Party stand-ins debate 1988 election issues

By DEBORA SHAULIS
Jambar Editor

Only the so-called "spin doctors" were missing from "The Debate of '88" Tuesday in Kilcawley Center's Chestnut Room.

Of the more than 200 people who attended the debate on presidential election issues, many wore buttons and carried signs in support of their favorite candidate. The audience was vocal throughout the two-hour session, often interrupting the speakers as they tried to make statements.

The crowd's enthusiasm didn't daunt Dr. William Binning, political science, and Atty. Richard McLaughlin, a member of YSU's Board of Trustees, who represented the Republican and Democratic presidential candidates, respectively.

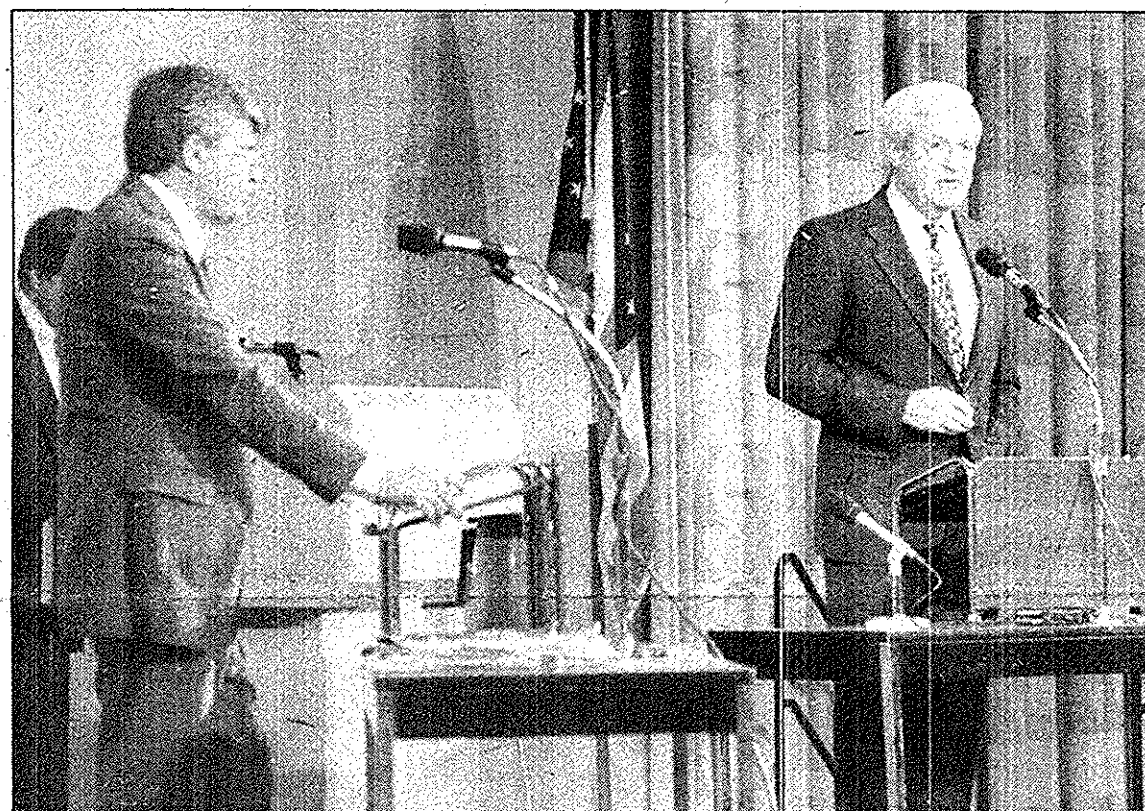

George Bush "represents what has been a very successful administration," said Binning. Voting for Bush would be "voting for a continuation of these policies and programs," he added.

During the eight years President Reagan has held office, said McLaughlin, "the middle class has taken it on the chin. If they sat down and thought...they'd see they have a real tough road ahead."

Prosperity was a key issue addressed by the debaters, who were asked several questions on the fairness of the economic system during the Reagan years.

Denise Sarigianopoulos, president of the Economics Club and one of four panelists, asked if Bush would be willing to raise workers' wages in relation to consumer costs.

Parking decks home of two recent mishaps

By JONI DOBRAN
Jambar News Editor

Incidents in the YSU parking decks were of prominence in the Campus Police report, including a broken window and an auto accident.

On Wednesday, Oct. 19, a student parking attendant discovered a shattered window on the 3D level of the M-2 (Lincoln Avenue) parking deck, the report stated.

The window was located in the southwest stairwell. The report said the officer in attendance believed it was broken by the bumper of a car crashing into it.

With support, alcoholics fight stigmas

Last in a series.

By DEBORA SHAULIS
Jambar Editor

People who admit they have an addiction to drugs and/or alcohol have many stereotypes to conquer, says one of the founding members of YSU's Substance Abuse Awareness & Support Group.

Joan Firestine, who helped found this organization SAASG three years ago this quarter, said SAASG is a place for recovering alcoholics and drug addicts to find support and understanding. The group has its own lounge in rooms 208 and 209 of the Wick Motel, and regular office hours are kept by staff members.

"The success rate for staying sober isn't high anyway," said Firestine. "It's worse without support."

When students suffer from test anxiety they want to go to a local bar to unwind, Firestine said. A recovering addict can't do that — and that makes support vital, she added.

"Our primary purpose is to support each other," she said.

That support also is helpful when dealing with people who have stereotypes of alcoholics. Most people think of an alcoholic as a messy, staggering street-type person, yet this person constitutes only 3 percent of the alcoholic population, Firestine said.

