Prexy says Dems ignored part of findings---

Young Dems await Pugsley's word

"We will take no further action until we hear from President Pugsley," Chuck Hettler, president of the Young Democratic Organization, said yesterday in reference to his earlier statement which sought an apology from the President.

The organization had asked for a retraction of the president's statement attacking the Young Dem officers for "an unauthorized and illegal reproduction of the University seal and the name of the University." Their written statement also asked for recognition of "the innocence of the organization" and an apology.

President Pugsley yesterday had "no comment" on whether or not he will reply to Hettler's request. "Mr. Hettler ignores the second finding of the Discipline Committee," the president said. The second finding was: "... that the officers of the Young Democratic Club were indiscreet and misleading in their use of the University name and seal in the layout of the heading of the political flier in question."

"In my opinion the two statements must be taken as a whole," President Pugsley said.

Hettler and the other Young Dem officers, Pat Galterio, Andy Bresko and Len Zientarski were found "not guilty of violation of university regulations as stated."

Hettler designed the fliers distributed by the YSU Young Dems. The fliers carried a cartoon caricaturing the Republican Party under the official YSU letterhead. The Young Dem Logo was in the upper left-hand corner of the flier.

The officers were charged under the social activity regulation which states: "No organization may use the University's name without the express authorization of the University except to identify the institutional affiliation. University approval or disapproval of any policy may not be stated or implied by any organization."

First Senate vote Fri. on student rep issue

The issue of student voting memberships in the University Senate will be offered as a constitutional amendment Friday at the Senate's December meeting, the Jambar learned yesterday.

The motion, if passed, will provide student members with the right to vote elected by each undergraduate school or college. The chairman of Student Council and the president of Student Government would be ex officio voting members, according to the motion to be made by the Constitution and Bylaws committee.

Seated would be two each from the School of Business Administration, the School of Education and the College of Arts

SC asks conference with administration

A request to University President Albert L. Pugsley for the scheduling of a conference for the exchange of ideas and viewpoints between the administration and students was passed at yesterday's Student Council meeting.

Student Council in an open letter invites the administration to attend and participate in a university conference tentatively scheduled for a Monday in January.

The letter states that since almost 95% of the students that graduate have never had the opportunity to meet President Pugsley or members of his administration, this conference will afford students time for asking questions, making suggestions, comments and constructive criticisms that may be very important to the future development of YSU.

Those asked to attend this meeting are: President Pugsley, Dr. John Coffelt, vice-president for administrative affairs; Dr. Earl Edgar, vice president for academic affairs; Joseph Rook, vice president for financial affairs; Dr. Darrell Rishel, dean of student affairs; Dr. Edith Painter, associate dean of student affairs; Dr. C. David Bertelsen, assistant dean of student affairs; John Bernacki, director of student activities; Joseph Luppert, assistant director of student activities; Colonel John Wales, director of financial aids; and Dr. Dally Hotchkiss, advisor to student council.

Present at the conference would also be all members of Student Council and Student Government, presidents of all chartered student organizations and all interested students.

In other business, Elaine Pochiro, vice chairman of Council, reported that she and Council Chairman Bill Jones discussed the results of the recent Student Council poll with President Pugsley. She noted that after a lengthy exchange of views he consented to take under careful consideration those areas with which there was the most expressed dissatisfaction.

In further action, a recommendation to the Academic Affairs Committee urged that students receiving a W representing withdrawal from a class, will have them delete from their final transcripts and that the period for dropping a class be extended from six to eight weeks.

The Miss YSU contest came under attack and resulted in passage of a motion urging its discontinuation and the funds used for this event be turned over to Financial Aids for the express purpose of scholarship funding.

It was noted that in the past year $2,000 was spent on this

P/F grading talks opened to students

The Senate Ad-hoc Committee on Pass-Fail has decided to open its working sessions to interested observers. This motion, made by student member Eric Brill, was passed unanimously at its first meeting last Wednesday.

The committee will also hold open hearings, in accordance with the Senate directives, that will be open for public participation.

Mrs. Mary B. Smith, Registrar, presented the findings of a survey conducted by the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers (AACRAO), in April, 1971.

