Students pass issues

By MARK PEYKO
Jambar Managing Editor

In Student Council/Government elections, Wednesday, Issues 1 and 2 passed and students were elected to various representative positions.

The two issues initiated by Student Government passed by overwhelming margins. Issue 1, a proposal to consolidate student elections into a single election passed with 276 persons in favor and 78 opposed. Also included in this amendment is a Council member term change to 4 quarters.

Issue 2, a proposal for individual recognition at commencement ceremonies passed with 285 in favor and 89 opposed.

Two candidates were chosen to fill Council's representative-at-large seats. Benjamin Vaughn, sophomore, Education, won with 125 votes and David Day, sophomore, Education, followed with 111 votes.

Robert Lytle, sophomore, A&S, followed with 110 votes. Rodney Knauf, freshman, A&S, placed fourth with 95 votes and Ryan Gerek, freshman, A&S and Saad Kahid received 85 and 74 votes respectively.

For representative of CAST, Tony Dudzik, senior, received 75 votes.

Dave Gemmel, sophomore, A&S, received 103 votes to become student representative for Arts and Sciences.

Van Kirk defeated Rebecca Whaley, freshman, Business, 24 to 21 for School of Business representative.

Edward Guidos, junior, Engineering, received 29 votes for School of Engineering representative.

With the passage of Issue 1, Student Government President Walt Avdey will present the results to either YSU President Neil Humphrey or YSU's Academic Senate for consideration.

Clergymen discuss famine

By CLARENCE MOORE
Jambar News Editor

Several area religious leaders and representatives from the local chapters of Bread for the World organization held a press conference yesterday to call on President Reagan and Congress to speed up the delivery of food and other life-sustaining assistance to the starving people in Africa.

The press conference, which was sponsored by Bread for the World, was held at the Catholic Action Center, 225 Elm St. It was designed to call attention to the famine problem in Africa and to encourage an increased effort in assisting the starving people in Africa.

Key participants in the press conference included Rev. Glen A. Bengson, 17th District chapter chairman of Bread for the World, who read a prepared statement on behalf of that organization and Rev. Richard Speicher, executive director, Mahoning Valley Association of Churches, who read another prepared statement on behalf of national religious and relief organization leaders.

Other participants included: Bishop James Malone, bishop of the Youngstown Catholic Diocese; Rev. Judith Olin, district superintendent, United Methodist Church; Rabbi David Powers, Rodef Shalom Synagogue and Rev. John Sharick, executive presbytery, Eastminster Presbytery.

Bengson's statement in part, said although the world community has responded generously to the famine in Africa and especially Ethiopia, an increased effort is still needed.

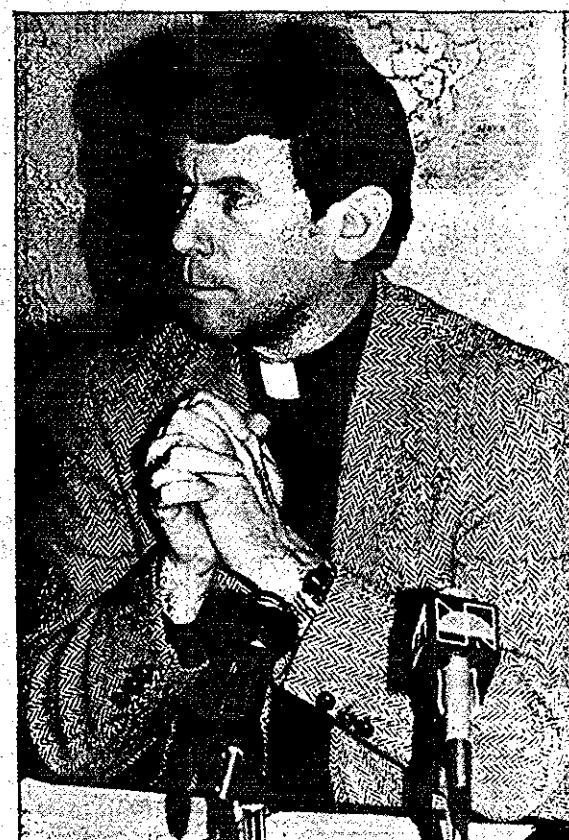

He said most of the food pledged by the United States sent by ship usually takes three to four months to be delivered to the starving people who need it.

He also said that people working with the starving have reported they can easily distribute more food "if only we can get food to them in time."

He said it is estimated that millions of people will die before Christmas in such African countries as Ethiopia, Chad, Mozambique and Mali.

Bengson's statement called on Reagan to initiate a program he called "Operation Africa" and for him to pledge all distribution resources at the U.S.'s disposal to transport food to the starving people in

Police pick up suspect

A Youngstown man was arraigned Wednesday in Municipal Court, after he was arrested by city and campus police officers in connection with the July 31 robbery/stabbing of YSU Professor Jack Bakos.

