Sexual abuse victims share their side

By MELISSA WILTHEW
Jambar Editor

Dawn, a high-school student, sat in front of the Ohio Room crowd biting her lower lip before recounting the sexual abuse perpetrated against her by grandpa — then dad.

"I gave my mom as many clues as I could without telling her what happened," Dawn said softly, explaining the gruesome events that took place between the ages of four and 12.

She spoke Wednesday afternoon along with other sexually abused victims during a presentation by Help Me, A Trumbull County self-help group which aids adult survivors of child sexual abuse. The event was sponsored by the Counseling and Testing Center and the Women's Resource Center.

At the age of 13, Dawn spent time under psychiatric care and then placed herself in Children's Services. She said she just couldn't go home.

Except for her brother, members of Dawn's family believed the sexual abuse happened. "My brother thought I was a liar and a slut," she told the audience.

Child sexual abuse charges brought against her grandfather and her father were dismissed by the courts due to "lack of evidence."

"I can never trust my father again," Dawn concluded, tears welling in her eyes.

Tracy, a 15-year-old, was abused for one year by her stepfather. "It's just not fair," she said. "I'm 15 and acting like an adult."

Trying to control severe emotional problems, Tracy told of how she tried to stab her boyfriend after mistaking him for her stepfather. "I wasn't abused for a long time, but it still hurt," Tracy said.

Carol Wilt, a member of Help Me, understands what the young girls are going through. Wilt spoke calmly and insistently about the sexual abuse she went through between the ages of five and 16.

"I would try to find ways to escape my father every night," Wilt said, noting how she lacked concentration in her schoolwork.

Wilt remembered when her grandfather died and she remembered that she didn't cry at his funeral.

When her parents divorced, she worked two jobs at the age of 16 to support her mother and sisters. She married at 18 and her first husband sexually abused her sister. During her second marriage, she resorted to drugs to cope with the horrid memories. Her son watched his mother's drug abuse and also turned to

Senate approves schedule motion

A motion to amend YSU's change of registration procedure was the main business at hand during last Wednesday's Academic Senate meeting.

Dr. Barbara Brothers, chairman of the English Department and of the Senate's Academic Standards & Events Committee, made the motion to change the times when a student is required to have his advisor's signature during drop/add.

The 1986-87 Bulletin states that each student who needs an advisor's signature for registration must also have an advisor's signature for add/drop (change of registration). The motion brought by Brothers' committee would elaborate on the Bulletin's wording: In general, See Senate, page 9

Nicaraguan resident urges U.S. withdrawal

Should the United States continue funding the Contras in their fight against the Sandinistas? One local native adamantly says no.

Brian Schultz, formerly of Vienna, Ohio, has lived among those who are affected by the Contras and by the United States' involvement the most — the Nicaraguans.

Schultz, an agricultural ecology teacher, lives in Managua, Nicaragua and teaches at the Agricultural University there. He visited YSU Tuesday to talk on his experiences and stress that he is angered to see "Nicaraguans attempting to be independent and the United States interfering" in that attempt.

Local group forms sister city

In an attempt to help the Nicaraguan people, a local committee has been set up to try to begin a sister cities network with the Nicaraguan city of Matagalpa.

The Youngstown Sister City Project, associated with the Youngstown Peace Council, is encouraging YSU students to get involved.

Rev. John Polanski, co-chairman of the Youngstown Peace Council, said the committee "was formed to show that the people of Youngstown are trying to help the people of Nicaragua."

Schultz' decision to live in Nicaragua was two-fold: professional and political, he said.

Professionally, Schultz is heavily involved in insect control. His lecture and slide presentation detailed the misuse of pesticides currently being used in Nicaragua.

"The Nicaraguans are attempting to grow their own pesticides, so that they can stop relying on multinationals," he said.

But living and working in Nicaragua has allowed him to become closely involved in the politics as well and he was eager to point out that Americans are often given dif-

Submissions Deadline nears for YSU literary art magazine

By SAM VARGO
Jambar Staff Reporter

YSU's annual literary-arts magazine, the Penguin Review, serves as a vehicle of expression for up and coming artists, poets, essayists, musicians and photographers on the YSU campus.

The Review accepts short fiction, poetry, photographs, visual art and sheet music. YSU alumni, staff, faculty and students are encouraged to submit to the Penguin Review, located under the YSU bookstore in the student publications wing of Kilcawley Center.

The deadline for submission to the magazine is Jan. 23. The Review encourages all students to submit: "We aren't elitists," said Stephanie Stearns, editor.

Working on the staff is "a lot of fun and very rewarding," Stearns said.

"The staff this year is large in number and we come from a variety of different styles and tastes. We are open to varied styles and we encourage art majors to submit. We want a lot of visual art in this issue," she said.

Stearns said she thinks YSU art majors musn't know that the Penguin Review was an art, as well as a literary magazine because the Review doesn't receive much input from them. "We can't determine the format until all the submissions are in. Obviously, we only publish what is submitted. We want as many different styles from as many people possible, but if we only get one style of art, or of literature, that's what we will publish," Stearns said.

She said that 90 percent of the submissions in the past have been from YSU students. The Penguin Review has many readings and workshops throughout the year which honor published writers and poets.

The Penguin Review, along with the YSU English Department, sponsored a poetry reading with Dr. William Greenway, English, in which Greenway read from his nationally acclaimed poetry collection, Pressure Under Grace.

Also in the fall quarter, author Shirl Henke held a workshop and discussed her new novel Golden Lady. The event was co-sponsored by the YSU English Department and the Penguin Review.

This year's Penguin Review staff is made up of YSU students and two English faculty advisors.

Office receives grant

NEWS SERVICE — The Edison Office of Entrepreneurship at YSU has been awarded $283,000 through the Ohio Department of Development for the creation of a technology-based incubator.

The grant was announced today by Ohio Sen. Harry Meshel, D-33rd, the senate's Democratic leader.