According to the survey there is a definite movement in the institutions toward a modification of the traditional grading system, especially in the larger institutions with enrollment

CCM accepting reservations for "Emerge" retreat until Dec. 8

Reservations are now being taken for "Emerge," the Cooperative Campus Ministry's four-day retreat to Mt. Luther, Pa., December 27 to 30. Father Ray DiBlasio, CCM Director said that "Emerge" incorporates the best of contemporary approaches to sensitivity training, group interaction, and spontaneous religious experience.

According to the "Emerge" brochure the four days will include "stunning mountain scenery, fresh clean air, provocative films and music, small-group encounters, large-group dynamics, non-verbal exercises, and a solid, grass roots ecumenical effort."

Emerge will cost students $20 for lodging, 10 meals, snacks, and all program expenses.

Cars will leave the YSU Newman Center parking lot at 9 a.m. December 27 for Mt. Luther, Pa. and return by 4 p.m. Thursday.

Since there is only room for 100 people, anyone wishing to go is urged to get his reservation in early to the CCM, Newman Center, 26 W. Rayen Avenue, Youngstown.

The last day to make reservations is December 8.

Dr. Morris Slavin to speak on "Bloopers"

The History Club will feature Dr. Morris Slavin of the History Department who will present his lecture entitled, "More Bloopers" at 4 p.m. Wednesday, December 1, in the Pollock House.

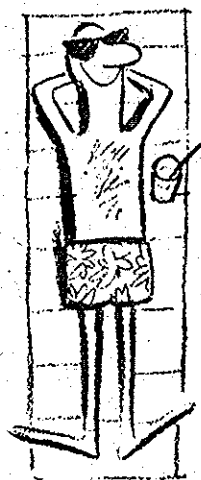

"More Bloopers," being presented by popular demand, is a sequel to Dr. Slavin's "Bloopers I Have Known" talk, which he delivered to the History Club a few years ago. "Bloopers" will be an exposé of some of the more amusing blunders committed by students on Dr. Slavin's exams.

The History Club also sponsors luncheon sessions in the Cardinal Room every Wednesday from 12 to 2. All History Club functions are open to the public.

Dr. Ward L. Miner, professor of English, has had his review of Maurice Edgar Coindreau's book, "The Time of William Faulkner: A French View of American Fiction," published in the November issue of the journal American Literature. A specialist in American literature and cultural history, Dr. Miner has written numerous articles and book reviews.

ISO advisor notes foreign students' woes

"Integrating into campus life is often a problem for international students at YSU," Mrs. Freda K. McDonald, advisor to international students, said yesterday.

Too often foreign students don't become involved in student activities not because of a language barrier but because they are unfamiliar with life on a US campus and are unsure as to how to get into the swing of things, she added.

Presently there are 300 international students on campus from all over the world, with the majority from India. Numerous students also come from the Middle East and Thailand.

Usually the students come to YSU because of its excellent Engineering School or because someone they know from their country came to YSU and liked it, Mrs. McDonald said.

All students are invited to join the International Students Organization which has two social evenings each month. "Getting to know persons from various countries can be an enlightening and interesting experience," noted Mrs. McDonald.

YSU students can lend a hand to area aged this Christmas

YSU students can express their holiday spirit through Operation Helping Hand, a volunteer service to patch and repair homes and appliances for senior citizens and others who are unable to help themselves.

The project is run by the Menonite Volunteer Service, headed by Rev. Charles McDowell, and consists of five volunteer workers, all from out-of-state.

The volunteers have been at work in Youngstown since last August rebuilding porches, plastering ceilings, patching roofs, and repairing appliances.

The volunteer service needs a helping hand, though. Because the operation is on a volunteer basis, they receive no monetary pay for their work. The workers provide needed equipment and materials through moonlighting odd jobs in the evenings.

Rev. McDowell had, in the past, received financial commitments from local churches, but so far the service has received only $25.

The Samaritan workers have done work on more than 10 houses since August, and could have done much more if supplied with enough materials and manpower, according to Enos Kipfer, one of the five volunteer workers.

To help alleviate their problem, the volunteer service has asked for skilled and unskilled help from the Youngstown community, including YSU students.

Anyone interested in donating either manpower or money should get in touch with either Rev. McDowell or Enos Kipfer at the Volunteer Service unit attached to the Rockview Referral Agency at 933½ High St.

Students on Senate?

