Concerns raised about the quality of degree programs

■ Proponents of two-year programs say benefits are many.

JAH M. HARVEY
Assistant News Editor

Students and faculty alike wonder what the future holds for the image of the university as the debate heats up about the direction of YSU's associate degree programs.

One concern is that YSU will revert to a community college status. Another is whether YSU can afford to expand without sacrificing the quality of two- and four-year programs.

Dr. Janice Elias, assistant provost, said that we should take pride in our university as a whole, and not just in parts.

"A lot of people think that having the two-year programs will somehow affect the way we are seen by others. But YSU has the best quality at each level, whether it be bachelor's, master's or associate's. It doesn't matter. A degree from YSU is one that [students] can be proud of," she said.

According to Dr. Jane S. Reid, director of Undergraduate Recruitment and Admissions, the associate programs are designed to get students out into the workforce.

"It's designed to get [students] out in two years," said Reid. "It's very attractive to older adult students. And if they want to go further, they can."

Dr. John Yemma, dean of the Bitonte College of Health and Human Services, pointed out the benefits of the two-year programs to their students.

"Just because they are associ-

Students piqued by Time-Out prices

■ The mini-convenience store in Christman Dining Commons provides students with everything from candy to shampoo.

ANGELA GIANOGGIO
Managing Editor

During the days when there were no unions to provide benefits for workers, whole towns were owned by the mine, factory or company owners.

The workers were forced to buy food and goods from the "company store," which more often than not, was overpriced and of poor quality. Paychecks were not in U.S. currency, but rather company money that only could be spent at the company store.

Several YSU students made comparisons between "company stores" of the past and Time-Out, a popular mini-convenience store in Christman Dining Commons where dorm residents can buy anything from candy and pop to batteries.

"I think it's a little heavy on prices," said Jason Small, sophomore, pre-law and political science.

"It's like 'The Grapes of Wrath,' like a company store. They can rip you off because it's on points," he added.

Jessica King, freshman, dental hygiene, echoed that opinion.

"It's definitely more expensive. Shampoo and conditioner is like $3.50 a bottle, so I don't buy any of that stuff," she said.

King said she limits her purchases to junkfood and candy.

Larry Stelitano, general manager of Dining Services, which operates Time-Out, said the store is there for the students' convenience.

"Prices are what they are because we can't buy [items] in mass quantities. We don't have the buying power of Wal-Mart or other stores," he said.

Stelitano added the store is used mostly by students on the meal plan with "hardly any cash transactions." Students use their bonus points for the purchases, therefore the students aren't really using money.

However, if someone were to use cash, a six-pack of Poptarts would cost $3.50, a two-pack of batteries are $4.75, Tide detergent is $4.25, Nutra-Grain bars are $1.75 and candy bars are 75 cents.

Purbi Singh, junior, premed, said, "I like the fact that it is available, but it is way overpriced."

Bindu Raveendran, senior, premed, added that the prices are not worth the quality.

"They don't keep things in stock," she said. "But we have to use it because of our points."

Stelitano stressed that Time-Out is a service provided by Dining Services, with no profit intake.

He added most of the items are bought from a local supplier. However, many of the items are exactly like the ones offered in the Marketplace Cafe or the Bagel Stop and are priced the same.

Some prices are also predetermined, he said. For example, the price of all Coke products is determined by the university's contract with the Coke Company.

"We don't price gouge," Stelitano said. "It is there as a convenience for students."

BLACK HISTORY month

When he was in grade school, James E. Harvey Jr. said his teachers acted like African-Americans did not exist in the armed services.

"My teacher said there were no black soldiers in World War II," said Harvey Jr.

But whenever he brought up the fact that both his father and his uncle fought in the armed services, the teacher ignored him.

In fact, his father, James E. Harvey Sr., was drafted into the Segregated Armies of the USA in 1941 and rose to the rank of master sergeant by the time he was honorably discharged five years later.

Harvey Jr. remembers many stories his father told him of the war.

Corner Café wins award

■ The former Bagel Stop, located on the Wick bridge, is now known nationally.