The Edison Office, a non-profit corporation, is one of six world-class technology research development and implementation centers created through the Thomas Alva Edison Program established in 1983 by Gov. Richard F. Celeste and the Ohio Legislature.

"This grant, approved by the state controlling board, will be used in a university-industry cooperative effort to encourage the creation of and improve the survival rate of technology based businesses, which, in turn, will lead to the creation of jobs in Ohio," said Meshel.

'Stoppers' focuses on murder

YOUNGSTOWN — The unsolved murder of Joseph G. Beskid in 1984, has been selected as the "Crime of the Week" for the week of January 19 by the Greater Youngstown Crime Stoppers.

Beskid, 30, resided at 628 St. Clair Drive, North East, Warren, Ohio. He was divorced and unemployed at the time of his death.

Detective William Seese of the Warren Police Department, stated that Beskid's body was found at his St. Clair Drive address by a friend on Wednesday, Dec. 5, 1984, at 3 p.m. The victim's body was found on the floor of his living room, face down, in a pool of blood. His body bore puncture wounds of his chest, with a total of 14 stab wounds.

Seese further stated that there was no signs of a struggle and no weapons were found at the scene. It was also determined that robbery was not the motive for the victim's death.

Anyone with information on this murder is asked to call Crime Stoppers collect at 746-CLUE Monday through Friday between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. Persons with information do not have to give their names. A code number will be assigned to each caller. If the information leads to the arrest and indictment of the persons(s) responsible, a cash award of up to $1,000 will be given as authorized by the Crime Stoppers Board of Directors.

Contributions to the Crime Stoppers Reward Fund may be sent to P.O. Box 4, Youngstown, Ohio 44501. Contributions are tax deductible.