The question of whether or not there will be voting student membership on the YSU Senate will again come before the Senate. The last time similar measure was presented, it failed the necessary two-thirds majority by a slim margin. Let us hope that the Senate, in its wisdom, does not repeat this debacle.

It is hard to guess why the last amendment failed, since there was no floor discussion, and there were none opposed to the Constitutional amendment during the preliminary floor vote. Perhaps the opponents were not willing to discuss or reveal their views, perhaps they were absent.

The question occurs why students should be represented on the Senate. The Senate votes on all social regulations, curriculum offerings and requirements, registration, and other matters which have a direct and immediate impact on the lives of YSU students. In fact, such matters comprise the bulk of the Senate's business. It seems only fair that students have a vote in general questions that affect them. It also seems fair that students, as members of the university, have at least token representation on the body that often forges policy for the university.

It should be acknowledged that eleven student members of the Senate not mean any earth-shaking change in the constitution, direction, or policies of the Senate or the university. Neither would student membership cause any drastic improvement in student life here.

But eleven student members among the 61 elected faculty and 61 members who serve in their administrative capacities might give students some meaningful voice in the operation of this university, and in the policies which daily affect their lives.

Letters to the Editor
Wants to see more Hettleriana

To the Editor of the Jambar:

I am writing in relation to the infinite number of stories the Jambar seems to print about one Chuck Hettler.

I am a transfer student and this is only my second year at YSU, so I missed out on the many early stories about Hettler and his rise to campus-wide prominence. I am sure it is an interesting story.

My first recollection is the Phi Delta Theta incident of last year and Hettler's removal from the chair in Student Government. Then it was his appeal and his restoration to his Council position. Then we got the Chuck Hettler this and the Chuck Hettler that stories leading up to the most recent fiasco concerning President Pugsley's reprimand of Hettler.

Then the story of how the Discipline Committee found him innocent because ignorance is an excuse in the eyes of the law when you have a chance to rap the President a good one.

Now Hettler expects a public apology from Pugsley (which also made headlines), because the Discipline Committee says he truly was ignorant (of the university code).

Well, I thought Hettler was guilty and I voiced my opinion. Now that it's obvious that Hettler is innocent I retract that statement and apologize to Chuck Hettler for saying bad things about him, whoever he is.

I'm anxiously awaiting the next episode in Hettler's life which I'm sure the Jambar will be sure to publish.

I've been wondering also, upon Hettler's graduation, does the Jambar intend to publish two or three issues refreshing us all of Hettler's many contributions to YSU?

Maybe you could even secure publishing rights to his biography. Please keep us informed.

Cites Kennywood lot perils

To the Editor of the Jambar:

The parking lot on Kennywood, behind Elm Street School, is a safety hazard.

It is impossible to see either left or right when leaving the parking area. Students are forced to play Russian Roulette since Kennywood is a two-way street.

Besides this, the cars parked along one side of the street and the vehicles used for the construction of the Phys. Ed. building on the other, create a narrow lane for one car to maneuver in, let alone two.

Would it be possible to convert Kennywood into a one-way street? Is it unreasonable to ask that the lot attendant assist people leaving the parking area? A solution to this existing problem would save both crumpled bumpers and frayed nerves.

Says Death Row is a lonely place

To the Editor of the Jambar:

I am confined to death row under the sentence of death.

I do not get much mail from the outside, and since mail is the most important thing that happens to brighten up an otherwise lonely existence, I am very anxious to hear from any of the students at YSU.

My interests are many and varied, so I want to hear from any or all students regardless of what their interests or activities are.

I would particularly like to hear how the students feel about capital punishment.

It is for my own personal interest and well being to know how the majority of the student body feels. I have a very valid reason for getting as many answers as I can.

I intend to write a critique against capital punishment and I feel it should contain all (or as many as I can obtain) different viewpoints on this subject. It is also my intention to write a novel concerning life on death row.

On a more personal plane, I think I should tell you a little more about myself. I was con-

Parking deck nears finish

The new student parking deck now in construction on the corner of Lincoln Avenue and Elm street is being built at less than breakneck speed.

The main cause for the apparent slowdown, according to Mr. Nick Leonelli, director of planning, has been the recent sub-freezing temperatures, which prevent the pouring of structural concrete.

