Revolt!

Academic Senate passes resolution faulting Trustees

By FRANK MELILLO
News Editor

At an emergency Academic Senate meeting yesterday, a resolution was passed which condemned the YSU Board of Trustees' action in not following their own presidential search mechanism.

Dr. Gratia Murphy, Dr. Fred Blue, and past Student Government President Brian Fry all presented resolutions that shared the idea that the Academic Senate rejects the Trustees' selection of Atty. Paul Dutton and that a new search and selection process be implemented.

Presented by Fry was a resolution stating that the Board of Trustees chose a candidate who did not complete the presidential search process and they completely disregarded the recommendations of the five presidential search committees on campus.

Fry urged that the Senate reject the selection of Dutton and begin a new selection process. Commenting on the Board's actions, he said, "The Board of Trustees have put personal interests in front of our lives and careers."

Fry also took time out to criticize Dutton's claim that there were numerous supporters for his candidacy. "As you can see," said Fry as he looked out over the more than 300 persons in attendance, "his supporters are vastly outnumbered by people looking for honesty and integrity in the selection procedure."

In addition, Fry went on to criticize board members Michael Monus, John Geletka, Edward Flask, Martin O'Connell and Mark Lyden for their actions in the procedure. "Stop using this University as a pawn in backroom deals, and start using your positions to benefit us," said Fry.

Eric Stephens, former Second Vice President of Student Government, followed Fry's presentation and took the floor to talk of threats and pressures recently placed on members of Student Government. He said that "as a result of the position student leaders have taken, there have been attempts to pressure them from expressing their views on the trustees' position." He said that Student Government leaders and student Senators have been victims of this "attempt to discourage free thought and action" and that they were fearful for themselves and for their family members who were YSU employees.

Stephens said that Student Government leaders will not yield to the pressure, and mentioned that they have applied their energy to the resolution that rejects the Trustees' selection and calls for a new selection process.

When it came time to vote on the Senate's resolution, Fry made a motion that a roll-call vote be held instead of a secret ballot. An Academic Senator seconded the motion and a roll call vote of 60 "yes" answers, 4 abstentions and 0 "no" votes resulted.

Blue, history, spoke on behalf of the Faculty Interviewing Committee and reported on a letter drafted by the interviewing body and sent to the Board of Trustees. The letter states that the board failed to follow the procedures of the presidential search mechanism--a mechanism which the board itself constructed Dec. 11, 1990.

Blue noted that Atty. Dutton did not meet the criteria that were established by the Faculty Interviewing Committee, and therefore the faculty committee does not recommend Dutton as a candidate for the presidency of YSU.

Blue also said of the finalists, "Each of the candidates we recommended has a record of achievement in university settings and each communicated a positive vision for YSU."

Murphy, English, moved that the Academic Senate "adopt and strongly endorse the findings of the Faculty Interviewing Committee" that were presented in the letter by Blue.

Student Government leaders upset with Board's decision

By KELLI LANTERMAN

Jambor Editors

Newly elected Student Government President Scott "Gus" Smith and past President Brian Fry Tuesday protested the Board of Trustees' selection of Atty. Paul Dutton as president of YSU.

Said Smith, "Our protest is on the Board of Trustees circumventing the search procedure. Our problem is that they have taken two months of hard work and thrown it out the window."

"I do not have a problem with Michael Monus, I do not have a problem with Dr. John Geletka, and I do not have a problem with Atty. Dutton," said Smith. "I have a problem with not taking three outstanding recommendations. They (the board) chose to ignore those three nominees and they elected Mr. Dutton."

Fry said that he still holds his initial position which appeared in a letter to students and a Jambor article. This letter talks of "backroom deals and people taking care of their buddies." Fry noted that the law firm the Dutton is part of has represented Pharmor Inc., which is owned by board of trustees member Mickey Monus. Fry said that Dutton, Monus and Geletka are good friends.

Fry believes strongly that the appointment Dutton received on Friday is a result of these connections

Fry noted that the actual appointment did occur in a backroom executive session meeting about which information was not even disclosed publicly.