Robinson attends inauguration

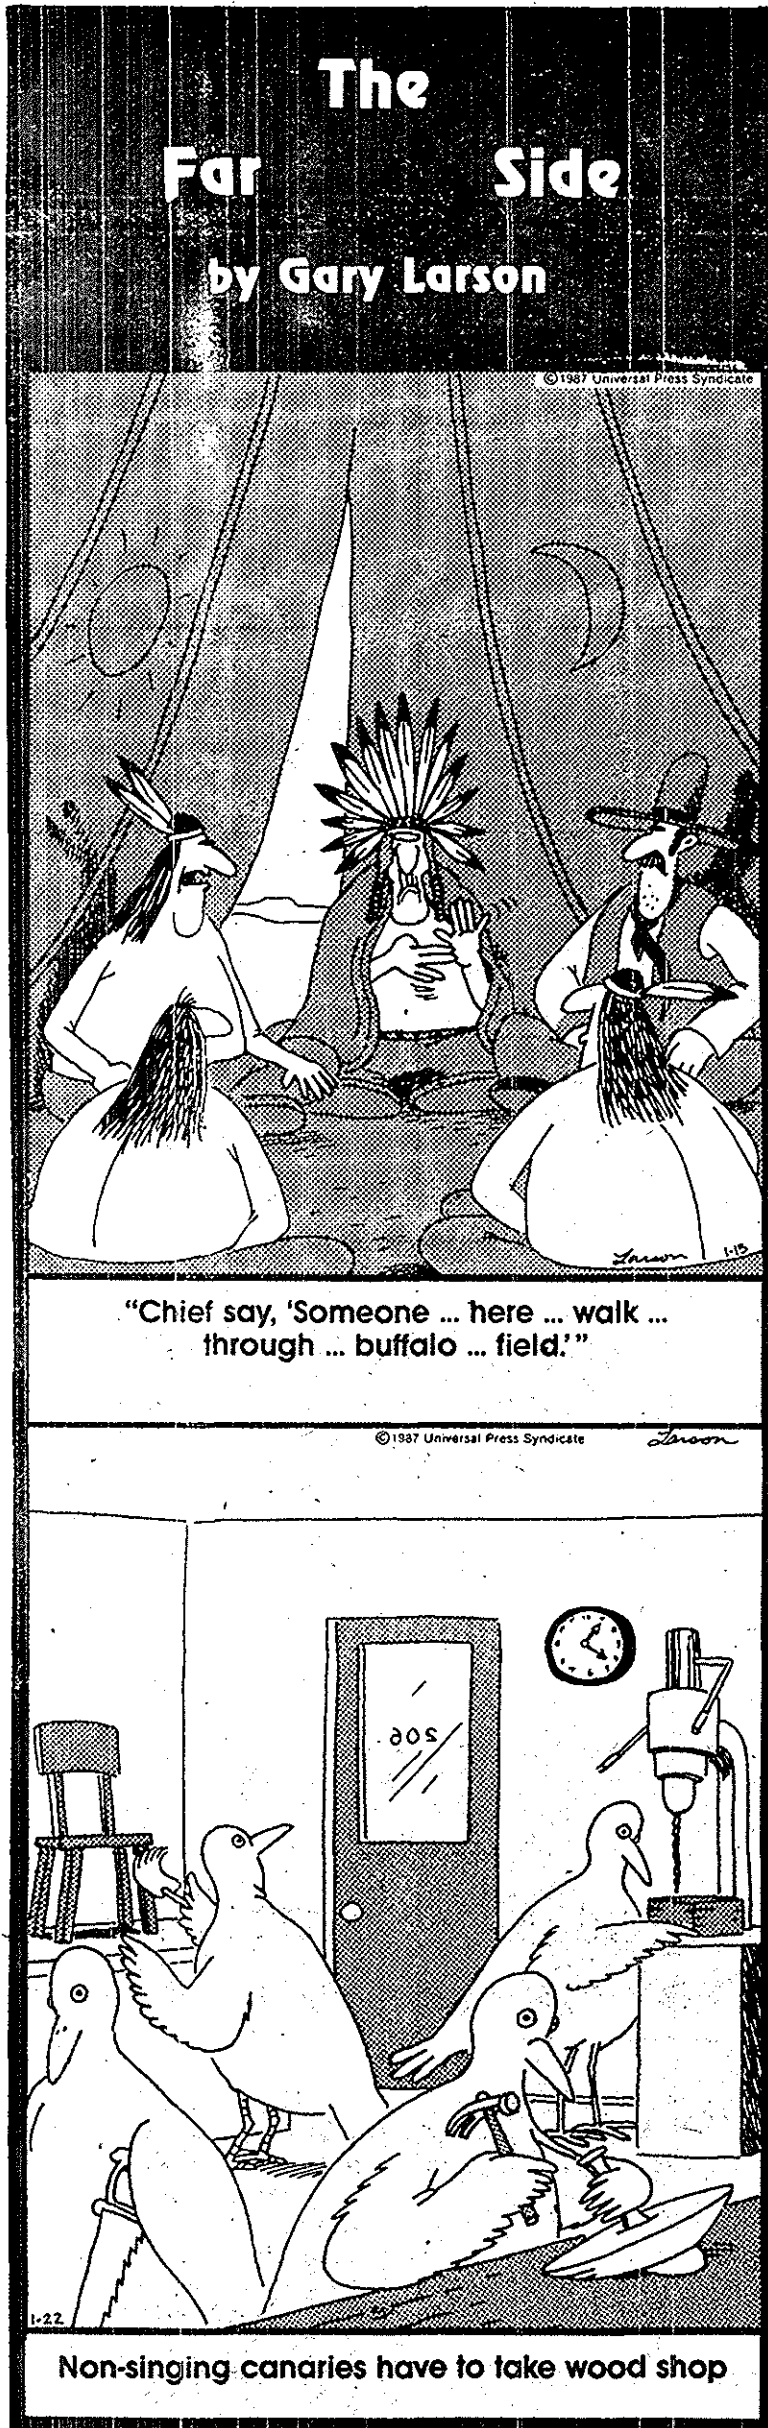

YOUNGSTOWN STATE UNIVERSITY — Student Government President Marvin Robinson represented YSU as a special guest at Governor Richard F. Celeste's inauguration ceremony Saturday, Jan. 10 in Columbus.

Robinson was accompanied by Second Vice President Amy Otley.

Robinson said he was proud to represent YSU at the ceremonies where Senators John Glenn and Howard Metzenbaum spoke.

"It was exciting to be there and see the governor being sworn in to perform the duties he was elected to do," Robinson said.

Campus station blows fuse

By JONI DOBRAN
Jambar Staff Reporter

If you've been in Kilcawley Center since winter classes have begun, then you may have noticed that something is missing.

No, it's not any of the restaurants or lounges, it has to do with music. WUGS, the UnderGround Sound, YSU's very own radio station, hasn't been broadcasting this quarter.

According to Kerry Kimerer, general manager of WUGS, at the end of the fall quarter there was a problem with the station's monitor board. The sound levels which were being sent out through the system's wires could not be adjusted and controlled. And thus, as he puts it, "through the process of making do with what we had, we blew a fuse."

That fuse is technically called a capacitor; a small but important part of any radio station's signal. Through time and normal use, the electronic part will eventually burn itself out, causing the station's entire monitor board to malfunction.

Joe Bevilacqua, program director of WUGS, is currently working with speech communication and theatre instructor Gary Shaffer in obtaining a currently unused monitor from WYSU, the fine arts station.

To secure the monitor from one radio station to the other would involve paperwork. It would also require that the new monitor be rewired, so that it would operate along with the other equipment at WUGS.

According to Bevilacqua, the new monitor board from WYSU would be more of a challenge for the disc jockeys to work with, as the one which is currently being used "is just a five-channel mixing board; very basic and very easy to operate."

It is similar to what is used by DJ's at dances or bars. The monitor at WYSU is in better condition and is more versatile for broadcasting. He also added that it is the same board which is used by all telecommunications students in two of their classes, studio problems I and II; therefore providing the DJ's with extra practice.

Dr. Alfred Owens, chairman of the speech communication and theatre department, agreed that the malfunction is probably with the capacitor. However, he added, "The board in the UnderGround Sound is balanced with the turntables, the pre-amps and the output monitoring speakers. So simply to add (the new monitor) would not immediately be a workable arrangement."

Owens would like to have the board fixed for the remainder of winter quarter. Then, during Spring Break, possibly add the new monitor. By doing the work in this manner, the station could possibly be operating by the end of next week. This would give the student disc jockeys more time to practice their craft, something Owens feels is vitally important in their education.

Even after the monitor is fixed, the disc jockeys at WUGS still have a problem to face: recognition. Often times, the sounds which were heard in Kilcawley Center were muffled, hampering the voice clarity of the DJ's.

Kimerer believes that since people can't properly hear the voices that are coming through, the DJ's lose their individual personalities and talents. He also doesn't feel that the "listeners know who is on at what time. I think everyone's more familiar with the music than with the DJ."

Both Kimerer and Bevilacqua agree that once the monitor board is fixed, the sound will improve and people will begin placing the DJ's voices, as well as the type of music that each plays: everything from classic rock to heavy metal to Top 40 to new wave.

The two feel that once the monitor is fixed and they again begin to "rock YSU" as they have done in the past, there will be smooth sailing across campus.

Area poor will be lucky to see federal funds

Recently the House of Representatives proposed a $500 million emergency package of food, shelter and other aid for the homeless. Hearings are set to start Feb. 11 with President Ronald Reagan indicating a responsibility on the federal level.

It's nice to see that the politicians took time away from important governmental functions involving arms negotiations and budgetary discussions to deal with a human issue.

According to the The New York Times, the money will be divided into $170 million for emergency shelter, $100 million for family housing, $30 million for transitional housing and $50 million for new health care programs. The release of the funds is set for spring.