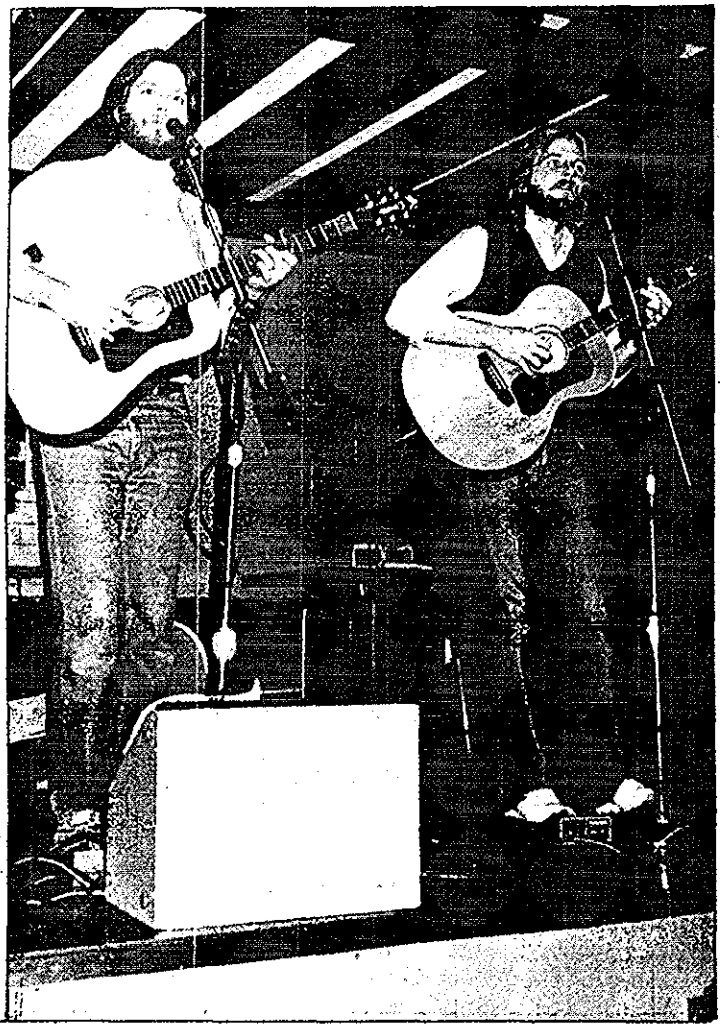

According to Sgt. Ralph Goldich, Campus police, Thomas Talley, who gave his address as 337 Clyde Street, was arrested 9:45 p.m., Tuesday evening, near a Madison Avenue tavern.

Talley had been under investigation by the Youngstown Police Department and Campus Police for some time, Sgt. Goldich said.

When Talley was arrested, he was found to be carrying a carpet knife and two packets of

Awareness

Activist cites values of racial heritage

By ANTHONY MOORE
Jambar Staff Writer

During an impassioned oration on the plight of contemporary black students, Ron Daniels, local activist and host of "The Ron Daniels Show," stressed the importance of cultural heritage and educational values.

Daniel's speech, sponsored by the Black United Students as part of "Black Awareness Week," was given Wednesday in Kilcawley Center's Carnation Room.

Daniels spoke at length about the institution of slavery and how it related to the issue of culture.

"In this country, there has been a conscious attempt to 'de-Africanize' black men and women because whites have tried to make blacks ashamed of their heritage," he said.

"This is particularly dangerous because the cultural enlightenment of blacks is essential to their economic and political prosperity."

"This is a very critical time for blacks," Daniels continued. "We are in danger of regressing to a pre-reconstruction period. This is why our culture is so important."

Culture, according to Daniels, is the stuff of which a people are made and one's convictions come from an understanding of one's culture.

According to Daniels, the best way that blacks can preserve their cultural heritage is through practice, education and a motivation to learn about their heritage.

"Many blacks think that they are being educated, but they are really being mis-educated," Daniels said.

He said that besides learning the courses and skills of their desired professions, blacks should also study their history in order to set a course for their futures.

"One of our greatest fallacies," Daniels said, "is that we don't want to learn about our history. We've got a big job to do, but don't be discouraged. Study the history diligently, absorb the knowledge and spread the word."

Daniels emphasized that blacks should not become discouraged if great numbers of them or a single leader is not present to spread the word throughout the black community about their shared heritage.

"A few, even a handful of blacks, can spread the word," he said.

Daniels also praised the efforts of the Black United Students. "Students have traditionally led the fight for the liberation of the black masses."

"Many blacks think that they are being educated, but they are really being mis-educated."

— Ron Daniels

Daniels also spoke about the need for unity in the black community and urged the black students present to take what they learn in college back into the black community.

"We must learn to use money for things that will help us," he said. "Money should be put into black help organizations like the NAACP and Urban League."

Africa by Christmas.

He further called on Reagan and Congress to airlift food and medical assistance into the countries located within the African interior.

Bengson said the national chapter of Bread for the World had collected 50,000 signatures nationally and the local chapter had also collected signatures calling on the U.S. government to increase its assistance to Africa.

Speicher's statement had significance because it was the same statement being read simultaneously by other religious leaders in 40 other cities across the country.

In his statement, he read that despite recent press attention, too little U.S. public concern and attention is being focused on halting the starvation and aiding the African nations to overcome the many obstacles impeding long term development. Such obstacles include debt, declining terms of trade, misdirected aid priorities, and declining per capita agricultural production.

"To admit that several million people have died from starvation in Africa is an international shame; to realize that thousands of mothers and fathers watched helplessly as their infants and children wasted away, without an adequate and enthusiastic global rates, as made evident in recent press coverage.

At times he echoed the statement read by Bengson, also calling for Reagan to initiate "Operation Africa." He called it "a mission of justice and mercy" and urged the president to use his powers to airlift food into the country and provide resources to the country so that it may improve its economic condition.

Other participants on the panel gave their views on the famine situation in Africa and revealed how their respective denominations and relief services are responding to the problem.

Malone criticized some of the western governments for being reluctant to send help into Ethiopia because they believe that country's communist system of government is "unacceptable."

He called on the U.S. and other western governments to put aside their biases about Ethiopia's government and exercise their humanitarianism.

Malone also encouraged people within the local community to donate to such charitable organizations as Catholic Relief, Lutheran World Relief, UNICEF, CARE, Red Cross and Church World Service.

relief support, is a human tragedy of the highest magnitude," Speicher read.

He said some countries on the African continent are entering the fourth year of the deadly drought that has caused a dramatic increase in the country's death

Student finds opportunity with internship

The Jambar/George Nelson

By JIM FOUST
Jambar Staff Writer

Most people wouldn't mind spending their summer the way Beth Hildenbrand, secretary of YSU Student Government's Major Events Committee, did.

Hildenbrand worked as an intern with Dicesare-Engler Productions in Pittsburgh, and had the chance to meet quite a few celebrities from the music business.

Hildenbrand, a senior majoring in advertising and public relations, said her involvement in numerous promotional activities at YSU was a major reason she was picked for the internship with Dicesare-Engler. "I think that involvement with activities is as important as classroom work," she said.

Hildenbrand acted as a promoter's representative for Dicesare-Engler's series of summer concerts, and said she has really gained a lot from the experience.

"I was mostly a go-fer," she said "but that's actually the best thing to be, because you get to see all the different facets of the business."

After being backstage with some of the rock groups, Hildenbrand said she now has a different view of what the business is like. "I got to see what the personalities are really like," she said.

"I found that the bands are like businessmen — they're not backstage partying like everyone thinks. Everyone knows they have a job to do and they do it. The image people have of what goes on backstage is really overblown."

The first concert she worked was for the rock group Rush. She said she got to have dinner with the band, but felt uneasy with them because she had only heard one of their songs before. She had also received a present from Rod Stewart, one of his trademark soccer balls.