Nestled in a corner on the Wick Avenue bridge sits a small food service provider that opens at 7:30 a.m. and closes at 2:30 p.m.

It used to be an extension of the Bagel Stop, which is located inside Kilcawley Center, but it is now known as the Corner Café and is known nationally for winning an award.

Food Management magazine awarded Corner Café its "Best Take-Out" award in its November issue.

Cindy Giovannone, marketing manager for Dining Services at YSU, said the store was renamed to bring something new and exciting to campus.

"While it was still the Bagel Stop, we saw the need for more food on that side of campus. We decided to bring luncheon-type food in and it has been a success," she said.

The Café specializes in made-to-order salads and sandwiches, as well as offering Starbucks coffee, muffins, cookies and bagels.

Deliveries were once available to YSU buildings, but those have been held off due to a lack of demand.

"We need to reevaluate it and see how to better service the campus. We would like to bring [food delivery] back in the future," Giovannone said.

Other institutions winning awards from Food Management magazine were Harvard University, Cornell University, Texas A & M and Exxon Research and Engineering.

DeGarmo's legend lives on at YSU

■ Scholarships are available for law enforcement majors.

EILEEN CATANZARO
Assistant Copy Editor

James W. DeGarmo's legacy to YSU began long before his death in July 1999. Beginning with contributions in 1976 to a scholarship fund for students of law enforcement, DeGarmo's generosity has helped the scholarship award grow over the years.

Reid Schmutz, president of the YSU Foundation, said DeGarmo's contributions will continue, even after DeGarmo's death, through his estate.

"Most of what is left to YSU from Jim's estate is in stocks and bonds, with the final amount to be determined. But we can expect between $10,000 and $15,000," Schmutz said. This is in addition to his previous contributions.

"Jim was a fine gentleman who cared about the students and law enforcement. I think he would want to be remembered for what he did throughout his life. He had a long history with YSU," Schmutz said.

Applications for the nonrenewable James W. DeGarmo Law Enforcement Scholarship are available in the criminal justice department. Deadline for the applications is March 3.

Applicants must be full- or part-time students with a declared major in Law Enforcement Administration with a 3.0 overall GPA and a 3.2 GPA in criminal justice courses.

Applicants also must have completed 24 quarter credit hours in criminal justice courses and 96 quarter credit hours overall.

The "YSU Undergraduate Bulletin" says, "The James W. DeGarmo Scholarship was established in 1976 by the Law Enforcement Honor Society ... to give recognition to the contributions of James W. DeGarmo to the profession of law enforcement and criminal justice education."

DeGarmo was a retired FBI agent and professor with YSU's criminal justice department.

"James DeGarmo was a most dedicated law enforcement person with an absolute commitment to improve law enforcement through his work and teaching," said Dr. Bari Lateef, professor emeritus, criminal justice.

Dr. James Conser, former chair of the criminal justice department and a member of the Ohio Peace Officer Training Commission in London, Ohio, was a student of DeGarmo's.

"I learned the necessity of personal interaction with students. He took the time to learn students' names and talk to them and counsel and encourage them. He took the time to know them. He was concerned about the future direction of education and the training and where we were going as a society," Conser said.

Dr. Lawrence Cummings, professor emeritus, criminal justice and former chair of the department, said, "Jim taught more of the nuts and bolts type of courses in law enforcement. Overall, students liked him. He taught a practical oriented approach to law enforcement."

Holidays are black and white

Monday we celebrated Presidents Day. Some schools and businesses had the day off. Others did not. And still, in the year 2000, people complain because we get Martin Luther King Jr. Day off and not Presidents Day.

Still, some even think Black History Month is undeserving. Most of us were not around during the Civil Rights Movement, but non-traditional students, faculty and staff were. Through passed-down stories, news footage, reports in history books and autobiographies, we can learn more about these brave people who stood up for what they believed in — their freedom.

Yes, George Washington and Abraham Lincoln are heroes in their own respect. They were part of many positive feats for our nation. And yesterday, the Federal Government, as well as numerous school districts and businesses, had the day off to observe this holiday.