Maybe some of those funds could trickle down into the Youngstown area. In the meantime, commuter students driving through Youngstown's outlying areas may not notice the poverty stricken or homeless living here. Along the Walnut mudlots, behind Bliss Hall, you can see some of the poverty-stricken or homeless.

One woman walks the streets with a grocery cart full of old newspapers, rolling the four-wheeled carrier across sidewalks and past stop signs. She wears a dirt-streaked coat, her hair is long and stringy.

She wears layers of clothes — a blouse, a sweater, boots. Sometimes she is accompanied by a stray dog or a neighborhood child just as dirty. Just one person you might say, but out there are many others.

The Youngstown homeless and poverty-stricken do not total great numbers as they do in New York or Washington. However, YSU students can see that population right in their backyard.

It seems absurd that side-by-side the most highly educated of the area are located the most poverty-stricken.

No matter how many millions of dollars are donated, generated or pumped into this University, the outskirts will contain the poverty stricken.

After sitting through a day of higher education, you head home, glancing at the woman pushing the grocery cart full of old newspapers instead of food.

Faculty's mandatory attendance often gets the goat of students

When I was young, I remember all those times I had to suffer to get what I wanted. Like when you tried your hardest not to cry when the doctor gave you a shot so he would give you a lollipop.

The same principle can be associated to class attendance. Going to class and being bored, not learning anything, just being bored. Oooh, the suffering, but you do it so you get a good grade.

LISA SOLLEY

"I still can't understand how professors can grade on attendance," I said to my friends as we sat at a bar. We were drowning our sorrows over the lowered letter grades we received from our professors because we missed more than three times in the quarter.

"I can't believe we have to deal with that principle to get where we want to be in life. Sad isn't it?"

"No, what's sad is that I have to deal with students that don't want to attend class like yourself to make a living," a voice behind me said. "Now that's sad."

It was my professor. She had heard everything we had been saying. My friends got up and left, but I chose to stay and pursue the subject further.

I had always thought to myself, what makes professors think they can put

NEON seeks seniors

YOUNGSTOWN STATE UNIVERSITY — This will be the final opportunity for those graduating in winter, spring or summer 1987 to have their pictures taken to appear in the 1987 edition of the Neon, YSU's yearbook.

This includes students graduating with associate's degrees and master's degrees, as well as students who will be receiving their traditional four-year degrees. The photographer from Sarony Studios will be on campus 9 a.m.-5 p.m., Jan. 20-21, 1-9 p.m., Jan. 22 and 9 a.m.-5 p.m., Jan. 23. This is the last chance for these students to have their portraits taken for inclusion in the 1987 Neon.

Students can sign up for their portraits, for which there is no charge, at the Kilcawley Information Center, where they can also order a 1987 Neon, which will be mailed to them in September, and purchase a 1986 yearbook. Students will have the opportunity to order a portrait package from the studio.

The portraits are being taken in Room 2090, Kilcawley Center, in the Student Government offices.

Commentary

themselves on such a high pedestal — I'm paying to sit in their class and hopefully learn something. I respect the fact that a faculty member is my teacher, but respect is something they have to earn. It doesn't come with the title.

By college, I feel I'm mature enough to make these choices. Just as I'm able to make the choice of whether I want to attend class or not.

We had had a few drinks so I thought, what the heck, I may as well find out what makes a professor tick, so I started asking questions.

"Why do you make attendance mandatory in your class?"

"Why do you think I make attendance mandatory, Lisa?"

My first thought was ahh... a question to answer my question, seemed par for the course.

"I think that some students feel that if you are teaching from the book, they can spend $30 or $40 and read the material themselves. Your lectures become boring because you give the same schtick every quarter. Students have other responsibilities, don't come to your class and this makes you feel worthless as a teacher. So, in order to make your ego feel better and make it appear that you're doing a good job, you make it so students have to take up space in your class if they want to graduate."

The professor looked at me, chuckled and answered, "Maybe for some professors this is true. I can't speak for all of the teachers at this University, but I don't require your presence in my class for that reason."

"I take my job seriously and the reasoning behind mandatory attendance is to make you feel the weight of responsibility. Just as you feel you have the choice to not come to my class, I too have the choice to lower your grade for not attending," she said.

"Attendance is important and I take offense when students do not attend and then call me during my office hours to find out what assignments are due or do not understand the reading. I go over this material in class and find it bothersome to go over it a second and third time because you find me boring."

"Well," I said. "I find it offensive when I first have to pay a lot of money for a book to read and then sit in a class for two hours and listen to the professor's old war stories. And I find it just as offensive to sit in a class and not be taught anything."

We sat and stared at each other, both quietly taking in what the other said.

One question pounding in my head was "Why do I have to come to class to be a good student to absorb the material?"

I know it helps and that is what a student is suppose to do, but I can't help feeling the weight of my other responsibilities.

I have been in classes that I absolutely loved. I can't wait to go, listen intently, participate in discussions and feel that I am really learning something. If I come across a class that doesn't do this and the teacher isn't teaching me something, I feel cheated.

I especially feel cheated because I am very busy and I sit in that seat, bored to tears, thinking of 100 different things I could be doing. My time is just as important as the professor's time.

"Lisa," my professor said as I stopped day-dreaming and realized she was talking to me.

"Attending class is important for numerous reasons and studies have proven that if you come to class, you learn more, whether you think you are or not," she pleaded.

"If you don't want to attend class, what makes an employer think you'll come to work?"

"Should an employer hire me because I received an A, but didn't learn anything and can't apply the material," I asked.

"I guess that's another one of those choices," she responded. "Just like it is a choice for you to come to class or not and just as it is my choice to penalize you."

We both knew there was no correct answer to our argument but I didn't feel cheated. I had learned something and hopefully so did my professor.

"Well, see you in class tomorrow Lisa."

"Yeah, see you in class."