At last Friday's trustees meeting, Dutton was elected president in a closed-door executive meeting, which is a direct violation of the open meetings law. This law states that "a resolution, rule or formal action of any kind is invalid unless adopted in an open meeting of the public body."

An emergency trustees meeting will be held today at 3 p.m. in Tod Hall because the board needs to conduct the vote in a public meeting.

Another fact that needs to be addressed is that Monus did not meet with, talk to, or interview any of the candidates except Dutton, said Fry.

"He didn't meet the candidates. Why does he get to vote?" said Fry.

According to Fry, Dutton was not recommended for the presidential chair by any committee that held interviews with the candidates.

In fact, the recommendations from the YSU Foundation were 39-1 in favor of Billy J. Franklin, which Smith feels is a "resounding vote of approval."

Smith stressed that Student Government as a body is not personally attacking Dutton, but the way in which the matter was handled.

"The way the whole thing was run was wrong. I'm totally against it. It was illegal. In every way possible it was wrong," he said.

"Our concern is that the Board's actions prove degrading

The YSU Board of Trustees has adopted a new policy regarding the selection of a new YSU president: they base their decisions on feelings. Newly elected vice-chairman of the board, Michael Monus, was quoted in The Vindicator as saying "I have a deep feeling that Paul (Dutton) is the best person for the job" (Saturday, June 15). This was the day after the Board of Trustees went into an executive session and elected Dutton as president. However, because the trustees realized they were violating a law by electing Dutton behind closed doors, Dr. John Geletka, chairperson of the board, has changed his story and now says that Dutton wasn't really elected. That's kind of ironic, because the headline The Vindicator ran Saturday specifically said "Trustees elect Dutton," and Dr. Geletka was shown on WYTV Channel 33 videotape stating that Dutton "was nominated in an executive session and received a majority of votes." That sounds pretty definite.

The Jambar is not attacking Dutton personally, but the way in which he was elected. The board's behavior was an insult to the members of this University community. Monus had a "feeling" about Dutton — and feelings are about all Monus can judge on. He did not interview or meet with one other candidate besides Dutton. His vote should not be counted since he cannot make a judgement on the other candidates.

Not only were the actions of Monus unfair and degrading to this University, but so were those of Dutton. Each presidential candidate was required to attend two days of interviews, but he withdrew from the candidacy before interviews began on the second day. Thus, he never met with the special committees that were supposedly set up to aid the trustees in their search. Among these committees were Student Government, the YSU Foundation, Alumni, and faculty members. A man who didn't even complete his interviews should not even be considered for a job as important as president of a university. And if the board were going to disregard all of the hard work that the committees took so seriously and put so much time into, the committees should not have been appointed in the first place. The board created a facade that led people to believe that they were going about things appropriately, when apparently some board members knew all along who President Humphrey's successor would be.

Student, faculty and staff support is needed for a rally that will take place outside of Tod Hall before the Board of Trustees meeting today at 3 p.m. It's time to show the board that the YSU community does care.

Past president Fry expresses doubts

Brian Fry
Past President,
Student Government

The search for YSU's next president has generated substantial controversy within and outside of the University community. There have been claims that candidates were "snubbed" from the final selection process while others, including myself, stated concern over backroom deals and political favors cut between candidates and trustees. Some faculty and staff chose to hop on the political bandwagon by pledging support for future favors and possible promotions.

Big business interests could not be left out of this selection process, with some people standing to personally profit depending on which candidate was selected. Local troubleshooter Robert Hagan, the Valley's representative, and Youngstown political kingpin Don Hann: commented that they thought the search process was definitely tainted and possibly "fixed." Meanwhile, we had six candidates, four of which were extremely well qualified and two that were clearly a rung lower on the academic ladder in both experience and achievement.

It seems unusual that this much controversy should surround the selection of the president of an academic institution. The events outlined above represent problems usually associated with races for the Senate, Governor, or the Presidency of the United States. These events are not reflective of what many in the academic world would consider the norm for a state university with about 15,000 students.

