Damage from the fire that left $15,000 in damages at the Sigma Phi frat house

Fraternity vacates fire-gutted home

By CLARENCE MOORE
Jambor News Editor

It will be at least three to four months before the brothers of Sigma Phi Epsilon, (a YSU fraternity) will be able to move back into their recently burned fraternity home at 43 Indiana Avenue.

Last Friday morning, Oct. 21, shortly after 1:30 a.m., city fire department crews rushed to put out the one-alarm blaze that fireman Roy Infante said started in a "faulty fireplace" of the Indiana Avenue home.

After the smoke cleared, damages to the fraternity house were estimated around $15,000. See Fraternity, page 5

Troops should stay say student, prof

Worldwide political opinion is increasing seemingly at the same rate as American marine casualties, following last Sunday morning's massacre in Lebanon.

And while opinion may vary across the globe, one student and one faculty member at YSU agree that maybe American forces should stay in Lebanon — with a clarification of purpose and additional security for American men.

"I think it is terrible what happened in Lebanon — they were there to keep peace. But I agree with President Reagan's decision to keep them there," said a YSU International Student from Lebanon who wishes to remain unidentified.

The Lebanese student said he agrees that to withdraw American troops is to create further chaos — if only for the fact that the marines are a visible policing agent — but he also says they should not be left there defenseless.

If there is any kind of American involvement infuriating the Lebanese student, it is media coverage of the Middle East crisis and its headlines claiming civil war.

"When it was reported that 500 Palestinian guerillas are killing off Lebanese Druse, how can that be considered civil war?"

When there are reports of Iranian involvement, how can that be considered civil war? When newscasters say that Russia is backing Syria with its weapons, how can that be considered civil war?" she asks.

"That's what really gets me mad," he said.

Do the Lebanese people want American and other foreign forces present in their country?

"Yes," says this Lebanese student. "I think our people want whatever it takes to regain the old Lebanon — the Lebanon where I want to raise my kids."

Saul Friedman, history, made four very strong points about the situation in Lebanon as it exists today.

"It's inexcusable, especially after the bombing of the American embassy last year, and we (Americans) must make it impossible for this to happen again," said Friedman.

Friedman said, however, that he feels American forces should stay in the country as long as necessary in order to prevent fur-

Guinness doesn't recognize student record

By GEORGE DENNEY
Jambor Editor

A YSU fraternity member may have set a world record over the weekend, only to be refused entry into the Guinness Book of World Records.

Kevin Brauer, of Phi Kappa Tau, spent 60 hours under the sun, in heavy rain and through the dark of night, playing a marathon game of Bocce. He and other fraternity members organized the event for two reasons: to raise money for the March of Dimes and to be recognized in the Guinness Book of World Records.

Brauer's team started rolling the grapefruit sized ceramic balls at precisely 9:57 a.m., Friday, Oct. 21. The would-be four-man team was already two members short. Two had to drop from the tournament because of their weekend work schedules.

The third member lasted 12 hours, then succumbed to a nagging chest cold.

That left Brauer, who was determined to reach his 60-hour goal.

During the course of the weekend, Brauer faced over 20 teams and played 131 games. It began raining Saturday morning.

"One end of the court became completely covered by water," said Brauer, who despite blood-shot eyes, was able to sport a mild-mannered grin.

"Mr. Rucci came out with hammer and chisel, and chiseled two holes in the court to drain water out," he continued. "I remember standing there, holding a ball in one hand and an umbrella in the other." The Marathon was played at Rucci's restaurant on the West side of Youngstown.

Brauer, who was allowed a five-minute rest period for each hour (according to Guinness rules), said he had accumulated two hours of rest time at one point — long enough to get some sleep. "I could have slept, but I was afraid I might not get up," he said.

"I felt a little discouraged, but I was determined to go 60 hours and to the point of exhaustion," he said.

"There were a couple of low points," said Brauer. "Saturday night — well, it really was 2 a.m. Sunday morning — all of the fraternity members had gone home and I was told they were too 'pooped' to come back."

Brauer said that some friends had even encouraged him to quit. "But I took a break to go to the bathroom, and the people inside kept cheering me on," he said. Brauer said one man supplied him with dry clothes and

Ukrainians call attention to past famine

By ANNA STECEWYCZ
Special to The Jambar

The plight of the Jews during the Holocaust has received much publicity and sympathy from those who recognize their suffering.

The similar plight of millions of Ukrainians in the Soviet Union during the years 1932 and 1933 is still unknown today, except by those who survived to tell their stories.

In recognition of the 50th anniversary of a man-made famine in Eastern Ukraine, Professor George Kulchycky, history, is heading a conference 10 a.m., Sunday, Oct. 30, in the Arts & Sciences lecture hall. Guest speakers for the conference are M. Ciskewycz, Ohio State University, J. Mace, Harvard University and B. Czepak, physician and surgeon. Kulchycky said that he hopes the conference will help the public to better understand and study the facts of this event.

The conference is only part of a national campaign by many Ukrainians to gain recognition for the planned famine under the hands of the Communist Stalin regime which killed seven million Eastern Ukrainians.

Kulchycky said the truth of the famine has not been relayed to students of history or the general public because it is not found in any history books. He said authors who have written books on European history only slightly mention the famine or don't mention it at all.

It has been proven that the famine was planned, he said, because records say that Stalin ordered collectivization of farms and industrialization in Ukraine. Stalin hoped to achieve this by taking all food from Eastern Ukraine and distributing it to other sections of the country, he said.

