YSU Academic Senate approves semester scheduling guidelines

■ The new semester scheduling will allow students to take a wider variety of classes.

SABRINA SCHROEDER
Assistant News Editor

Members of Academic Senate approved the semester scheduling guidelines proposed by the Academic Planning Committee Wednesday for the Q2S conversion in Fall 2000.

Patricia Hauschildt, academic planning committee chair, said "the purpose of these guidelines is to facilitate the building of student schedules and will enable students to schedule the maximum number of hours efficiently with few conflicts of overlapping course scheduling."

Courses will be distributed over the five days of the week and will observe common starting times.

The scheduling guidelines are similar to those used at other universities in Ohio, such as Cleveland State and the University of Akron.

"The majority of classes that are worth four quarter hours will now be worth three semester hours; classes worth four or five semester credits will mainly be those involving laboratory work, field experience and internships," Hauschildt said.

Laboratory courses and courses which combine lecture and laboratory will be scheduled to utilize facilities most efficiently and generally will be Tuesday and Thursday.

Two credit hour evening classes will meet one day of the week from 6 to 7:50 or 8:05 to 9:55, including one 10-minute break.

Three-credit-hour-day classes will meet Monday, Wednesday and Friday for one hour, on Tuesday and Thursday for one hour and 15 minutes and will begin every 90 minutes.

Evening classes will meet one day a week from either 5:10 to 7:50 or 8:05 to 10:45 and will include one 10-minute break. Classes will also be offered Monday and Wednesday or Tuesday and Thursday from 5:10 to 6:25, 6:35 to 7:50 or 8:05 to 9:20.

Four-credit-hour-day classes will meet Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday or Monday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday for one hour each day. Some courses will be offered as Monday and Wednesday classes, Wednesday and Friday classes or Tuesday

Sigma Alpha Epsilon sponsors first Sexual Awareness Week

■ Participation for the event was very high.

CINDY MILLER
Assistant News Editor

There are some college graduates who are taking a few extra things with them into the real world that they probably wish they could leave behind.

Some are graduating with horrible memories of date rape, the embarrassment of sexually transmitted diseases or the trauma of living with AIDS.

To make the YSU community aware of these issues, the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity sponsored the first Sexual Awareness Week Feb. 8 through Friday.

Robert Pernesky, president of Sigma Alpha Epsilon, said, "We wanted to promote sexual awareness among the students and faculty. A lot of people don't want to discuss sexual issues or admit that there is a problem on college campuses."

Statistics show that one in four college students will come into contact with a sexually transmitted disease.

"A lot of people don't want to discuss sexual issues or admit that there is a problem on college campuses."

This, and other startling statistics also prompted the events. Nine sessions were held, with expert speakers from the community and the university presenting information of various issues.

Pernesky said, "One of our members came up with the original idea to do something to promote sexual awareness. We expanded on it from there."

"Participation was good. Twenty-five or 30 people attended every session. People were asking mature questions. They seemed to really care about the issues," he said.

The event kicked off with an organization fair in Kilcawley Center Feb. 8. Sixteen community and university programs and facilities that promote sexual awareness were represented.

Pernesky said, "The representatives passed out information and answered questions. Next year, we'd like to expand on the fair."

Bernstein berates journalism standards

■ Bernstein said the role of journalists is to challenge people, not to amuse them.

ANGELA GIANOGGIO
Managing Editor

Schermer lecturer, Carl Bernstein, attracted a larger crowd Thursday night than most bands that come to campus. Bernstein is the reporter who, with Bob Woodward, broke the Watergate scandal in the '70s for The Washington Post, which led to the fall of the Nixon administration.

The reporter-turned-author spent more than an hour, not raving about the importance of journalists in today's society, but about the low standards of the profession.

"This is a proficient time to be talking about the press. [Journalists] have to take seriously the responsibility of the power of the press," Bernstein said.

Bernstein addressed a five-piece news series done by a New York City news channel titled "Where Do They Get Those People" referring to people on daytime talk shows. The series, he said, was the most publicized event during the week, and was an example of what Bernstein have sleazy standards, which are "a sincere threat to the truth."

Journalists are settling for easy answers to tough questions and are not searching for a deeper answer, he said.

"Media is the most powerful of all institutions. It is time to get back to the business of real reporting and the truth," he said.

Bernstein went on to talk about the importance of the O.J. Simpson trial and the Monica Lewinsky story.

He said nothing has consumed more air time than those two stories, and it was appropriate the stories were covered from every possible angle.

Carl Bernstein
Journalist

He said the standards of Ted Kopple are not the standards of the rest of the industry. Rupert Murdoch has had more influence on the American people than any other journalist, Bernstein said.

"We in journalism limit ourselves in the truth more than the government. We don't have enough courage to give the people the real news," he said. "I believe it is the role of journalists to challenge the people, not just to amuse them."

In today's society, the weird, the stupid and the coarse have become cultural norms, he said. People

The problem, he said, was with cable news networks who need to fill 24 hours of news coverage. Bernstein referred to them as "hungry beasts who need big coverage to reach ratings." They create the impression that something new is happening when it isn't.

