Dr. Sniderman enjoys creative writing class

by Carol Hayward

Creative Writing (English 746) is described by Dr. Stephen Sniderman, associate professor of English, as an "underground literature class," because disguised as an outlet for self-expression, it actually teaches students to criticize and evaluate literature.

According to Sniderman, the class is "One of the most valuable (courses taught at YSU) because it forces students to think, deal with language, evaluate their own value systems and tastes. They learn about their own thinking process."

Sniderman says he "cannot force someone to write imaginatively, it's not valuable." Instead students learn about the relationship between language and reality, how to manipulate words, and some of the difficulties involved in creating original, effective fiction.

Sniderman says the class does not teach students to be more creative. Rather, it provides an opportunity for students to express themselves creatively, gives them a chance to get feedback from classmates and encourages them to examine their reasons for writing. They also learn to evaluate their own strengths and weaknesses, as well as learn to appreciate the skill of other writers they read in literature classes.

Students enroll in Creative Writing with a desire to write, Sniderman says, and often know what they want to write about when they come to class. Students generally start out writing one type of story and stick with that for the entire quarter. "They lock into a pattern or world," he says.

This characteristic, Sniderman says, may be influenced by television. Many of the stories produced by the class are similar to situations found on TV. He estimates that "three-fourths are melodrama or sentimental." He says death and suicide are common in the fiction he receives, and sophistication and irony are rare.

Students "tend to take extremes and immediately move toward the obvious." They often use formulas and conventions. But, he adds, all writers go through similar stages and only the best transcend the need for such techniques at some point.

The students cover "a tremendous range" as far as ability is concerned, Sniderman says. He encounters competent writers, very ineffective writers and, rarely more than once per quarter, highly sophisticated writers. Of the latter, he says, "The class usually winds up trying to interpret the piece, rather than providing criticism."

The format of the class is simple. Sniderman designed the requirements based on incentive so the class will run smoothly. Students discover they can get an "A" by producing fiction of a certain length, attending class regularly and meeting deadlines. The quality of the work is not graded. Stories are xeroxed when they are turned in and classmates discuss, evaluate and criticize each other's work.

The class is composed of students from all schools within the University, Sniderman says. He asks students to fill out introductory cards stating name, major and last novel published. This quarter he has students majoring in history, business, allied health, broadcasting and corrections, but only two English majors.

His students exhibit creativity beginning with the first class meeting. In response to "last novel published," one student replied War and Peace and another said, Lord of the Rings, but the manuscripts were stolen and published under another name.

Sniderman says this quarter marks the twenty-ninth time he has taught the class. But, he says, "It never is the same. The material is always interesting, even when it's not particularly effective." He enjoys teaching the class, and calls it a blessing because there is "not much preparation, but a lot of reward."

Black student gives view of YSU

by Lisa Armour

How does it feel to be a black student at YSU?

Quentin Lowry, senior, Business Administration, said, "Being a black student at YSU is the same as being black anywhere else. You experience the same prejudice and the same racialism."

He added that he doesn't want people to get the wrong impression of what he means by racialism. "Racialism is the inability to understand another race's culture. And that doesn't just apply to whites not understanding blacks' culture; that applies to many people in all races."

Lowry said when he was a student at Shaker Heights High School in Shaker Heights, Ohio, which is an integrated school in an integrated neighborhood, it was like being in paradise or being in an unreal world; there wasn't a color line and everyone liked each other.

He added that when he came to YSU he discovered the real world: "When I'm in class at YSU and especially if I'm the only black student, I feel under pressure. I feel I have to prove that I am intelligent just because I'm black."

Lowry said he feels that YSU is too white-oriented. "When YSU has concerts, parties, and other social events it usually has white entertainers, and where does that leave black students? I'm not stressing equality in all activities, because blacks are a minority at YSU, but what I am stressing is that we (blacks) should have more activities that feature people of our race."