The reason for this latter action was because Stalin was prejudiced against Eastern Ukrainians and wished to destroy the population for resisting his orders, said Kulchycky. The Eastern Ukrainians believed in independent ownership.

The normal amount of food produced by that area of Ukraine was enough for those living there plus all of Europe and was dubbed "the bread basket of Europe," Kulchycky noted. From these events, he said, it is clear that Stalin wished to destroy the Eastern Ukrainians.

"As a result, the only way to get rid of the base of these people was to break them economically and biologically," he said. A few years later, he added, Stalin set out to destroy the intellectual, free-thinking base of people who might use their knowledge to resist the moves by the Communist government.

Kulchycky said the most horrifying result of the famine was cannibalism. "People became crazed because they had no food, so they ate their children and other family members who had died," he said. "It is in the records that Stalin himself said that collectivization cost him 10 million people."

Kulchycky said a sad fact is that some history books recently mention the cows and other farm animals that died as a result of the famine, but overlook the deaths of many people.

"People don't want to hear about such things," he said, and such was the case in 1932 when only the Chicago American newspaper ran a story reporting the ongoing famine.

Yet, in 1983, Kulchycky said, Ukrainians in this country have made progress in gaining recognition of the famine by

Shale to examine doctors in films

By KAREN McMULLIN
Jambar Staff Writer

I'll bet the last time you saw a physician he was wearing make-up.

"Most people, if they go to movies at all, see more doctors on movie screens than they do in real life," says Rick Shale, English professor.

Many people only visit a doctor once a year, said Shale, but there are an astonishing number of films made that have doctors as principal characters or in supporting roles.

Hollywood, therefore, gives film audiences many false images pertaining to members of the medical profession, Shale noted. Many of the medical stereotypes the film industry has bestowed upon us will be examined in a class entitled, "The Image of the Medical Profession in Popular Films."

Shale will be leading a discussion on this topic for four consecutive Tuesdays beginning Oct. 25 at 6 p.m.

The course is part of the human values in medicine program at the Northeastern Ohio Universities College of Medicine (NEOUCOM) in Rootstown.

Four films will be shown depicting a variety of medical images. The first is a Hollywood classic, Stagecoach, in which Thomas Mitchell portrays a drunken doctor, for which he received the 1939 Academy Award.

The second film, Whose Life Is It Anyway?, is a film about a quadriplegic (Richard Dreyfus), in which the medical personnel are portrayed in a positive way. John Cassavetes plays a very strong-minded, authoritarian doctor. And one of the most prominent roles is played by a woman.

Shale stated that the movie industry has been guilty of portray-

THE UNREPORTED CRIME

Rape statistics can be extremely misleading

Statistics may be deceiving when they say no YSU women became rape victims last year.

According to national crime reports, no one was raped on campus last year, although the city of Youngstown had 54 reported rapes.

However, if the number of unreported rapes were included in such statistics, the figures would probably be much higher.

Each year, approximately three women seek help after a campus-related rape, according to Linda Botirius, director of YSU's Rape Information and Counseling center. Last year, the center served 95 victims from Mahoning County.

"For every one rape reported to us, three or four go unreported," Botirius said. "It may be even higher," she added. Frequently, she noted, many victims do not report the incident to the police because of embarrassment or fear.

The last campus-related rape occurred about five months ago, Botirius stated. She noted that the actual crime may not take place on campus, but the victim may be abducted at YSU. She also noted the difficulty in differentiating between what happens at YSU and what happens in Youngstown itself, because they mix in with one another without any clear-cut physical boundaries.

"I don't know of any rapes that have ever occurred on campus," Richard P. Turkiewicz, campus police and parking services director, stated.

The last reported attack took place in March, 1981. A student was abducted from the Lincoln Avenue parking deck and driven to Mill Creek Park where a man sexually assaulted her.

Turkiewicz cited this incident, emphasizing that it did not happen on campus. While 70 percent of parking is in the decks, he defended their safety for nighttime use. "They are well-lit, pretty well-patrolled, and pretty well-inhabited."

Although acknowledging that rape is under-reported, Turkiewicz said, "I don't believe people get raped on this campus." He added, "People may get abducted from the street," or quite frequently, an incident can occur in an area near campus but not on the campus itself.

The type of rape that most often goes unreported is the "acquaintance" rape, Botirius stated. Such rapes are the most common and Turkiewicz said the victimization may start in a seemingly innocent way on campus.

"You go into a bar, you know a guy for two to three hours, he offers you a ride home and in the car or at your home he puts the muscle on you," Turkiewicz said, describing the type of setup a rapist may plan.

Botirius said the rapist may even be someone the victim has met before. He could be a "friend of a friend" who the victim recognizes but does not know very well.

In the acquaintance rape, the attacker "manipulates the victim so she walks into the situation without her knowing it," Botirius explained. "He tells her no one will believe it was a rape until she feels it was her fault." This type of rape is the most difficult for the victim to resolve in her mind because the situation "is not as cut and dry as it would be if the victim were grabbed and choked," she said.

The rapist who suddenly attacks a person after a provocation damages the victim the least because she will probably not feel the rape was her fault, Botirius stated.

The four types of rape, acquaintance, anger, sadistic and gang, involve not only the use of force, but the fear that death is imminent for the victim, she explained. Botirius said a College Press Service article claiming that 20 percent of surveyed women experienced a forced sexual encounter may indeed be accurate. "It could be higher than 20 percent," she added. However, she hesitated to call such incidents "forcible rape." Instead she labeled them "forced sexual encounters," because the threat of death may not have been used.