Which holiday schools and universities observe are decided by the administration. YSU's Board of Trustees decides between Martin Luther King Jr. Day, Presidents Day and Columbus Day as to which will be paid holidays.

And it was not until the 1980s that Martin Luther King Jr. Day was practiced nationally.

Martin Luther King Jr. helped guide African-Americans to regaining their freedom. He gave speeches, organized marches and even won the Nobel Peace Prize for his efforts. He gave a race hope and the fire to stand up for each other.

That does not mean that Washington's and Lincoln's efforts were not as valuable, it just means some of us don't get to take the day off. YSU accounts for Presidents Day in November. That's how we get two days off for Thanksgiving instead of one.

Martin Luther King Jr. was not the one who decided to give everyone the day off in January.

Everyone who played a major role in American history should be honored in some way. There are thousands of people who worked to make our nation a better place for all. It just so happens we only have 365 days in a year.

Different holidays have different meanings for each of us. So celebrate whichever you chose, and don't knock the days others observe. These days are about remembering American heroes, not about a day off from school or work.

Keep resolutions year round

The clock is winding down on the second month of the new millennium. Can you still remember that New Year's resolution you made a mere seven weeks ago? I barely can. Vague images of fitness and academic commitment flutter to the surface of my conscience every once in a while, but it seems like that fire I had at the beginning of January has already waned.

I don't want this to happen. I don't want to face next December with the same remorse I faced last December; a feeling of complete personal failure for those goals I set 11 months earlier that never materialized.

So I'm giving myself, and everyone else who happens to be a fellow passenger on this boat of lost resolutions, a reminder of that which you may have forgotten you promised to do.

Has your car payment been made on time these past two months? Are your taxes filed early? Don't forget to call Grandma on her birthday. In fact, stop by for a visit. Have you taken advantage of the fitness facilities in Beeghly yet this quarter? How about that cardio-kickboxing class you promised to attend?

I have renewed my promise to myself to stop living on fast food (I apologize to the manager of Arby's who thrives on my almost-daily visits), I will play racquetball more than once a month and I will rediscover my love of my mother's cooking.

And if I have to write a commentary in this paper every two months to make sure our self-promises are not empty ones, then I will and, hopefully, it will keep all of us on track to personal self-improvement. New Year's resolutions should not be talked about only during the last and first week of a year, but maintained throughout the year. Everyone could use a little added inspiration once in a while, so here it is.

If you're a little late in starting, so what. Don't wait until January to clean out the attic or start keeping your car windows clean.

Too much stuff falls by the wayside and I for one am sick of it. I am going to think hard about what I promised myself I would do when that ball in Times Square touched down and make sure I don't let it flit off into oblivion this time.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Student Government President perturbed at lack of Jambar coverage

In reference to The Jambar article of Feb. 8, I would like to address the issue of Student Government and the lack of media exposure we receive. An examination of any random issue of The Jambar reveals a great deal of attention being given to issues that do not affect students or the campus community.

This is especially troubling to me because as Student Government President, I know first hand the issues students are facing, and have watched Student Government take action on them.

I take it personally when a claim arises that Student Government doesn't deal with issues facing students today because I know this stems directly from The Jambar's blatant unwillingness to cover them.

I find it disturbing that The Jambar can give multiple pages of coverage to the recent Drag Show, which I do not challenge as a legitimate newsworthy story, but turn around and fail to balance that with coverage of Student Government as they address issues such as the new General Education Requirements, Quarters to Semesters transition, repeal of the tuition freeze, and the search for the new president.

It is not uncommon for Student Government to hold meetings in front of a nearly empty gallery due to the fact that today's YSU students are busy and/or disinterested in the entire process, however, there is no excuse for the absence of a reporter from The Jambar.

During the period of November through February, there has been no reporter assigned to cover Student Government meetings, especially when The Jambar is the only media vehicle on campus which students will actually take an interest in.

Upon a close examination of the facts, it is obvious that this is not a case of Student Government neglecting the needs of the students, but rather a case of The Jambar neglecting the fundamental rights of the students to access information, which directly affects their lives.

