Pugsley, Crishon Exchange Ideas

TWO HEADS MEET — Student Government President Dan Crishon confers with University President Albert L. Pugsley on plans for the coming year. Both agreed that a new Student Government constitution is needed.

The need for a new student government constitution was one of several issues concerning the coming year discussed by University President Albert L. Pugsley and Dan Crishon, Student Government president at a meeting Tuesday.

President Pugsley and Crishon both agreed that a new student government constitution was necessary. Crishon called the present constitution a meaningless document, and Pugsley agreed.

Crishon plans to appoint a committee from Student Council to revise the constitution. "Most likely," Crishon stated, "it will be the constitution committee or an ad hoc committee of the Student Affairs committee."

The new constitution will have to be approved by a referendum vote of the student body. Crishon also stated that approval by the University Senate and The Board of Trustees will also be necessary.

Parking Problem Discussed

Crishon also expressed at the meeting the students' disapproval of the new parking plan. President Pugsley stated that the university was looking for new parking lots, but that definite plans had not been made. Concerning the $15 per quarter parking fee, President Pugsley stated that "the service for students would be much better with the new plan." He also stated that parking would be available for the first five weeks of fall quarter in the Arlington Street lot. The structure of the parking decks to be located in this area will determine how long it will be open to parking, he said.

Speaking to Crishon about the new social regulations, Pugsley said, "I think they're liberal enough -- well, maybe not." Crishon stated he was anxious to hear student opinions on the newly approved rules.

President Concerned Over Possible Violence in Fall

President Pugsley also expressed his concern about the possibility of student violence on the Youngstown campus this fall, and suggested that better communications between administration, faculty, and students will be important.

President Pugsley was in agreement with a proposed student communications center operated by the student government. The purpose of such a center would be to answer questions pertaining to University rules and regulations.

Both concluded that the coming year required deeper understanding and more cooperation between the student body and the administration.

Social Regulations Announced; Dean Rishel Says Rules Adequate

Permitting 3.2 beer in fraternity houses, and allowing women visitors during limited afternoon hours are the major changes presented in the new social regulations. Other changes include removing the one-night limit on profit making functions, and the removal of closing hours from off campus facilities.

Deans Conferred

Darrell F. Rishel, dean of student affairs, explained that the new rules were formulated in conference with Dean of Men John Gillespie, Dean of Women Edith Painter, and Vice-President of Academic Affairs John Coffelt, and took into by the Student Affairs Committee and other work done last spring.

Dean Rishel added that the major request not granted was that social events not be required to register. He felt that if the University is expected to assume responsibility for the group, then registration should be required. "If any organization chooses to be recognized by the University, they must follow the rules," he stated. He explained that a group is not required to register with the University, but if they don't, they lose the privilege of using University facilities, or the University name.

Feels Rules Satisfactory
Rishel commented that and student leaders, we feel that the new social regulations answer the needs and requests of the great majority of students."

He said that he expects no immediate changes in the regulations, but that those granted are "one move in the modification of rules." "They will continue to be renewed and changed as the University moves on. I hope we never become stagnated."

Crishon Dissatisfied

Student Government President Dan Crishon, who last year first proposed changes in the social rules, said, "I was disappointed at the new social regulations. We'll try again this

YEF Awards Fin. Aid To 700

The Youngtown Educational Foundation expects to award more than 700 grants-in-aid and scholarships to YSU undergraduate students this fall. A few graduate students will also receive aid from the YEF.

YSU financial aids director Colonel Wales says that the foundation provides more scholarships for YSU students than any of the other sources combined.

Grants-in-aid outnumber scholarships from the YEF. Student assistance from the foundation varies from $450 full tuition downward. Room, board and book costs are not assumed by the YEF.

Students are recommended by the YSU financial aids department on the basis of academic promise and need. These recommendations are followed closely by the YEF in their awards said the chairman of the YEF scholarship committee, Dean Smith.

The YEF was incorporated in January of 1967 to help students who might not be able to attend school full-time for financial reasons and to help faculty members on leave for further study and research who might have difficulty subsisting on a university allowance which allots a maximum of half-salary. An average of six faculty members a year have received YEF aid upon the recommendation of President Pugsley.

The YEF is a permanent foundation which uses the income from its invested funds to help students and faculty. It has channeled certain funds raised for specific purposes while the university was a private institution into their pledged projects. For example, $3 1/2 million were contributed to the Beeghly Physical Education Center through the foundation. Private individuals, businesses, corporations and other foundations still continue to give money for the YEF in an effort to financially assist greater numbers of YSU students and faculty.

The Youngtown Educational Foundation has a thirty-member Board of Trustees comprised of many members of the old YU Board. Four of these members also sit on the nine-member YSU Board of Trustees.

There is a distinction between the YEF and the YSU Alumni Association in that the purposes for YEF funds are limited to grants-in-aid, scholarships and faculty leave assistance, while alumni funds are not.

Common Sense

It is a curious study in objectivity when opponents of an issue become the deciding authority on the matter. Last December when it was evident that the outdated (circa 1950) social rules needed revision, measures were introduced to liberalize the rules to make them more applicable. Recently the very administrators who opposed the liberalization of the rules, issued the so-called new rules. Proponents of feasible guidelines had no say-so on the issue.

Although minor concessions were made in the new rules which, according to Student Affairs Dean Rishel, will "answer the needs and requests of the great majority of students," the rules remain essentially the same. The end result has been an incredible waste of time and effort.

Student Government president Dan Crishon reacted with obvious disappointment to the new rules. Fraternity and sorority members still joke about the old ineffectual rules. Now, we submit that what the great majority of students at this University really need and request is the freedom to determine for themselves what is right or wrong. The essence of a college education lies in one's ability to think for himself.

Students should not and will not be subjected to these rules. They cannot be expected to be responsible to irresponsible decisions. Neither the students nor the University itself can ever reach maturity until mature and sensible judgments come from our administrators. One of the oldest sets of social guidelines in history, the Bible, says it best: "When I was a child I spake as a child, I thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away child's things." We are no longer children.