Hildenbrand said that while meeting famous people was exciting, she was also glad to have met many of the other people behind the scenes who make things work. "They're sometimes more interesting than the celebrities," she said.

At YSU, Hildenbrand and the Major Events Committee are charged with bringing major entertainers to the campus. "It's not as easy as it used to be," she said. "The promoters don't really want to deal with us because we don't have enough seating capacity to make it worth their while."

Major Events is interested in putting together a jazz concert for YSU, and is also working on rescheduling comedian Steve Landesberg's cancelled October performance.

Landesberg's show is being rescheduled for February, and will be held on campus in Kilcawley Center instead of at Stambaugh Auditorium.

"Last time there wasn't enough interest, and we think it was because we were off-campus and didn't promote it enough to the students," she said.

In the future, Hildenbrand said she wants to pursue a career working in concert promotion or public relations for a celebrity or non-profit organization. "My internship and activities here at YSU should be a big help," she said. "It's a very interesting business to be involved with."

Beth Hildenbrand, Student Government Major Events Secretary, interned with Dicesare — Engler Productions last summer. She worked with many rock personalities including Rush and Bruce Springsteen.

God's army

Abortion clinics and family-planning centers in this country have been exploding at a rate of one every two weeks. Seems some people don't like what these places do.

So, in the tradition of religious bumbleheadedness, they blow the suckers up.

Makes sense. The use of violence to protest violence is a sacred human tradition — it's nothing new. Neither is the idea of religious warfare.

It's contradictory logic, but it's the same kind of logic that motivates groups like the "Army of God," which has boasted responsibility for several of the bombings in Virginia and Florida.

Pro-choice leaders want President Reagan to say something to discourage this stuff. Maybe he will.

But what good would it do, even from him? Are groups like the "Army of God" capable of reason? You need look no further than their name to see that they are not.

Which leaves us — the reasoning faction — with nothing to do. That's okay. Just sit there for a while, if it helps, and think about how stupid people can be.

Meaning what?

Issue 2, designed to determine what students think about individual recognition at graduation ceremonies, passed 285-89.

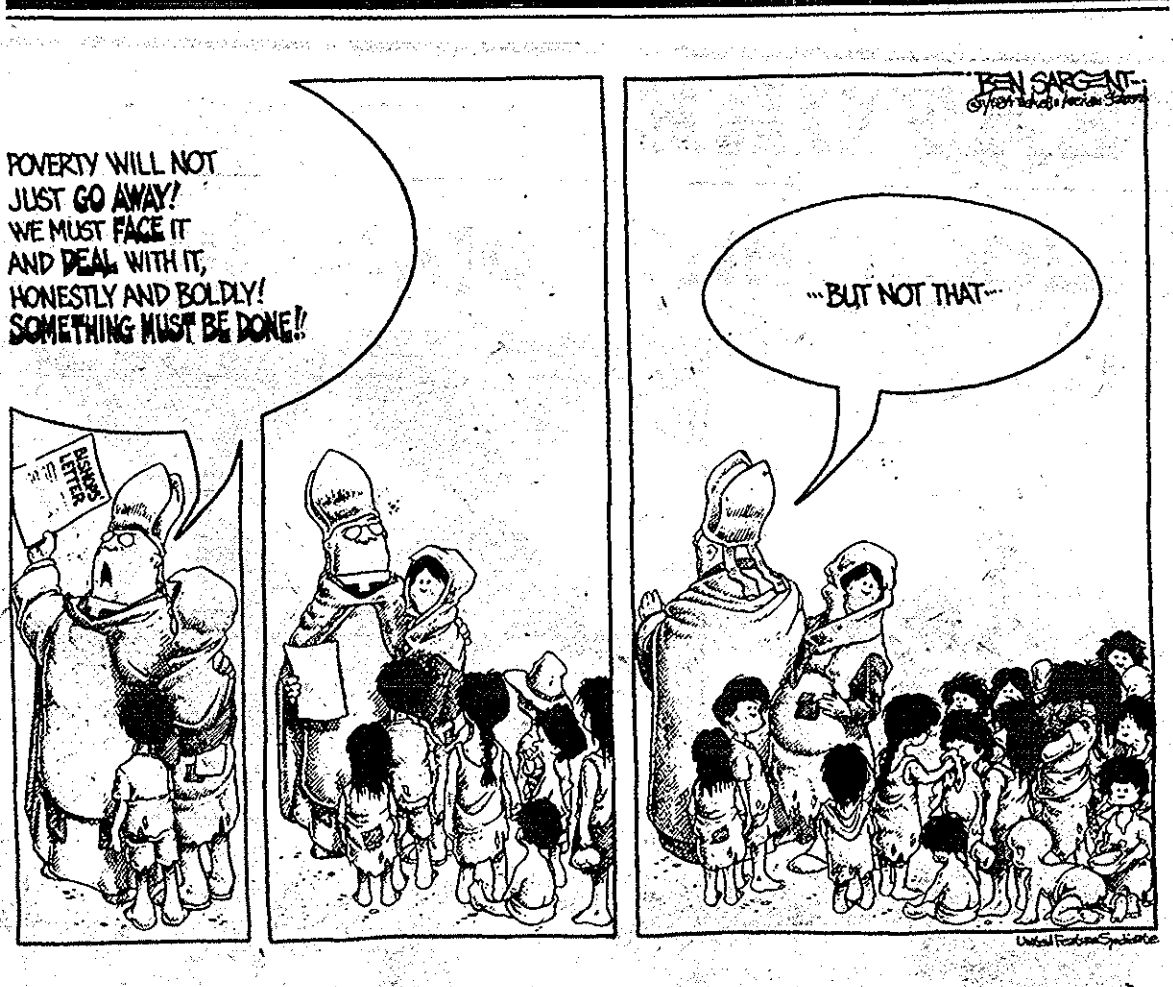

Unfortunately, it still doesn't say much about what students think about individual recognition at graduation ceremonies, since only 374 students voted — hardly an encompassing cross section.

Before pursuing a change, Student Government President Walt Avdey and University President Neil Humphrey should consider the 14,880 students who didn't vote on the issue.

Issue 2 was one of those issues that is likely to encourage only those who are in favor of it to vote, which may have rendered it meaningless.

