Engineering students get hands-on experience planning YMCA addition

■ The second-floor addition will be used for programs and activities.

Assistant News Editor

Most students enroll in classes simply to gain basic knowledge of the subject, or at least enough to pass the class. Nine senior engineering technology students decided to take their class work to the next level during winter quarter.

David Kurtanich, engineering technology instructor, taught the class.

The students, who were enrolled in the CET 800 Building Systems course, embarked on a journey in January that led to a presentation to the executive committee of the Shenango Valley YMCA in Hermitage, Pa. March 17.

The presentation was of a design for a second-floor activity room to be added to the YMCA this summer. The project involved the analysis, design and preparation of conceptual plans for the proposed renovations to the building.

Pat O'Mahony, YMCA executive director, said the committee is taking the students design into consideration.

"We were very impressed with the students and their knowledge," O'Mahony said.

The second-floor addition will be used for different programs and activities with construction targeted to begin this summer.

Chad Thorne, senior, civil engineering, originally was planning to withdraw from the course due to work scheduling, but is now glad he stayed with the class.

"It was a great project with excellent hands-on experience for the entire class. We couldn't have gotten as far as we did if it weren't for the equal effort everyone put in," Thorne said.

Thorne, along with Robert Kirkpatrick and Julie Ann Wallace, were part of the Civil Design Team of the group.

Other members were Rick Bowser, Bill Neider and Ian Usis on the Mechanical Design Team and Jerry Beck, George McCracken and Tom Zoccolo on the Electrical/Lighting Design Team.

The students prepared preliminary design computations and plans after obtaining field measurements at the YMCA.

"The students did an excellent job. They put a lot of time into the project; they were at the YMCA two or three times looking at the facility, which is very important.

What they did was very helpful for the design of the room," O'Mahony said.

Endowment makes college more accessible to minorities

■ The $15,000 check was presented to President Dr. Leslie Cochran in March.

JOHN W. GOODWIN JR.
Assistant Copy Editor

Minority students having a desire to attend YSU may find that dream a little more attainable as the Roberts Deliberating club presented a $15,000 check to President Dr. Leslie Cochran March 25 in Tod Hall. The money is to be contributed to YSU's Minority Endowment Fund.

The Roberts Deliberating Club is a local organization of 25 African-American men founded 77 years ago with the purpose of studying parliamentary procedures and rules of order and participating in civic and social events. The club's motto, "We say, we think, we do, as reason and conscience dictate."

The $15,000 donated by the group will be matched by the YSU foundation, and scholarships will be presented from that fund each year to deserving minority students. A committee of 10 to 12 people from the university and community will be appointed to select recipients of the scholarships.

Reid Schmutz, president of the YSU Foundation, said the donation is a part of the Capital Campaign where any money given to the minority endowment fund will be matched by the YSU Foundation.

He said numerous contributions have been made to the fund for as little as $10. LTV Steel, Schmutz said, has been the major contributor to minority engineering, with Mahoning National Bank being the first contributor in the form of a minority business scholarship.

"The scholarship provides incentive and recognition for the students' efforts. [The scholarships] mean a lot to the recipients," Schmutz said. According to Schmutz, the foundation had a goal that has not yet been met, but they have had "moderate success."

"The hope is that we can attract and retain good minority students," he said.

Schmutz said the scholarships are open to all minority students regardless of class.

He said grades are a factor, but any minority student can apply. Students may apply at the office of scholarships and financial aid or at the YSU Foundation located on the 2nd floor of the Alumni House.

"The hope is that we can attract and retain good minority students."

Loss of resident assistants forms usual occurrence at YSU

■ Thirteen out of 19 RAs are reapplying for next year.

QUANTIA D. WATSON
Staff Writer

YSU's loss of five resident assistants this academic year alone has set warning bells off across campus. But with the retention of 14 of the original 19 RAs, 13 of whom have reapplied for next year, maybe the resident assistant program doesn't need to be scrutinized.

According to Jack Fahey, director of housing services, it is not unusual to lose two or three RAs per year. The fact that five have been lost already this year is upsetting to him, but not because of the statistics.

He said, "Anytime we lose somebody, it's like losing a member of your family."