Mr. Leonelli said that the workmen are experiencing no other serious difficulties, though, and that the deck is slated for completion by the middle of next quarter.

Mr. Leonelli said that the new structure will provide parking space for 1250 cars and will alleviate the parking problem.

The parking deck, styled much in the same manner as the Strouss' parkade downtown, will consist of three full levels and a half-capacity level on the top.

Mr. Leonelli said that there will be no elevator in the structure, but six separate staircases, one at each corner and one at each end, are already built. The top level will have no roof, but will be kept clear of snow by the maintenance crews.

Besides providing constant night lighting, two watchman's shanties will be located outside the structure for additional security.

Mr. Phil Rogers, assistant to the vice president for financial affairs, said that as yet the number of parking attendants to man the decks is undecided. He said that more attendants will be used during peak hours.

FAC election results to be announced Fri.

Results of the election of general membership and chairman to the YSU Faculty Appeals Committee will be announced Friday, December 3, Vera Jenkins, secretary of the Senate, said yesterday.

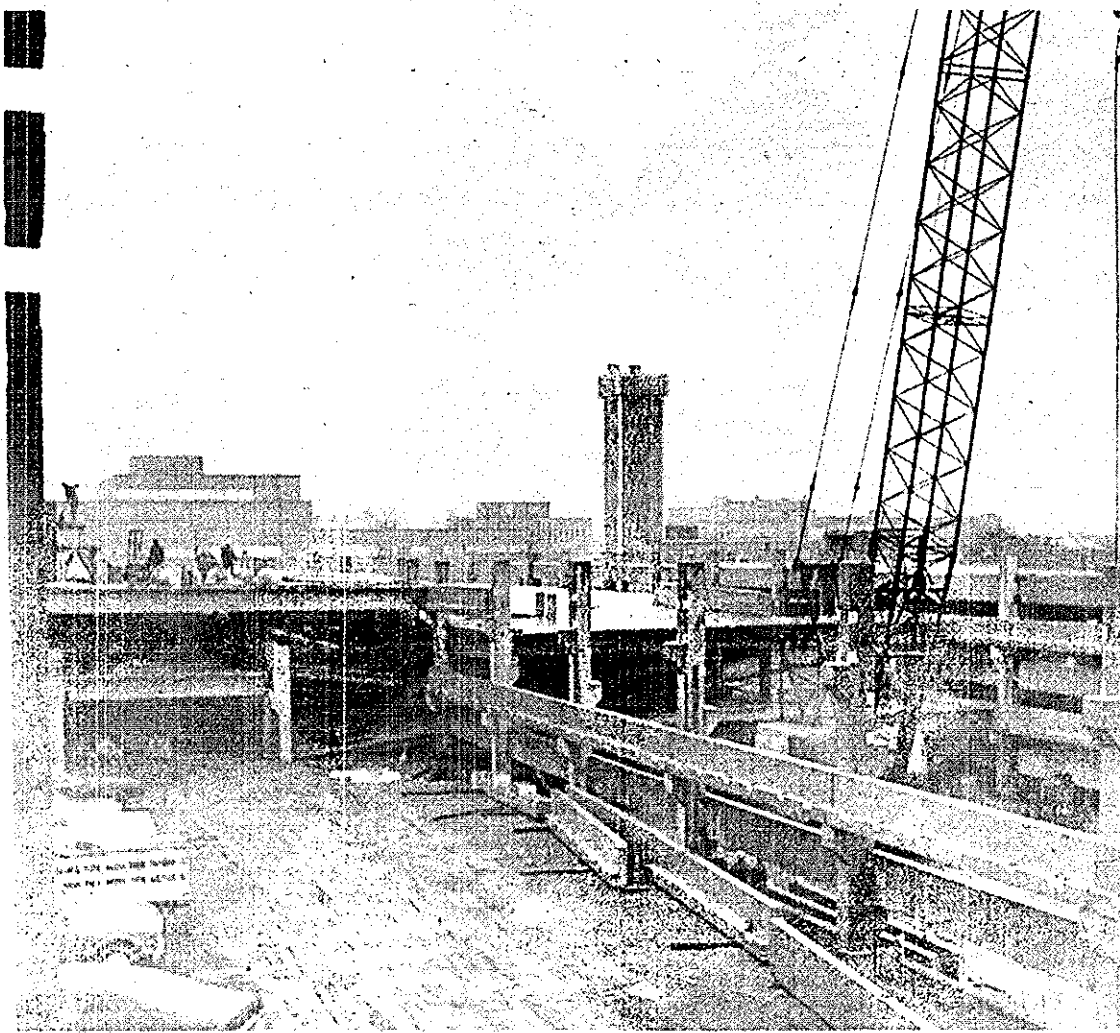

The holidays delayed the counting of the ballots this week.