Delivery service aims to protect students

COLLEGE PRESS SERVICE — Three enterprising University of Texas students have started a condom-delivery service in and around their Austin campus.

Despite the problems another student condom service encountered at Harvard, the UT students hope to franchise their idea — called "The Protection Connection" — to other campuses around the country.

It is, said partner Christopher Bray, "the perfect student business."

"Everyone dreams about starting their own business," added Sid Graef, who along with classmate Christian Taylor, composes the rest of the company. "Everyone wants that feeling of success."

They're counting on students having other kinds of dreams, too. "Everybody's going to be sexually active at some point, so they may as well be protected," Graef explained.

So during most evening and early morning hours, Protection Connection delivers direct to lovers' rooms six to 12 condoms or contraceptive sponges for prices ranging from $5 to $20.

Bray said the idea arose last month when one of the partners happened to mention the Japanese tradition of selling contraceptives door to door. Graef got enthusiastic enough about the idea to print flyers and post them around campus.

Bray said the phone started ringing within 30 minutes.

The campus Health Center soon bestowed legitimacy on the firm. "We pass out their information on venereal diseases and they distribute our flyers," Taylor said. "Let the (uninformed) make the jokes. We are a serious business."

The idea was never accepted at Harvard last year, when six freshmen started "Spermbusters." It lasted only "several days," said Darius Zoroufy, one of the student backers of the Harvard experiment.

"It was deemed to be in bad taste unofficially by the See Busters, page 8

Arrangement!

Noon to 1 p.m., Tuesdays
January 27 thru February 10
Fee: $3

Edward's Flowers visits campus to conduct a special workshop on holiday flower arranging. Learn to create a Valentine arrangement for that special sweetheart or a centerpiece for a romantic dinner for two!

Three classes will include techniques on how to work with silk and dried flowers, to tie florist bows and create pipe cleaner Valentine designs. A sample arrangement is on display in the Information Center.

Registration fee is payable in the Information Center, upper level Kilcawley, through noon, January 27. Class is limited to 35 participants.

Registration fee includes all flowers and supplies. Class participants must bring their own 4" container or may purchase bases at the workshop.

school administrators," Zoroufy said. "It was something they didn't want operating on campus."

Harvard prohibits students from operating businesses out of dorm rooms, a spokeswoman at the Dean of Students' office said. She declined further comment on the subject, saying it would be "inappropriate."

"Yeah, there is a rule about that," Zoroufy admitted. "We decided it wasn't worth it to risk (disciplinary action). We were advised not to continue."

A lot of schools are nervous about dispensing contraceptives. Indiana University dorms, for example, are selling condoms for the first time ever this fall, but only under the stipulation the dorms don't promote or advertise their availability.

Nevertheless, some ideas die hard. Harvard's Spurbusters may begin anew.

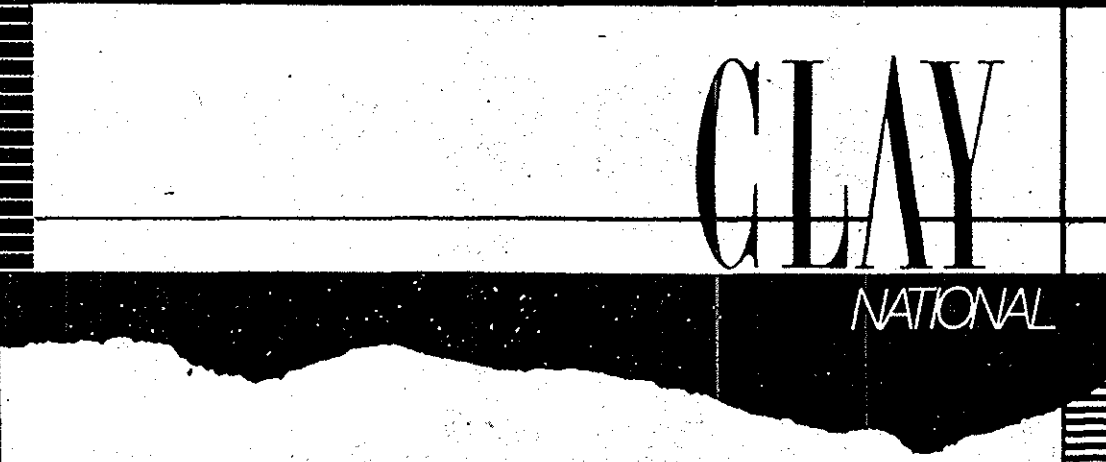

"We have thought of reviving it," Zoroufy said. "We are looking at a few different ways of making it legal. But, even legally, I'm sure the university will not look kindly on it."

ferent impressions of Nicaraguan life by our government, he said.
"It's amazing to see what's printed in the paper here — they print that there's religious oppression, press censorship," he said.

He refuted press censorship with slides of newspapers which had anti-Sandinista articles, anti-government articles, pictures of demonstrations, etc.

"Americans are led to believe that Nicaraguan television is full of Soviet propaganda," he said. What kind of shows are they watching? Schultz showed a slide of a TV listing for a particular day: Scooby Doo, Dick Van Dyke, and Flipper were some of the day's sampling.

"They [the Nicaraguans] are really getting indoctrinated in soviet life, aren't they?" he said.

Schultz also said that the Nicaraguans are trying to escape their Third World image with such programs as mass polio vaccinations and billboards encouraging mothers to nurse their babies with their own milk.

"You won't see Nestle billboards in Nicaragua!" he remarked, referring to the recent baby formula problems with the Nestle company.

Schultz said he believes that the United States sees Nicaraguans' attempt to be more independent as "a threat."

"Actually, it's the government leader's friends in big business that find Nicaragua as an economic threat — they're afraid of an independent Third World," he said.

The Nicaraguans try to be like the United States, he said. They use the United States as a model but still strive for their independence, he added.