Turkiewicz said if an individual is attacked, she should report it to the police immediately. The police need to assemble evidence and to establish that an actual rape did indeed take place.

"If something occurs, we really want to hear about it," he stated. "Hopefully we can do something preventative."

Campus police and others have taken a number of steps to help prevent attacks on campus, Turkiewicz said. In addition to beefing up patrols in potential problem areas like Smokey Hollow, the University sponsors awareness programs throughout the year, he noted. The smallness of the campus and its lack of wooded areas also reduce the chances for an attack to occur here, he explained.

"The risk is always there wherever you are," Turkiewicz added. "The greatest risk is at home."

Botirius said the individual who pays attention to her surroundings and stays aware has taken the most important step in the prevention of rape.

Is meaning of 'rape' clear?

From the College Press Service

AUBURN, Ala. — The real number of campus rapes and sexual assault cases may be many times higher than officials have traditionally believed, according to a new Auburn University study on sexual attitudes.

Nearly one out of every six male students questioned admitted to forcing women to have sex with them, the study of over 200 sophomores found.

Moreover, 20 percent of the female students surveyed said they had been forced to have sex even though they objected.

Surprisingly, "very few of the women defined such situations as rape," notes Auburn psychologist Barry Burkhart, who helped direct the study.

"None of these men were ever arrested or charged with rape, and as far as I know none of the women had reported what happened to them," he says.

The reason, it seems, is because all of the incidents involved what experts are now calling "acquaintance rape."

"We're finding that acquaintance rape is a very frequent type of incident that takes place on campuses," says Dan Keller, director of public safety at the University of Louisville and president of Campus Crime Prevention Programs, an independent campus law enforcement association.

"It could typically involve a girl and a guy who meet at a party, then the guy invites the girl home and physically forces her to have sex. They guy just won't take no for an answer, even if it means using force."

The Auburn study shows that most of the time neither male nor female considers that a rape has occurred, Keller continues, "because of the traditional concept of rape as a situation where somebody grabs you off the sidewalk and attacks

Clashing symbols

Why?
 Why did it happen?
 Why are we even in Lebanon?

There will be no answers found in the crumpled, twisted wreckage of the American command post at the Beirut airport. Only the bloody, mangled bodies of some of our best men.

We do not understand and our frustration is compounded by the fact we have no one to strike back or retaliate against. We have nowhere to release the pent-up anger and hate we feel. An anger and frustration that has been growing from Viet Nam to the Iranian hostage incident to the downing of the South Korean airliner.

But why are we in Lebanon? Despite the reposturing of our Congressmen over the weekend, we are there because they agreed recently we should be there for at least another 18 months. We are there, at least partially, because Israel, either rightly or wrongly, blasted itself into Lebanon only to find itself in a quagmire.

We are there because many of our leaders do not want Lebanon to be ruled by the type of people who perpetuated Sunday's massacre.

We are there, as President Reagan says, to serve as a symbol. A symbol of support of the Gemayal government.

The Administration wants the Marines to stay in Lebanon. They say that Americans will have to be patient. But considering the number of warring factions in Lebanon and the zeal with which they have continued fighting for years and years, we could run out of bodies before we run out of patience.

Americans are not a patient lot to begin with. We are more adapted to solving our problems in the half-hour time frame of a television sitcom. The centuries-old conflict in Lebanon and the Middle East may be out of our scope.

In any event, the Reagan Administration seems determined to keep an American presence in Lebanon as a symbol. Symbols may be fine, but they only represent something that is invisible. And a pile of dead bodies on America's doorstep is a reality that overwhelms any type of symbol.

COMMENTARY

Drinks with Dirty Harry

The six of us sat at a table in the lounge of the Quaker Square Hilton in Akron waiting for our drinks.

Three friends and I arrived at the hotel with the chairman of the Kent State University Artist Lecture Series and Harry Reems, after attending the debate on pornography at KSU between Dolores Alexander, founder of Women Against Pornography, and Reems, star of the famous film, Deep Throat.

"So, Mr. Reems..." I said.

"Please call me Harry."

"Okay Harry, so how many porno movies have you made?" I asked.

"I've been in about 100 films. I think my best one was Wet Rainbow. But, of course, Deep Throat started it all. Now I'm just producing feature films, mostly for the Playboy Channel."

One of my friends asked Reems if his social life had changed since he began his career.

"Well, my social life has always been a bit weird," commented the actor with a laugh. "I'd have to say that it really didn't change much. My friends from high school are still my friends, if that's what you mean."

I asked him how people who met him casually, reacted to him. After all, if I had not been aware that he was the star of a major skin flick I wouldn't have been able to recognize the name.

"I find it very interesting how people react to me. I find they are shocked to see that I'm not a mindless animal or some sort of sex maniac," Reems said as he held his glass up to toast the evening.

The chairman of the KSU Artist Lecture Series, who seemed most irritated by the sounds coming from the pianoman's amplifier, said, "I'll bet you don't make it to Ohio much ... or want to?"

"You're right!" he joked. "No, actually I went to school at the University of Pittsburgh, so I'm not a foreigner to this area. But I'll admit it's different than where I live in Malibu."

One of my friends said, "I'll bet you have some interesting neighbors."

DAVID NUDO

Reems pondered, then said, "No, not really. Most just have money. I do have a neighbor who was the drummer for Elvis, but I don't know him well. He's sort of the eccentric type."