ROBERT HARVEY JR.
Student Government President

Assistant Provost points to positives in Jambar

I would like to commend The Jambar on the excellent job it is doing in providing students with information about the quarter to semester conversion. Eileen Catanzaro deserves special thanks for her great column "Do the legwork before complaining." In order to make this conversion successful, students as well as YSU staff and faculty must act responsibly. Good work!

Maybe they'll meet again down the road. That's what the Lady Penguins were thinking after losing to Valparaiso Saturday for the second time this season.

YSU lost a close one 74-67 Jan. 15. In that game, the Crusaders got out to a 26-0 lead before the Lady Pens could make a shot. YSU battled back and made it a game at the end.

The rematch started much like the first one did with YSU missing its first 11 shots and only scoring six baskets in the entire first half (20 percent from the floor).

"You've got to come out and be ready to play and we weren't," said YSU Head Coach Ed DiGregorio in a press release.

Once again, the Lady Penguins battled back, outscoring Valpo (14-11, 8-6) 30 to 24 in the second session but missing some key shots and layups.

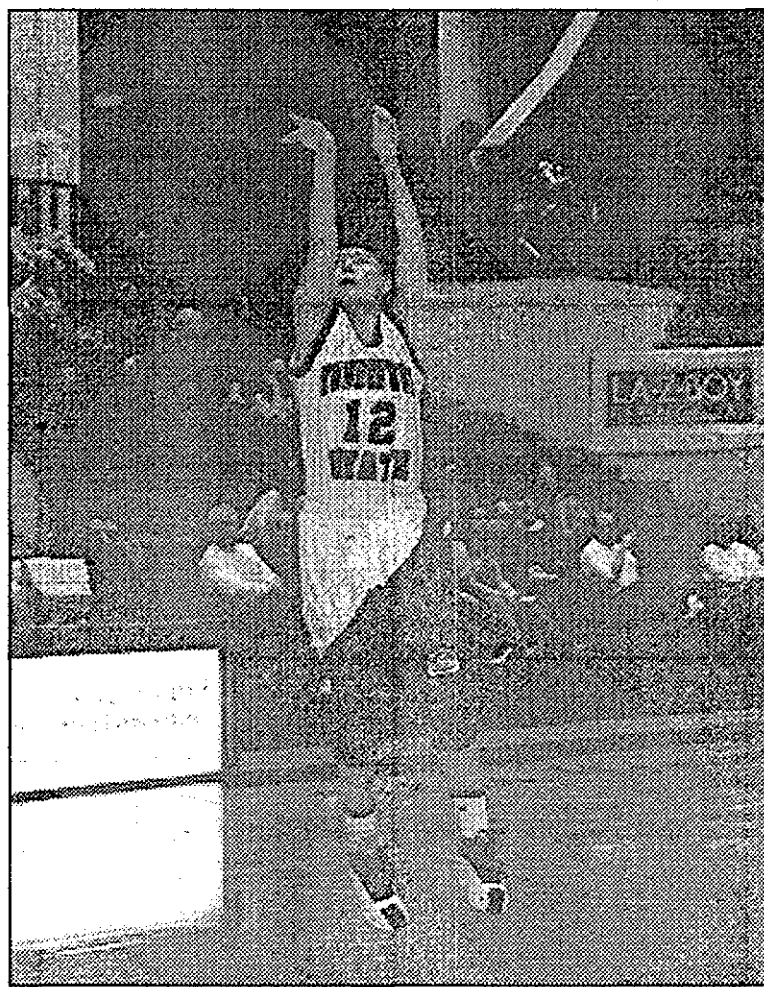

Junior guard Brienne Kenneally hit a three-pointer with seven seconds left on the clock to finally tie the score up. That shot sent the game into overtime.

Kenneally paced YSU with 24 points and two assists, but had four turnovers.

The Red and White actually had a three-point lead in the extra period but could not contain Valpo star Sarah Stricklett, who had 21 points and 14 rebounds in the game.

Adding to the Penguins' shooting woes, YSU lost Kenneally, sophomore center Darbi O'Brien and junior forward Nikki Pope to foul trouble.

YSU was manhandled under the boards, having 13 fewer rebounds than Valpo's 63.