Of the five RAs who left this year, he said, one was fired, one transferred and three were dealing with different academic issues like not maintaining the minimum 2.3 GPA required to be an RA, needing more time to study or not being able to include being an RA in their academic career. Of the six who are not reapplying, five are slated to graduate.

Is Fahey implying the program is perfect? Certainly not, he said.

He admitted some of YSU's

Tips help take the pressure out of parking

■ The top and bottom levels of the Wick Deck are never completely full.

NICOLE PENICK
Contributing Writer

Five minutes before class starts, and you're still driving around the parking deck looking for that elusive spot. There has to be one... somewhere. It's something many students and faculty fear everyday — finding a parking spot.

"Parking is definitely a problem for faculty, but YSU does a good job for being an urban campus," said Dr. Phillip Brady, English.

But students have several complaints. Many new students have trouble using their access cards and claim they don't work. Some students don't know how to use the card properly.

"All cards should work, just remember to slide the card slow and firm," said Tom Manning, supervisor of Parking Services.

Other complaints from students are the decks are dirty and often have lights missing or need other repairs. Some students have ideas about how these problems should be handled.

"They need to clean up the trash and tow cars that don't park correctly," said Martha Morrow junior, business management.

There are garbage cans in the decks and lots, assures Manning, and any problem can be reported to the parking attendants. Parking attendants can also help find people places to park.

"We park here too and want to help," said parking attendant Robert Kirkpatrick, senior, civil engineering technician.

Parking services gets the most complaints during fall quarter, but with students dropping out or getting used to their schedules, the amount of students on campus at one time decreases by winter and spring quarters.

"There is always some place to park; I just can't guarantee it's convenient," said Joe Scarnecchia, director of Support Services.

Many don't know all the places to park, and time is a definite factor in finding a spot. Parking attendant Kirkpatrick, advises against trying to park in decks in the morning between 7 and 8 a.m. It is better to come before 7:50 a.m. or go to a lot. Then between 10 and 11 a.m. there is very heavy traffic at both decks and lots. It is best to come before 10 a.m. or after 11 a.m. Remember the very bottom and top of Wick Deck never fill up.

There are lots all over campus. Across from Stambaugh Stadium is the M-24 parking lot. It is the largest lot, containing 535 spaces. The M-26 lot contains 231. M-26, located by Taco Bell, is farthest from campus. M-3 is behind the College of Education.

There are lots off University Plaza and a lot next to Burger King. The paved lot directly behind Wick is for students only and rarely fills up.

Another question is where to park in the evening. All faculty lots, which are designated with an F, change to mixed lots after 4:30 p.m. These changes are on signs in the front of the lots. Students can move their cars to closer lots later in the day. If a student's car is locked in a deck, he or she can call the police to be let out. The hours the parking decks are open are, M-1 (Wick) Monday through Saturday, 6 a.m. to midnight and M-2 (Lincoln) Monday through Saturday, 6 a.m. to 11 p.m.

Safety is a concern for Walnut lots behind Wick Deck, especially. Students do not like to park there during the night or in bad weather. "My car got stuck in the snow once and it took a half an hour to get it out," said Robert Phillips, freshman, education.

There are lighting and surveillance cameras, but parking relies mostly on police to patrol where students park.

There have been no reports of problems with safety and students in Walnut lots or any other lots.

"The biggest problem is theft from kids leaving stuff in their cars," said Officer George Hammar, YSU police.

A rumor that goes around campus frequently is the university will close Lincoln deck. The university is keeping it open because it still makes sense cost wise.

"Lincoln has a few more years before it reaches a critical repair stage," said Scarnecchia.

There is not an exact time Lincoln will close. Critical repair stage is when repairs will cost more than maintenance or construction. An engineering firm checks the safety of all lots and decks. Parking Services would like to build more parking lots and buy land that is cost effective.

Parking Services is auxiliary to the university, making it self-supporting.

"We generate all of our own income through the sale of permits," said Scarnecchia.

Student permits are $38, and faculty permits are $50. Parking also gets money from special event and daily parking sales. The amount of money received from parking fines is $40,000. The budget for parking is $1.9 million and it covers all aspects of parking.

Spring and summer quarters are repair time and are when decks and lots will be closed for a few days.