"Many are professional people, housewives, mothers," she said. "They come from every walk of life."

Once people do admit their addiction to alcohol, many are treated as if they have a contagious disease, she added.

It was problems like these that prompted Firestine and others to start a

Yes, Bernie Kosar will start Sunday, said Cleveland Browns tight end Ozzie Newsome while on campus Tuesday afternoon, but Newsome spent much of his speech warning people about the evils of alcohol and drugs.

Newsome spoke to the crowd of over 150 people as part of National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week, which was sponsored by YSU's Substance Abuse Awareness & Support Group, Student Government and Substance Abuse Services.

Service seeks to aid in major, career decisions

By BRIAN J. MACALA
Jambar Managing Editor

For some YSU students, college is the place they want to be; the problem is determining the course of study to be followed.

The problem of determining and declaring a major is a real one for some students. To aid them in choosing a possible major, Counseling and Health Services is running a series of undetermined ed majors workshops.

This is the third time that Counseling and Health Services has run this series of four workshops, according to George Letchworth of Counseling and Health Services. The workshops have been held previously in winter, 1988 and spring, 1987. Presently, the service is looking to see which quarter the workshops will be the most effective, Letchworth said.

"There are about 3,000 undetermined majors at YSU," said Letchworth. "Of this total, 700 to 800 are listed as undetermined until they can get into their program."

According to Pat Jones, a graduate assistant in Counseling and Health Services, you can take up to two years to pick a major. She said until you decide which major you wish to pursue, it may be a good idea to take classes in university requirements to fill out your schedule. She added that in some programs though, you may not be able to take as long, as they require more requirements and less time for electives.

"Undetermined majors need really good advisership," Jones said. "You can be in a program, decide to switch and lose some of your credits."

She said that many students are afraid to enter a specific major due to requirements in that field, such as math or science, and that some students may have a real anxiety toward taking these classes.

"There are many workshops to help in study skills — math anxiety, test anxiety, etc.," said Jones.

Bright lines aid in study habits

By GARY COUPLAND
Jambar Reporter

Those bright highlighted lines in students' textbooks may be more helpful than once imagined.

The Reading and Study Skills Lab presented the workshop "Marking Your Text" last Tuesday in the Kilcawley Carnation Room. The workshop was one of several that have been and will continue to be conducted through next week.

Linda Krieger of the School of Education taught the textbook marking workshop. She said that many students are hesitant about marking their textbooks because they are not used to it and because they were not allowed to in high school. She also said that some students don't mark their books because they believe they won't be able to return them to the bookstore.

Krieger and other faculty of the Reading and Study Skills Center, which is located in the School of Education, provide suggestions and assistance to students about marking their textbooks. Krieger said "some students don't mark enough in their books while others mark too much. We try to get students in the middle of the two extremes so they aren't marking too much or too little."