Senior guard Leslie Majewski had 12 points in the losing effort while junior guard Jen Lyden chipped in with 10 points.

Thursday's game in front of a home crowd proved to be beneficial for Youngstown State as they walloped winless Chicago State (0-24, 0-13) by 41, winning 90-49.

O'Brien led with 20 points on 10 of 14 shooting with nine boards.

Kenneally met her average with 19 points and Lyden and Majewski had 11 and 12 respectively. Majewski also dished out seven assists.

Jen Horner came off the bench to record a double-double with 10 points and 10 rebounds.

The Valpo loss leaves the Lady Penguins at 17-8 and 10-4 in the Mid-Continent Conference, which leaves them in a second place tie with Western Illinois and a game behind Oakland (15-9, 9-3).

YSU returns home Thursday to tackle Oral Roberts at 5:15 p.m.

Penguins in three-way tie for lead

DAN PALOSKI
Contributing Writer

With a road loss to Valparaiso last Saturday night, the men's basketball team fell into a three-way tie for first place in the Mid-Continent Conference with the Crusaders and Southern Utah. All three teams have 9-5 records.

Against Valparaiso, the Penguins (12-13 overall) came out hot, building a nine-point lead at halftime, 37-28.

But it was a tale of two halves. YSU dominated the first, while Crusaders controlled the second.

In the second half, the Penguins were up by as much as 10, 48-38, before the Crusaders made a charge. Behind the play of Milo Stovall, who finished with 21 points and 11 rebounds, the Crusaders outscored YSU 38-20 in the second half, winning the game 65-57.

Senior Albert Crockett led the Penguins with 15 points. Junior Craig Haese added 12, while juniors Desmond Harrison and Andrew Hannon chipped in with nine apiece.

"Coming in at halftime, that was probably as best as we could have played," said Head Coach

John Robic. "I thought that some of our players thought the game was over. From the first play in the second half, Valparaiso took it to us and totally dominated the second half."

Thursday, YSU hosted Mid-Cont for Chicago State. The Penguins got the win in a hard-fought battle with the Cougars, 66-58.

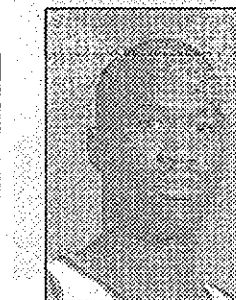

The first half saw YSU fall behind by as much as eight points (32-24). The Penguins would finish the half strong, however. A three-pointer by Crockett at the buzzer capped a 10-2 run by the Penguins and brought them to within two, 34-32, heading into the locker room.

YSU took the lead for good, 49-47, at the 8:50 mark of the second half, on a Hannon three-pointer. Junior David Brown scored six of the Penguins' last eight points from the free throw line to ice the game.

Brown finished with his fifth career double-double, 14 points and 10 rebounds. YSU also got a strong performance from Harrison. He finished the game with 15 points and just missed a double-double of his own, coming up one rebound shy.

"Dave was probably the difference in the game," said Robic. "He rebounded. He was aggressive. He was emotional and he defended. Those were big keys for him in that game."

The Penguins finish the season with two conference home games, the first coming Thursday against Oral Roberts. Game time is 7:35 p.m.

Owusu-Ansah also won the 60-meter dash and broke the meet record with a time of 67.3.

Senior Jen Rizer ran a personal best time in the 60-meter dash with a time of 7.69, while junior Kelly Leonard placed second in the 60-meter hurdles with a time of 9.01. Seniors Andrea Cohol and Suzy Thompson each ran personal best times. Cohol placed fifth with her time of 5:15 in the mile, while Thompson competed in the 200-meter dash and ran a time of 25.90 to also place fifth.

Freshman Kurt Michaelis and sophomore Tim Tatarka ran the 3,000-meter event and finished in fifth and sixth place running times of 8:44 and 8:45 respectively.

Both teams will travel to Oklahoma City, Okla., to compete in the Mid-Continent Conference Championships Friday and Saturday.

did not wait for the quartermaster to supply his men; instead, he diverted the supplies, and kept his men well stocked.