"We have a small window of time to make repairs," said Scarnecchia.

Parking notifies students about any changes due to special events by posting signs and announcements in The Jambar. The longest they have had to close a deck is all of summer quarter until the second week in September.

When students register for parking in the fall, they receive booklets, including important phone numbers for disabled vehicle assistance and YSU police. The booklet also contains regulations and information about parking permits. It explains disability services and fees for violations and fines.

"You shouldn't get a ticket just for being out of line," said Amy Christoff, sophomore, elementary education.

If a student receives a ticket, he or she has the option to appeal it. The procedure is explained in the booklet. Parking has maps that show all parking areas on campus. Scarnecchia will take any student on a tour of all the parking areas available. The number to schedule a tour is in the booklet.

Credit cards and students are a critical combination

■ Many students experience credit card debt with lifelong effects.

JOSHUA NOLAN
Contributing Writer

It's easy. You can get a free T-shirt. You don't have to use it, just sign up. No annual fees.

A walk through Kilcawley Center, especially at the beginning of a quarter, will likely have most students running into an offer like this.

Companies are offering their credit cards, and YSU students are taking them up on that offer.

What happens in the months that follow leads many students into a hole they will be trying to crawl out of for years to come.

Christian Allen, senior, hospitality management, said, "I have a lot of credit cards. Well, three now. But I owe about $11,000, and I pay about $200 a month. I had them consolidated because I couldn't afford the interest."

Allen added that his debt, like many YSU students', is compounded by thousands of dollars he owes in student loans.

Andrea Cencia, sophomore, public relations, said she has three credit cards.

"I owe about $1,900 now, but I was up to about $3,700. I got them at school," Cencia said, "It's like they just give them out."

Jennifer Sawders, junior, special education, said her credit has been ruined because she had several cards on which she ran up large bills.

"When I got some of them I was so young. I didn't realize how bad the interest was, and I didn't think it was a big deal. I missed some payments and it just got worse," she said.

Sawders also said it was easy for her to get credit cards.

"I wasn't even old enough to get one, and they gave me one at Sears," she said.

Brandee Rentz, senior, elementary education said, "My first day at YSU I got six credit cards. Everyone was giving them out."

Rentz said she and her husband were forced to go to a credit service to have their bills consolidated.

She said although they now have good credit, they owe too much to buy anything.

Getting the credit card is the easy part in many cases. Just sign up. Usually, within a few weeks, the card comes in the mail.

But those who aren't careful and do not know exactly what they're getting into after that may be receiving calls from someone like Shawn Woody, a representative for FSC Credit Agency in Houston.

FSC is a collection agency, but also offers ways for those in debt to work their way out and to eventually resuscitate their credit standings.

Woody said he believes college students think credit cards are easy money, but don't consider interest when using them.

Woody said those in debt also often try to dodge interest, by switching credit cards constantly to those with lower interest rates.

"It doesn't work," he said. Fred Purnell, a salesman for Spartan Chevrolet in Boardman, said he sees credit problems often.

"People just don't realize. They just get themselves in deeper and deeper. They've got all this debt and then they want to buy a $20,000 car. I mean, we can work something out with most people, but people get themselves into bad credit and it piles up. Put the interest on top of all that and it's problems," Purnell said.

Purnell said most people's credit ratings will go back to good standings in about seven years, but "they've got to pay and qualify to buy more."

Even with good credit and without buying a lot with credit cards, all credit card companies still charge interest. Visa and MasterCard both charge about 15 percent compounded daily. That means that every two days, a credit card bill increases by 1 percent.

When the bills are allowed to accumulate month after month, it gets the majority of people into trouble, said Woody.

David Machall is a representative for Universal Card Services of South Hackensack, N.J. Universal Card Services is the company behind the AT&T Universal Master Card, a card offered frequently at YSU that offers special incentives for college students around the country.

"We offer the card as an opportunity for students. They're old enough now when they get to college, and it's a good way to begin to establish credit. Some students take advantage of the card and use it irresponsibly," said Machall.

Machall also said another problem credit card holders often have is charging more than they can pay, then pay just the minimum payment when the statement comes, letting the interest accumulate month after month.