COMMENTARY

'Star Wars' opponents naive

Now that the election is over, it is time to return to the issues. One issue which is sure to create controversy and spirited discussion is "Star Wars defense."

With such a system, incoming missiles would be shot down by defensive missiles or laser beams. Such a system of defense would give us an acceptable alternative to Mutual Assured Destruction (with the appropriate acronym MAD).

Nevertheless, there are those who oppose a "Star Wars" or "high frontier" defense. Some fear that it would work so well that it would drive the world into an "arms race" and encourage aggressive behavior by national commanders.

In the early 1950s, the United States had a similar defense advantage over the Soviet Union. We had nuclear weapons; they did not. In theory, we could have invaded without fear of reprisal in kind. We did not invade.

If there must be an "arms race," let it be one of defense rather than offense. Let it be one where bombs are the casualties rather than people.

Critics say this defense system will not work and will be a waste of money. It is interesting how these two arguments counter one another.

Perhaps a system that may not work could be the best system of all. An aggressor nation would be dissuaded from attack because the system might work; we would be similarly dissuaded from attack because it might not.

When it comes to costs, the Pentagon has estimated the cost of such a system at $50 billion. This is valid if our strategic defense is built through a low-priority, bureaucratic approach. Such an approach is slow and expense-mounting.

If we choose to make the defense of our cities an urgent priority, we may build it in five years at a substantially lower cost. Besides, would you want to have to put a price tag on how much it is worth to defend our homes? Is your home worth the cost? There are those who claim such defense devices would be likely targets for attack. This is possible, but they would cause an aggressor to put forth energy against them rather than against human targets.

Some critics are sentimental about the "sanctity of outer space." That "sanctity" was violated in 1944 with the introduction of the German V-2 ballistic missile. (Ballistic missiles are those that are used against an enemy's weapons.)

Furthermore, recently declassified documents from the Department of Defense reveal that our own country began plans for such a defense system as far back as 1958.

Incredibly, public opinion polls reveal that the majority of the American public believes that we already have a ballistic-missile defense. Let us hope that this is the majority that does not vote!

We would have such a defense system if it were not for a small, shrill, highly-placed anti-defense lobby that has succeeded in propagating the pernicious belief that nations are protected by a common vulnerability.

The naivete of this belief lies in the assumption that all powers could indefinitely endure such a permanent threat or would never jockey for superiority in weaponry.

This completely circumvents the reality of imperfect human nature. It is blasphemy to assume that human nature is anything but imperfect. After all, if it were not for imperfect human nature, there would be no need for a defense system.

Thanks YSU community

To the Editor of The Jambar:

On behalf of the India Student Association, I would like to thank all the YSU students, faculty and staff for the kind donations made Wednesday, November 21, helping us raise money for UNICEF.

A total of $266 was collected and has been sent to that organization's office.

I would also like to thank Mohamad Reza Azmoudeh, Afshin Baghaie, Ramin Baghaie, Andrea Jennings, Vanita Khanna, Elithia, Anamika Mishr, Rachana Saklacha, Mrs. McCabe and the YSU Student Government office; for helping to make it possible.

Charges sensationalism

To the Editor of The Jambar:

I must take exception to some portions of George Nelson's commentary on "green apple" Teflon-coated bullets. According to the commentary, the NRA's stand against legislation in this area is "fanatical", endangering the lives of policemen for the sake of "blowing away a deer".

The original legislation proposed was very vague, basically banning any ammunition with the capability of piercing police "body armor". Unfortunately, most high-power hunting rifles can penetrate a Kevlar vest whether they fire bullets coated with Teflon, copper, or soft lead.

In its original form, the legislation could have been interpreted by the Treasury Department as banning nearly all centerfire hunting rifle ammunition. (Catch-22, the guns would still be legal but the ammunition wouldn't.)

In Nelson's commentary, mention was made of the San Ysidro incident, where 21 people were killed. This is groundless. None of the people killed or injured were wearing Kevlar vests, and as one of the three weapons Huberty used was an assault rifle, it wouldn't have made much difference if they had.

For this reason, the special ammunition he was using did not greatly increase the risk faced by the special police that were called in, as their Kevlar vests were already vulnerable to fire from his rifle. Nelson's references to the McDonald's shootings strike me as sensationalism that does little to prove his point.

Fears 'snowball effect'

To the Editor of The Jambar:

Although I personally feel no need to go out and buy any "green apples" (see "Commentary" in the 11/27 issue of The Jambar), I staunchly believe in the stand taken by the NRA. The banning of one type of ammunition could very well lead to a "snowball effect" when some bleeding-heart liberals use one bill as a precedent for the passing of one "just a little bit" stronger. As for the poor furry critters that hunters "blow away," maybe Mr. Nelson should look up some of the statistics on how many furry critters die of starvation or from being hit by a car. Maybe we should pass a bill requiring 3-foot foam rubber bumpers and a maximum speed limit of 25 mph on all roads.

Yes, I realize I'm being melodramatic, but a little over-reaction is sometimes necessary to make a point. Actually, I enjoy a good venison steak or a rabbit and noodle with sour cream casserole. Those who won't eat wild game on the basis of the "cuteness" of the animals should go look into the big brown eyes of a calf or a cow before they take their next bite of steak or hamburger.

Acknowledges gratitude

To the Editor of The Jambar:

On Friday, November 16, the children involved in Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Mahoning Valley were fortunate enough to participate in activities planned for them by the Youngstown State University Student Government. They sponsored a Big Brothers/Big Sisters Day on campus and provided the children with tours of the University.

The YSU Student Government approached me in August to see if there was anything they could do to help our agency. The campus tour was a two-fold plan to help develop an awareness of the university for the children, and also to develop an awareness of the agency for the YSU students.

Big Brothers/Big Sisters is constantly trying to recruit volunteers to become big brothers or sisters and hopefully the University community will become a valuable resource for potential volunteers.

Approximately 30 students acted as "Bigs" for the day and were paired up with the children and served as their guides and friends. I believe that the efforts of the students and the YSU Student Government are truly commendable. It is refreshing to know that these students care about and wish to get involved with our community. Thank you all very much.

Cites visitation policy

To the Editor of The Jambar:

In a recent issue of The Jambar, you published an editorial entitled "Thank Yous", which in general was a very positive and supportive article. However, the editorial contained one erroneous item concerning the visitation policy in the residence hall — "For example, overnight guests of the opposite sex have been banned at many colleges. Not so here."