The only thing the African-American soldiers could not do was leave camp by themselves. Harvey Sr. told his son that they always had to leave in a group.

Harvey Sr. enjoyed his time in England. In a time of racial unrest in the States, the African-American soldiers were treated well in England.

Harvey Sr. told his son that people in England thought he and other men in the segregated army were rich because of his gold tooth and watch. The people in England, he said, were unaware of the racism in the States.

"He said they were treated well wherever they went by everyone," said Harvey Jr.

Harvey Sr. said there were race riots in England, but no one talked about them. There was resentment from white GI's that resulted in riots. One lasted three days and many people were killed. "There were lots of different people with different attitudes," Harvey had told his son.

Harvey Jr. remembers his father telling him of there being friction at the dances the Armies had. At one there was an African-American soldier shot in the head by a white soldier. The British soldiers standing by didn't stop the African-American soldiers from "going on a shooting spree" that finally ended when a three-star general came and begged for them to stop.

The segregated armies were not always treated equally. Harvey Sr. told his son of the time Lena Home came to entertain the troops. The very people the American soldiers were fighting against, the Germans, got to sit in the front rows when she sang while the African-American soldiers had to sit in the back.

Harvey Sr. told his son that Home went to the back of the crowd when she realized this and sang to the African-American troops.

By the end of the second World War, 1,174,000 African-American men were serving here and overseas in the armed services, according to John D. Silvera in his book, "The Negro in World War II."

Although the segregated African-American soldiers were treated well and "normal" wherever they went, they were not when they returned to the States.

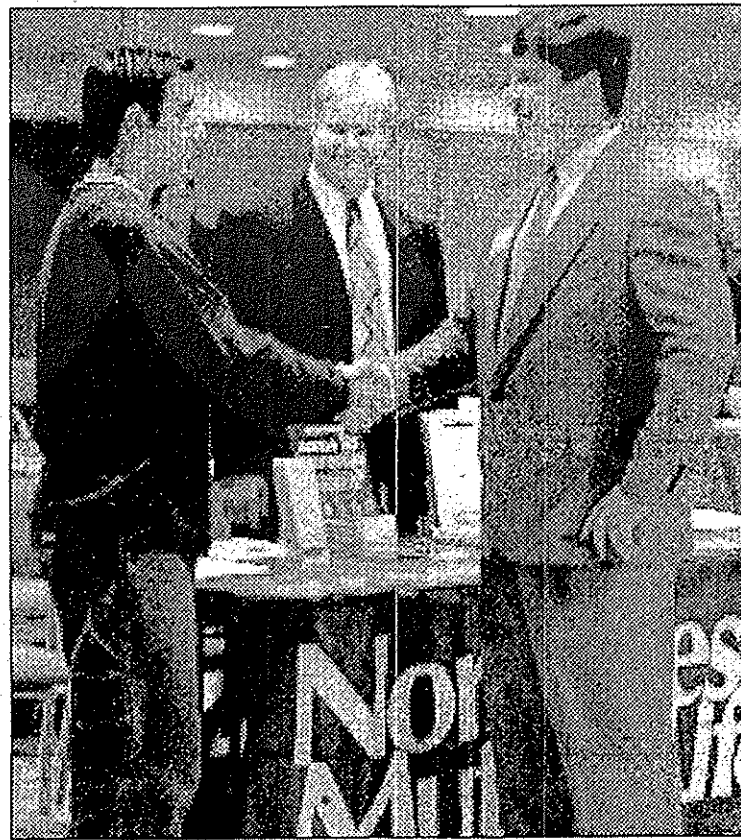

"When they came back they didn't get the same respect. When there was war there was change," said Harvey Jr.

When Harvey Sr. came back to the States, he needed to find a job but only had an 11th grade education. Although he had been trained as a mechanic in the Army, he could not get a job as a mechanic as a civilian. Instead he got a job at the United States Postal Service.

"A lot of veterans went to government agencies for jobs after leaving the service," said Harvey Jr.

The Army was the first branch of service to be integrated after World War II and were fully integrated by the time of the Korean War.