He continued, "Black students have come a long way since I first came to YSU in 1974. When I first came here, blacks

"Ski more for less money" basic Ski Club Philosophy

by Bill Padsak

During the months when snow is falling many students' thoughts focus on skiing. At YSU students can take full advantage of this sport by joining the Penguin Ski Club, whose basic philosophy is to "ski more for less money."

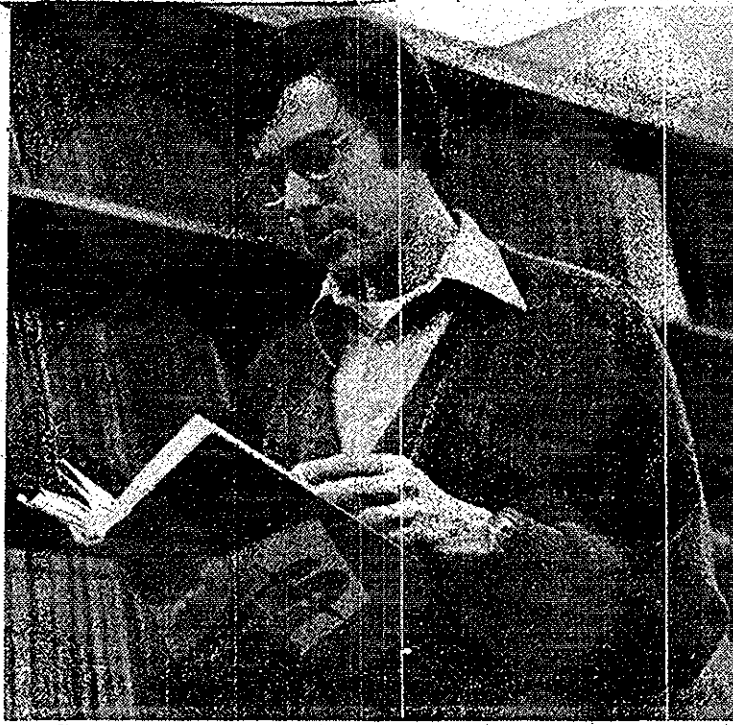

The Club has served hundreds of students since it began in 1970. Its services include providing transportation to ski areas, reduced rates for lift tickets and equipment rental, up-to-date movies on skiing techniques and information on new equipment.

Two major problems that students encounter when considering skiing as a regular sport are the expensive lift rates and transportation. President Matt Jenkins, junior, business, feels that the Penguin Ski Club can reduce these problems by traveling to ski resorts in large groups. "A standard policy of ski resorts is to reduce rates for large groups. Also, the cost of transportation is minimal when divided up amongst many members."

One of the Ski Club's trips this season was to Snowshoe, West Virginia during winter break. The three day stay gave YSU skiers an opportunity to ski at one of the larger resorts in the East which averages 19 feet of natural snow a year, thus allowing challenging skiing not found in the Ohio area.

Student Council OKs $1,300 for coming Bethany meeting

by Jon Steen

The first student council meeting of the quarter was highlighted by the argument over funding for the Bethany College conference. Student Government President Tony Koury urged all council members to attend this valuable conference, which would develop leadership, budgetary methods, and grievance proceedings as well as other aspects of student government.

Koury further requested that council appropriate $1,300 to cover the expenses for the trip, including bus transportation and lodging. Elody Fee questioned the motion to appropriate the $1,300 from the work fund by pointing out that such an appropriation would all but deplete that fund. Fee said she felt that the work fund should be maintained at an operational level because of the obvious needs for the remainder of the year. Koury pointed out that the $1,300 was an estimate and that the actual cost of the trip should be considerably less. After some argument the $1,300 for this weekend's conference was appropriated from other funds.

Gratia Murphy, an outstanding member of the University's English Department was introduced to council as a new advisor. Council also accepted Wanda Cordero's resignation which was promoted by her new job with the Youngstown Police Department.

Due to the increased amount of student grievances, Council appointed Joe Castrodale to the newly created position of assistant secretary of student grievances.

