

$1,000,000 Awarded For University Growth

The University was awarded a gift of $1,000,000 for use in Project One, the University's expansion program, it was announced last week.

University President Howard W. Jones announced that he was not at liberty to disclose the donor and said that no decision has been made as to which of the three buildings scheduled in the first phase will get the money.

Dr. Jones said the trustees and the donor will discuss whether the money will go to these or a combination science - engineering - research building or several buildings to house these fields of study.

The University already has some $4 million available to begin the buildings with work scheduled to begin late next semester. The priority list is: student union building and a 1,000 car parking lot; a fine arts building; and an additional classroom building.

The much needed parking lot will be black-topped and under the direction of a supervisor so as to maintain order. The fine arts building will house facilities for art and music students.

The original plans calling for a 16-acre redevelopment, have been changed by federal commissions and now allow for some 18 acres. The area north and west of the campus has been surveyed and plans for improvement and relocation of utilities, demolition of structures and relocation of families are now in process.

The L-shaped area affected borders on Kennywood Court on the north, Lincoln Avenue on the South, Bryson St. and Fifth Ave. The complete 10-year redevelopment plan will extend the campus to the proposed Madison Ave expressway on the north and to Fifth, Lincoln and Wick Aves.

Dr. Jones also said "present plans and progress points towards the fact that in the future a graduate school will be initiated. It is not far around the corner, but we can't have it until the proposed facilities are completed."