Currently, Kilcawley Residence Hall, the only residence hall owned by the University, has some fairly specific policies regarding visitation and co-habitation.

The policies, as outlined in the Kilcawley Residence Hall Survival Manual briefly state that: "Parents and family members may visit your room after notifying your Resident Assistant. Women or men (other than members of your immediate family) may visit rooms, corridors or floor lounges only during regularly scheduled visitation hours and only when accompanied by the resident."

Visitation privileges are in effect during the following hours: Monday-Thursday, 11 a.m.-11 p.m., and Friday-Sunday, 11 a.m.-2 a.m.

"Residents may entertain overnight guests (of the same sex) if a bed is available. Permission from your Resident Assistant must be obtained at least two days before the guest arrives. Residents are responsible for the conduct of their guests."

I hope that this clears up any confusion regarding overnight guests in Kilcawley Residence Hall. If you or anyone else in the University community have additional questions concerning on or off-campus housing, please contact the Housing Office at extension 3457.

Shares concern over 'Playboy'

To the Editor of The Jambar:

(Note: The following is a memo addressed to Lynn Haug, Phil Hirsch and members of PAC, which was also released to The Jambar for publication.)

I share the concern of those who protested the hiring of a Playboy magazine advisor for a sex education presentation on Nov. 15. There are many good, qualified sex counselors and educators who would not carry the symbolism of sexist attitudes represented in Playboy.

While I will defend the right of Playboy to publish and of its columnists to travel and speak, I hold them responsible for their politics. I will also hold you responsible for spending our dollars to vote for their kind of opportunistic politics.

The Jambar encourages letters. All letters must be typed, double-spaced and signed and must include the writer's telephone number. The telephone number is for confirmation purposes and will not be published. Letters may not exceed 250 words and should concern campus-related issues. College women less sexually active

From the College Press Service

College women apparently are less active sexually than they used to be, a new survey suggests.

The current conservative trend on campuses could be responsible for the declining student sexual activity, reports the recent survey of the University of Texas female students.

Five years ago, half of UT's female students had sex at least once a month, compared to 38 percent in 1983-84, said University of Kansas psychologist Meg Gerrard, author of the survey.

Gerrard's survey, her third of UT women in 10 years, questioned some 100 students about their sexual attitudes.

Not all the results have been analyzed, but

Gerrard speculates, "It could be part of a larger conservative trend in sexual activity, as well as in political and ideological values. There's no question in my mind that this is a nationwide trend."

Pinning the decline on conservatism "sounds plausible," agreed Joseph Katz, human development professor at the State University of New York-Stony Brook, but the implications could run deeper.

"An easing of the sense of having to conform may be a factor," he commented. "It could also mean a greater acceptance of traditional mores."

Katz's own studies of student sexuality in the 60s and 70s revealed student opposition to premarital sex declined from 50 percent to 10 percent from 1970 to 1975.

And the percentage of undergraduates who had engaged in premarital sex rose from 50 percent in 1970 to 78 percent of men and 72 percent of women in 1977.

Indeed, studies conducted on many campuses as recently as 1982 charted continued increases in student sexual activity.

"There was a massive liberalization of attitudes going on (in the 70s)," Katz pointed out. "Any turning back from that is surprising, and the magnitude of change (revealed in Gerrard's survey) is somewhat striking."

Liberal sexual attitudes were "almost the norm in the sixties and seventies," said Dr. Aaron Hass of UCLA's Sexuality Clinic.

"But my impression is that now undergrad girls desire commitments or love relationships."

Reagan holds key to increased student aid

From the College Press Service

Students locked out of 1984 federal financial aid programs could find some opened doors next year if President Ronald Reagan signs the fiscal 1985 education funding bill now on his desk.

Experts predict Reagan will sign H.R. 6028, which contains the federal education budget for the Oct. 1, 1984 to Sept. 30, 1985 fiscal year, and was passed Oct. 11 by both houses of Congress.

Student financial aid funds comprise nearly $8 billion of the total $17.9 billion education package, with $3.6 billion earmarked for Pell grants and $3 billion for Guaranteed Student Loans (GSL).

"We think the increases will loosen up financial aid substantially," Lou Dietrich, Department of Education spokeswoman reported. "The budget exceeds our request for 1985 and provides a great deal of aid."

Nevertheless, some aid directors around the country fear the increases may be too little, too late to help current students, and that they're not big enough to help students new to the aid programs.

Still, Congress's aid budget is $1.7 billion more than last year's, and nearly $1.5 billion more than the president wanted in the 1985 budget.

In his budget request, delivered to Congress last February, Reagan wanted to fund the Pell program at its 1984 level, eliminate Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants (SEOG) and State Student Incentive Grants, drastically cut National Direct Student Loans (NDSL) and increase Work/Study and GSL allocations.

In addition, the Office of Management and Budget earlier this year proposed letting inflation eat away more aid programs by keeping budgets the same through the next four years.

Congress instead has increased the total education budget by 14 percent and sent it to the White House for Reagan's signature.

"There are increases in just about every program for 1985," Dietrich noted. "It certainly provides students with more aid options."

The SEOG program would get $40 million more, NDSLs' $35 million more and College Work/Study $37.5 million more than 1984 levels if Reagan signs the bill into law.

College financial aid directors around the country, battered by four years of aid cuts, seem relieved but unsated.

"We've always had a problem here with lack of funds," Alan Shipley of Northern Arizona University explained. "Any increase will make it easier for students to apply for and receive the dollars they need."

"The increases are good," Jeff Baker of San Francisco State agreed. "But I'd like to see more of them and more changes."

"We have a critical problem here," Montana State Financial Aid Director Jim Craig said, hoping the increases won't come too late. "Lots of students apply and we have no funds for them."

"The budget for financial aid has not grown with the cost of living," he added.

But while education experts are happy about the increases, they note the funding is not as substantial as it looks.

"The budget restores the erosion of the last four years," Dallas Martin of the National Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators said. "Funding still doesn't equal the real purchasing power of fiscal 1980."

Some aid directors maintain the increases, particularly for Pell Grants and GSLs, won't help new aid applicants much.

"The increase in Pell funds will go mostly to students already in the program," Pat Smith of the American Council on Education (ACE) stressed. "Maximum grants will be raised from $1,900 to $2,100, and there are nearly three million students in the program."