However, he said, "Cable news is one of the greatest creations in journalism. When there is breaking news, there is nothing better than CNN or MSNBC to get the information and sort through it as it comes in."

Bernstein is now a consultant for CBS and is working on a book about Hillary Rodham Clinton.

Aquacade competition aids Tod Children's Miracle Network

■ Michelle Arnaut of Zeta Tau Alpha was crowned Aquacade queen.

SABRINA SCHROEDER
Assistant News Editor

Since 1977, Sigma Chi fraternity has held Aquacade annually, a swimming competition with a focus on raising money for the chapter's philanthropy, Tod Children's Miracle Network.

Most of the money raised came through donations provided by patrons of the Aquacade booklet, which was distributed at the event.

This year's event, "The Captain was Here..." was held Saturday in the Beeghly Natatorium with members of YSU's Greek system competing in six events throughout the night.

Greg Gulas, student activities coordinator, said "The Sigma Chi's are to be commended for the time and effort they put into one of the attractions the Greek system looks forward to every year."

The night began with the presentation of candidates hoping to be crowned Aquacade queen.

Girls representing the sororities in the queen portion of the competition were Franci Thomas of Delta Zeta, Kylene Halliday of Alpha Xi Delta, Michelle Arnaut of

"We appreciate everyone that supported us this year and hope that next year there will be even more support."

Stan Sarna

Zeta Tau Alpha and Beth Matune of Alpha Omega Pi. After voting for queen, the swimming events got under way.

Alpha Omega Pi sorority won the 25-yard Freestyle race and Alpha Xi Delta won the Queen's race while the girls of Zeta Tau Alpha took first place in the 25-yard Backstroke, 50-yard Tandem race, 100-yard Ping-Pong relay race, 50-yard Paddle Board race and Biggest Splash.

Joelle Sayhoun, president of Zeta Tau Alpha, said "Aquacade is about determination with overall unity."

This determination led her chapter to capture the overall swimming portion of the competition, along with Arnaut being crowned queen at a party following the festivities.

Although four of the five sororities competed in the competition, only two fraternities chose to swim in the competition.

"I am a little disappointed that not everyone in the Greek system took part," Gulas said.

Pi Kappa Alpha captured the swimming competition for the fraternities.

The Biggest Splash competition was the determining factor between Pi Kappa Alpha and Phi Kappa Tau.

Stan Sarna, Sigma Chi fraternity, said "We appreciate everyone that supported us this year and hope that next year there will be even more support."

Retired faculty member donates artifacts to library

■ The artifacts are on display on the fourth floor of Maag Library.

JOSHUA NOLAN
Contributing Writer

It was a 1986 dip in the pool at the Youngstown YWCA that changed the lives of Dr. Raymond Shuster and his wife Martha, forever.

It was in the pool the Shusters met a group of Thai students who were in the country studying for master's degrees at YSU. They were living at the YWCA.

The Shusters had both retired in 1984.

Raymond Shuster was a professor of management and Martha Shuster had been a secretary in the foreign language department. But they couldn't help getting involved.

In a short time, the Shusters developed a relationship with the students and became known as "Mom" and "Dad" to more than 160 of the students over the next 12 years. Raymond Shuster took the job as the students' unofficial adviser.

"They provided a collective place for them to be together. He would tutor them in courses that were a problem either because of language or because the courses were just difficult. They were a family," said Dr. Anne McMahon, professor of management.

"He became the patriarch of the unofficial Thai family," said Dr. Stanley Guzell, professor of management, "And she was their den mother, so to speak."

The Shusters attended all the Thai students' graduations and saw them all return to Thailand. Before they left, the students exchanged gifts with the Shusters.

"Nothing too expensive," said Raymond Shuster, "We'd give the Cross pens to the boys and maybe a bracelet for the girls."

The Thai students presented the Shusters with traditional Thai art, hand-carved wooden vases, silk fans, wall hangings, pillowcases and small statues or ornaments.

In January 1998, Martha Shuster suffered a stroke, and the couple moved to a nursing home. Later, she was diagnosed with ovarian cancer and died Dec. 4.

"We had to move [to the nursing home]. We didn't have enough room, and it became a question of what to do with all of it," Shuster said of the many gifts from the Thai students.

He had an idea. He spoke with Dr. Thomas Atwood, interim director of the Maag Library. Atwood spoke with Dr. Leslie Cochran, university president. The university ordered a showcase. Raymond Shuster donated a large portion of the collection, and it is now on display on the fourth floor of the library across from the new computer lab.

"They have about 110 items, and I have more than that at home," said Shuster.

"We have about one-third of the collection on display. Very colorful items, specific to Thailand," said Atwood.

"We plan to rotate it quarterly," he said of the rest of the collection. "There's a whole box of framed artwork we haven't even brought upstairs yet."

The showcase features mainly ornaments now — a small crystal statue of a traditional Thai sailing ship shaped like a dragon, a black and gold silk embroidery of a similar ship, and there are several small elephants and other tiny china animal figurines.

At the bottom of the case are photo albums open to pages showing snapshots of the Shusters and Thai students at graduations and gathered around a dinner table.