Someone then mentioned the fact that Reems had been arrested in 1974 for conspiracy to transport obscene motion pictures across state lines in Memphis. He told us that the American Civil Liberties Union fought for him and eventually won. Before it was over though, it had cost Reems $400,000 and the U.S. Government $4 million.

"As you can see, my expertise now lies with obscenity and the law," said Reems seriously. "That's why I appeared on Phil Donahue and Mike Douglas instead of Johnny Carson. These days my interests lie in informing the public, and not in variety shows."

"Well, what made you a porn star to begin with, Harry?" asked one of the women.

"Let me put it this way," he answered with a large smile. "It's my ability to keep up my work for long periods of time. Other than that, I'm like any other actor. I have to concentrate and really get into the part. After all, to make love on screen, you have to have involvement with the other person and what's going on with the characters, or you'd get distracted by the cameramen."

The waitress informed us of last call at this point, so we decided to head for home. As we all said good-bye, the waitress brought the check and Reems took his American Express card out. I examined it and asked if Harry Reems was his real name. He said no, but the producers of Deep Throat made him change his identity when he made the film.

Someone asked if he did credit card commercials. At which he held up the card and said, "You may not recognize my face, but..."

Issues 2, 3 concern professor Fraternity

To the Editor of The Jambar:

I am writing as a parent and as an educator to urge your readers to vote NO on State Issues 2 and 3 on Nov. 8. "Nothing is certain except death and taxes," wrote Ben Franklin in 1789. His words have the same ring of truth today as they did some 200 years ago. No one likes to pay taxes, but most of us realize that taxes are essential to maintain a healthy state government and a viable system of state-supported services — especially in the face of scarcer federal dollars trickling into state coffers.

Let us, for the moment, put aside the emotionalism engendered by Issues 2 and 3 and look at the bottom line. How much in new taxes will the new Ohio Income Tax Law mean to the average tax payer? (In other words, how much would the average tax payer save if Issue 3 were approved by the voters?)

According to the Ohio Department of Taxation, a family of four with two wage earners and an annual taxable income of $25,000 will have to pay about $12.50 extra per month. That's less than the cost of a fill-up at your neighborhood gas station. It is about the amount a family of four would spend for a "Big Mac attack" or go to see a movie.

And don't let anyone tell you that ours is a high tax state! Ohio currently ranks 37th among the states in state taxes paid as a percentage of total income and is only one of 36 states what was forced to raise taxes in 1983.

In 1982, Howard Collier, who was former Governor Rhodes' Budget Director and who now serves as co-chairman of the campaign opposing Issues 2 and 3, said that "the luxury of being for or against a tax increase is past. The issue today is the avoidance of collapse of essential state services." If my additional tax dollars will help revitalize Ohio and thus provide a brighter future for my family and my profession, then I'll consider it a darn good investment.

It has been said that every complex problem has a simple solution — and one which is almost always wrong. Let us not be tempted by the seductive simplicity of Issues 2 and 3. Let us not be nearsighted and erase the long-term benefits the new Ohio Income Tax Law means for education, senior citizens, working couples, and for our less fortunate citizens. Let us not, as Issue 2 would have us do, surrender one of the cherished principles of our system of government — namely, the rule of the majority — to the will of a rigid minority. Let us not vote to return this state to the crisis management atmosphere of the recent past. Instead let us vote NO on State Issues 2 and 3 come Nov. 8!

Wanted more ink for king

To the Editor of The Jambar:

Many people are rather disgusted as to your selection of Homecoming pictures in your Tuesday, Oct. 18 issue. In particular, the front page picture seemed to be lacking something or someone: Don Lewis, YSU's 1983 Homecoming King.

To be selected as Homecoming King is as much of an honor as being named Queen. The King has to be actively involved in campus and community activities and maintain a high scholastic standing. To be Homecoming King, it takes as much involvement, sacrifices and hard work as it takes to be Queen.

So why was our 1983 Homecoming King not featured on the front page or in a solo picture? Instead, the King had one very short sentence that mentioned his name — "Don Lewis was named King." I can't believe that The Jambar didn't have any pictures of Don Lewis with the Queen to put on the front page.

The Homecoming King and Queen should be given equal coverage, after all, one is not more important or respected than the other.

Also, as to your choice of Homecoming pictures on pages 8 and 9, I can't believe that no organizations' floats or cars were pictured in The Jambar.

A lot of time and hard work went into building those floats. But, as usual, they were neglected. It's not every day that organizations enter floats in the Homecoming parade. However, The Jambar can feature pictures of the football team, majorettes, cheerleaders and the fans all season.

I was always under the impression that newspapers featured timely news first. I believe, as do many other members of student organizations, that the Homecoming activities were newsworthy. Obviously, the football team takes preference to any organizations and their activities.

A small photograph of the winning float or any float and the first place car would have been greatly appreciated. Even the Vindicator featured a picture of one of the floats. But, then again, the Vindicator was also responsible enough to run a front page picture of both the 1983 Homecoming Queen and King!

Leslie Myers, senior, F&PA

But according to Steve Stanic, Sigma Phi Epsilon's recording secretary, the monetary amount and the extent of the damages to personal property are the least of Sigma Phi's concerns.

"Hopefully, the insurance will cover most of the damages," said Stanic. "We're just glad that everyone reacted very quickly and no one was injured in the fire."

He said that one of the Sigma brothers, Rocky DiPizzo, slept through the alarm.