They [the Nicaraguans] want to be friends with the United States — they just want to be on more equal terms."

Committee

The committee chose Matagalpa for the network because "it is the closest city that Nicaragua has to Youngstown" in that there is no heavy industry and it is basically a "blue collar" type city, Polanski said.

However, the primary reason, Polanski said, was that Pittsburgh has also decided to set up a network with Matagalpa and Youngstown was invited to join them in that relationship.

Polanski stressed that the committee had "nothing to do with politics," rather, it is a "people to people" committee.

"We work through the Nicaraguan government — we're not necessarily approving of their politics but we're concerned that people are suffering," he said.

An initial project of the committee will be to raise medical and educational supplies, Polanski said.

"We also want to raise money so that more Youngstown area residents can go to Matagalpa and develop new ways in which our two cities can share," Rev. Polanski said.

Two of the committee members, Alice and Staughton Lynd, helped start the Youngstown committee after they visited Matagalpa last August. They met a nurse from California who is currently training rural residents to deal with basic health problems in communities where there is no doctor.

The committee holds a rice and bean dinner at 7:30 p.m. on the third Sunday of every month at the Newman Center. "The dinner helps us to put ourselves in touch with them."

Polanski said he would like to see more college students involved with the committee. "I think college students are interested in doing things with results — this will have results," he said.

Sister city ties with communities in Nicaragua have been developed in Seattle, Washington; New Haven, Connecticut; Portland, Oregon; Providence, Rhode Island; Montclair, New Jersey; and Boulder, Colorado.

Anyone interested in the committee can call Polanski at the Newman Center, 747-9202.

"Every life I had touched, I had ruined," she said. But now Wilt, an attractive middle-aged woman, is learning to cope — finally.

"I am working on learning to love, to cry, to feel and to share," she told the crowd.

Sharing statistics, Wilt said one child is sexually molested every two minutes and the majority of those children are between the ages of six and 12.

"You learn very quickly that love hurts," she said.

Danna Bozick, director of the Women's Resource Center, and Judy Green, Counseling and Health Services, are accepting student's schedules to form meeting times for a YSU based support group for sexually abused victims. Bozick said meetings are slated to begin at the end of January.

"We want to help people change from seeing themselves as victims to seeing themselves as survivors," Bozick said. She said that Wednesday's presentation grew out of a request from a YSU student who had been sexually abused as a child.

Interested students may contact Green at ext. 3056 or Bozick at ext. 7309.

ROTC urges cadet involvement in 'clash'

By DEB SHAULIS
Jamber Entertainment Editor

Good-natured competition is in store for the participants of this year's Clash of Arms competition, sponsored by YSU's ROTC program, which begins at 7:30 on Friday, Jan. 23 and 30, in Stambaugh Stadium.

The competition between the junior class, or MS3 cadets, and the seniors, known as MS4's, is designed to "build up a spirit of competition," said Jim Tropea, captain of the MS4 team.

"They (the cadets) are really useless unless they work together as a team," said Tropea. "The games are a way to get to know each other in a more intimate way, professionally."

The competition also "teaches a lot of good leadership skills," said Stratis Lagontaris, captain of the MS3 team.

The captains of each team assign duties in assembling the games to the other cadets, who must report back to captains, Lagontaris said.

The games, originally called Voltref First Strike, began at YSU four years ago. The name was changed this year because First Strike sounded "Army-ish," Tropea said.

Teams in the past have consisted of 30 players on the average, and Tropea and Lagontaris hope to have a good turnout this year as well.

Other cadets are encouraged to join the MS3 and MS4 teams, and may choose which team they would like to join.

Since training in the ROTC program does not begin until the third year, MS1 and MS2 cadets may benefit from the games as well, Tropea said.

Points will be taken off if MS1 or MS2 cadets are not used on each team.

Teams which do not include female cadets will be penalized as well.

Events of the competition range from well-known sports, such as basketball and volleyball, to activities geared toward the cadets' training, such as Marksmanship, Litter Carry, and Pup Tent Relays.

The order of events will not be revealed until the day of the competition, Tropea said.

The team relay has been a popular event in past years, according to Tropea and Lagontaris. The captains of each team may choose five people from the opposing team who cannot participate. The remaining team members must take part in the competition.

Rules for each event have been pre-set, and the rules for the basketball and volleyball games were taken from the university intramurals rulebook.

The competition serves purposes other than uniting the cadets. "The of-icers will be watching," Lagontaris said. "A good spot report is possible."

Cadets who display good leadership qualities during the games could be considered for future leadership positions in ROTC, Lagontaris said.

Since the competition began, the MS4 cadets have won every year. As a motivating force for their team, the MS3 cadets will rise one rank, from E6 to E7, if they defeat the MS4 squad.

"We have to hold on to the title," Tropea said.

The Clash of Arms competition is "just the beginning," Tropea said. An awards ceremony will be held a few weeks afterward, and certificates will be presented to the first place finishers in each event. Other activities are scheduled later in the quarter as well.

The public is invited to attend the Clash of Arms. "We'd like to see them (the public)," Tropea said.

YSU jazz graduates make impact on music world

By PAUL NALEPA
Jamber Staff Writer

Graduates of the YSU Jazz Ensemble have made a major impact with such notable bands as Buddy Rich, Woody Herman, Chick Corea and Mel Louis according to Tony Leonardi, music director of the YSU Jazz Ensembles for the past eight years.

As a professional jazz musician himself, Leonardi has been on tours with his own jazz quintet, Woody Herman and Chuck Mangione.

Under his direction the YSU Jazz Ensembles have been active participants in jazz activities, collecting many awards and honors in Ohio and other states.

Leonardi's effectiveness as a jazz educator can be measured by the large number of his students who have graduated and become members of major jazz bands, recording artists, television sound-track and freelance artists.

Here are some of the graduates he is very proud of.