"They enriched our lives tremendously," said Shuster of the students. "They were very unusual. Very respectful and affectionate."

"I gave [the library] three albums, but I have hundreds of photos and a file drawer full of letters."

Student Government should do its job

The voice of the students is supposed to be very important here at YSU, and certain organizations are supposed to carry the voice of all students to the administration. Student Government is the main organization that is supposed to do this, but unfortunately, they haven't been.

Student Government seems to be more concerned with dealing with things that are just important to them, not all students. Point in fact — a formal dance that only approximately 125 students will be able to attend. That's slightly more than 1 percent of the total student population at YSU. What about the other 99 percent or the many non-traditional students who have absolutely no interest in a formal dance?

Most non-traditional students are more concerned with how the semester switch is going to affect them with their family and job obligations. But they're not the only students concerned about this — practically all are. This is an issue that needs to be addressed by Student Government, but it has done very little with it at all.

The mass loss of members brings up another problem. How can a government body hope to be effective when it loses more than one-third of its members? Granted, some of these losses were not the fault of Student Government. Some of the students resigned because of illness or other personal reasons. But many of them were removed for not doing their jobs.

It's good that they were removed, but if they weren't doing their jobs, why were they on Student Government in the first place? One explanation for this could be voter apathy. But at least one of the members who was removed said he wasn't interested in attending the meetings because Student Government was not discussing anything of real importance to students.

Student Government should realize the tremendous responsibility they have to all YSU students and start dealing with some serious issues.

A TYPICAL STUDENT GOVERNMENT MEETING

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Student responds to student letters concerning homosexual marriage

The recent letter by Goncz, "letting homosexuals marry won't hurt anyone" and the letter by Jones, "Student responds to Munro's letter" are full of misleading claims that I find alarming and need to be corrected.

In Goncz's letter he presents a very faulty picture that the Bible has been translated so many times and "spiced up" by people that it cannot be certain about anything. This is utterly untrue. In the late 4th to early 5th century, the Bible was translated from its original languages, Hebrew and Greek, to Latin by St. Jerome, the expert at the time. This was the way the Bible stayed, in this same translation, until the 15th and 16th century, when it began to be translated to various languages like English.

Second, this "spicing up" idea is totally absurd for two reasons. First, the people who copied the Bible by hand were monks who spent years copying a single Bible. Why would you purposely screw up a project you spent countless hours on?

Also, even if someone would add something like "bathing was a sin," sooner or later someone would realize that was added in because there was more than one Bible around. In fact, we in the 20th century have more than 1,500 Bibles dating from before the year 400. So, yes what the Bible says can be taken at face value.

Next, Goncz asserts that we don't have a right to judge a person on the basis of who he or she is. Please tell me what we do when we sentence a person to prison for murder, peddling child porn or being a serial rapist. We have made a moral judgement that the person has done wrong and must pay a debt to society, and it doesn't matter who that person is inside or what issues he or she was exploring.

In Jones' letter he charges that Dr. Phil Munro would feel differently about gays if he was born a gay. That example cannot work because you are not born gay, you become gay. If it can be proved that being gay is purely hereditary, then they can't be faulted for being gay, but it has not been shown that it is hereditary.

Maybe some people are born with a chemical makeup that makes it easier to become gay, but is still their choice. If someone who is born with a genetic flaw that makes him an alcoholic from the moment he touches alcohol, society still makes him responsible for his actions. He can also stop drinking if he has the will power and support of family and friends.

Finally, from reading between the lines, I don't think the real issue is letting homosexuals marry, but having society accept their lifestyle. They see themselves as a persecuted group in America that has to deal with hatred all the time. That's human to want to be accepted, but the problem is that to further destroy the already fragile institution of marriage for gays is just wrong. Besides they can already live together in the same house, and the only other reason to be married is to procreate, and they can't do that.

A STAFF VIEW

JOHN W. GOODWIN JR.
Assistant Copy Editor

One of the most astounding aspects of this entire mess is the contradiction between these people's statements and their actions.

Contradiction runs rampant with some Pro-Life activists

Absurd. What exactly is absurd? Beach-front property in Nevada maybe? How about the Loch Ness Monster or Bigfoot? Try this, a group of people claiming to be pro-life activist that carry guns and shoot at will individuals who do not share their same views on the subject of abortion and a woman's right to choose.

This is not to say I feel abortion is right or wrong. That is not the issue I am dealing with here. It does not matter what side of the abortion debate one may fall on, no one has the right to execute people whose views differ from their own. In this country, people have the right to feel and express different views without the worry of being gunned down in front of their spouses and children.

One of the most astounding aspects of this entire mess is the contradiction between these people's statements and their actions. All right, someone feels strongly that abortion is murder and murder, in any form, is wrong — no problem. This person then loads a rifle, drives to the nearest clinic and opens fire on anybody within range. Is it just me or does anyone else see the contradiction here.

Many people may say I am over-dramatizing the whole situation or that this type of thing does not happen often enough to be of concern; I beg to differ. Try telling that to the families of the deceased, they only had one life to lose, so multiple occurrences were not needed.