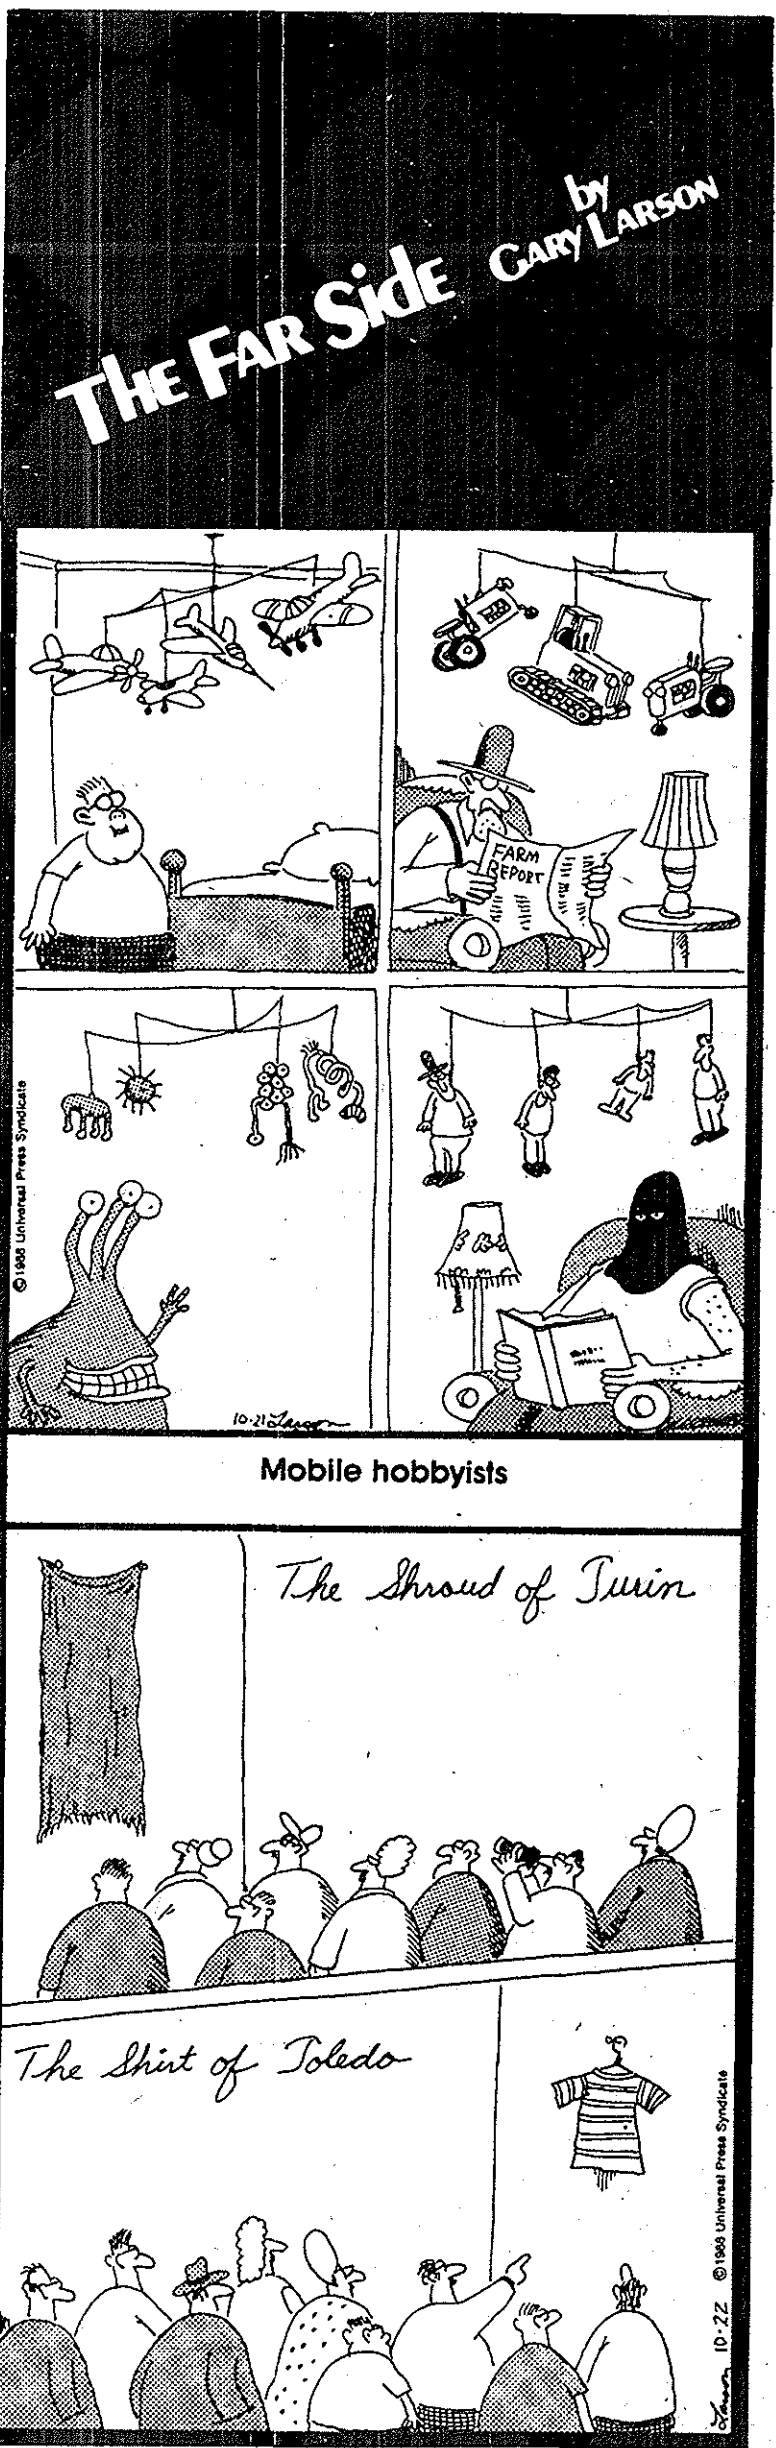

Some of the suggestions Krieger made at the workshop included using double lines under words or phrases that signify main ideas and using single lines under words and phrases that signify supporting material.

Krieger also said that students should read a paragraph or section through without underlining and then read the material a second time and underline what is most important.

Krieger mentioned that it isn't necessary to mark complete sentences. She said that key Newsome, during his speech in Kilcawley Center's Chestnut Room, cited the NFL as an example of why education at an early age is one of the leading ways to stop the abuse of drugs and alcohol.

"A majority of the guys [in the NFL] that did drugs probably did drugs in college," Newsome said. "We've got to get the word out to those in the elementary, junior high and high schools."

He said that when people decide not to abuse drugs and alcohol they shouldn't stop there, they should share their information so that others can benefit.

Newsome said that there are too many examples in today's society that show drugs and alcohol are dangerous — citing Len Bias, former teammates Don Rogers, who died shortly after Bias of a cocaine overdose, and Chip Banks, who was picked up on drug charges last week in Atlanta.

He also mentioned Atlanta Falcons defensive back David Croupp, who died two weeks ago, as another example of the dangers of drugs.

"He died of an overdose of cocaine," said Newsome. "They said he died of only a gram of cocaine. But that was the fatal gram."

Peer pressure, Newsome said, is the leading reason for drug and alcohol abuse among youths.

"It's hard in today's society to stay away from drugs and alcohol," said Newsome, who recalled the same problem during his college days at University of Alabama.

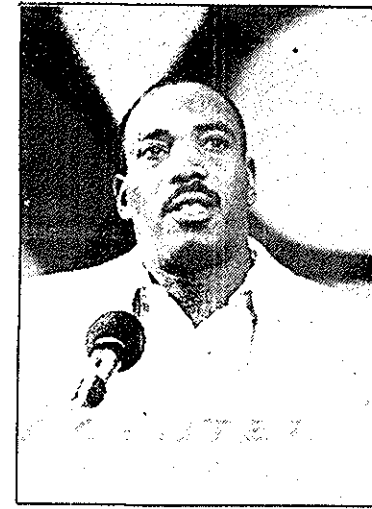

Newsome also said people shouldn't resolve their problems with drugs and alcohol.