Those running for Chairman are E. Terry Deiderick, Robert R. Hare, Joseph J. Koss, and Frank J. Tarantine. One is to be elected.

For General Membership (3 to be elected) the nominations were Frederick J. Blue, Joseph Kirschner, Thelma S. Miner, Roger T. Overberg, Esotto Pellegrini, Charles L. Reid, and William E. Walsh.

The purpose of the committee is to act as an agency for the hearing of faculty grievances received from full and limited service faculty members, including those faculty serving as full or part-time administrators.

The Committee will also have the responsibility to make recommendations for improvement of the operation of the University.

PARKING DECKS ON THE RISE - Due to adverse weather conditions construction on the YSU parking decks is not progressing as rapidly as was expected. Despite the delay, the structure is set to be completed by the middle of next quarter.

Media Center expands when T&CC built

When the new Technical and Community College building is constructed and the new library is built, the YSU Media Center will be able to offer the faculty and students of YSU one of the best facilities in the country according to Dr. Winsten Eshleman, Media Center director.

The present facilities now lack the space and equipment necessary for full operation, Dr. Eshleman said.

When the new facilities are opened, the Media Center will have half of the basement of the TCC building for its offices, TV studios, service rooms, storage, and supporting facilities. Two thousand square feet of space will be allotted in the new library for 80 audio-visual carrels. The audio-visual carrels, now lacking at YSU, will enable students to hear tapes, records, see film strips, slides, and short films without disturbing other students.

The new equipment to be purchased by the Media Center will probably cost about $150,000. An additional eleven full-time employees—technicians and secretaries—will be added when the new facilities are opened.

The expanded facilities will allow TV programs to be produced more easily on campus. Videotaped lessons will replace some lectures.

Dr. Eshleman said he foresees an expanded use of audio-visual aids in classrooms at YSU with the quality of the aids improving and the education of the student benefiting.

STOREHOUSE OF HISTORY — The stately Arms Museum on Wick Avenue remains as it was when originally built in 1905. Now operated by The Mahoning Valley Historical Society, it contains original furnishings and relics of the early Youngstown area.

Arms Museum houses history, not weapons

Chances are that very few people at YSU could explain what the Arms Museum is, despite the fact that it has stood on Wick Avenue less than one block from the university for eleven years.

Contrary to popular belief, the Arms Museum is far from display of arms. Rather, it is a storehouse of local history operated by the Mahoning Valley Historical Society.

According to Carl F. Chuey, instructor of biology at YSU and one of the vice presidents of the Arms Museum, the house itself was built by the Arms family in 1905 and remained their family home until 1960. At that time Mrs. Olive Arms willed the house to the Historical Society for use as a museum, along with two trust funds for its maintenance. This was done with the stipulation that the first floor of the house remain as it was at the time of her death, with all the original Arms family furnishings. These include beautiful Italian mosaic inlaid floors, oriental rugs, and priceless crystal and silver. Mrs. Arms designed much of the wrought iron work in the house personally, including door trims, fireplaces, and fixtures, and had it made to her specifications by area craftsmen.

The basement and second floor were converted into "show-rooms" housing artifacts from early Youngstown area history. These include articles ranging from Indian scalps, head-dresses, and beadwork to antique apple-corer, rifles, and sewing machines. Perhaps one of the more interesting novelties is a rug woven by the only survivor of Custer's last stand as he waited to be rescued from the battlefield. He fashioned the rug from the navy blue uniforms of the dead soldiers.

The museum itself is maintained not only by the two trust funds, but also by an annual $10,000-$15,000 supplied by the County Commissioners.

victed in Lucas County, Toledo, Ohio for the murder of my wife of four months. As to whether or not I was justifiably convicted is not the important issue of the letter. I will say in all honesty, that I was not!