And for those who do not believe this is actually happening, check the internet. A group of people have actually had the audacity to launch a web-site listing the names, addresses and other personal information concerning doctors, nurses, elected officials and anyone else in support of abortion. After you are murdered your name is crossed off.

I most certainly do believe in democracy and the right to protest, however, committing murder is going way beyond the limit. Working to change laws, and more importantly, the mindset of people is understandable. Planting bombs and assassination, now that's just absurd.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The issue of marriage is a request from gay and lesbian people to have their commitments acknowledged legally. Committed marriages between two men or two women already exist, they just aren't legally recognized yet. The path toward marriage develops similarly for both homosexual and heterosexual people.

Two people meet, fall in love, desire to spend their lives together and decide to make an outward symbol of that inward commitment. Besides making that symbol, homosexuals' desire for legalized marriage includes common, everyday concerns that heterosexual couples take for granted — things like taxes, power of attorney and insurance. Also from a psychological standpoint, having a legal marriage adds solidity to the commitment. It is a public pronouncement and a public recognition. If you don't like the idea of publicly recognizing such relationships, ask yourself why.

Legally recognizing committed relationships in a small percentage of the population will not send the entire world into moral confusion. Most people won't even notice the few words added to the law books. It has no effect on what any church teaches. Heterosexual marriages

For anyone who is interested in seriously examining the issue of legalizing same sex marriage, first recognize the difference between legal and religious marriage. Then, look up the social-scientific literature on homosexuality. Finally, try putting yourself in the shoes of a homosexual, and see what you think then.

won't suddenly break up. The fabric of people's religion will not unravel simply because two people of the same sex can have their relationship legally recognized. Thinking that these things will happen is a ridiculous idea. Homosexual marriages do not have superhuman, society-shaping powers; they have the power to unite two ordinary adults who happen to be of the same sex.

Homosexuals do not have equal rights under the law, and there is no legal justification for this. Laws are not created to follow "absolute truths." By law, we each have the freedom to find our own "truths." Laws are mankind's attempt to deliver justice, to protect both men and women from each other. Ideally, the law should protect people who find different things to be "true." Laws cannot rely on one religion to direct them. If they rely on anything, it is science. The preponderance of evidence shows that homosexuality is not harmful, nor deviant. Taking this into consideration with marriages, the law has no reason to discriminate homosexuals from heterosexuals.

Too many Americans would be willing to let the government unjustly deny rights to a specific group of people. The discomfort of re-examining one's assumptions is just too much to ask of these people. For anyone who is interested in seriously examining the issue of legalizing same sex marriage, first recognize the difference between legal and religious marriage. Then, look up the social-scientific literature on homosexuality. Finally, try putting yourself in the shoes of a homosexual, and see what you think then.

YSU should spend money on students

I read the article, "YSU Internet access is not very accessible," on Jan. 28 and "Article's headline was misleading," on Feb. 9. There is one point that is missing.

Businesses all over the country constantly monitor their networks for Internet usage by workers on company time and immediately stop it. The staff and administrative offices on campus do not need Internet access in most cases, especially considering the fact that our registration system is based on the mainframe.

YSU needs to stop spending money on projects that don't need done and spend it on making the student's life easier. Offering a better selection of classes and the people to teach them seems like a good start to me.

Lady Penguins stroll into first in the MCC

JESSICA TREMAYNE
Contributing Writer

At YSU's home game Saturday, against Valparaiso, the Lady Penguins turned out victorious with a score of 83-69.

Another win to add on after their win Thursday against Chicago State University, 59-58.

Brianne Kenneally, sophomore, scored 20 points while Leslie Majewski, junior, shot for 18 points, contributing to YSU's ninth straight win. The win put the Lady Penguins in first place, standing alone in a position they are unwilling to share.

With 11:42 remaining, and trailing by six points, the Penguins rose to out-score the Crusaders, 10-3 over the next four minutes to lead 58-57.

After gaining the lead, the Red and White scored nine more points with 5:25 remaining.

Valparaiso narrowed the lead of the Penguins by three, 68-65, with 2:54 remaining. Alyson Vogrin and Majewski extend YSU's lead to 73-65 with 1:29 remaining.

Missy Young, junior, scored 11 points while Jen Lyden, sophomore, added seven. Nikki Pope contributed six points and four rebounds.

YSU's next match will be against Oral Roberts, 3 p.m. Thursday, in Tulsa, Okla. If the Penguins can win this one, they will at least tie for their fifth straight Mid-Continent Conference regular season championship.

Men's basketball team upsets No. 1 Valparaiso at YSU

MELISSA PAPPAS
Contributing Writer

The men's basketball team beat number one seed, Valparaiso, in Mid Continent action Saturday in the Beeghly Center. The win pulls the Penguins into a tie for first place in the conference.

Almost being too anxious, YSU started out an evening that seemed as if it might be a long one. After many missed shots, within four minutes the Penguin's were down with the score 10-1.

YSU was not about to let the momentum die and in the last five minutes of the first half they made a run. Grabbing rebounds and finally making shots, the Penguin's ended the first half only down by two, 26-28.