Upon expressing this concern to a colleague, I received the troubling statement, "That's Youngstown." Having lived here for four years, I am well aware of Youngstown's notorious political climate as well as its much-publicized reputation as a former Mafia town. Youngstown State University, however, has had little need to throw its hat into this vicious political circle. Our University is capable of functioning autonomously from city government and, as the aforementioned situations point out, we should do just that. Obviously, University-city relations cannot be overlooked, but YSU's inner community can and should be our first priority.

Priorities are another issue of controversy surrounding the presidential search. Past trustee chair Emily Mackall outlined academics, research and community relations (in that order) as the trustees' top criteria for the candidates. These criteria seem appropriate; however, a few trustee members disagreed with the list and decided to compose their own agendas.

Professor applauds Vindicator; criticizes board

Dear Editor:

In the past I frequently have been critical of the quality of reporting style which The Vindicator has utilized, especially concerning news of local organizations and institutions. Thus, I now feel compelled to voice my personal approval and offer my congratulations to those responsible for the quality of journalism evidenced in the excellent articles and well-focused Sunday editorial dealing with the unexpected appointment of a local attorney as the YSU President-designate by the trustees this past Friday.

For the second time in recent history, this body has selected a new president in a clandestine "smoke-filled room" atmosphere. The irony in this latest sordid episode is that these trustees purportedly took cognizance of the comprehensive study conducted by the search committee which had been charged with this responsibility. Their recommendations were obviously reported at Friday's meeting and then blatantly disregarded by a majority of the board.

Although I was not part of the formal search procedure, I have recently been very apprehensive about reports which circulated among colleagues who were involved with the mechanics of the search interview process and the deliberations which followed. My fears were fully realized ed with Friday evening's television news announcement and The Vindicator's coverage of this decision throughout the weekend.

That yet another charade has been carried out by these "responsible" individuals, and their collective decision "railroaded" into reality via this very conspicuous power-play, is an insult to the intelligence of this community and to the integrity of this University. No one expects the trustees to be a rubber stamp for the wishes of the faculty and administration. However, to ignore professional expertise and the informed decision-making process which was recommended to them on Friday is an indication of their patent insensitivity and of their obvious ignorance of the nature of this office.

I trust that we have not heard the end of this sham and that the "Sunshine Law" illegality and public outcry will reverse this unfortunate decision.

Hanni criticizes action of Board of Trustees

By FRANK MELILLO
Jambar News Editor

The YSU Board of Trustees' controversial election of Atty. Paul M. Dutton to the YSU presidential chair last Friday has caused the board to lose a great deal of credibility in Youngstown, according to Don Hanni, area attorney and Mahoning County Democratic Party chairman.

He added that the board should do the community a service and all resign in unison.

Hanni told the Jambar Monday afternoon that Michael "Mickey" Monus had reaffirmed and demonstrated the golden rule which reads "he who has the gold--does the ruling." This comment is in relation to Monus' action to re-instate and recommend Paul Dutton to the Board of Trustees as a possible YSU presidential candidate.

Dutton was subsequently elected on Friday evening by the Board of Trustees in a 5-3 vote with one abstention. The voting is being protested because it was done behind closed doors and as such violated the Ohio open meetings law.

Hanni said that he cannot fault Monus because Monus has been pushing for Dutton since the presidential race began.

Hanni mentioned that he was behind Harry Meshel from the beginning of the race for a new president. He said that Meshel, whom he said practically built the University, would see to it that the University was taken care of and funded properly.

"I was for Harry Meshel from the get go," said Hanni. "I, likewise, was the first to say that the fix was in for Dutton."

Hanni completed his comments by saying again that Monus cannot be faulted for his actions because "he did everything to get his man appointed."

Hagan encourages Dutton to step aside in candidacy

By FRANK MELILLO
Jambar News Editor

State representative Robert F. Hagan Wednesday called upon YSU President-Designate Paul Dutton to step aside, in the interests of the University and community, until a clear consensus exists for his presidency.