Of course, most all of the men on Death Row say they were wrongly convicted. And not so oddly enough, they were. I don't believe there is one person on Death Row that received a fair trial.

I don't want to digress too much, as you are probably restricted to space. If the students who write to me are interested in carrying on further correspondence, it would be helpful if they would enclose a stamp in their letters.

reviews Butler Area Annual

by Ted Brachfeld

In an attempt to create more exposure for the arts in the Youngstown area, the Butler Institute of American Art opened its 33rd Area Artists Annual on November 12. The show will run until December 5th.

This year's area annual offers 162 works selected from 672 entries. The show is cramped into the two upper galleries in the south wing. It is obvious that there were either too many works or not enough galleries.

In either event the show comes off poorly in terms of viewing the works.

The show was layed out and hung by Greg Rossi, area artist and assistant to the curator at the Butler as well as a graduate of YSU.

When asked to comment on the way he layed out the show, Rossi said that the layout was not meant as a personal slight on any community artists but rather the best solution he could find to the problems that the show presented.

He went on to explain that because of the orientation of the works presented, the show divides itself, and in order to do justice to one part he had to sacrifice the other part.

Consequently the large non-objective paintings come off much better than the prints and smaller paintings. Unfortunately they still are ill-presented.

It's very difficult to do justice to an abstract painting when your field of vision overlaps with another work. Therefore, adequate space is critical for proper exhibition of a non-objective painting. This was not done at the Area Annual, nor could it have been done with that many pieces in that small a space.

Obviously the contents of the show have suffered from the arrangement. Even with this handicap the show's works are strong and diverse.

The selection of pieces to be hung was done by Georgi Daskaloff and Nadine Pardo, two artists from New York City.

They seemed to have kept in mind the fact that this is an area show, and should reflect the artistic activity from the community as a whole.

There were eight awards totaling over $1100 in cash and gift certificates. The judging for the prizes was a combined effort of both the Butler staff and Friends of American Art.

First prize, a purchase award of $400 given by the Friends of American Art, went to Russ Maddick for an untitled acrylic, and his watercolor intitled "New Blue." The acrylic painting is an outstanding example of color field technique. It is unusual in that it deals with dark value colors.

The more traditional approach to this type of painting is to use highly saturated bright colors of a high value.

The high saturation and the bright colors tend to make the painting come off very well, and in some cases the field painting becomes totally overwhelming.

This is not the case when using the darker value colors. These colors often remain flat and dull, no matter how well saturated they are.

But Maddick has managed to pull this off quite well. His manipulation of earth colors and a very simple but sophisticated imagery blends to create an outstanding piece.

In fact the piece is so sophisticated that it comes off almost primitive, or primordial in nature. The painting well deserves the first place prize.

The rest of the show includes works by both students and faculty of YSU. Alex Di Giacomo, a limited service faculty member of the art department, won a prize for his drawing intitled "Crab-apple Tree."

All in all the show is a good representation of the art of the Youngstown area. What's more important is the wide participation by area artists in the show.

It would seem that the Butler's efforts are beginning to pay off, and that a new and stronger artistic awareness may be coming to Youngstown. Future area shows should reflect this in the space allotted to them.