In the second half, a more subdued, yet intense red and white entered the court. Rebounds were good on both offense and defense, and YSU gained its first lead of the night five minutes into the second half, 38-36.

YSU increased the lead by four, unfortunately only making it the second biggest lead they would have all evening. The score went back and forth throughout the second half, YSU only maintaining narrow leads by one or two points.

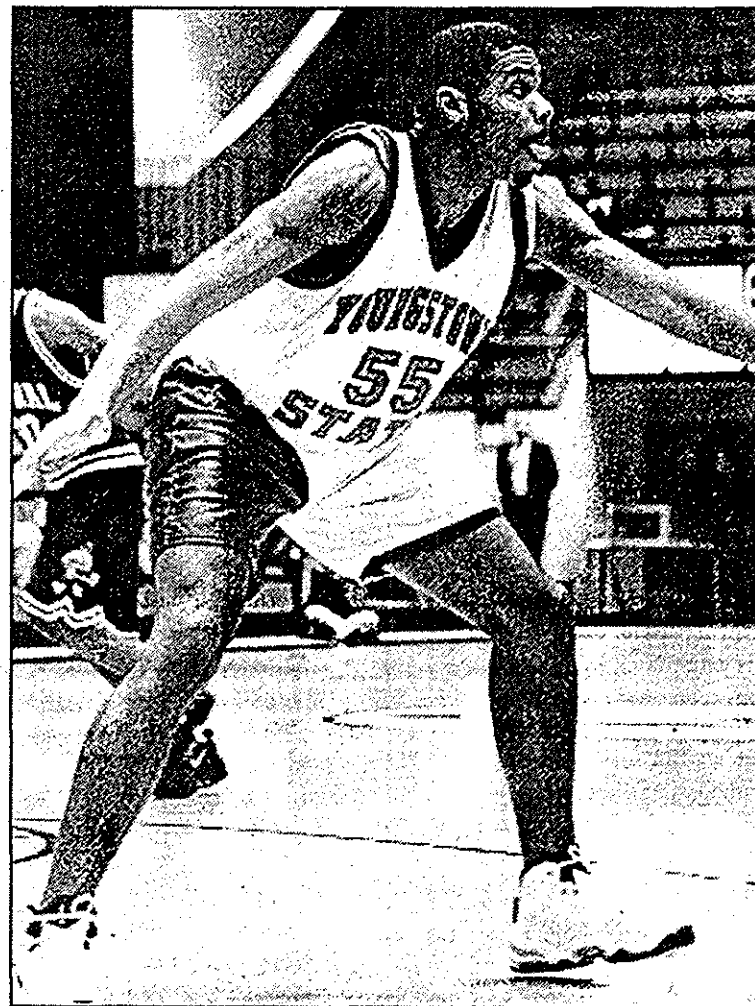

With 5:17 left in the game, pressure stung the Penguins when Valpo's Lubos Barton sunk a three to tie the game at 49-49.

YSU responded by pulling away again to make it 56-51. Valparaiso wasn't ready to share its No. 1 spot so easily, making the last two minutes heart-stopping.

Valpo came back to make the score 56-56 with 1:51 remaining in the game. The fight continued and with 52 seconds left, senior Devon Lewis hit two free throws to bring the Penguins ahead, 60-57.

However, Valpo's Barton came through again by hitting a three pointer to tie the game at 60 with only 38 seconds remaining. Valpo's fatal mistake was fouling Andrew Hannan with five seconds to go. Hannan at the line, had the crowd on the edge of their seats.

HARRISON LEADS WAY: Desmond Harrison lead the way in YSU's upset of Valparaiso University Saturday night at YSU. Harrison scored 12 points and grabbed 11 rebounds.

The first shot up was missed, none-the-less Hannan was not disturbed by the miss and sank the next one to claim the win for YSU. The lead was by one and the Penguin's took action with a full court press, making sure not to foul in the last seconds.

A sinking feeling came over the gym as Valpo drilled onto their side of the court, shooting a three at the buzzer. Complete excitement immediately followed when the shot did not go in. The men had just put themselves in first place.

Three Penguins scored double figures in the effort. Junior Elmer Brown used his long distance threat to lead YSU with 14 points, 3 from behind the arc, and also had two blocked shots, for the evening.

Sophomore Desmond Harrison had a double-double with 12 points and a tremendous 11 rebounds for his last night on the YSU court. Senior Devon Lewis made a good showing with 11 points and five rebounds.

The team effort continued as junior Albert Crockett dished out five assists and pulled down five rebounds.

Coach Peters was ecstatic with the win, giving Valparaiso credit, but not without saying his team was the better one on the court.

There was no luck in Saturday's win. Peters was particularly happy for his two seniors.

"It was an exciting game I'm happy for these two [Lewis and Maurice Anderson]," Peters said.

Both seniors put focus on the team. Anderson said, "I was pleased with my play today it was the best the team has played all year." Lewis also commented on the team, "The whole season has led up to this, we learned how to win. We can't get too high when we win, not too low when we lose."

YSU will continue to vie for the number one spot as they track to Oral Roberts on Thursday.

YSU also picked up another win on the road Thursday at Chicago State. The win put them back into contention for first place.