Stanic said that he and another fraternity brother, John Necko, had to physically remove DiPizzo from his room while he was still asleep.

Stanic said that DiPizzo was doing fine and that he had not suffered from any smoke inhalation.

Stanic said one of the reasons he and Necko were able to act so fast was because they were the first ones to discover the fire in their room, where a fireplace was located.

He said the building's smoke alarms went off and he and Necko ran to alert the other residents that a fire had started. He said at first there was just "a lot of smoke," but by the time everyone had been cleared out of the house and the fire department had arrived, the building's entire third floor and the home's roof were on fire.

The building sustained damages to its second and third floors and the entire house is smoke and water damaged.

Not to be daunted by the near catastrophe, Stanic said that instead of moving back to their respective homes, the brothers of Sigma Phi Epsilon stuck together and moved into the house (owned by the fraternity) next door at 45 Indiana.

According to Stanic, the fireplace had been previously inspected by the city's fire department.

The city's fire chief could not be reached for a confirmation of Stanic's statement when The Jambar went to press.

 their massacres — massacres which have decreased considerably since the presence of the peacekeeping force — and to boost the morale of the Lebanese Government and army.

The professor did say that there have been reports that the loyalty and spirit of both have been renewed and that should these forces leave, he believes everything in Lebanon will fall apart.

Fundamentally, Friedman says he believes troops should remain because United States policing agents were formally requested by the Lebanese Government to uphold the principal of world peace and democracy.

Secondly Friedman doubts the U.S. Government was ultimately responsible for the death of some 183 American Marines. Yet he does attribute the responsibility to the Syrians and the Soviet Union.

"It is impossible for the Lebanese to be at peace until the Syrians assist them by leaving the country as asked by the Lebanese Government. Plus, the Soviets are the ones who supply the arms to the Syrians and tell them to play 'hard ball' with the Americans," said Friedman.

Thirdly, Friedman says he believes that President Ronald Reagan, emulating President Dwight D. Eisenhower, initially agreed to send American troops to Lebanon because he maintains that America's presence alone would prove effective.

"The climate was so much different then. At that time, Lebanese women donned in bikinis welcomed the deployment of men and troops had a great time while keeping civil order," said Friedman.

Lastly, Friedman says that if the United States would pull out at this point, it would not only make the country look as if it had been scared away by Middle East terrorists, but it would encourage all other peace-keeping countries situated in the area to pull out as well.

"And that will be a renewed outbreak of 'civil war,'" concluded Friedman.

 ing the medical profession as a totally male field. "Although it seems to be changing, up to now, the medical image has been masculine," he said.
 Psychiatry will be discussed the third week with the showing of I Never Promised You a Rose Garden, where once again the doctor is a woman.

Psychiatrists are a logical choice for a screenwriter to depict, Shale explained. "It is very dramatic material to make a character so powerful as to be able to get into a person's mind and change things — particularly if it is exploited or not portrayed in a realistic way."

The last film, The Hospital, is a black comedy starring George C. Scott as a doctor trying to make sense out of bedlam. The movie is a humorous treatment of very serious subject matter — in this case, unexplained deaths occurring in a hospital.

"The idea of the course is to examine the popular image, which may not bear any resemblance to the real image, of the medical profession," explained Shale.

The discussions will focus on the human value of the films, keying on the type of image each film creates, said Shale.

The students are as important to the course as the teacher, he said, because the students know about the medical profession while the instructor can inform them about film.

The classes will be held in Room E12 at the NEOUCOM basic medical sciences campus. The public is welcome to attend.

Shale estimates that for the last 10 years he has seen between 150 to 160 movies a year. He also reviewed films for the Warren Chronicle Tribune for two years.

The summer "sub-moronic intelligence" films have run their course and films are now moving into the "adult cycle," said Shale.

This up and down cycle of movie releases runs true to form every year, he said.

"The movie industry gives summer over to drive-in movies, teenagers and sub-teenagers, presuming adults are doing other things," stated Shale.

Fall produces a flurry of new releases leading to a slack period. Then comes the Christmas blitz — "the big films" — which qualify for the Oscars. Then another slack period follows until Easter, taking us back to summer, explained Shale.

Besides offering English 616, Film and Drama, this winter quarter Shale will be teaching English 765, American Film Comedy. The class is a historical and thematic survey of prominent directors and stars of comedy.

An undergraduate of Ohio Wesleyan University, Shale received his graduate degrees at the University of Michigan.

He was awarded the distinguished professor award at YSU in 1982/83.

Shale has published two books, an index of the academy awards and a book on the Disney studios.

 played against him until replaced by another opponent.

The marathon bocce player completed his weekend-long effort at 10:35 p.m., Sunday evening. He had, along with fraternity brothers, successfully raised over $500 for the March of Dimes. The money was raised from team entry fees, T-shirts, and a percentage of money taken in by the restaurant for beer and spaghetti dinners.

But Brauer was told by a Guinness spokesman the next day that the marathon would not be recognized in the Record Book.

"I called them, and their reply was that 'It has to be competitive throughout the world. We do not believe bocce is competitive throughout the world, and does not merit recognition by the Guinness Book of World Records,'" Brauer said.

"I read the bocce rule book, and it states that bocce is one of the world's oldest sports — originating during Roman times," he said.

Brauer, a full-time student and full-time registered nurse at Alliance City Hospital, said he is organizing community support for entrance into the Record Book.

"I'm a marathon person," he said.