In a statement to the Jambar regarding the Trustees' appointment of Dutton as the next YSU president, Hagan said: "The members of the Board of Trustees have put themselves in a compromising position. They have forced a vote on the presidency in a manner that is detrimental to both the University and this community. They should be protecting the integrity of this institution of higher education; they have failed."

"Under the present conditions, the University president should have the full support, or at least more than just a questionable majority, of the trustees. You cannot run a university on a 5-4 vote. This is not a Supreme Court ruling."

"Some may believe that the University is their private domain; it is not. Rather, this University belongs to the taxpayers, to Youngstown and to all of us, and I will not stand silent while others use it as if they own it."

"This University is the backbone of this community in economic development, jobs, education and furthering the goals of this community. I urge Paul Dutton to step aside for the good of this University and the community until there is a clear consensus for his presidency."

When rumors of a "fix" for Dutton's presidency became public, Representative Hagan was quoted in an April Cleveland Plain Dealer article that he felt Dutton was already chosen for the presidential job.

In the May 3, 1991 issue of the Jambar, when then-Student Government President Brian Fry strongly criticized the Trustees, Fry said he was pleased with Hagan's support of this University.

Meshel questions credibility

By JAMES T. KLINGENSMITH
Managing Editor

Throughout the controversy on campus involving the YSU Board of Trustees and their announcement of the new president, many different emotions have surfaced among people closely involved with the YSU community. State Senator Harry Meshel is one of these people.

Meshel stated, "It's very difficult to talk about because I was a candidate. If I state a negative answer, it sounds as if I am acting vindictive."

Meshel, who applied for the position of University president, was not chosen as one of the six finalists and was faced with accusations similar to those made against Atty. Paul Dutton. The biggest accusation was that the presidential position would be used by the candidate for their own or someone else's personal gain.

Meshel stated, "I was disturbed that some of the board members thought that I was applying to become a lobbyist. I am in a better situation to be a lobbyist in my current position than with the University."

Meshel, however, did respond to the board's action by stating that "this action (the appointment of Dutton as President) has put a black mark on the credibility of the Board of Trustees. It also does not help the University's credibility around the state of Ohio," said Meshel.

Meshel stated that "the University is the single most important institution in the area. It's our hope for the future. It's what many of us have committed our lives too."

However, Meshel announced that "I've never felt that the University owed me anything because I did some things up there. My job is to do the best I can do for the area, and I did."

Child care facility to open in fall of 1992

YSU — YSU's Board of Trustees are going ahead with plans to open a child care facility for children of faculty, staff, and students by fall 1992.

The trustees authorized the University administration to draft an operating plan and budget as well as to seek an architect to design a building for the project.

The Ohio Board of Regents has provided an $83,500 grant, which YSU must match, to get the project off the ground.

Dr. Charles A. McBriarty, vice president, Student Services, will create the operating plan in conjunction with representatives of the departments of Elementary Education, Home Economics and the Home Economics' Child Care Technology Program.

"I hope we can develop a model facility to serve as an academic setting to train students, to conduct research, and to develop appropriate curriculum for early education," said Dr. Mary J. Beaubien, chair of the Home Economics Department.

Beaubien wrote the proposal that secured the grant from the Board of Regents. She was a member of the Ad Hoc Committee on Child-Care which recommended the establishment of an on-campus child care facility.

In its January 1991 report, the committee recommended renovation of the former Carriage House in the Wick Oval, but upon inspection the University found asbestos in the building.

Because the cost to remove the asbestos would be about $45,000, the University decided to build a new facility on an alternative site, also in Wick Oval, on property owned by YSU that is between the Carriage House and Bliss Hall, said McBriarty.

Facts of "Trustees Scandal" degrade YSU community

James T. Klingensmith
Managing Editor

What has happened to YSU? Within the last six months, the University has seen some of its athletes in trouble, a department head was caught with his hand in the cookie jar and now the University faces the "Trustee Scandal." Is something going on that we do not know?

Well, one thing is for certain; as students and faculty members of YSU, our opinions do not count.