Every game played on both ends shows improvements, including 40 rebounds compared to Chicago's 28 and shooting 93 percent for free throws, and 45 percent from the field. They throttled Chicago State with a score of 75-58.

Three men scored in double digits for the win. Sophomore Drew Hannan led the way with 13 points, while teammate Craig Haese contributed 12. David Brown had a good showing with his 10 points and eight rebounds.

Although he may not have been leading on the scoreboard, Crockett still had an impressive eight assists to stimulate his teammates to win.

Chicago State dropped in conference standing while YSU boosted their record to 8-4.

CHATTING WITH A ZEBRA: Leslie Majewski (#12) and a couple unidentified Lady Penguin players chat with the ref in Saturdays victory against Valpo.

New course offers explorations in science

■ The class will be a hands-on course for non-science majors.

SABRINA SCHROEDER
Assistant News Editor

Students in need of a natural science requirement can enroll in a new class that will teach the scientific process in a creative, challenging and intellectually-stimulating way.

The course was designed to create a science laboratory experiment for non-science major undergraduate students where they could be exposed to several sciences in a multi-modular format.

Explorations in the Sciences is cross listed as Biology 600 and Environmental Studies 600, course code 0225. The class is open to 40 students who will be divided into two groups for five-week modules that will look at fermentation and recycling.

The class is a hands-on course that is designed to engage students in the investigative process of science. The students will develop, design, assess and report the findings on their investigative experi-

“One of the hardest things to answer is the question of what the process of science is.”

Dr. John Usis
Associate Professor, Biological Sciences

Dr. John Usis, associate professor of biological sciences, said he intends to make the course “as appealing as it can be without being rigorous like many science classes are.”

Usis will be team teaching the course with Dr. Alan Jacobs, director of the center for environmental studies.

“One of the hardest things to answer is the question of what the process of science is. It is an actual mechanism by which knowledge is gained,” Usis said.

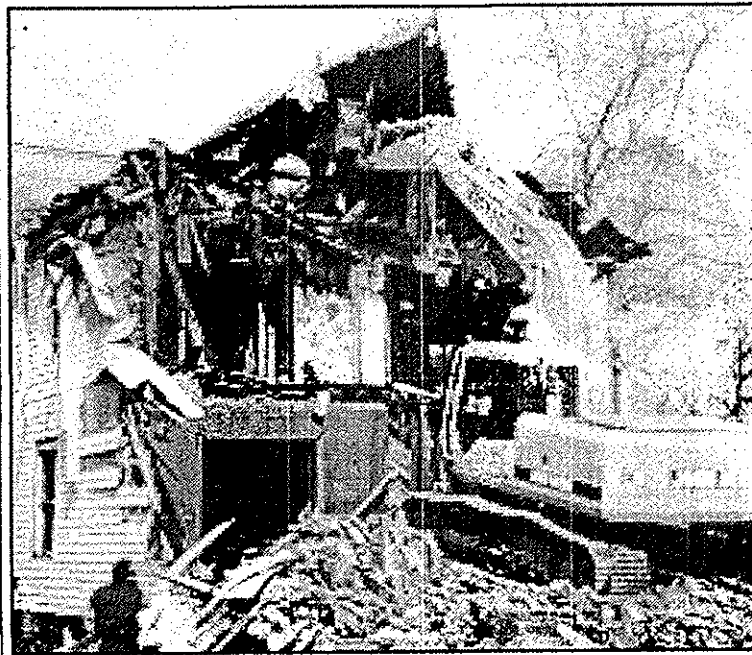

Usis will focus his module on the fermentation process while students will view the process of it, test predictions of fermentation and perform the process of science. Jacobs will focus on teaching how nature recycles waste along with the reuse and recycling of waste products.

The National Science Foundation awarded a grant to YSU last year for the development and implementation of a laboratory science course specifically designed for the non-major. This grant allowed for the implementation of the Explorations in Sciences course.

“The main goal for the course is to follow the future guidelines that will be in place for the general education requirements for when YSU converts to semesters,” Usis said.

An honor society is an association of primarily collegiate chapters whose purposes are to recognize and encourage high scholarship and/or leadership achievement in some broad or specialized field of study. We are proud to recognize the new members of the honor societies referenced herein. Each student's membership is a reflection of the high academic standards that our students achieve and maintain and the significant growth of student involvement on the YSU campus.

Alpha Kappa Mu Honor Society, Alpha Lambda Delta Freshman Honor Society, and Omicron Delta Kappa Leadership Honor Society have all been introduced to our campus in the past two years. Each organization is experiencing tremendous growth and we are pleased to have them within our ranks.

Information regarding membership in these groups is available in the Student Activities office, located on the 2nd floor of Kilcawley Center, or call (330) 742-3575.

Forum addresses issues of black women

■ The seminar focused on achievement and goals.

JOHN W. GOODWIN JR.
Assistant Copy Editor

In light of Black History Month, Americans take time to reflect on African-American history and its contributions. While we celebrate the past, this month is also a time for looking to the future for change and reconstruction. A seminar Friday, "Understanding the Black Female," addressed these concerns as they relate to African-American women.