Lady Luck

Students get big chance with Kenley

By LUREE HARLEY
Jambar Staff Writer

Last spring, when Nick DePaola and Jim Tisdale, seniors F&PA, contacted the Kenley Players at the E. J. Thomas Hall in Akron to audition for summer theater, Lady Luck was with them.

According to DePaola, when audition notices failed to appear on the University campus bulletin boards, he and Tisdale became concerned and called the Kenley office in Akron.

Although their call was almost too late, DePaola says they still had three days to rehearse before he and Jim drove to Thomas Hall to try their luck.

After waiting almost seven hours past their scheduled audition time, they finally had their chance.

According to DePaola, Lady Luck revisited them and after their audition, they were hired as apprentices to assist with the Kenley Players' summer season of theatrical productions.

He explained that most new hires "serve an apprenticeship for a year or more before landing a job which qualifies them for a professional actor's card." DePaola became a stagehand and Tisdale became an actor's technician.

Being a stagehand included assisting the technical director, building and erecting sets and assisting as a bodyguard for some of the more popular stars.

DePaola said that his summer with the Kenley Players included taking two shows on the road as far away as Flint, Mich., with Morgan Fairchild and Gary Sandy. He says that he learned a lot from his experience.

Tisdale says that he worked mostly in ticket sales and as a personal bodyguard for stars in their autographing lines.

Hill to give presentation on her artistic experiences

By MARK PEYKO
Jambar Staff Writer

She came. She saw. She helped wrap the Biscayne Bay archipelago with six million feet of pink polypropylene fabric.

Sherri Hill, coordinator of Kilcawley Center's Art Gallery and Craft Center will discuss her "in service" experience with artist Christo, and the "Surrounded Islands" project, in a slide and lecture presentation, at the Kilcawley Gallery, 2 p.m., today, Oct. 25.

The art project, a surrounding of Miami's 11 bay islands with pink material was financed and completed by environmental artist Christo last spring. Hill will chronicle the adventure, which required 400 workers and approximately $3 million to complete.

"It was a monumental engineering feat," said Hill. "Every anchor, every buoy had a specially designated area, and every piece of fabric fit together perfectly."

The Bulgarian-born artist specializes in environmental art. Commenting on his choice for the Biscayne Islands and the pink fabric choice, Christo stated, "The Surrounding Islands underline the various elements and ways which people in the Greater Miami area live in constant relationship between land and water."

The project was planned to be a "temporary monument" to the environment. The artist chose pink for the wrap since it was a man-made color, and the fabric "would be in harmony with the tropical vegetation of the verdant islands, the Miami sky, and the shallow waters of the Biscayne Bay."

The project's workers were trained in safety and environment prior to their work on the islands. Safety was an important part of the training, and each worker was cautioned not to tamper with the wildlife or vegetation on or near the project's area.

The project required 30 months of intensive planning and study, in addition to the approval of state and local government, and environmental agencies. In fact, Christo agreed to dismantle the project if any vegetation or wildlife was endangered.

The project brought strong objections due to ignorance or difference of opinion in regard to the project's worth. A number of persons objected to its cost and the possible threat it posed to the environment. See Hill, page 9.

Luck

Powell (Miss America, 1981) were at the theater. "Women went wild over John James and we had to push them back," he said.

There were many occasions to meet actors during the 10-week period during which a total of 80 shows were produced.

Van Johnson was probably the most exciting person we met, DePaola continues. He always wanted to meet the apprentices. He was very funny off stage and "always with the joke — always," they both agreed.

Martha Raye was a "sweetheart" and her manager-husband was a very nice person, says DePaola.

So the not-so-typical summer for DePaola and Tisdale consisted of 14-hour workdays and seven-day weeks under the close scrutiny of 77-year-old veteran vaudeville actor and master of the theater, John Kenley.

Excited by the chance to work for Kenley, Tisdale says with a tone of respect in his voice, "He is a wonderful man to work for and he is a man who cares for the people who work for him."

Both agree that Kenley is "married" to the theater.

Both DePaola and Tisdale have their hearts set on returning to work for Kenley next summer and at that time, they hope they'll be ready for the stage.

"After you've worked on stage for Kenley, you can get a job in theater almost anywhere you want to go," they concur.

Hill

Christo's project cost approximately $2,750,000, all of which was covered by loans and money earned from the sale of previous works.

Environmentalists feared the islands would be littered by the group, but in a special agreement, Christo promised to clean the litter from the uninhabited islands, and also agreed to clean the islands after the "Surrounded Islands" is dismantled. Hill said she filled six large garbage bags with trash left by picnickers and partiers stopping on the islands prior to the project.

Other noted environmental works by Christo included "Valley Curtain," Colorado, 1971; "Running Fence," California, which ran 24 miles and was eleven feet high; the wrapping of the Australian coastline; and the wrapping of a bank's interior and exterior. A future project calls for the wrapping of a Parisian bridge.

In a more conventional and permanent vein, Christo's works include the preliminary drawings for projects like these, plus other sketches.

Christo was born in Gabrovo, Bulgaria, and was educated at the Fine Arts Academy in Sofia.

Auditions set

Auditions for the second annual production of the Christmas musical, Scrooge, will be held 7 p.m., Monday and Tuesday, Oct. 31 and Nov. 1, at the Youngstown Playhouse.

Director Catherine Verhoff is seeking a large cast of approximately 40 people.

Although this is the second production of this show, all roles are open and anyone may audition. No previous experience is necessary.

Switch of QBs can't turn tide at Cedar Falls

Play it again, Sam. Better put, "play it again, YSU."