- Bill Tragesser: Plays house piano at Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas. He has been an accompanist for Paul Anke and Chick Corea.

- Bill Bodine: Bassist and songwriter in California. Bodine is musical director of Star Search on TV. He was Olivia Newton John's personal bass player and was on the Grease album with her.

- James Weidman: A classical as well as a jazz pianist who lives in NYC. He has accompanied jazz saxophonist Bobby Watson, trombonist Slide Hampton and is currently with jazz singer Abbey Lincoln.

- David D'Angelo: Played sax in the Buddy Rich Band for several years. He also toured with the musical Annie.

- Rande Isabella: Currently in Los Angeles composing music for the cable sports channel ESPN and is going to be doing the same for NBC Sports.

- Kent Engelhardt: On the road with the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra. They are going to be filming a special for PBS with singers Mel Torme and Jack Jones on the life of Tommy Dorsey.

Sweatshirt

4 to 5 p.m., Tuesdays
January 27 thru February 24
Fee: $5

At this unique workshop, learn to create your own designer sweatshirt or shirt with rhinestones, studs, fabric paint, pearls and sequins.

Linda Reel, Minnesota Fabric's design instructor and district home economist, will demonstrate techniques for creating these fashion favorites in just five classes. (Techniques taught are also applicable to jean jackets with a little practice.)

Registration fee is payable in the Information Center, upper level Kilcawley, through 4 p.m., January 27. Class is limited to 35 participants.

Class participants must bring the sweatshirt or shirt they wish to design in class. (Jean jackets are suggested only after a sweatshirt is completed.)

Registration fee includes 7 clear rhinestones per person and fabric paint. Additional colored stones, pearls and sequins will be available for purchase at each session.

A sample shirt is on display in PAC's glass case near Kilcawley's south entrance, lower level.

Beatlemania travels down familiar 'Road'

By DEB SHAULIS
Jambar Entertainment Editor

From their hand-made costumes to their imported boots to their identical instruments, they look, act and sound like John, Paul, Ringo and George — the original Beatles.

The group is Abbey Road, performing at 5:45 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 22, in Kilcawley Center's Pub as part of Beatlemania Day festivities. For listeners, the band is entertaining; for the band members, however, it's serious business.

"People don't realize the amount of work involved — not just in our band, but in any band," said founding member Bill Kropinak. "Once we change into our outfits, we're the Beatles as far as we're concerned."

The idea of imitating the Beatles came a friend of Kropinak's, and eventually Abbey Road's drummer, who wanted to do all Beatle music. "I jumped right at the idea," Kropinak said. "I'm the fanatic of the band."

After auditioning band members for over one year and placing several newspaper ads, the band was assembled, but not ready for performing. "It evolved . . . with no Beatle equipment," said Kropinak. "We had no suits, no Beatle guitars or equipment."

Since then, the band has had suits hand-made for their performances, and has purchased equipment styled as the original Beatles used. "We're keeping with the way they did things," Kropinak said.

"The more equipment we ran across gave us more incentive," said Kropinak.

Abbey Road's music is fashioned after the original Beatles as well. Synthesizers and sound effects are not part of the band's show. Harmonies are sung on one mike, and only two mikes at most are used by the band.

"It's the raw Beatles sound," Kropinak said. "We sound like the guys to some degree."

Though almost twenty years have passed since the original Beatles began performing, "the music doesn't get old," said Kropinak.

Kropinak recalls more than one performance where the younger members of the audience knew the words to the songs the band played by heart. "There's really no age limit to the people who come to hear us," Kropinak said.

As the group's booking agent, Kropinak likes to play one or two times in one place, then wait a month before returning.

"We want to keep everything fresh and enthusiastic," Kropinak said. "Being a specialty-type act, you can't burn the thing out."

Abbey Road usually performs one to three nights per week, and Kropinak hopes the band will be able to perform more on a regular basis. The band has played from Cleveland to Sharpsville "and anything in between," he said.

Abbey Road is a second job for each of the band members. Kropinak, a truck driver, listens to Beatle tunes the band plans on using during hauls. "I like knowing what's ahead," he said.

PAC members 'come together'

YOUNGSTOWN STATE UNIVERSITY — YSU students have a chance to "come together" to meet new people and strengthen old friendships.

Beatlemania Day, sponsored by PAC, begins at 2 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 22, in Kilcawley Center's Pub with the showing of The Beatles Yellow Submarine video.

Abbey Road, a local band imitating the Beatles, takes the Pub stage at 5:45 p.m., and Beatle trivia games will be played during the band's breaks.

Beatlemania was designed to "generate new membership and promote unity within the group [PAC] itself," said student chairperson Vicki Spirtos.

"Anybody interested in PAC can come and pick up information that day. We are always interested in new members," Spirtos said.

Rock band Split Second consists of versatile musicians, songs geared toward dance crowd

By DEB SHAULIS
Jambar Entertainment Editor

Quick — name an area band playing funk, top 40 and dance mixes. Anyone attending PAC's Rock and Jazz Club concert Wednesday in the Chestnut Room should be able to answer this question in a 'split second'.

Split Second kicked off PAC's winter quarter concert schedule to a large crowd. The band features vocalist Moon, lead guitarist Dave Munson, drummer Tim Scanga, keyboardist David Pensa and bass guitarist Louie Cozza.

Split Second's cover material includes top 40 hits like Mr. Mister's "Is It Love," and funkier tunes such as Cameo's "Word Up".

"We are geared toward the dance crowd," said Munson.

Split Second features the sound of the '80, utilizing synthesizers in songs like "Walking in the Rain" and "Love Zone."

The members of Split Second are versatile musicians, sharing lead vocals and playing one or more instruments. All five members sing backup vocals as well.

The band plays an average of three nights per week in the Youngstown-Pittsburgh area. Split Second's performance schedule usually takes them into Pennsylvania, playing at Robert Morris College, Hidden Valley Ski Resort, and Domenico's in Sharon.