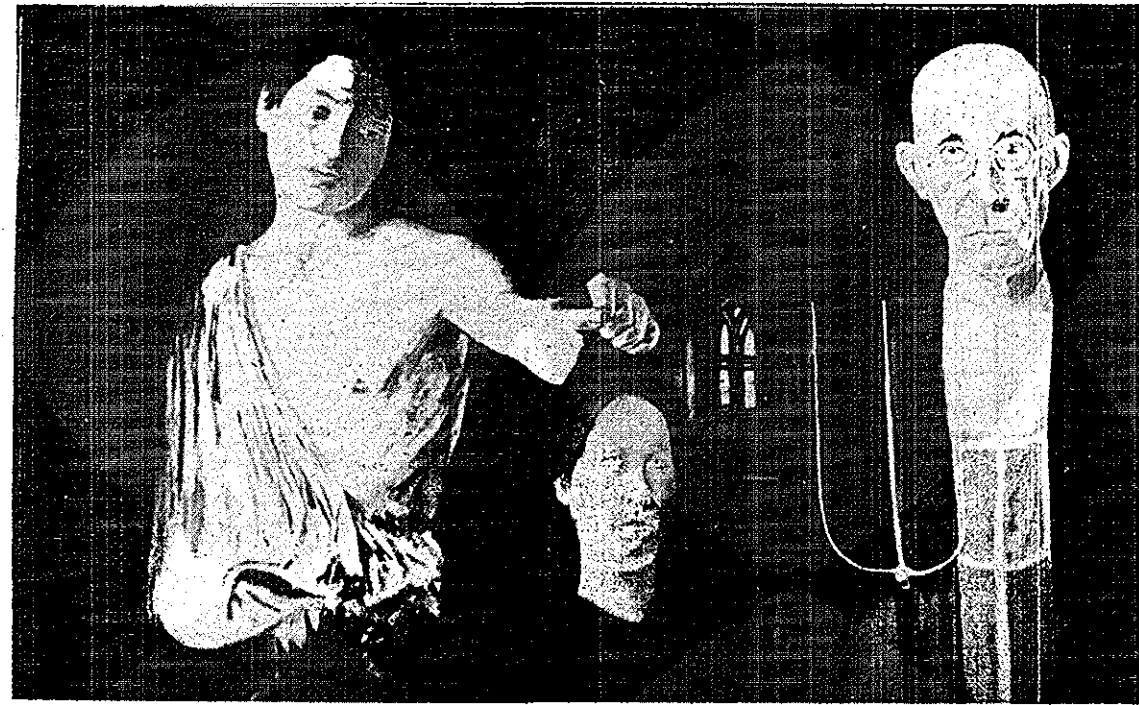

Albums

Smash Your Head Against the Wall by John Entwistle

by Norm Bush

Over the years John Entwistle has experienced the same problem George Harrison experienced with the Beatles. Harrison wrote some brilliant material, only to be overshadowed by the other two geniuses in the group.

John Entwistle plays bass for The Who, and has spent most of his career in the shadow of Peter Townshend. His sole contribution to Who's Next was "My Wife," one of the finest songs on that album, which has to rank as one of the year's best. If you've ever seen The Who perform live, Entwistle is the one who stands still, looking bored, while Townshend, Daltry, and Moon are leaping about, swinging microphones, and making faces respectively. In short it is Entwistle who holds the group together on stage. However he is totally out front on this album.

The album opens with a Who-like rocker, "My Size," from which comes the phrase "smash your head against the wall." Entwistle supplies his own one-man horn section in "Pick Me Up (Big Chicken)" and "What Kind of People are They?"

Two beautiful, almost Beatle-like ballads, "What are We Doing Here?" and "Heaven and Hell," round out side one. "Heaven and Hell" is the high point of the album and certainly must rank as a classic. It is well worth the price of the album for this song alone.

Side two is more of the same, very personal lyrics with flowing melodies. It is softer than side one, but no less fascinating. The album's finale, "I Believe in Everything," is another masterpiece.

Like Who's Next, this album doesn't have a bad cut on it. The listener is never let down throughout nine songs. John Entwistle with this, his first solo album, has emerged as a brilliant songwriter and a major talent.

Cahoots by The Band

I really tried my hardest to like this album. After all, it's got a beautiful cover, the songs' lyrics are included, the production is flawless, the sound crystal clear, and the arrangements and playing couldn't be any better. Only the album's material keeps it from being a great record.

Only three of the eleven tracks come close to reaching the brilliance of songs on The Band and Stage Fright, the former being one of the great albums of all time.

Robbie Robertson's songs no longer have the "roots" which previous songs displayed. On several tracks the group uses a brass section for backing, and these attempts fail miserably. On "Life is a Carnival," the album's opener, they sound more like Sly & Family than The Band.

The three successful tracks are Bob Dylan's "When I paint My Masterpiece," and Robertson's "Where Do We Go From Here?" and "Smoke Signal."

"Where Do We Go From Here?" is The Band's plea for the ecology and "Smoke Signal" is just plain good old rock & roll in the tradition of "Look Out Cleveland."

Cahoots is the Band's least successful effort to date. In order for The Band to be successful, the material must be restored to the brilliant level reached on The Band.

Hopefully their next album will be a unified effort with a common theme, for this is when The Band is at its best.