Psychotherapist Julia Boyd spoke at length on issues faced by black women in business, relationships and family.

Boyd said these three issues are the most seen issues in the lives of black women. She said many black women are being demoted or downsized, causing a lot of economic concern.

Family, according to Boyd, is another major concern for African-American women. Boyd said the challenges of keeping the nuclear family together is a major concern for many black women.

She said the main family concern for most women is their children and how to be good parents.

Boyd said relationships are another major concern for black females. She said the primary concern in relationships for black women, as with most women, is in sustaining the relationship and the problems associated with separating.

Boyd said the primary focus should be on addressing these issues for the future and preparation for change.

She said there are positive changes taking place with black women. One of these changing attitudes is that of health issues.

"The primary thing I notice change in is that we are becoming more aware of our health issues, and I am very proud of that."

Boyd went on to say that one change she would like to see in the future is more confidence in the ability to handle life's challenges as a whole. She said she is seeing that begin to happen.

Women were not the only close listeners as Boyd spoke. Gerald Moon of United Methodist Community Center said the seminar was "very informative and instructive."

One attendee used Boyd's lecture as a means of reconstructing her life. Vicky Adkins said the seminar is what she needed.

"I have an addiction," Adkins said, "I am currently in rehabilitation and have 23 days sober. This seminar has encouraged me by letting me know that we can recover from anything and be better at what we are doing. I am very happy to be here."

Boyd has practiced psychotherapy for 16 years and has a support group in Seattle. She said she is not aware of similar support groups locally, but this is a needed networking for African-American women.

and Thursday classes meeting for a two-hour time period.

Half of four-credit-hour-day classes in any department should meet four days a week. Departments offering four-credit-hour classes will be encouraged to schedule no more than 20 percent in the Tuesday, Thursday class pattern.

Four-credit-hour evening classes will meet two days a week from 6 to 7:50 or 8:05 to 9:55, including one 10-minute break. Graduate classes will meet any one day of the week from 6 to 9:40 including two 10-minute breaks.

Three options will be available for five-credit-hour-day classes. One option will have courses offered every day of the week for one hour. Other options will be offering courses on Tuesday and Thursday for two hours and Friday for one hour or Monday and Wednesday for two hours and Friday for one hour.

Five-credit-hour evening classes will meet either Monday and Wednesday or Tuesday and Thursday from 5:35 to 7:50 or 8:05 to 10:20, including one 10-minute break.

Although the guidelines will not please everyone, they are meant to please the most flexible student schedule along with meeting all the needs of individual college programs, Hauschildt said.

"Students might be able to take a wider variety of classes if they are able to come just in the morning or afternoon," Hauschildt said.

Each college within the university will keep a list of courses that will be exceptions to the scheduling guidelines.

EXPLORATIONS IN SCIENCE

AS 600 is a hands-on, minds-on course which is designed to engage you, the student, in the investigative process. You will experience several scientific inquiries appropriate for all individuals wishing to learn more about biological and environmental processes. You will work in groups that will develop, design, assess, and report the findings on your own investigative experiments. All participants will develop further their critical thinking and problem solving skills and exit this course with a solid foundation in the scientific method.

This course is divided into two, five-week modules where you will acquire direct experience in two different scientific disciplines. In one of the modules, while doing your own fermentation experiments, you will learn about this age-old process; how yeast and bacteria use resources to grow how these organisms can manufacture many useful products including antibiotics, vitamins, cheeses, vinegar, and (yes, of course) wine and beer; and how the biotech industry develops these processes to make new products and profits. In the other module, you will learn about how Nature recycles her wastes, how humans are picking up on Nature's ways through bioremediation, redesign for pollution prevention, reuse and recycling of waste products, and how you too might exploit these environmentally sound ideas in your life.

Lunch-time forums discuss women's issues

■ The Brown Bag Discussions are held from noon to 1 p.m. every Wednesday in the Women's Center.

MEGAN E. WALSH
Contributing Writer

A brown-bag lunch usually contains a sandwich, fruit, a treat and something to drink. For YSU, some brown-bag lunches contain diversity week, interviewing techniques and pampering yourself.

The YSU Women's Center in Kilcawley sponsors hour-long forums on topics concerning women. This forum was named Brown Bag Discussions because it takes place during lunch-time, and students are invited to bring along their own "brown bagged" lunches. All students are encouraged to attend this discussion from noon to 1 p.m. every Wednesday in the Women's Center, according to Cynthia Beckes, director of the Women's Center.

Jack Fahey, director of housing at YSU, said the program had been running a number of years before the Women's Center opened at YSU.

"The program is doing well and gets a good response," Fahey said.

The discussions consist of women's issues and topics of interest to women.

The discussions have included campus ministry, drug and alcohol abuse, diversity week, interviewing techniques and pampering yourself.

They include a presentation from women who specialize in each area and a discussion period for students and faculty.

"We invite you to bring your lunch, sit on our big couches and have a casual and informal discussion," said Beckes. "It gives students something to do while eating their lunch rather than going to Arby's."

According to Fahey, the topics discussed are either suggested or were popular in the past.