"The answers to the problems with your parents, the problems with your grades, the problems with your boyfriend or girlfriend, aren't at the bottom of that beer," Newsome said.

On the NFL's drug policy, Newsome said more has to be done than to suspend someone for a month after a player tests positive for drugs and then allow him to come back.

"To suspend Lawrence Taylor for 30 days and then to bring him back doesn't solve the problem," said Newsome.

He said the NFL shouldn't

just suspend the player and then forget about him after he returns; the league should have an "after care" program.

"We've got to make these guys get involved in a support group," Newsome said.

Newsome said he was disappointed that NFL teams were interested in Ben Johnson, the Canadian who lost his Olympic gold medal because he tested positive for steroids.

"That just goes to show you what the NFL is all about — winning and business," Newsome said.

Editorial

Winners. . .

— The Economics Club, for its time and effort in sponsoring a successful political debate Tuesday, as well as the debaters and panelists who participated.

— YSU's Substance Abuse Awareness & Support Group, Student Government and Substance Abuse Services, for providing an outstanding week of lectures, workshops and films in conjunction with National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week.

— Those involved in the renovation of the Wick-Pollock Inn. Once construction is complete, it will be a fine — and beautiful — addition to the YSU campus.

— Dr. David Robinson, Dean Sweetkind and others responsible for securing funding for YSU's forensics team and making a place for academia at the University.

— The Homecoming Committee, which deserves to be congratulated for doing a great job with this year's festivities. Most students probably don't realize that planning begins four to six months in advance and should appreciate the hard work that goes into Homecoming.

and Sinners

— Vandals who stole the Substance Abuse Services banner from the top level of the Lincoln Deck recently. The banner, which was purchased by Student Government for $100, probably wasn't seen by most of the student body, as it was hung over the weekend and stolen by Monday.

— Employees of the parking decks who, despite the fact that several spaces are open on various levels, leave the "deck full" signs lit.

— People who want to voice complaints yet aren't brave enough to sign their own names to them. The Jambar continues to receive letters on various campus "problems" from non-existent or anonymous students. As far as The Jambar is concerned, there is no problem to report if people are afraid to support their beliefs.

— People who ignore No Smoking signs posted in certain areas of campus.

Classics can tend to get a little old at times

As my friend and fellow editor Brian J. Macala said in this past Tuesday's Jambar, he wants to see a comeback of classic TV shows.

Well, lately there has been a comeback of another "classic" and, frankly, I'm pretty sick and tired of it. What is it? Classic rock radio.

Sure, I'll be the first to admit that when I'm at home I listen to WRRQ, CD-106 or WBBC.

Why? First of all, the music on these stations is fantastic stuff, but there's probably not a song on there I haven't already heard and not a lyric or riff that hasn't been lifted by some other aspiring — yet greedy — band.

Secondly, I really, really dislike Top 40 music, so I refuse to listen to stations like Hot FM 101 or the new Z 96 (and isn't that starting to get a little old?)

The Youngstown area has three oldies/classic stations. Isn't this just about two too many?

Where's the jazz music? What about all the great alternative music that's out there?

Pittsburgh has an alternative music station, WXXP, but it's at the same frequency as WMMS, which over-powers it. And by the way, didn't the once mighty Buz-zard really get its wings clipped by turning wimpy?

JONI DOBRAN
News Editor

You may be asking why, although I'm complaining about this abundance of oldies/classic stations, I still listen to them.

Well, since I don't like Top 40, what other choice do I have?

At least most of the oldies and the classic rock songs

Letters

Find fault with parking attendant

Dear Editor,

We are writing this letter regarding one of the female parking attendants. There seems to be a definite problem when it is time for students to leave the Lincoln Parking deck. Nearly every day, it takes twenty minutes to exit the parking deck when this particular attendant is directing the traffic.

It is not so much that this person can not direct traffic, but that there is an obvious lack of concentration on the number of cars passing at that time. When exiting the deck, it seems that this person forgets how to count when twenty cars are allowed to descend from the upper levels and only a few from the side, causing massive congestion in the parking deck. Only then do we realize that there is a problem.

Should we require a special course for our new parking attendants, teaching them how to count?

Don't get us wrong; we have nothing against female parking attendants. But this situation reflects badly on the rest of the female population who hold jobs traditionally held by men.

Jambar collects election ballots

With more than two weeks to go before the General Election, students and staff are stating their opinion as to the outcome of this year's voting through The Jambar's mock election poll.

All students, faculty and staff are invited to participate in this poll. Participants should indicate their choices for president of the United States and senator on the accompanying form. Candidates other than those named may be written in as well.

Ballots may be dropped off at The Jambar offices, located in Kilcawley Center West, or the Student Government offices, located on the second floor of Kilcawley Center. Ballots also may be sent through campus mail.

Participation in this mock election is strictly confidential. Results will be published in the Nov. 1 issue of The Jambar, which will include a special section on college students and the 1988 elections. All ballots must be received by noon Monday, Oct. 31, to be counted in the final results.

have a little style, a little pep, a little originality.

I'm like a lot of people — I'm into the Stones, the Doors, Simon and Garfunkel and I adore the Beatles.

But where is the Cult? Why can't we hear the Smithereens? And who has ever even heard of the Cat Heads?