Two students offered their solutions to credit woes.

Kevin Coss, senior, psychology and criminal justice, said, "I don't have any credit cards. I don't buy anything I can't pay for in cash. I figure when I get older and I can afford to pay for them, then maybe I will. It's hard sometimes, but I don't think I could trust myself with a card."

Angie Vross, senior, exercise physiology, said she has credit cards but doesn't owe anything on them.

"I have zero debt," she said. She also echoed Coss's rule of not buying anything she can't afford.

Use defensive computing

It seems like you always have to be on the defensive. You constantly hear about defensive driving and defending yourself against sexually transmitted diseases. Now you also have to practice defensive computing.

Computer viruses are nothing new, but they keep getting worse and worse. Point in fact, the Melissa virus. This virus has computer users everywhere in an uproar, and Internet service providers, like America Online, broadcasting ways their users can protect themselves.

With all the computers on campus, it will probably be a miracle if none of them get infected with this virus, but it really isn't that hard to prevent. Students just need to use common sense. Don't download anything from someone you don't know, and don't open any of your files from home on a university computer if there's a chance they might be infected.

We as students already have to pay a $15 computer fee every quarter for the maintenance of on-campus computers. We definitely don't need that fee to increase any. And it's very frustrating to learn you've picked up a virus from school and brought it home to your computer. If everyone is responsible and practices defensive computing, we can keep viruses from infecting the university computer population.

Wedding wishes

Throughout the last few months, a few of my friends became either engaged or married. The end of my spring break vacation brought me home to attend the wedding of one of my friends to a man she just met over the summer.

Many might say that Dede is crazy for marrying someone so fast, but to see her face during the wedding dance, I could tell that she was extremely happy, more so than I have seen her in a long time.

Two other friends of mine became engaged over Valentine's Day weekend, and I wish them the best of luck in the futures with their fiancés. One will marry her high school sweetheart (we all told her she would, but I don't think she ever believed us) and the other is marrying someone she met in a biology class here at YSU.

I guess some good things do come out of a YSU education.

To Jenny, one of my best friends from high school, I wish the best of luck in her life with Matt. When planning your wedding, always remember the days of hobbling around on your crutches and stealing his hat, but still denying that there was an attraction between the two of you.

To Shannon, I wish the best of luck in her life with Brent. You have less time to plan your wedding than

I hope that there are others out there who have the same kinds of friendships that we do, and that anyone planning a wedding has friends who are as supportive of them as myself and others are of my friends.

Jenny does, but I know it will be an exciting and beautiful day.

I can remember back to high school when our group would all spend weekend nights at someone's house, just talking about all the different things going on in our lives and what we wanted to do in the future. One of the main things we always said was that we would be there for each other when we got married, and we are about to begin those times together.

I hope that there are others out there who have the same kinds of friendships that we do, and that anyone planning a wedding has friends who are as supportive of them as myself and others are of my friends.

Let the traditional wedding crying and marital bliss begin!

Piercing dilemma

I hold nothing against those individuals who express themselves in what society considers unconventional ways.

To pierce or not to pierce. That is the question.

I am not a very outrageous person. My appearance is very casual, my dress clothes are professional and my hair is its natural color with limited styling. I have no tattoos, no unusual markings and, in general, nothing about me would attract attention. I am known for being level-headed and conservative in my presentations. But only with myself.

I hold nothing against those individuals who express themselves in what society considers unconventional ways.

In fact, I admire them for their originality and creativity — if that is what they want to do and are not doing it only to rebel and make a statement. I can't stand it when someone dresses a certain way or acts a certain way, not because they are comfortable like that, but because they want to make a statement even if it means changing themselves into someone they don't want to be.

So that brings me to my point. I want to get my tongue pierced.

Not because my friends did it, not because it is the thing to do, not because I want to rebel against my life and not because it would probably shock the whole world. But because I find it fascinating and intriguing. I do have several friends who have pierced their tongues and it captivates me to the point that I would really like to do it.

So why don't I? Well, the reasons are all fairly trivial. Most people would tell me to just do what I want and forget about everyone else, but I am one of those people who does care what other people think of me to an extent.