"It's pretty much arithmetic," San Francisco's Baker conceded. "I hope the Pell increase isn't eaten up by the additional maximum grants. I hope it means more students will receive Pell grants."

Arrest

suspected marijuana.

He was later charged with one count of aggravated robbery, one count of attempted murder and one count each for carrying a concealed weapon and drug abuse, Goldich reported.

The arrest was made by Campus Police Chief Richard Turkiewicz and a team of six University officers and six officers from the YPD.

Goldich said that he and Det. Harry Wollett of the YPD had been assigned to investigate the stabbing incident after it occurred last summer. He said Campus Police and the YPD had been working together on the case.

The University had issued several rewards for information leading to the arrest of the suspect, but ironically, no one came forth with information.

Goldich said he believes both police departments were able to crack the case with the aid of the composite drawing they had of the suspect and from the information given to them by Bakos.

Goldich reported the investigating officers checked the composite drawing against at least 200 other likely suspects in the Campus Police's files kept by the YPD. He said Talley's picture was in the YPD files and that it "fit" the composite drawing.

According to Goldich, Talley had also been identified by Bakos as his assailant, after Talley had been arrested in Liberty for another unrelated crime.

Judge Frank X. Kryzan, Municipal court judge set bond for Talley at $37,000 with no 10 percent.

The Bakos incident occurred July 31 on level 3-C of the Lincoln Avenue deck. According to police reports, Bakos was approached by a black male asking for directions. When he turned to reply, the suspect stabbed him in the neck and demanded money. Bakos was also stabbed in the chest after he was robbed.

A preliminary hearing has been set for Talley at 9:30 a.m., Wednesday, Dec. 5. Judge Lloyd Haynes will preside over the case.

Bakos, chairman of the civil engineering department returned to work this quarter.

YACCB performs out of enjoyment

By CHRIS STEFANSKI
Jambar Staff Writer

There is a Pied Piper loose in Youngstown, sounding his trumpet and calling all those yearning to make use of, and have fun with, their musical training.

"I see an enormous potential in the Youngstown area for serious and non-serious musicians to find recreation in their music," said Bill Gretsinger, founder of the Youngstown Area Community Concert Band.

He said he dreams of the day his YACCB will be just one of many such bands joined together across the country in the same manner as bowling, golf and even bridge leagues.

"I'm not just looking for a night out, but rather a way to turn the love of playing an instrument into a recreational activity," he explained.

Gretsinger said he was motivated to organize YACCB when his wife joined the Sweet Adelines, a group of women who banded together for competition with other women's barbershop quartets.

"Too many kids graduate from high school, where they worked hard to become skilled and capable musicians, and just throw the horn in the attic," Gretsinger said.

The YACCB is only a year old but already has 33 members. The aim is to enlist at least 60 professional and non-professional musicians, he said.

Under the direction of Michael C. Ferraro, retired band director of the New Castle Mohawk Schools, where he taught for 35 years, they attempt a minimum of eight concerts per year.

Members are both male and female, range in age from 14 to 80, and are either amateurs or professionals. Their vocations range from mattress makers to teachers.

There are three requirements for membership; at least four years training, group or individual, no union affiliation, and ready to perform by having kept current on their major instrument.

Gretsinger said he feels the time is ripe for such an endeavor. He cited the economic problems in the area as one reason preventing many from indulging in recreational activities and noted that to be a YACCB member is practically free. He said that it is even more important that YACCB provides a service to the Youngstown community.

Groups may book the band for special occasions. The only requirement is to see the band. See Band, page 9

Playhouse holds appealing 'Mass'

There won't be much rehearsal time needed for the Youngstown Playhouse's main stage production of Mass Appeal because the cast is the same one that successfully presented it on the Playhouse's Second Stage area theatre last season.

Mass Appeal is a comedy about the conflicts between an established priest and a radical young seminarian. Strickler W. Pollock will return in the role of Fr. Tim Farley, a priest who is immensely popular with his congregation, enjoys his glass of burgundy, and drives a Mercedes.

Robin Van McCreary will recreate the role of Mark Dolson, who is idealistic, outspoken and likes to jog. From their explosive (and often humorous) confrontations, the two men gradually become friends, each in their own way learning from the other.

The comedy will open Nov. 30, playing for three weekends through Dec. 16. Tickets are $9 and $6 for students and senior citizens, respectively, and may be charged using Visa or Mastercard.

Reservations may be made by calling 788-8739 weekdays, 9 a.m.-6 p.m.

The Dec. 16 performance will be free to anyone who brings a wrapped gift.

This annual tradition, now in its fourth year, was inaugurated to bring a measure of cheer to those who might otherwise be alone during the holidays.

Reservations are made as usual. Upon arriving at the Playhouse, theatregoers who bring a wrapped gift will receive a coupon to exchange at the box office for their reserved seat ticket.

Youngstown Area Jaycees will distribute the gifts before Christmas Day to people confined to nursing homes and institutions.

The gifts should be wrapped, with the contents indicated on a removable tag. Items of warmth are among the most welcome, however, anyone wanting additional suggestions may contact gift chairman John Burgan at 783-0055.

It has been estimated that in three years, approximately 1,000 Christmas gifts have been distributed as a result of this program.

The Youngstown Playhouse is located on the 2000 block just off Glenwood Ave., where there is free supervised parking on the premises.

REVIEW

'Amadeus' makes successful transition from stage to film

By MARK PASSERRELLO
Special to the Jambar

"Forgive me, Mozart. I killed you. Forgive your assassin."

With these words, the old man slits his own throat, hoping to end his torment.

Later he awakens to find himself in a hospital for the insane, very much alive, and with a young priest urging him to confess. The old man recounts to the young clergyman a tale so fantastic it seems hard to believe that 30-odd years before he actually lived it. Or thought he did.

The old man is Antonio Salieri, and he went to his grave believing he killed Wolfgang Mozart. The movie is Amadeus, the eagerly awaited film version of the hit play of the same name.

So often when a play is transferred to celluloid, a transformation takes place. Often what made the stage version so memorable is lost, and the film lacks the spark that made the stage play a hit. Fortunately, the producers of Amadeus didn't attempt an exact copy of the stage play, but rather, made a motion picture that retains the play's drama and excitement, while still aware of the cinema's limits and advantages.