Career Day

LISA ACIERNO, THE JAMBAR

EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES: More than 30 employers were on hand Wednesday offering interviews for internships and summer jobs to YSU students during Career Day in Kilcawley's Chestnut Room. Above are representatives from Northwestern Mutual Life from Akron who helped a YSU student land a job.

? a) Depression is a bunch of symptoms exhibited by weak people.
b) Depression is an unbearable suppression of brain activity that can strike anyone.

Straightening out all the misconceptions, the correct answer is 'b'. It's a concept we should all understand and remember, and here's why. Depression strikes millions of young adults, but only 1 out of 5 ever seeks treatment for it. Too many just drag themselves along or eventually seek relief through suicide. Why not treatment? Partly lack of awareness. Partly the unwarranted negative stigma. This is what needs fixing. This is where we need you to change your attitudes. It's an illness, not a weakness. And it's readily treatable. Spreading the word and making this common knowledge is everybody's assignment.

UNTREATED DEPRESSION
#1 Cause of Suicide

Guess who had a bad day at work?

A bad day at work can often lead to verbal abuse at home. Think about what you're saying. Stop using words that hurt. Start using words that help.

The Kilcawley shuffle beat goes on

■ Escort Services and Crime Prevention Resource Center have moved out of the YSU Police building.

MEGAN E. WALSH
News Editor

The YSU Escort Services and Crime Prevention Resource Center are the latest additions to the Kilcawley/Campus 2000 shuffle.

Three weeks ago, the two services moved their offices from the YSU Police building on University Plaza to Kilcawley Center near the Chestnut Room, behind Arby's, said George Hammar, University Crime Prevention Officer with the YSU police.

"They were moved there because [the YSU Police Department] is moving to the old Red Cross building off campus. They needed a central location that was easily accessible for students and more visible," he said. Hammar said that the escorts will still report to the police office when they first begin their shifts and will get their assignments from there.

The police will be stopping in to check on the escorts but will not have a permanent place in the new office, according to Hammar.

"There is a desk area where we can do our reports but the police won't be staying there," he said.

Hammar said the new location would be better because the escorts use wheelchairs and will not have to bring them from the Red Cross building on the corner of Fifth and Rayen Avenues. There is also more accessibility to the students.

"It would have been a long haul to campus with the wheelchairs from the Red Cross building, and you'll never know when you'll need them," he said.

The new office will have crime prevention information available, according to Hammar.

If students have any questions they can stop by the new office or call 742-1515. Escorts are available from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Friday, and usually 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturday, which may change depending on the hours Kilcawley Center is open.

Hammar said students may also call the YSU police department if no escorts are available.

"We would be happy to assist, especially if it's after hours," he said.

Programs

ate programs doesn't mean that they are poor academically," said Yemma.

"For some reason or another they decided to take this direction. They are easily placed into the workforce, and that's the name of the game," he said.

Yemma readily admitted that college's main emphasis is at the undergraduate and master's level.

Dr. James Morrison, professor and chair of psychology, said emphasis is the best approach.

"We are mandated by the state to have two-year degree programs because there are no community colleges in the area. But we don't need to expand the programs if the need is being met elsewhere," said Morrison.

The Board of Regents supplies roughly $400 per student in general studies, where a student in a bachelor's program can receive as much as $6,623 dollars from the state. Master's programs can receive as much as $14,000 per student.

Morrison said in order to have more associate degrees, there must be a way to pay for them. According to him, most professors at YSU have doctorate's or terminal degrees in their field. Community colleges don't have that luxury.

Morrison said the subsidy given for general studies clearly could not support the caliber of professors found at YSU.

"It doesn't take your proverbial rocket scientist to do the math," said Morrison. "Their salary level and experience [at community colleges] isn't what you have here. We must look at whether we can afford it or not, and not at the expense of our master's and bachelor's programs."

According to Elias, associate programs are no cause for concern.

"The hub of our programs will remain in bachelor programs, and that mix won't change," said Elias. "Right now, about 80% of YSU students are in bachelor programs. The graduate and associate percentages might increase within the next 10 years, but not significantly."