It is getting to be a habit — switching quarterbacks in the middle of the game, that is. Ever since starter Jamie DeVore was forced to the sideline with a knee injury four weeks ago, the YSU quarterback situation has been unsettled and, consequently, so has the entire offense.

Two weeks ago, Mike Sloe replaced DeVore, but was benched because of unproductiveness. His substitute, Ken Kuhn, went only one for six, but guided the Penguins to their winning touchdown — the only one the offense could generate in the game.

Last week, Sloe started again and showed marked improvement, but a head injury put him out of the game in the second quarter. Again Kuhn came on to take the Penguins to victory.

This past Saturday at the University of Northern Iowa, Coach Bill Narduzzi gave the starting job to Sloe once more, but the third wasn't the charm. Sloe was unable to move the offense, and the Penguins fell behind 17-0 early in the second quarter. As usual, Narduzzi turned the reigns over to Kuhn.

"It would not have made any difference when I came in," claimed Kuhn. "This situation puts a lot more pressure on Mike (Sloe) than it does on me because he knows a few mistakes and I'm in. It is kind of unfair to him."

"We take it pretty well. I root for him and he roots for me."

Kuhn managed to rally YSU to within four points at 17-13 in the third quarter, but a long bomb touchdown sealed the win for Northern Iowa, 23-13, in a non-league game at the Uni-Dome in Cedar Falls.

The biggest problem, though, may not have been at quarterback but on the offensive line, which had its hands full picking up a forceful Panther blitz.

"We had trouble because they played 11 men up front near the line," explained Narduzzi.

Said Kuhn, "They rushed eight men all night, and they were blitzing like crazy — coming with pressure from all over. They were bumping our hot receiver at the line and we had trouble connecting."

The Panthers began their score. See Football, page 12

Penguins paralyzed by injuries

Injuries claimed four YSU soccer players and cost the team its match as the Penguins fell to Mount Union College, 7-1, last Saturday.

Both Neerij Jain and Mike Drought suffered injuries to their left knees during the game. Jain aggravated a previous knee injury which has caused him problems in the past. Drought received a deep knee bruise after losing his footing on the field.

Furthermore, Mark Jamison bruised his calf while Glen Behra sliced, open a cut over his eye which required extensive stitching after the match.

By the end of the game, 11 YSU soccer players remained healthy enough to play — the exact number needed to field one team.

Only Hunter remained on the sidelines.

"We were using inexperienced players who'd seen maybe a few minutes of playing time all season," he said.

Mohammad Fard also suffered a bruised thigh; however, he was able to complete the match.

In addition, Nick Cindric is out for the season. Two weeks ago he tore several knee ligaments during YSU's game against Liberty College.

Hunter said he's uncertain who will start Wednesday when YSU

Wanted: Center needed for YSU squad

By JOE MIKOLAY
Jambar Staff Writer

The YSU women's basketball team heads into its first season of competition in the Ohio Valley Conference (OVC) with one large weakness: no dominant center.

According to head coach Ed DiGregorio, YSU's first-year mentor, it is the teams most pressing problem.

"We have to find a big girl," DiGregorio said. "We need one that can run."

"We play games in LaSalle tournament in Philly this year," he said. "Everyone of them teams have big girls."

"Even in our league, the teams are very competitive. They all have big girls."

But even without the presence of an enforcer in the middle, the Penguins do have some strengths.

"Our guards and our forwards are very good," DiGregorio said. "We have a very good shooting team."

"We can also run. We're going to try to run on teams. But if we can't run, then we will set it up and try to go shot for shot."

Returning to this year's squad will be the teams two top scorers from last season, Margaret Peters and Danielle Carson.

Also challenging for the guard spot are Elise Betz, freshman, and Sharon Woodward, senior, who came on strong late in the season last year.

Challenging for the forward spots will be Cindy Brunot, junior, Melissa Kerner, senior, Karen Lane, sophomore, and Patty Amendolea and Carol Wills,

Currently, Margaret Porter is a key candidate for the center spot. Last year Porter shared this position with Evelyn Rohland, who has since graduated. In 1983, Porter placed second on the team in rebounds.

Two other players who will see a lot of playing time are transfers from other colleges: Gaylene Weigle, a guard from Kent State, and Mary Joe Vodenichar, a junior from Penn State/Shenango Valley campus.

The Lady Penguins open the season Nov. 25 and 26 at Kent State.

They will compete against Cleveland State, Akron, and the Lady Flashes.

Akron is one of the teams to beat in the OVC. The others are Tennessee Tech., and Middle Tennessee, who finished first last year and have everyone returning.

Entering his first campaign as head coach for the Lady Penguins, DiGregorio is realistic in his predictions.

"I'd like to see us finish at .500," DiGregorio said. "We'll be real competitive and we'll build a program."

"The girls are really working hard, their attitude is fantastic, and they have really taken to my philosophy."

DiGregorio's philosophy is one of hard work, team work, respect for one another, and most of all, respect for the opponent.

"I would like to see us be respectable where the girls are proud in what they're doing," DiGregorio said.

"We'll be ready to play basketball — that I'll guarantee you," he added. "We may get beat, but we won't be humble."

Pete's Beat

I wonder how many cross country fans were at Rocky Ridge last week to see the Penguins perform in their first home meet of the season? Well, for those who inadvertently missed the meet, I clue you in on a not-so-well guarded secret: YSU has one of the best cross country teams in the area. And I know that I certainly enjoyed watching the meet. This week the cross country team was on the road. But, as usual, it maintained its winning form, defeating Hiram College. Now that's another meet I wish I'd seen.