There are also several talented local groups who are struggling to have their vinyl releases heard, and they're receiving very little help from local radio. The Sharkbites, Infidels and Sackville are just three of these.

WRRO plays alternative and local music late at night, but it's just one tiny station trying to bring a little variety into a big business.

As Brian would create his own television station, CTV (Classic TV), I too would create my own radio station — WPGM (We Play Good Music).

There would be nothing but alternative music, some jazz, music from local bands and rock 'n roll. I think the kids would really go for it.

YSU student found dead; suicide is cause

YSU — The Mahoning County coroner has ruled suicide in the death of Richard William Zell, freshman, CAST, who was found dead Oct. 7 in a pickup truck on Detroit Avenue.

Zell, 31, of 12921 Springfield Road, New Springfield, died to death as the result of a self-inflicted stab wound in his right arm, according to a coroner's investigator. A six-inch steak knife was found in the truck when Zell was discovered.

Zell was born July 3, 1958, in Youngstown, a son of Richard Sr. and Ruth Ann Miller Zell. He was a 1975 graduate of Wilson High School and had lived in San Diego from 1978-1982, when he returned to New Springfield. He was a member of St. Nicholas Church.

Besides his mother of Youngstown, he leaves his grandmother, Mrs. Ann Zell of Youngstown; a sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Lundy of Youngstown; and a brother, Ronald of San Diego.

Arrangements were handled by the Davidson-Becker Funeral Home, Struthers.

Vandal destroys video games

By The College Press Service

Someone is conducting an anti-war campaign against video game machines in and around the Indiana University campus.

In two calls to IU's campus newspaper, an anonymous man said he vandalized a video game called "Contra" at Indiana's Memorial Center to protest the Reagan administration's "illegal and immoral human rights violations" in Central America.

He called the game an "affront to human dignity," adding he wanted to make sure no one would profit from it.

The caller also took credit for damaging a "Contra" game at a video arcade near the IU campus.

The caller, who jammed gum into the machines' coin slots, said the campus game would be "permanently" destroyed if it were removed.

group here. Firestine said they began by reserving rooms in Kilcawley Center on a regular basis and meeting just to talk. "The University saw we were serious because we followed through on what we wanted to do," she said.

SAASC is now funded through Student Government, though group members conduct fundraising drives as well. Approximately 25 people currently are active members in the group, Firestine said.

The support group has succeeded in removing recovering alcoholics and addicts from isolation, Firestine said. Many members of SAASC have become involved in campus activities since joining the group, she said.

SAASC's mission is to promote awareness as well as provide support, and they fulfill that mission by participating in National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week each fall. In addition, Firestine said, the group hopes to sponsor a few speakers during the academic year.

SAASC doesn't reach every person it comes in contact with, Firestine said, but knowing that such a group exists on campus can help as well.

"Even if they (students) choose not to get help at this time, it's a seed planted," she said.

New YSU spirit machine in need of name

By JONI DOBRAN
Jambar News Editor

The presidential election isn't the only issue of concern at YSU, as voting begins to find a name for the University's newest spirit machine — a cannon.

From 10 a.m.-2 p.m. today in the Arcade of Kilcawley Center, YSU ROTC will display the cannon and will distribute ballots to help select a name for it.

There is a $25 prize for the person with the winning entry.

According to Joe Alessi, junior, A&S, parts of the heavy piece of metal machinery were donated by various outside sources. A plaque on the cannon lists all the names.

The big gun is used strictly by the ROTC at home football games, Alessi said, firing it every time the Penguins score.

Alessi said the reason for the name contest is because ROTC "wants to get students more involved with sports and more in tune to what ROTC is all about. Our school spirit is as good as everyone else's and we just want to show it."

Students can drop off all entries at The Jambar office, Kilcawley Center West. Deadline for submissions is Nov. 4. The winning name will be announced during halftime of YSU's home game on Saturday, Nov. 12.

The report also listed an auto accident on the 1D level of the M-1 (Wick Avenue) deck on Tuesday, Oct. 18.

Timothy Varso, sophomore, A&S, was traveling southbound when his car was struck by the car driven by Lori Simoni, freshman, CAST, who was traveling west, the report said.

Varso's vehicle received damage to its left front fender. Impairment to Simoni's car occurred on its right front fender. Neither student was injured.

Letchworth stated that while no other workshops are planned for the rest of the quarter, any student who is undetermined and needs advising can make an appointment with an adviser.

Bauer added that the services offered by the Counseling and Health Services are not only limited to aiding the undetermined major:

German musical trio extends traditional boundaries

By JOHN CHARIGNON

They have been referred to as visionaries, pioneers of an apocalyptic style of music which transcends mere technopop or instrumental rock. Through technological ingenuity with computerization and classical training, the trio of keyboardists called Tangerine Dream produce a unique and innovative musical experience.

Edgar Froese, the group's founder, describes their music: "I look at our compositions as travel music; adventure music, much of which has been inspired by the places we've visited over the years."

Tangerine Dream's electronic orchestration can become so hypnotic that it transports its listeners on an emotional voyage into the arena they have staged for us. Their musical rhythms and melodies are strong enough to evoke visual images without lyrics, and still be satisfying. Paul Haslinger, who studied at the Vienna Conservatory of music in Austria, and joined TD in 1986, explains that their intention is to have their concerts showcase the music, not its players. Optical Race, the new release, includes a quote from Lao Tse-Tao Te King. It reads: "The visible creates a work in form — the invisible defines its worth." It is, however, quite odd for a band to exist for nearly 22 years and remain virtually unrecognized by mainstream audiences, yet it seems that this is how they prefer to be.