I have applied for a summer internship at The Vindicator and knowing the conservative nature of the paper, I don't think they would appreciate having an intern with a pierced tongue, which could hinder my chances of getting the job.

I know my other job as a server could quite possibly end over the issue. Not to mention my boyfriend and family are not too keen on the idea to say the least.

But none of this erases my desire to pierce my tongue, which would undoubtedly be the most unusual thing I have ever done. It is very unlike me to do something that is still considered "weird" in today's society. I guess one could say I have always walked the straight and narrow path and have developed a sort of image of myself.

But what does one do when they want to do something totally unlike anything they have ever done and goes against their entire personality? Do I tell the world to go to hell or do I allow myself this one moment of unconventionalism?

Maybe I just have to take a stand and do something that will shock everyone around me and enjoy it because I am doing it for no one but myself.

THROUGH EBONY EYES

Why do black men date white women?

The question has plagued African-American women since before I began dating. Why are black men dating white women? So, I decided to do some unofficial research and I am pleased to admit that afterwards I felt good about my discoveries, though the victory may be bittersweet.

I cannot speak for every black man, but I can speak for the ones to which I posed this question. I got a handful of different answers which included, "I date black and white women. I don't discriminate," "White women are freakier" and "I don't know."

The most common answers, however, were "Black women are cheap" and "They don't do what you tell them to."

I could not believe it. They called us cheap. Ironically, my last two ex-boyfriends said the same thing about me. And once I stopped to think about it, I suppose I could understand where they were coming from.

I'd say it was a bit misleading to use the word "cheap." I buy my clothes and shoes from good stores, and I spend a small fortune in hair and nail shops. In the "Gifts for Guys" department, though, I suppose there is some frugality.

Why would I spend an excess of $100, of my hard-earned money, to buy Jordan's for my boyfriend? First of all, he's not going to walk anywhere. Second, if profiling is that important, he can spend that kind of money on himself. I do.

But that's just me. I fear that a bigger reason black women

Most of us were not given daddy's credit card to use at will before we left for college. As a matter of fact, our parents may not have been able to give us much of anything, so we work really hard for what we have.

don't spend that kind of money on everyday gifts for their men is because they don't have it. A lot of us have children and when it comes right down to sneakers for her man or her kid, there is usually no question as to the outcome.

Most of us were not given daddy's credit card to use at will before we left for college. As a matter of fact, our parents may not have been able to give us much of anything, so we work really hard for what we have. It's easy to see why we are reluctant to squander away anything on a man who is perfectly capable of buying his own shoes and gold chains.

As far as our "attitude" is concerned, I think there is an underlying reason for this, too. In black families, especially, heads of households are usually women.

Our mothers raised us, our aunts and grandmothers babysat us, therefore, we tend to have a few male authority issues.

Don't mistake this column for malg-bashing. It is not. I love black men. And to their credit, not one of them said white women were prettier, sexier or smarter, just more tolerant.

In the meantime, I am going to wait for the right black man who knows that if he wants me to scratch his back, he'll have to scratch mine. I have a feeling that a lot of my sisters are going to wait with me.

A STUDENT VIEW

Parking nightmares

NICOLE PENICK
Contributing Writer

It all started when that shiny parking pass arrived in my mail box and I hung it on my rear view mirror.

My experience from there was very interesting — to say the least. I had no idea what the card was for, where that pretty sticker went and even worse that those items didn't guarantee a spot. When I went through a very brief orientation, the admissions people didn't tell me.

It cost me $38 and all I got was a lot of experience — the hard way. My first day of class, I got to Wick deck 20 minutes early. By the time I parked my car out on Walnut somewhere in gravel, I was five minutes late for class.

The second day, I parked at the very bottom of Wick but could not find my way to an elevator. Those colored arrows are not very helpful, but with a light jog, I was on time for class.

That was a big step. I was not so lucky though, because the second week, the gates weren't up anymore. How do I get in now? I then saw someone slide in a card. I thought, "so that's what that thing was for." By week three of fall quarter I thought I was getting pretty good, so I parked in the Lincoln deck to be closer to my night class. Ninety degree turns are not in my driving ability, and that deck is more confusing than Wick, not to mention scarier.