Soccer Club boots to success; ends first full season at 5-3

The YSU Soccer Club concluded its first full season with a 5 win 3 loss record through an eight game intercollegiate slate that included six varsity and two junior varsity teams.

This was accomplished with an allocation of about $500 from Student Government. To supplement the Club's budget, participants refereed intramural soccer matches and donated their earnings to the Club.

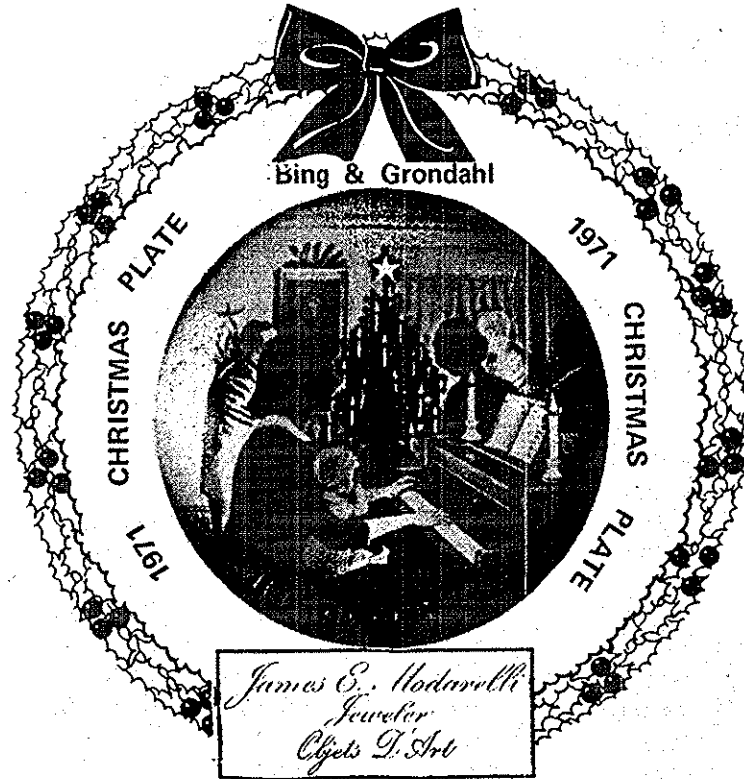

The offense, led by high-scoring center-forward Chet Sywarungsymun, scored a total of 26 goals for the season, which represents a Club record of 4.5 goals per game. Sywarungsymun, senior from Thailand and co-captain of the team, scored 14 goals in 7 games and ranks near the top among Ohio collegiate soccer players in both total goals scored and goals per game. His record of having scored in every game and of scoring 3 goals on 3 different occasions is an enviable one and represents an accomplishment that will be difficult to surpass. Sywarungsymun is one of four seniors who will be lost to the team through graduation beginning next fall. The others are Angelo Kangelos (center full-back), Varwoot Chongchareonrat (left wing) and Noi Devasadin (fullback).

The club members, composed of students of many nationalities, include: Goalie Mai Kasemsuvan (Thailand); Fullbacks Don Perry (USA), Angelo Kangelos (Greece), Fred Kaufman (USA) and co-captain of the team, Peter Fabian (Czechoslovakia); Noi Devasadin (Thailand), Prasopsook Panrungroj (Thailand), Alfredo Merchuri (Argentina), Kemchat Tarantagul (Thailand), Halfbacks Kemchat Kultan (Thailand), Randy Henderson (USA), Sam Chanthrisuriyavong (Thailand), Forwards Johnny Gangone (Italy), Anutr Phuphatana (Thailand), Vendelin Tomko (Czechoslovakia), Kam Kosalan (Thailand), Rafael Talavera (Peru), Chet Sywarungsymun (Thailand) and Varwoot Chongchareonrat from Thailand. Manager of the Club was Bunpoat Apichatabutra from Thailand.

Through the Winter Quarter, the Club will practice indoors in preparation for the sixth annual Akron U. indoor soccer tournament. It was at this tournament last spring that the Soccer Club, competing with such national powerhouses as Hartwick, Buffalo State, Elizabethtown and Akron, achieved prominence by having one of its players (Rafael Talavera) selected to the prestigious All-Tournament team which included several soccer All-Americans.