Snowshoe is appropriately nicknamed, the "Island in the Sky" because unlike other ski resorts whose lodges are built at the base of the hill, Snowshoe's lodges are at the top of a 5000 foot mountain. "Skiing at Snowshoe was exciting to me because of the large number of slopes available," commented a ski club member.

Aside from long distance trips, the club offers weekly trips to "Boston Mills" every Friday evening. A bus leaves the University at 6 p.m. for Boston Mills and generally returns at 1 a.m. These trips are big advantages to beginner skiers for they provide weekly practice and low prices on rental equipment.

didn't seem to care about having a voice at YSU, but now there are many black organizations and each have membership drives to get even more blacks involved in their organization. And by having organizations, blacks can have some control of the social and political events at YSU."

He added that the only thing that holds blacks back from having a greater voice at YSU is other minority students. "Every-time blacks ask Student Government for something they say that if they grant what we want, then they will also have to grant it for other minority students. But if some minority students aren't organized and aren't progressing, then they have no need for the same things that blacks who are organized are asking for."

Lowry said that he has many white friends and the paradise he had at Shaker Heights he has now, after a few years, found at YSU; but most other blacks haven't discovered that paradise.

Lowry, besides being a student at YSU, plays defensive end on the Penguin football team. He said that he is interested in playing pro football.

Dana School plans series of concerts for this quarter

Anthropology Club

The Anthropology Colloquium (Club) announces its winter film festival beginning Tuesday, Jan. 9 at 1 p.m. in Room 240 of Kilcawley Center with the ethnographic film classic Dead Birds. Different films will be shown each subsequent Tuesday throughout the quarter in an attempt to introduce the audience to the world of anthropology.

According to John Blangero, president of the Anthropology Colloquium, Dead Birds focuses attention on a highland-New Guinea tribe, the Dani, and the importance of tribal warfare in their society. Also, the often overlooked sensitive side of these so-called "savage people" is warmly presented.

The festival is designed to give a broad overview of the discipline of anthropology and will include films treating archeology, human evolution, dispute settlement, and man's place in the primate order. Most of the films are feature length and in color. The films are free and open to the public.

The Journals of Lewis and Clark

The History Club begins the winter quarter with a special presentation. A documentary, The Journals of Lewis and Clark originally aired by NBC television, will be shown in the Ohio Room in Kilcawley Center Wednesday, Jan. 10, at 10 a.m., 2 p.m. and 7 p.m.; also at 12 noon in Room 238 Kilcawley.

Art Exhibits

Continuing with a very well-rounded schedule of "quality" art exhibits, YSU's Kilcawley Center Art Gallery will be presenting the works of William Schade, "Soft Sculptures & Lithographs," Jan. 2-19.

Schade, a new and upcoming artist from Albany, New York, is a graduate of the Cranbrook Academy of Art and holds a MFA degree in printmaking.

The soft sculpture portion of the exhibit is a one-of-a-kind rarity, composed of a soft hand-sewn muslin forms. The sculptures and lithographs have an imagery that is dealing with birds and in one specific instance with chickens, as seen in a piece entitled "The Chicken Machine."

Special arrangements for group visits can be made through Kilcawley Center by calling (216) 742-3575. Gallery hours are Mon.-Thurs. 10 a.m.-8 p.m. and Fri. 10 a.m.-3 p.m.

Snowdrops

With two days ago's eight-inch snowfall, winter finally arrived in the Youngstown area. A far cry from the almost balmy (60 degree) conditions we enjoyed in December. January has brought a sharp chill to the air and hazardous conditions to our roads. But winter brings with her a beauty that is only hers to give.

On any snowy evening, a drive through Mill Creek Park can be magic. The roads are usually clear and the speed limit is 20 mph, so one can just take one's time to appreciate the soft, snow-covered wonder that seems to swallow you up.