Director Milos Forman, who has brought such "un-filmable" films as Hair and Ragtime to the screen, has crafted a remarkable motion picture. Spanning the last 10 years of Mozart's life, we see the composer's successes and failures through the eyes of Salieri, Mozart's archrival. Salieri envies Mozart's genius and glory and when he realizes they will never be his, he plots Mozart's downfall and eventual death.

Peter Shaffer's adaptation of his own stage play deftly shows an insecure, slightly vain Salieri cut his naive, socially unaware rival to ribbons. It is a credit to Shaffer and Forman that this production, which could have been a two and a half hour dinosaur, moves at a steady pace and is thoroughly engrossing through out.

Tom Hulce is good as Mozart, but his boy-next-door looks are a contrast to the raucous hell raiser that the film paints Mozart as being. If Hulce looks familiar, you probably remember him from Animal House, in which he played a nerdy pledge.

The real star, however, is F. Murray Abraham in the role of Salieri. He gives a tour de force performance that is certainly of Oscar calibre. His transition between young and old Salieri is subtly and at the same time quite marked, and always believable.

Strong supporting performances are turned in by the remainder of the cast, especially Elizabeth Berridge as Mozart's down-to-earth wife Constanze, who is a perfect contrast to her star-trodding husband; Roy Dotrice as Leopold Mozart, the stern, demanding father; and Jeffrey Jones as Emperor Joseph II.

Deserving of mention are production designer Patricia von Brandenstein and music supervisor Neville Marriner. Their efforts give Amadeus a rich, vibrant texture both visually and aurally. Marriner's use and juxtaposition of Mozart's music is particularly effective. In fact, the music is the heart beat of the film. Scenes were shot around the music, which provided tempo and mood.

If you have any interest in Mozart, music or just a good movie, Amadeus is a sure bet. It is a thoughtful, well-made film that entertains on a variety of levels.

YSU theatre books big names

By DIANE SOFRANEC
Jambor Feature Editor

For its next production in Ford Auditorium, University Theatre will receive some notable assistance in the form of critically acclaimed visiting artists.

As part of the Wean Lectureship Program, internationally-known director Christopher Martin, playwright Barrie Stavis and actor Earle Hyman will contribute their talents to the presentation of Harpers Ferry.

The play will run February 21-23 and 28 and March 1-2. Auditions will be held 4:30 and 7 p.m., Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 3 and 4.

Martin, who will direct Harpers Ferry, will remain at YSU for seven weeks beginning Jan. 7. In addition to directing the play, he will work with students in rehearsal-type situations, lecture to the community, make presentations in the classroom, and team-teach the theater 899 seminar "Symposium on the Many and Varied Aspects of Theater." The prerequisite for the course is the consent of the instructor.

Martin, who is listed in the Who's Who in the Theatre, is artistic director/founder of the City Stage Company in New York City and has received the OBIE, Villager and Outer Critics Circle awards, as well as international acclaim for his direction of Peter Gyn. In addition to directing, he has designed productions, translated plays and performed as an actor.

Stavis, who will arrive at YSU Feb. 13 and stay for 10 days, will aide in the direction of Harpers Ferry. He will also participate in the seminar and make presentations to other classes. Stavis was playwright for Harpers Ferry and several other acclaimed productions. He has published novels, articles and essays and is included in Contemporary Dramatists.

Internationally acclaimed actor Hyman will be in town Feb. 21 and 22 and will participate in two seminar presentations. He won the "Best Performance by an Actor in Cable Television" award for his portrayal of James Tyrone in A Long Days Journey Into Night, and has recently portrayed Bill Cosby's father on "The Cosby Show." He appeared at YSU in 1982 as part of the Wean lectureship program in the lead role of Shakespeare's Othello.

The programs are made possible through a grant from the Youngstown Educational Foundation. They are designed to bring artists who are nationally recognized for their non-academic careers to YSU. Artists from fine and performing arts, business and engineering are represented.

ment is adequate space. The room and the acoustics must allow for seating the band and the audience.

Gretsinger's dream is to become a public, non-profit (tax exempt) organization. Currently, some music stores and individuals contribute money and equipment.

"This is the place to be a part of a group that plays music from Porter to Puccini and from The Beatles to Bach," Gretsinger said.

For more information about membership or booking for a concert, call Gretsinger at 744-1571 after 5 p.m., weekdays.

- Feb. 18 - Murray State at YSU - 7:30 p.m.

IDs replace tickets

Students get in free to all YSU home basketball games this season by simply showing their valid student IDs at the door. The Penguins' next home game is Monday, Dec. 3, when the Penguins play the College of Wooster, 7:30 p.m., Beeghly Center.

Coke sponsors Wooster tilt

The Coca-Cola Bottling Company of Youngstown, in conjunction with the YSU athletic department, will sponsor "Coca-Cola Night" Monday, Dec. 3, when the Penguins host the Wooster College Fighting Scots. The first 1,000 fans through the gate will receive a voucher slip good for a two-liter bottle of Coca-Cola. The voucher slips can be redeemed immediately after the game in the south lobby of Beeghly Center.

Ticket office changes hours

The athletic ticket office has revised their ticket hours for the upcoming 1984-85 basketball season. The ticket office will be open 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. On game days and on Fridays before Saturday games, the window will be open 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Intramural deadlines approach

Men's and women's basketball and bowling team rosters and forfeit receipts are due in Room 302, Beeghly Center on or before Friday, Dec. 7. Applications to be a paid official for basketball and/or volleyball during winter quarter are also being taken in Room 302, Beeghly Center.

McFadden leads NFC

By DARREN CONSTANTINO
Jambar Sports Editor

Former YSU placekicker Paul McFadden is currently leading the National Football Conference in field goals with 26. McFadden is 26 of 31 in field goal attempts and 21 of 22 in extra points. He is also the second-leading scorer in the conference with 99 points, only seven behind San Francisco's Ray Wersching who leads the league with 106.

McFadden is accustomed to having Ron Jaworski holding on his field goal and extra point attempts, but "Jaws" is out for the season with a broken leg. When asked if this would cause him problems, McFadden replied, "It's an adjustment, but Joe Pisarchek is super. I can't make excuses."

The Eagles are preparing for what McFadden called "the biggest game of the year" for Philadelphia. "This Sunday we play the Cowboys," McFadden said. "It's our big rivalry, similar to the Browns-Steelers game in Youngstown."