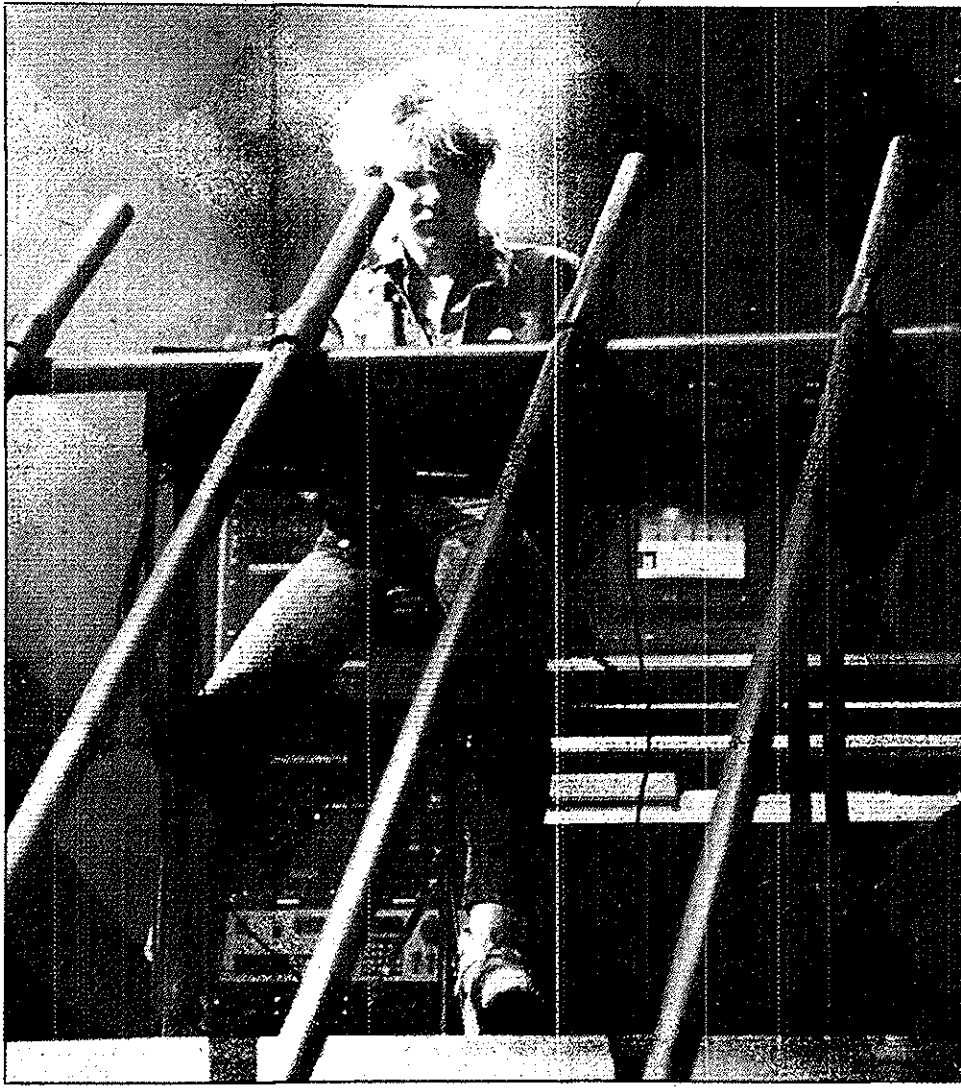

In the 1970s the band became notorious for its long improvised concerts which were held in darkened cathedrals or psychedelically lit planetariums around Europe. No longer performing in that manner, they still enjoy a loyal following. Their fans are, in fact, so supportive, that with almost no U.S. airplay and little media attention, Tangerine Dream has produced 5 gold LPs and sold out several cross country American tours.

Unknowingly, many of you have probably heard TD. One of their sideline ventures is composing soundtracks for films. They have done nearly one dozen scores for movies such as The Sorcerer, Firestarter, Vision Quest and Tom Cruise's Risky Business.

There is a great contrast between Tangerine Dream's earlier works and those of the 1980's. The mesmerizingly eerie and often violent movements from "Journey Through a Burning Brain" from Electronic Meditation (1970) have lapsed into the more delicate and sometimes sorrowful strains of "Song of the Whale" a track from Underwater Sunlight (1986). Most of the post '80s selections display an upbeat, refreshing texture. This new trend is due in part to the youthful insights of Paul Haslinger and Tom Wadepuhl who have brought a more romanticized and joyous tone to the compositions.

Optical Race is full of vibrant harmonies which make the title songs "Atlas Eyes" and "The Midnight Trail" all very danceable. Other pieces like "Mothers of

Production reaps benefits from artists' experiences

The musical West Side Story which opens Nov. 10, in Bliss Hall's Ford Auditorium will feature guest choreography by David Jendre and musical direction by John Simsic as part of the Theatre Interface Program.

This program, which is being funded through the Youngstown Foundation, is designed to benefit college as well as high school students and teachers.

According to Dr. Dennis Henneman, speech com munication and theatre and director for West Side Story, in addition to providing assistance with this particular production, the guest artists conduct workshops at area high schools.

"These two people have the skills that are right for this show," added Henneman.