"We're just trying to pay the rent right now," said Cozza, who added that the band would play at YSU again.

The strain of holding two jobs doesn't get the band down. "We kind of work off each other," said Kropinak. "The more they (the crowd) get into it, the more we get into it. The crowd is the key to the whole thing."

"I don't see any limit as to how long this thing can go on," said Kropinak. "It's been twenty years, and still bands are imitating them."

Lady Penguins hope for win in bout against Murray

By MELISSA WILTHEW
Jambar Editor

DEBBIE BURKETT

Lady Penguins Basketball Coach Ed DiGregorio said he "might start a quicker team" in the Lady Penguin's next scheduled bout against the Lady Racers of Murray State Saturday.

DiGregorio said they hope to use a "one guard offensive" during the game slated for 5 p.m. in Beeghly.

Last Monday the women's basketball team lost 81-80 in a showing against Eastern Kentucky. They led a 55-36 lead at intermission but Eastern made a comeback in the second half and took over.

The Lady Penguins now at 6-7, are 0-3 in Ohio Valley Conference standings. The team started out the season 5-0 and have lost seven of their last eight games.

Dorothy Bowers, a junior playing both forward and center, had 19 points and 11 rebounds against Eastern. Debbie Burkett, a sophomore forward, rounded up 10 rebounds.

DiGregorio said "the biggest problem is that the team is not rebounding overall as a team.

"We're not playing hardnosed defense," he said. The coach said the answer lies in someone taking charge offensively.

"Our ball handlers aren't taking charge when we need them the most," the coach commented. "But we hope to get this solved soon."

The coach said a possibility is Stephanie Coie, a sophomore guard, who took charge during their game against Eastern.

Bowers, who averages 23.2 points per game, has been bothered by a bad ankle and that has set her back, the coach explained. DiGregorio said Bowers wouldn't be practicing Thursday afternoon to give her ankle a rest.

Penguins hoping to end losing skid

By LISA M. SOLLEY
Jambar Managing Editor

After coming off of a long and hard road trip, the YSU Penguins will face seven foes on the home court starting Saturday night against Ohio Valley opponent Murray State.

The Penguins are currently 6-7 and 0-3 in the OVC. The team has dropped six of its last seven games, including a 69-66 close decision against Eastern Kentucky. YSU has yet to win a game on the road.

Tilman Bevely, the team's leading scorer, led the Penguins with 27 points.

YSU was trailing at the half in Monday night's game 35-27. The Colonels ran off ten unanswered points from five different players at the 5:55 mark for the 8-point advantage.

YSU fought back in the second half and tied the game at 45 on Courtney Gilmore's first bucket of the night. Bevely put the Penguins in the lead with a three-point shot 52-50 and extended the lead to four when he hit on a jumper.

Eastern Kentucky then scored seven points to take the lead back. Jim Gilmore put the Penguins in the lead once again at the 3:33 mark 63-62, but the lead changes hands once again.

Bevely tied the game for the last time with 1:20 remaining at 66. The Colonels hit on three straight foul shots to take the lead with only 11 seconds left. Bevely put up a three-point shot, but it went in and back out at the buzzer.

YSU will try to snap a four-game losing streak against Murray State at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Beeghly Center. The Penguins are 5-1 on their home turf.

Rice said, "People were writing us off after the Morehead State loss...However, when we play a team game and all of our components are working, we can contend with anyone."

Murray State finished third in the OVC last year with a 17-12 record. They have had seven straight winning seasons and will return two starters and six lettermen.

Jazz

•Ralph Lalama: Plays tenor sax and is a member of the Mel Louis Orchestra in NYC. He was featured on two albums last year, one with Mel Louis and another with pianist Allan Simon.

•Jim Masters and Darryl Pellegrini: Both live in NYC and have done the music for the Saturday morning cartoon show Voltron.

In fact, there are so many YSU jazz graduates in NYC that they are collectively referred to as the "Youngstown Connection."

For those who would like to hear this year's YSU Jazz Ensemble, they will have their next campus concert on March 2 at Kilcawley Center in the Chestnut Room at 8 p.m.

The new YSU Jazz Ensemble album When Tomorrow Comes will be available at their concert.

Athletic directors fear tax law

COLLEGE PRESS SERVICE

The tax bill that President Reagan signed into law could seriously hurt college athletic departments' fundraising efforts, athletic directors around the country say.

The new tax reform law incorporates a recent Internal Revenue Service (IRS) ruling that makes it harder for college sports donors to deduct their contributions from their tax bills.

"People will be less willing to give," said Philip Hochberg of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics.

Campus sports program, moreover, are very much dependent on gifts of money from boosters and alumni.

About 35 percent of Arkansas' athletic department funds come from donations, said Athletic Director Frank Broyles. At Oklahoma, 20 percent of its $11 million a year budget came from donors. About 15 percent of Tennessee's $14 million budget this year was in contributions, Athletic Director Doug Dickey reported.

Their fears of losing such donations stem from an April IRS ruling that donors who receive preferred seating in stadiums or arenas cannot deduct their contributions except in certain circumstances which, athletic directors said, would "pose an administrative nightmare."

A favorite way of raising such huge sums is to allow contributors of, say, $500 or more, to a school's athletic department to have the chance to buy "preferred seating" season tickets in its arena or stadium.

The booster, in turn, could call the $500 an educational contribution, and deduct it from his or her taxable income. The price of season tickets, in turn, could be deducted as a business expense to entertain clients.

In April, the IRS ruled such schemes were close to tax evasion. It issued guidelines — now part of the new tax reform law — that said boosters could take such deductions only under certain narrow circumstances.

Determining those circumstances is up to the school, and amounts to "an administrative nightmare," Hochberg says.

In the meantime, however, he worries that uncertain boosters may stop donating as much as they did in the past.