If I had known what Lincoln was like, I wouldn't have ventured in there. I wasn't as good as I thought, so I regress to the lot across Fifth. It is nice and flat and has room to make round turns. I can always find my car there.

It is now spring quarter and I have reamed the ins and outs of parking at YSU. It would have been a lot easier if someone in admissions would have had someone from Parking Services come in minutes early and go over this. I am sure, from watching other students try to park and hearing comments, that I am not the only one.

Trying to drive in a deck when you don't know your way around and being stressed about trying to get to class can be a dangerous mixture. All of my problems could have been avoided had this been covered in the orientation program.

I read the parking brochure but it doesn't tell you how full the decks are, how to find your way out, and what to do with all the stuff you get in the mail. Since we are going to college to be educated, a good place to start would be to explain parking.

The men's baseball team went 3-for-4 over the weekend, taking two games from IUPUI Saturday and splitting with them Sunday. The wins put YSU at 3-1 in the Mid-Continent Conference.

Thomas

"It took some time to get us swinging the bats, but now that we're swinging, we've got a chance," said Head Coach Mike Florak.

Sunday the Penguins blasted IUPUI 12-4, collecting 10 hits. Junior Eric Jones belted a three-run home run in the first inning to give YSU a 3-1 lead. Jones hit 3-for-4, scoring two runs and batting in five.

Sophomore Steve Mefferd scored two runs, while batting 2-for-3 and sophomore Todd Santor hit 2-for-2, scoring two runs and batting in an RBI.

Senior Bob Simock topped the mound for six innings, striking out five batters and allowing only four runs.

The second game was a battle for both teams, with IUPUI coming away victorious, 16-14. IUPUI nailed 10 runs in the first three innings. YSU fought back from a 10-4 deficit to close the gap, but it wasn't enough.

Freshman Greg Ensley made good on 2-of-4 at bats, driving in four batters and scoring three runs of his own. Senior Mark Thomas batted 3-for-3, hitting in five runs and scoring two of his own.

Senior Derek Nelson started on the mound for YSU, but was relieved by freshman Brad Hennessey after six batters. Sophomore Shaun Robinson finished the game, tossing three innings.

The Penguins got great pitching performances Saturday, first from freshman Corey Ohalek and in the second with senior Brian McFarland. Both pitched complete games.

"We got two excellent pitching performances Saturday, and we played pretty good defense," said Florak.

The Red and White won 10-2, as Ensley, Thomas and junior Andy Clough all scored three runs.

Ensley hit 2-for-4 and recorded an RBI, Thomas hit 1-for-3, knocking in two RBIs and Clough batted 2-for-3 and also hit in an RBI.

Ohalek faced 25 batters, pitching seven innings. He gave up only five hits and two runs.

"He is such a competitor," Florak said of Ohalek. "He comes with enthusiasm and hard nosed effort."

In the second game, Mefferd blasted one over the fence on the first pitch of the game for his first of the season, while Thomas, who also hit his first home run of the season, nailed one in the first as well.

Mefferd hit 2-for-4, scoring two runs and recording an RBI. Thomas knocked in three RBIs and scored two runs, while batting 3-for-4.

McFarland allowed five hits, while on the mound, giving up one run.

In the home opener, Thursday, the Penguins came back from 6-4 to defeat Akron 7-6.

Thomas hit 3-for-4, batting in and scoring two runs, while senior Kevin Smith got a hit in five at bats and scored two runs.

"It took some time to get us swinging the bats, but now that we're swinging, we've got a chance."

Head Baseball Coach

Senior Andy Bragg hit one of one, scoring a run and driving in an RBI.

The Penguins went through four batters, including Nelson, Simock, freshman Matt Brumit, while freshman Kyle Soabecki picked up the win.

He Conquered Death. Do You Think He Might Know Something About Life?

It wasn't difficult for God to take on human flesh. What was difficult was what He did as a man. He was crucified for our sins. But then He rose from the dead. He now offers us new life in Him through forgiveness of sin and a relationship with Him. If you have any questions about Jesus Christ and His relevance for your life, ask one of us or see Tell Me More (www.leaderu.com/TellMeMore).

RAs

academic programs, like music, are intense. He said if they want 100 percent of your time and we want 95 percent, that's 195 percent and no student can afford that.