INTRAMURALS: Touch football scores

Games from last weekend's action included 15 shutouts. Just Toyin' beat the Enforcers 14-0; Mfies destroyed Scoreless 40-0; Nads nailed A.I.I.E. 18-0; Buckeyes nipped the Penetrators 6-0; Green Sting stung the Immigrants 7-2; Brew Crew chugged past the Penetrators 6-0; Sharp Dressed Men outclassed A.S.M.E. 21-0; Guzzlers slipped by Knights of Daze 6-0; Green Sting beat Seven Tongues of Fun 7-0; H.P.E. In other games: Kileawley Diseases 13, Red Brigade 7; Jackett's A.C. 30, Crabs 6; Brothers 31, I Phieta Thi 6; Dads 21, T.K.E. 6; Pony Express 7, Special Forces 6; Falcons 19, Cashwags 6; Mass 12, Delta Zeta 2; H.P.E. Club 7, Wild Red 6; Speeders 12, Delta Zeta 6; Wild Red 21, Zeta Tau Alpha 6; and Dirty Deeds 20, Seven 14's 6.

Winners by forfeit included the Powerhitters over the Cobras; Brew Crew over Queebz; Seven Tongues of Fun over the 69ers; and in a game pitting S.O.M.F. against F.I.O., they both forfeited.

All teams are competing in the five-week season with the hope of making it to the playoffs, which begin Nov. 13. The Championship game is scheduled for 1 p.m., Nov. 20.

All games are played at Harrison Field, located directly behind the Wick Ave. parking deck.

VOLLEYBALL: YSU finishes fourth

After splitting six games, the YSU volleyball team finished fourth in a nine-field team at the Mansfield Invitational this past weekend.

YSU defeated Southern Connecticut, 2-1, St. Bonaventure, 2-0, and Juanita, 2-0, but lost to CW Post, 2-1, Mansfield, 0-2, and CW Post, 2-1.

Although now 14-11 on the season, head coach John Tokash said the team is playing well as a unit and making excellent progress. He noted that this year the volleyball squad is playing its most difficult schedule ever.

At the Mansfield's Invitational, leading YSU players included Meg Deibel on all-around play, Donna Slagle on blocking and Sandy Treece on serving.

CROSS COUNTRY: Penguins win

Led by Steve Luthern and Jeff Cipriano, the YSU cross country team defeated Hiram College, 28-22, last Saturday. The Penguins' record is now 6-1.

Luthern finished in first place at 26:22 while Cipriano placed third at 27:53. Mark Sheer of Hiram finished second at 27:53. They are now 3-4 on the season.

YSU head coach Jack Neville said he was "surprised at the team's performance in the meet." However, he also noted the team, in general, has "really come a long way." In particular, he said, Luthern is just now beginning to shine. Last year Luthern was cross country's leading runner.

This Saturday the Penguins travel to Akron to compete in the Ohio Valley Championships.

ATHLETE: Steve Luthern

After placing first and leading the Penguins to victory over Hiram College last weekend, Steve Luthern is The Jambor's Athlete of the Week. He finished the meet in a time of 26:22. A sophomore, Luthern has been on the cross country squad for only two years.

ing late in the first quarter and quickly built their 17-0 lead in the second.

The Penguins impressively stormed back with 10 points before halftime. With the ball at the YSU 20, Kuhn found John Goode deep, and the tight end made the catch at Northern's 45, broke a tackle, and raced in for the touchdown.

Just before intermission, Kuhn marched YSU to another score, a 30-yard field goal by Paul McFadden. A pass to Robert Thompson and another to Goode put the ball in McFadden's range.

The Penguins continued to come back on their second possession of the third quarter when McFadden split the uprights on a 45-yarder.

But the Panthers put an end to the rally with a 46-yard touchdown strike that broke YSU's back.

YSU dropped to 4-3 and will resume Ohio Valley Conference action Saturday at Middle Tennessee State University in Murfreesboro.

Northern Iowa, under first-year coach Darrell Mudra, improved to 5-3. The overall series between the two teams evened out at 3-3.

During the second half, Mount Union scored five more goals, with the last three coming at the closing minutes of the game. By this time, YSU's bench had been completely depleted.

Burge returns to YSU, takes helm in athletic administrative position

When Bruce Burge graduated from YSU in August, 1982, he wasn't sure how long he'd be away.

Since he left here and earned his master's degree in sports administration at Ohio University, Burge has worked for OU, Ashland College and the Cleveland Browns. He's had job offers from several other places in the South and Midwest. But as of last Monday, Burge is back where he wants to be.

He has been named as YSU's assistant athletic director in charge of marketing.

"I'm tired of moving. I've been all over the place the last six months," he said. "It's good to be back."

His job includes, among other things, the task of marketing YSU athletics to the University's students and surrounding community. He has already begun working on several promotion plans for the upcoming basketball season, which will open Nov. 26 at the newly-renovated Beeghly Center gymnasium.

"I'm excited," he said. "It's certainly a challenge. I'm going to do my best." Burge was formerly a sports reporter for WFMJ and The Jambar.

A native of Southington and a three-sport athlete at Chalker High School, Burge earned a bachelor's degree in speech communication and theatre at YSU. He served an internship with the Cleveland Browns publicity office and has handled athletic administrative duties at OU and Ashland College. Most recently, he was the sports information director at Ashland.