Among the credits of Jendre are directing and choreographing A Chorus Line at the Youngstown Playhouse in 1986 and dancing as a member of the national touring company for

West Side Story as well as directing and choreographing the same play on various occasions. According to Jendre, at rehearsals thus far the players have shown great spirit. You might find, "three or maybe four rehearsals [going on] at the same time and the place is alive with theatrical electricity," added Henneman. Henneman added that Jendre's experience with this particular show gives the cast the benefit of insight into the original choreography. Jendre also has experience with the Kenley Players and the Cleveland Playhouse. The other guest artist working on West Side Story is musical director John Simsic. Simsic received his undergraduate degree from Cleveland State University. He also spent two years here at YSU as a graduate assistant in the opera program in addition to singing for three years with the Cleveland Opera. Simsic said that the orchestra for West Side Story incorporates winds and brass with percussion and strings. He added that West Side Story "is a very difficult score both vocally and instrumentally." Henneman said that these men are able to work well with students on a professional level, adding "They have the skills that are right for this show." Henneman stressed that anyone wishing to attend this production should make reservations early as they are anticipating a packed house. The University Box Office will begin taking reservations for West Side Story on Oct. 24. Tickets are free to University students upon presentation of their current YSU ID.

 Rain", "Twin Soul Tribe" and "Sun Gate" are more powerful emotional statements. This recording is perhaps the most accessible effort Tangerine Dream has put forth. It is exciting and adventuresome, while at the same time relaxing and sensual. If you're open for something unconventional, get a copy and dare to dream.

Cardreader to appear here

By JODI HAMMOND
 Jambar Entertainment Reporter

In 1976, after returning from London, Beverly Engle began studying tarot cards and astrology. Eventually, her concentration became focused solely on the tarot. After five years, she began to see events in the cards that later happened. Engle does tarot card readings for parties and events as well as private readings. She will be doing readings next Wednesday Oct. 26, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on the Kileawley pub stage. Admission is free. Engle said that she was drawn to the study of tarot and astrology. She added that she believes "Everyone has a spirit guide." She noted also, that all people should listen to their inner-selves because it's their own spirit's communication that guides them in their daily lives. Engle attended a spirit camp called Lily Dale in Chatauqua, New York. There she took classes in parapsychology and other related subjects. She said it was there that she developed a background in the tarot and channeling. Engle is an ordained minister at the Memorial Spiritual Church in Euclid, Ohio. There she practices spiritual channeling along with other ministers.

YSU volleyball splits pair; record at 15-11

By DANA HUDRAN
Jambar Sports Reporter

The YSU Volleyball team has had a busy week with a match against Mercyhurst Tuesday and Walsh College Wednesday night.

The Penguins pulled out a victory over Mercyhurst 15-6, 15-9, 8-15, and 16-14 for the match. However, they were not as successful Wednesday night against Walsh, losing 3 of 4 games.

YSU started off with a 15-12 victory in the first game but faltered as the match continued. Despite the loss the team had some standouts with Dina Hartman, Michelle Byers and Lori Longo blocking and spiking at the net. Freshman Sandy Stieber also did well saving a few quick spikes from Walsh.

The team record thus far this season is 15-11. According to team members it will only take 3 more wins to tie the YSU Volleyball school record.

McKenna elated with season

By RICK GEORGE
Jambar Sports Reporter

The women's volleyball team has been the biggest surprise at Youngstown State this season as they are currently 15-11 this season after going 3-26 last year.

Head Coach John McKenna is elated with his team's success.

"Our goal was to be better than .500," said McKenna. "Last season we did not have a taste of victory or the killer instinct. This season the ladies have rallied and gained the victory taste and killer instinct."

This year's team returns everybody including seniors Laura Eden, Shelly Byers and Shelly Alt.

"Our seniors have been real leaders along with Julie Meese, Laurie Longo, Jenny Kathe and Dina Hartman," said McKenna. "For the first time in four years the team is experienced, and that is one of the main reasons for our success."

Laurie Longo leads the team in kills with a 2.26 average and in digs with a 3.85 per match. Shelly Byers is leading in hitting percentage with a .301 average while Julie Meese averages 10.4 assists every match. Dina Hartman has a .54 average on blocks and Jenny Kathe has 44 service aces.

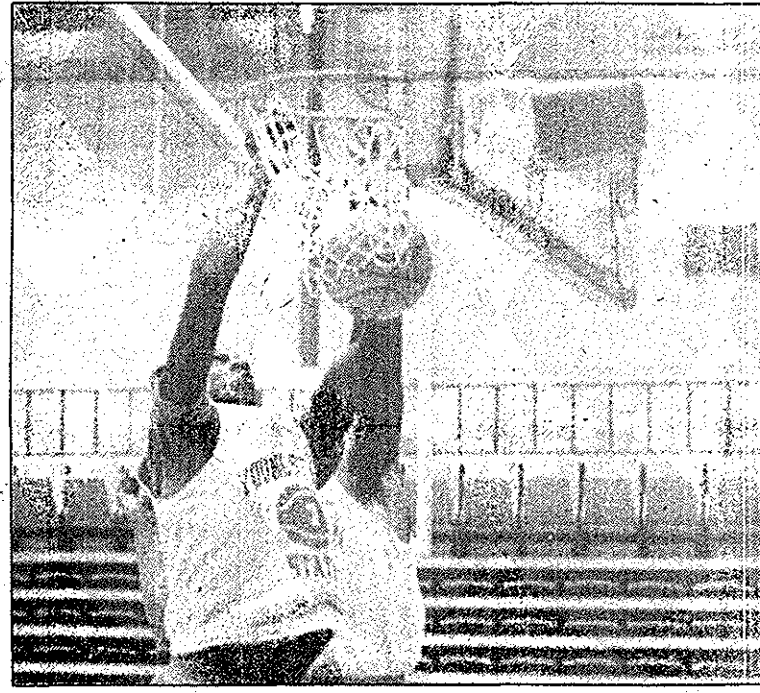

McKenna is one coach who is not impressed by statistics.

