seldom exhibited in her work with X — with the exception of "He's Got a She," little from this album brings to mind the stirring guitar from Under the Big Black Sun or See How We Are.

What is revealed passionately by Cervenka, however, is a variety of musical genres ranging from folk-rock to country. Although her musical style has changed, her vocal ability remains the same. Her singing cracks and vaporizes and each song is filled with the monotonal harmonies and iconoclastic spirit which have become Exene's longstanding trademark.

Having jumped on the Natalie Merchant Band Wagon, the lyric themes are hard hitting and to the point. From the anti-stars "Leave Heaven Alone" to the condemnation of governmental and religious corruption and hypocrisy of "Here Come the Crucifiers." Cervenka sings with meaning, and though different from her previous albums with X, from beginning to end, Old Wives' Tales is what you would expect from Cervenka and beyond.

With Old Wives' Tales garnering more airtime on college and progressive radio stations each day and a full-scale U.S. tour planned for mid-fall, Old Wives' Tales is definitely something that will grab the attention of alternative music lovers.

Men's tennis team dominates.

By SHARON BUENO

The YSU men's tennis team overpowered visiting Walsh College Sunday afternoon, 9-0, in the team's first dual match of the season.

Though an outstanding team effort, notable performances were turned in by senior Scott Orlando, who outlasted Ravi Hull in a three-set match, 5-7, 6-1, 6-1, and Brian Fry, who won a first-set tie-breaker, 7-4, and coasted to a 7-6, 6-3 win over Chris Muller.

Though all three doubles teams dominated their opponents, Head Coach Don Getz said he sees room for improvement in their overall play and the team will concentrate on that in coming weeks.

"Walsh was good for an opening dual match because it gave us a chance to see what we've got," Getz said, adding that their match with Edinboro be a better test for the team.

Both the women and the men will start intersquad tournaments to determine final team positions this week with Dan Haude and Cindy Lane leading their respective teams.

The men's next dual match is scheduled for Wednesday on the YSU courts at 3 p.m. and then head to the Bowling Green Fall Invitational tournament on Thursday.

against Morehead State on Nov. 19, 1983.

The Penguins came on strong this past Saturday and blasted Morgan State University as YSU defeated the Golden Bears 45-22.

With 25 points of their 45 coming in the third quarter, YSU showed their fans as well as their future foes that they can put the ball in the end zone.

After a strong start in the first half with placekicker Robert Fozkos hitting a 24-yard fieldgoal and fullback Steve Jones taking the ball in from the one in the second quarter, YSU allowed the Golden Bears to come from behind to take the lead before the half.

Despite the four point lead Morgan State had going into the third quarter the Penguins came out ready to play football. In the second series of the half quarterback Ray Isaac made up for turning the ball over in the first series by running for a 55-yard touchdown.

Shortly after Isaac's run Fozkos kicked his second field goal of the day for 52 yards. This field goal put Fozkos in the record books for being tied with Paul McFadden for the third longest field goal in YSU history.

McFadden holds the number one and number two places with a 54-yard kick against Murray State on Sept. 13, 1980 and a 53-yard kick against Cincinnati on Sept. 25, 1982. McFadden also kicked a 53-yard kick against Akron on Oct. 3, 1981. McFadden's 52-yard kick came

The third member of this three way tie was kicked by Carey Orosz against Western Illinois on Oct. 27, 1979. Later in the game Fozkos split the uprights with a 46-yarder.

Offensive standouts for the Penguins were Archie Herring with 143 yards in 13 carries with two touchdowns and a two-point conversion.

Jones also rushed for 89 yards in 18 attempts and scored one more touchdown bringing his total to two on the day.

Along with Fozkos' sparkling kicking performance was the foot of YSU punter Larry Bucciarelli who kicked four times with his longest traveling 53-yards.

On the defensive side of the ball two backs, John Matakovich and David Newby, shined with two interceptions apiece.

On specialties Tony Tellington blocked his second field goal attempt of the season in the first period. The first was two weeks ago against the Akron Zips.

This victory give the Penguins a 2-2-0 record and introduces the Golden Bears to the agony of defeat giving them a 3-1-1 slate.

This week the Penguins are on the move as they travel to Terre Haute, Ind. to take on the Indiana State Sycamores. Game time is 1:30 p.m. EST. in their Memorial Stadium.