The trees are like giant icicles, white against the night, frozen branches reaching out to touch all who would be touched. Moonlight glances off the frozen lakes, casting a sort of silver mystery throughout. Snowdrops slap the earth, pile upon pile, shrouding nature in shy subtle splendor.

Without winter's blustery blessing, there is so much we would miss: skaters carving figure eights across a lake of ice; prone bodies sledding over a ramp of snow; skiers jumping and dancing down high hills.

Californians can have their endless summers, Floridians their sterile beaches. Give me winter's wonder for awhile, with a cold, harsh beauty all her own.

Nurses Association. Recipient of the Ohio March of Dimes Nurse of the Year Award will be chosen by a committee of the Ohio Nurses Association. Application forms may be received from their offices at 4000 E. Main Street, P.O. In its efforts to protect the unborn and the newborn, the March of Dimes emphasizes the importance of nursing in promoting the healthy outcome of pregnancy.

Center gives help on writing skills to 500 students

A writing center which aids some 500 students each quarter is located in the Engineering Science building. Instructors from the English department as well as peer tutors are available, at no cost to the student. Hours are 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. weekdays, 5 to 7 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday, and Saturday 10 a.m. to noon. Appointments can be made for as little as 24 hours in advance, in Room 210 of ESB.

The Center caters to those who need help with spelling, grammar, limited vocabulary, proofreading, organizing ideas, writing under pressure, or writing research papers.

The writing center has a workshop series scheduled on a variety of topics of interest to student writers. Each workshop lasts 50 minutes and is taught by an English Department instructor at the Center. Interested students are invited to attend one or more of the workshops offered this quarter. A partial schedule for the start of the quarter is listed below. For more information and a complete list of workshops call the Writing Center, 742-3055.

Gives Hirsch credit

It has always been my wish to give credit where credit is due. Since March 20, 1978, Kilcawley has had the use of the Dollar Bank Campus Branch. This service has benefited all students who have taken advantage of it. And Dollar Bank is so pleased with the response from YSU students that it is their desire to expand the Banking area. Our campus branch is a full service bank, where all banking transactions may take place. Students may even initiate loans, and checks up to $50 will be cashed for students who do not have an account, students with accounts may cash a check for any amount. They also offer other services such as money orders, travelers checks, and the sale of stamps.

The Bank is open convenient hours and the Dollar Mover Card (which can be acquired at the Bank) allows you to use the automatic teller to do your banking anytime that Kilcawley Center is open.

Barbara Phillips, the bank manager, and her crew have been very good and responsive to all students' needs and have tailored their policy to the college campus atmosphere. This has been most helpful, and I believe that Ms. Phillips and Dollar Bank should be congratulated for their fine job done.

But credit for this project must be properly given, and the man who made it all possible was our fine director of Kilcawley Center, Mr. Phil Hirsch. Mr. Hirsch initiated the idea, and it is he who deserves credit for this beneficial and useful service, and it is he who deserves credit for a job well done.

Operation begins for Council's escort service

Beginning today, student government's Campus Day Escort Service goes into operation. Available to everyone at YSU, the service is free and escorts are available from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., and from 5:00 p.m. to 11 p.m. Anyone who wishes to make use of the service can call 742-3591 for an escort.

"Student government now provides a service needed by many handicapped and female students," says Dave Bozanich, vice-president of student government and director of the service. Bozanich adds that "if the service is not economically feasible, that is, if no one is using it, it will be discontinued at the end of winter quarter."

The service is staffed by four escorts: Louis Piscitani, Faye Kirkham, and Ron Rogue during the day; Ralph Valentino at night.

Rats inform reporter of campus life

by Larry Detwiler

Not long ago, an article on rats was printed in the Jambar. It stated that the problem was under control and for YSU students under 122 pounds not to worry. Well, I still don't think that it's safe to go barefoot on campus, especially since I talked to a couple of well-fed rodents the other day.