On what do I base this accusation? Easy! I look at the facts.

FACT 1: A search committee comprised of several professors from different schools and colleges on the campus was organized to thoroughly interview each of the final six candidates. This committee completed the assignment given to it by the board and came up with three names. Atty. Paul Dutton was not one of them, mainly because he withdrew and did not complete his interview. The board still selected Dutton.

By this action, a select majority of the board appears to be saying that the members of the YSU presidential search committee are full of hot air or just incompetent. How could this be? Aren't these the people responsible for educating the students here at YSU?

It seems as though appointing this search committee was just a legal formality to make it look as if the board was utilizing the proper channels in selecting a new president.

It looks as if a select majority of the board has no faith or no interest in what the faculty of this University have to say. If they did, wouldn't they have strongly backed at least one of the committee's recommended candidates?

FACT 2: YSU's Student Government has been strongly opposed to the selection of Dutton. In fact, they may have been one of the strongest forces influencing Dutton to drop out of the presidential race. (By the way, if Dutton couldn't handle the pressure earlier during the selection process, how can he handle the responsibility of being president of this university? Will he quit as president when the going gets tough?) Student Government has been criticized and is still facing strong opposition to its stand by a few board members and certain faculty members on campus. If the board were completely open-minded toward the students of this campus, wouldn't you think they would listen to the voice representing the students?

FACT 3: If The Vindicator is getting involved, something must definitely be wrong. An institution as large and as powerful as The Vindicator would not waste its time unless its executives honestly believed something was wrong with the situation. The Vindicator has nothing to gain and everything to lose by making certain speculations about conflict of interest. If the editors are willing to risk libel suits, which they appear to be doing, they must believe they are right.

FACT 4: If the board followed the proper procedures, why was there an emergency Academic Senate meeting yesterday and why is the board holding a special meeting today to clear up any "misunderstanding"? Somebody screwed up somewhere and it appears that the board members are trying to fix the problem.

The board's appointment of Attorney Paul Dutton as president has upset many people on campus, including faculty, classified employees and students. Since this is the case, Dutton is the wrong man for the job. The president of this University is responsible for representing close to 20,000 people who make this University run, not just nine board members. If the board members are serious in their intentions to find the best president for the University, they should reconsider

Board of Trustees approve new budget for 1991-92

YSU — Anticipated enrollment increases helped YSU's Board of Trustees approve a $87.9 million budget that averts layoffs in the face of cuts in state appropriations.

The 1991-92 budget assumes a student enrollment of 15,650 in fall 1991, up 196 students, or 1.3 percent, over fall 1990.

G.L. Mears, executive director of the Budget and Institutional Services, said the 0.8 percent increase in total spending over 1990-91 "masks a problem."

The problem is that state appropriations to Fund One, the primary source of funds for academic expenditures, are down. That 0.6 percent decrease is offset in the budget by an anticipated increase of 1.5 percent in general fee revenues.

"In over 80 years, this institution has never had layoffs, and we're straining not to break that record," Mears said.

The use of $620,000 in Contingency Reserve Funds will help avert layoffs in 1991-92, Mears added. However, that withdrawal leaves only about $1.2 million in the reserve fund, or $2.3 million below the level for reserves recommended by the Ohio Board of Regents.

Mears also noted that the tuition for full-time undergraduates will increase by $225 to $2,415 per year, the maximum increase allowed by state law; however, the tuition will remain second lowest in the state.

In another attempt to reduce expenditures and avoid layoffs, the University did not fill numerous job vacancies during 1990-91. The total number of authorized University positions in next year's budget has dropped from 1,772 this year to 1,761 in 1991-92. The reduction was accomplished entirely by attrition, said Mears.

Mears said YSU will be able to pay the previously negotiated salary increases to members of the YSU/Association of Professional and Administrative Staff and to the YSU/Northern Ohio Patrolmen's Benevolent Association.

However, contracts with YSU-Ohio Education Association, which represents faculty, and YSU-Association of Classified Employees expire this year, and Mears said no reserve funds are available for pay raises.