"From working in the area for years, we know what people are interested in," Fahey said.

"Pamper Yourself Day" is the most attended forum, attracting more than 60 students. It is offered each quarter on the Wednesday before finals week. It is designed to help students relieve stress. This Brown Bag consists of a neck rub from a licensed massage therapist, Mary Kay facials, cosmetics demonstrations and aromatherapy. It is completely free and has extended hours of 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., said Beckes.

According to Jain Savage, counselor and alcohol and drug specialist for YSU, being a Brown Bag presenter is a good experience. One of her forums involved alcoholism, its signs and symptoms and the difficulties women face.

"The presentations are very informal and comfortable because it's held at the Women's Center," Savage said.

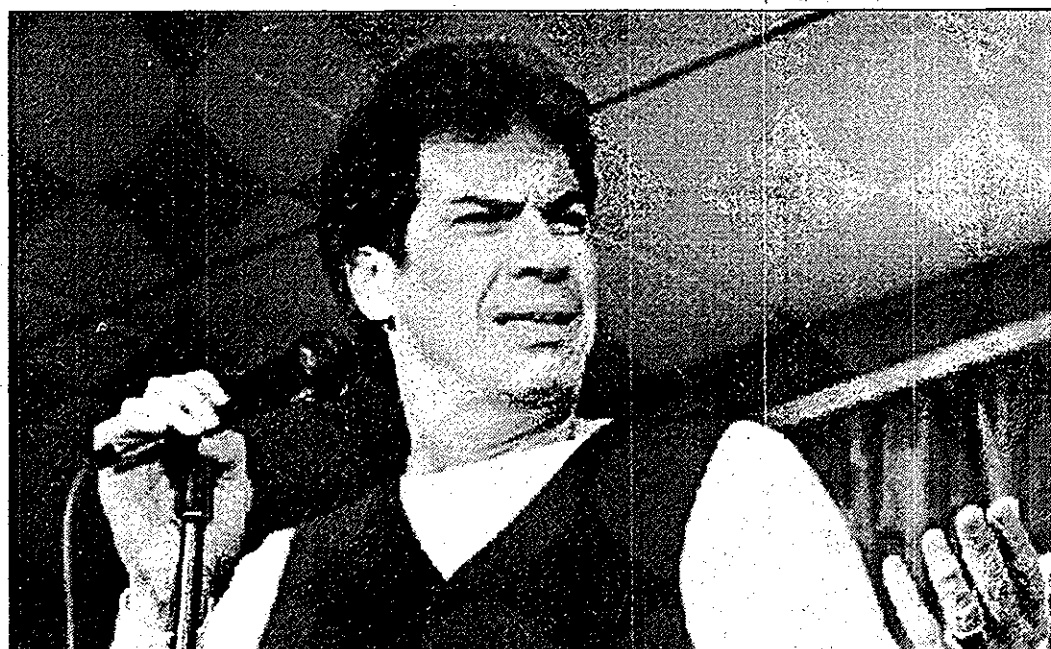

According to Beckes, there are not many places where women can come into a women-friendly environment. The Women's Center is for all women and men interested in women's issues. Women are more successful these days, said Beckes.

"Women are hiring and firing in large numbers," said Beckes. "Women have come a long way baby."

Alumnus appointed Boardman judge

Theresa Dellick said she wants to leave a lasting impression on people to follow the law.

NICOLE PENICK
Contributing Writer

"Carpe Diem!" is a message Theresa Dellick feels is very important to succeeding in life. She said students must realize how important what they do today really is.

Theresa Dellick, Industrial Management, is a graduate of YSU. Dellick was president of Sigma Pi Alpha, a business fraternity at YSU and is now a judge in Boardman.

The fraternity Dellick belonged to while at YSU was under Dr. Shuster and Professor Jim Dailey. The fraternity is a local affiliate of the SHERM Society, which is the society for human resource management.

Dr. Shuster also had Theresa Dellick as a student and described her as "wonderful."

Dellick said her fondest memories of attending YSU were her involvement in the Kilcawley Center Program Board, which organized different student events like dances.

She said she liked "being involved in the system and not just being a student."

In November, Dellick ran for the common pleas judgeship of Mahoning County, but was defeated by Judge James C. Evans.

"You go in knowing someone is going to lose," said Dellick.

Dellick then decided to request the position as Judge Evans' replacement as Mahoning County judge in Boardman, according to The Vindicator, Jan. 22.

Dellick was granted her request for that appointment, and Judge R. Scott Kirchbaum swore her in on Jan. 21.

Dellick said it is important that she leaves a lasting impression on people so they will follow the law. She said she feels this is especially important for first-time offenders, who are usually scared and nervous.

"Just like now, you pay for your decisions tomorrow, a rule for life," she said.

Dellick also said her job is a lot of responsibility.

"It is necessary to properly sentence people and be understanding of the facts," said Dellick.

She and her husband are both lawyers. She said she doesn't feel the shift from attorney to judge has been difficult. Her husband said he doesn't think so either.

"I'm very proud of her, I have been since I've known her," said John Dellick.

During her swearing in, Dellick thanked her husband and his family for their support during the election.