The first rat I talked to, identified himself as Norace Smith and spoke excellent English, aside from a minor lisp caused by a rat disease, "Cheese stuck-between-the-teeth Syndrome." He was about five feet long, brown hair with blue eyes, but had a severe overbite. Aside from that, I'd say he was fairly handsome and possessed a great deal of charisma and charm, prerequisites for a YSU rat, along with a high school diploma.

Smith told me that he was a senior education major simply waiting out his graduation date and hanging out at the dorm. He also said that he preferred to keep a low profile at the University, because so far his minority group has not been recognized on campus. Smith concluded our little talk by saying to me, "You don't smell very good, either."

The second rat I talked to lived off-campus on the North side, and was on the swim team. I could sense this almost immediately since he was shaved down and wore a snorkel mask to conceal his true identity. This fellow was not quite as handsome, but was longer than Norace and seemingly more intelligent, being able to work at General Motors while attending school full-time. "Teddy," as he called himself, didn't talk too much with the snorkel mask on, but did manage to blurt out, "Do you wanna buy a used Vega?"

The third rat I talked to was a good looking albino female, named Matricia First, who escaped from the biology department and was presently living underground. She informed me that campus rat-life was getting worse since most undergraduate students did not take kindly to campus rats, due to their "often underfoot" image. The graduate students, on the other hand, identified with the rat's abdomen. She went on to say that "If it had not been for the bubonic plague, we might have the same status as rabbits or penguins."

All in all, however, I'm not exactly sure what the status of campus rats is or if it is even that important. I mean, even when you don't see them, you instinctively know that they are there. And when they are there, then how could they possibly be here? So you see, only the rats really know about the rats. Besides, as any famboy will testify, rats are only bigger, fatter, faster, and meaner looking mice.

YSU zaps Zips once again!

by Bill Snier

The game was played exactly the way a game between two bitter rivals should be played... exciting with a dramatic ending. When the smoke finally cleared, and the fans were able to catch their collective breaths, the YSU Penguins had emerged with a hard fought 53-51 victory over arch-rival Akron and their first victory in the MCC title race.

Neither team really showed their superiority to their opponent as the game finally came down to who was able to convert their free throws and who couldn't. The Penguins converted on all nine of their free tosses, five of those in the final three minutes, while could connect on only one of five.

Akron held the largest lead of the game with about four minutes remaining at 49-42. The largest lead to that point by either team had been five points.

But the youthful Penguins came storming back on a three-point play by freshman phenom Dave Ziegler and a clutch pair of free throws by center Mitchell Atwood which set the stage for the final dramatic moments.

With the score knotted at 51, reserve guard Joe Sekora connected on two free throws with just twenty seconds remaining in the contest. Akron attempted to set up a final play. But the shot missed and in the scuffle for the rebound, Ziegler fouled Akron guard Tom Keehan with no time left on the clock.

Facing a one-and-one situation, Keehan had to hit the first shot to gain the bonus and the possible tie. He missed.

Ziegler led the Penguins in scoring with 26 points and also

Women's Basketball

The YSU women's basketball team expanded their unbeaten string to three games Friday night as the Penguins overwhelmed West Virginia, 67-48, at Beeghly Center.

The Penguins one-two punch of sophomores Vicki Lawrence and Wanda Grant again led the Penguins to victory as the women placed four in double figures. Grant tossed in 18 points while Lawrence added 17. Cindy Diatko and Linda Fredricks also had ten points apiece in the victory.

The women will return to action on Friday night at Marshall University for a date with the Thundering Herd. The following day, the Penguins will again be on the road at Ohio University in Athens.

showed strength on the boards. Freshman guard Bruce Alexander, a native of Akron, chipped in with ten points. Joel Price and John Britton topped the Zips with 16 and 15 points respectively.

Following last night's game with Northern Kentucky, the Penguins must set their sights on the invasion of MCC pre-season favorite Eastern Illinois in a rare Thursday night encounter at Beeghly Center. Tip off for that game is set for 8 p.m.