"To me statistics do not mean much," said McKenna. "The bottom line is if we win or lose. Our squad consists of team players instead of individuals."

McKenna and assistant coach Joe Conroy should be continuing their success this season as long as the team play is still present.

Penguins hit road against 1-6 Bowling Green

By RICK GEORGE
Jambar Sports Reporter

This week the YSU football team travels west as they get ready to take on the Bowling Green State Falcons of the Mid-American Conference.

Despite the Falcons having a record of 1-6, they are always a threat on anybody's schedule, as Ohio University found out by losing 42-0. Penguin head coach Jim Tressel is not under estimating Bowling Green State.

"Bowling Green is playing their best football right now," said Tressel. "They had a rough out of conference schedule."

"The talent is there," he said. "They have to be as talented as either Eastern Michigan or Akron."

The Falcons strength in defense lies in their secondary where senior free safety Kyle Kramer leads the team with 86 tackles. Freshman free safety Terry Wilson is right behind Kramer in tackles with 70.

On the offense, quarterback Eric Smith leads the Falcons with wide outs Reggie Thornton and Ron Heard being his favorite targets. The backfield has the potential of always exploding as Mike McGee and Chuck Edgerton are always a threat.

Last season YSU upset Bowling Green State in the second game of the season 20-17. Despite the loss, Bowling Green State's head coach Moe Ankney is not using it as motivation.

"We remember the loss, but it does not have much to do with this week's game," said Ankney.

"Some of the players that impress me for YSU are linebacker Paul Soltis and quarterback Frank Edie," said Ankney. "I know that Edie is good because I tried to recruit him for the Falcons. I am also impressed with the good backfield of the Penguins."

After six games, junior tailback Lorenzo Davis ranks in the top two of three different categories. Davis is the team's leading rusher with 415 yards and 5.85 yards average, and he also is leading the team in scoring with 30 points. He ranks second on the team with 16 receptions behind tight end David McIntosh who has 19.

On the defense side of the ball, Soltis has racked up 90 tackles with 60 of them being solos. Linebackers Jerry Pacifico and Alan Blythe are second and third on the team with 42 and 41 tackles respectively.

PENGUIN NOTES

Soltis, Morgan garner 'Player of Week' awards

Paul Soltis has garnered the Modarelli Jeweler "Defensive Player of the Week" honors for the third straight week as he led the Penguins with 18 tackles, 6 assists, one fumble recovery and one sack against Towson State University.

On the offensive side of the football, tailback Lorenzo Davis rushed for a 133 yards on just 14 carries for three touchdowns to earn "Offensive Player of the Week" honors.

On special teams, placekicker Darren Morgan, received "Specialist of the Week" as he tied the YSU record with four field goals in a single game. He converted on field goals from 21, 22, 29, and 38 yards. Morgan also added three extra points as he accounted for 15 points in the Towson State game.

"Big Mac" Linemen of Week went to Mike Cummings on the offense for the second straight week, and James Ringfield on the defense.

A special mention goes this week to punter Ken Kubus, who had four punts for a 41.3 yard average, and kicker Robert Fozkos. They kept the ball away from the dangerous David Meggett while not giving up valuable field position to the Tigers.

The Pride: A former YSU football player, Ray Hernan, was hired by the Youngstown Pride basketball team as the team's general manager. Hernan, who played for YSU in 1975-76, had been an assistant coach at Akron U. under Bob Huggins.

YSU — Football and a handful of other intramural sports have already begun but there are still some deadlines approaching for other sports.

The punt, pass and kick competition is on Oct. 22-23 and co-rec wallyball and pickleball doubles have deadlines of Oct. 24. The handball singles deadline is Oct. 31.

With the intramural football already started, that brings some fine performances in last week's action, including Rich Sabotowski of The Masters' co-rec team and Sherry Cuchna of the Atomic Dawgs' co-rec team.

In men's play, the Assassins' Steve Berchik and Bill Rigley put in fine performances. Also in the men's division, Swartz Thorne's Brad Lebo, the Bare Picks' Tom Warmouth and The Masters' Dave Tooney had fine games.

Debate

Binning replied that the economy was undergoing a transformation that favors entrepreneurship and that Bush would probably continue this trend. McLaughlin, on the other hand, said a recent Time magazine poll showed that many groups of Americans, including the middle class and elderly, felt they were worse off at the end of Reagan's presidency than at the beginning.

The right to life was another highly-discussed issue. Panelist Dr. John Smythe, economics, asked McLaughlin if voters should believe that Michael Dukakis would care about the underprivileged citizens of the country if he favors abortion.

McLaughlin replied that the right to have an abortion is a right that cannot be taken away. Most people "fail to consider that it (abortion) is a matter of faith. You're taking away a very precious right for those who don't share your belief," he said.

Binning said it is difficult to determine when life actually begins but "the rights of the unborn should be protected."

The debate wasn't lacking as far as one-liners were concerned, either. One audience member asked the debaters why Dukakis chose Senator Lloyd Bentsen as his running mate if they oppose each other on several issues, including providing financial aid to Central American countries.

Binning said he had not noticed many issues these candidates did agree on. "Maybe they should have a debate," he said.