Furthermore, no funds are budgeted for salary increases for exempt professional administrative staff during 1991-92.

Some of YSU's most prestigious research programs likely will not be funded during 1991-92 because the state budget eliminated funding for Selective Excellence Programs.

Those programs include research on sickle cell anemia, chemiluminescence and adult respiratory distress, among others.

YSU Trustees to meet in special session

YSU — YSU's Board of Trustees will meet in a special session at 3 p.m. today in the trustees' meeting room of Tod Hall.

On Monday, June 17, Dr. John F. Geletka, chairperson of YSU's Board of Trustees, made the following announcement:

"On Friday, June 14, 1991, the Board of Trustees of Youngstown State University held an executive session to consider the selection of a successor to Dr. Neil D. Humphrey as President. Consistent with Ohio's 'Sunshine Law,' Ohio Revised Code Sec. 121.22, the Board discussed and considered candidates. Ultimately, a majority of the Board was in agreement that pending clarification of a number of contractual issues, Paul Dutton would be the choice.

"The Board recognized that selection of a new president would require formal action in an open meeting. Since matters remained to be clarified before taking formal action, the Board could have adjourned. However, because this Board wanted to be open rather than secretive about the progress of its deliberations, an announcement was made. The announcement was not intended as a substitute for a public vote on the formal action required to hire a president.

Such a vote will be taken by a roll call of the Board after a full opportunity to discuss the decision has been made available to each board member at a future public meeting.

Care

In the tentative operating plan, the facility will serve about 50 children in the toddler and preschool age categories for 40 hours per week, McBriarty said.

Once the center is well established, operating hours may be expanded, and service to infants and school age children may be added.

Cost per child still must be determined. The new building would contain about 2,240 square feet of space at an estimated cost of $167,000.

This situation points out a glaring problem at YSU. Of our nine trustees, there is a clear lack of significant academic backgrounds. Unfortunately, we have a board consisting of more than one multi-million dollar businessman who believes that the corporate structure should be applied to YSU. This problem can, and should be addressed by Governor George Voinovich, who appoints the trustees.

This long list of problems leads one to conclude that YSU may, indeed, be treading on dangerous soil. The person appointed to the position of YSU President will, hopefully, guide this University away from an impending corporate structure and address academic issues such as the advancement of our graduate school — which should be the backbone of the University's academic credibility.

The argument is whether we are a corporation influenced by politics and men with gold-lined pockets, or if we are an institution providing opportunities for intellectual advancement and personal development. I opt for the latter. After all, what are we here for?

University is going to be sold out. This is going to be 'Monus State University,' and that's what we are afraid of," Smith said. "The whole process was thrown out the window by a group of people who conspired behind closed doors, and that's another problem."

Fry said that Dutton's credentials, as stated in his resume, do not compare to any of the other five finalists.

Fry said, "You have to look at the resumes down the list. You cannot put him anywhere but sixth in academic credentials."

Smith said that YSU is an institution of higher learning, and should not be treated as somebody's toy.

To Smith, an institution of higher learning should be above reproach. "We are for honesty, integrity, academics, community," said Smith. "We are not for personal favors."

According to Fry, the Board of Trustees are "going to do exactly what they want to do, just as they've done throughout the entire interview process. It doesn't matter if the Academic Senate stands on its head.

"It's unfortunate that students, faculty, administrators and staff have to be subjected to that type of treatment. We have people making crucial decisions for this University who disregard the members of the YSU community so completely that they reject every recommendation that was made."

Fry also stated that this election was in fact premeditated, and that Dr. Geletka and Mr. Monus contacted Dutton a week prior to the board meeting and asked if he'd still be interested in the position even though he was no longer a candidate.

"If there's not a buddy system operating in that context, then I've never seen one," said Fry.

No response

The Jambar staff is doing their best to keep the YSU community up to date with information on how certain political figures are responding to the controversy on campus. The Jambar ran into trouble, however, with Governor George Voinovich. His communications department refused to make a statement despite repeated attempts made over the past three days to obtain a comment.