McFadden will be coming home before Christmas if the Eagles fail to make the playoffs, but as McFadden said, "We still have an outside shot."

'Guins defeat Brooklyn

By DARREN CONSTANTINO
Jambar Sports Editor

Senior Ray Robinson scored 26 points to pace YSU to a 71-58 victory over Brooklyn College Monday night at Beeghly Center.

A crowd of 3,341 watched the Penguins win their season opener in preparation for a tournament in Northern Iowa this weekend.

As a part of the opening game celebration, ushers wore tuxedos and bow ties, dancing girls performed at halftime, and clowns entertained the children.

YSU took a 5-4 lead on a Troy Williams free throw with 16:04 remaining in the first half, and the Penguins never trailed thereafter.

YSU led by as much as 13 during the first half, but the Kingsmen narrowed the gap to 34-24 at the intermission.

John Keshock scored eight of his 10 points in the second half to help the Penguins overcome a Brooklyn charge after the Kingsmen had pulled to within six early in the second half. The Penguins led by as much as 18 before the game was over.

YSU shot 45.7 percent from the field and converted 17 of 21 from the free throw line. Brooklyn made 16 of 26 attempts from the charity strip while shooting 43.8 percent from the field.

Brooklyn was led by Joe Eley with 19 points, Marvin Richardson with 12 and David Grady with 10.

YSU is now 1-0 on the young season while the loss dropped the Kingsmen to 0-2.

YSU will face Alabama State University, Friday, Nov. 30 at the UNI-Dome in Northern Iowa. The winner will face the winner of South Carolina State and Northern Iowa on Saturday.

Senior Ray Robinson goes up for a slam over a pair of Brooklyn College defenders. Robinson paced the Penguin attack with 26 points as YSU defeated Brooklyn, 71-58. YSU travels to Northern Iowa this weekend to participate in the UNI-Dome Classic. The Penguins open tournament play Friday, Nov. 30, against Alabama State.

Mary Jo Vodenichar and Danielle Carson combined for 37 points to pace the YSU women's basketball team to their third straight victory, 64-58, over Robert Morris College.

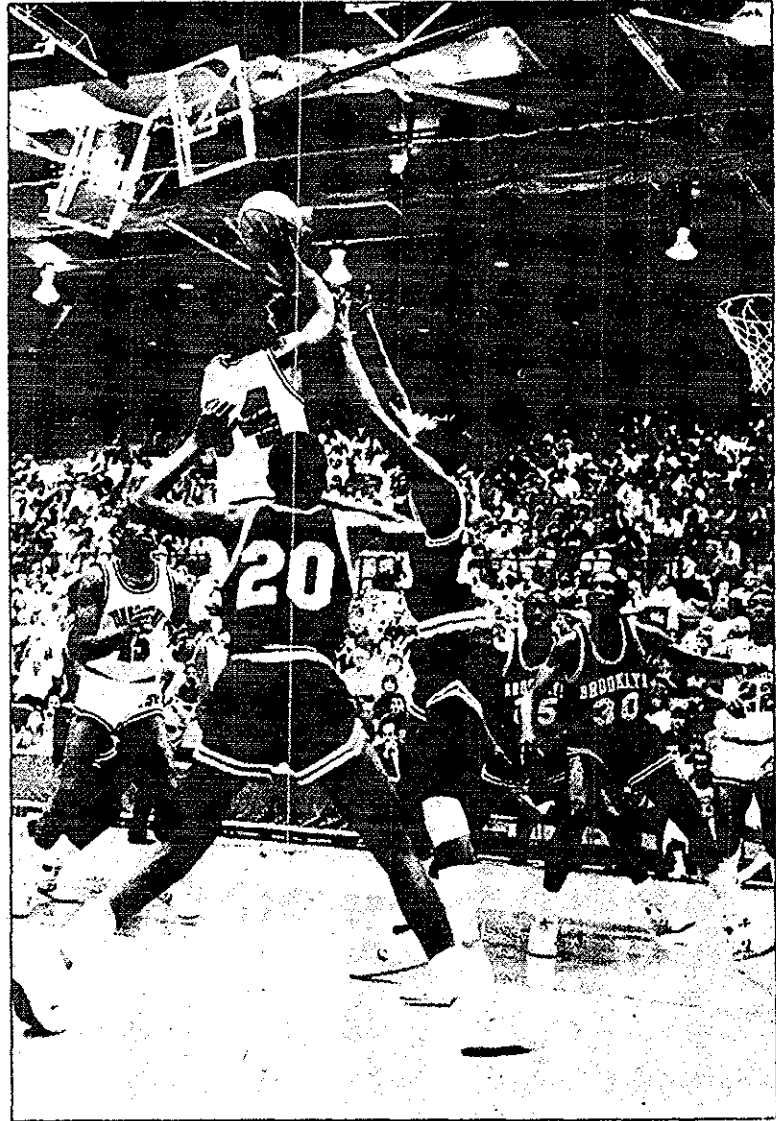

The Penguins owned a 37-35 lead at the half, and after going on top 43-42 early in the second half, they never trailed again.

Senior center Mary Jo Vodenichar led all scorers with 19 points while pulling down seven rebounds. Danielle Carson, a junior forward, scored 18 points and hauled in eight missed shots for the victors.

Kim Long paced Robert Morris with 14 points while Carol Denniston and Diane Solomon scored 12 and 10 points respectively.

Robert Morris shot 48 percent from the field and six of 12 from the charity strip as their record drops to 0-1. YSU was 47 percent from the field and 10 of 14 from the line. The Penguins remain undefeated at 3-0.

YSU will put its perfect mark on the line Saturday against the Bearcats of Ohio University. The Penguins' next home game is Monday, Dec. 3, when they host Edinboro State University at 5:15 p.m.

 Playboy promotes opportunist sex and they participate in the humiliation of women and non-attractive men (by their standards of beauty). Your choice of how to spend student fees does the same if you use its name to try to draw YSU students to PAC programs.

Is your goal to educate people about sex? Do you wish to promote the labelling of winners and losers as a sex style?

I certainly hope I won't hear that classic dodge, "That's what the students want." Your opportunity is to present new options, educated options. YSU need not be the "fast food" of university diets. If we would all aspire to greater things, we could all have better quality in our lives and YSU could be a better university.