According to Lyden House coordinator, Vincent Isom, "People don't understand a big part of the turnover is academic. We work closely with our RAs and their development. We prefer for them to prosper academically."

The demanding time constraints seem to be the biggest hurdle the RAs must leap.

All housing coordinators echo the same sentiment, "time management," as key to being a successful RA. Evette Currie, coordinator of Cafaro House, said incoming RAs have the chance to speak to others in the position.

"We are very upfront about the amount of time it takes,"

Currie said.

Coordinator of Kilcawley House John Valentine said, "The job is extremely difficult, but those with good time management skills love it."

Isom said the program is "demanding, yet rewarding."

According to him, students may "underestimate the commitment it takes to be responsible for 30 or so students."

He added students may find the position socially confining as well.

"You're a role model," he said, "If you're going to enforce policies, you can't violate them. It's a position where you've got to be mature."

He said if RAs are terminated, they have usually had a number of warnings, but he said some things are never tolerated like fighting or drinking.

Josh Aikens is an RA in Kilcawley House and says he loves his job and is planning to return next year.

"It's taught me a lot of responsibility, and it gives me a chance to interact with people in a way I never got to do in high school."

He admitted, however, that he can see why some students don't like the program.

He said, "You have to do it for the love of the job and the opportunity it presents."

He added that if a student does it for reasons like money, then he or she won't prosper.

Fahey said a lot of RAs want to keep coming back, but are encouraged to "diversify" themselves after two years.

He said the program is too hard to do for too many years and it's important for the students to see what else is available to them.

The recruitment process begins with the distribution of posters and ads about the positions.

Fahey sends postcards to faculty and staff members asking for recommendations.

Then, he holds orientation meetings for interested students. Finally, the selection process begins.

RAs receive CPR and first aid training, as well as job training in spring and fall. A professional staff person is on staff 24 hours if an RA should need assistance. A student must have completed one year at YSU to be eligible for the job, and since it is a live-in position, an RA is not allowed to hold another job.

Fahey said being an RA improves the ability to deal with conflict and emergencies. It also develops communication, people and decision-making skills.

"One of the things that makes me happiest is that a number of our RAs have graduated and taken their experience to other colleges and universities," he said.

In the last few years, he said five of his RAs have earned a Master's degree, or are in the midst of pursuing it. This includes Valentine, who was an RA prior to becoming housing coordinator. He is now studying for his master's at YSU.

Fahey said he has been told by placement officers that being an RA is one of the best things students can do because of the qualities and skills they acquire.

Isom agreed, "It's the epitome of leadership training."

According to Isom, RAs at YSU are the highest paid in the state.

They receive free room and board, free meals and a $200 monthly stipend. They also go to conferences and meet RAs across the state.

Although the attrition number is higher than normal, Fahey is not worried.

"When [I am] dealing with 800 college students, anything can happen," he said.

Applications are now available for the STUDENT TRUSTEE position.

Applications can be picked up in the Student Government office and they will be due on April 19th at 12:00 noon. Applicants will also need to speak at the Student Government meeting on April 26th at 4:00 p.m.

Buechner Hall Truly Has Everything

This beautiful residence hall for women, located mid-campus at YSU, is truly first-rate. Single and double occupancy rooms are completely furnished, including linens, telephones, and free cable. The building is fully air conditioned, and staff and guards provide professional, 24-hour security. Weekly maid service, exquisitely decorated lounge areas, quiet study environment, on-premise dining room and home-cooked meals, fitness room, and laundry rooms are other features supplying their share of full-comfort living.

Sound expensive? Not at all. Thanks to the large bequest of the Buechner family, which completed the building in 1941, more than half of all residents' room rental is still absorbed by the Buechner fund. The remainder required from residents including 15 meals per week, is $837 per quarter for double occupancy and $907 per quarter for single. Payable weekly. Your inquiry is solicited.

Elephants are called pachyderms, from a Greek word meaning thick-skinned, but their skin is surprisingly tender. To protect themselves from sun and insects, they roll in mud. Unlike other mammals they don't have a layer of fat under their skin to protect them from the cold. They get stomach cramps if the temperature drops below 35 degrees.
