YOUNGSTOWN STATE UNIVERSITY

Vol. 49 — No. 23

Free classes now available

The Free University will reopen Monday with YSU faculty members teaching four classes without charge, Joe Magielsky, senior business major and student coordinator, announced yesterday.

Magielsky also said that more classes may be added to the schedule this quarter depending on student interest.

The first class, titled Mysticism and Art, will be taught by Associate professor of Art, James J. Lepore and will meet at noon Monday in room 114 of Ward Beecher Hall. The class will be an examination into the creative process and a comparison of this process to the mystical experience of religious persons.

Dr. Assad S. Kassees, assistant professor of sociology and anthropology, will hold class on The Israelization of Americans from 7-8 p.m. Monday in room 402 of the Engineering and Science Building. This seminar will try to separate fact from propaganda in news relating to the Middle East conflict. Efforts will be made to examine the media presentation of this conflict, and the extent to which it is manipulating Americans to accept only the pro-Israeli point of view.

Also offered will be a seminar in Experience and Communication taught by Dr. Charles Reid, associate professor of philosophy and religion. This class will meet from 6-7 p.m. Wednesday in room 402 of the Engineering and Science Building. This course will center around the problems of verbal versus non-verbal communication. Tentative topics (which will vary with student interest) include: Verbal Communication and how it is corrupted, communication gaps, topics from R.D. Laing, visual arts, and the psychology of non-verbal communication in everyday life.

The fourth course is titled Social Problems and will be conducted by assistant professor of economics J.J. Koss from 6-7:30 p.m. Thursday, in room 220 of the Pollock House. The course will be discussion of major social problems and the related factors which both promote and impede social change in contemporary American Society.

Now in Phase Two--

OEA hopes for majority support

The YSU chapter of the Ohio Education Association is now in Phase Two of its planned three stage development and is pleased with the progress thus far according to Dr. Thomas Shipka, assistant professor of philosophy and 1st vice-president of the OEA.

Shipka said that already one third of the faculty favors collective bargaining and he expects a clear majority to favor it by Feb. 19 when Phase Two ends.

Phase Two is the promotion of collective bargaining on the YSU campus and Shipka is chairman of the Collective Bargaining Promotion Committee, which was instituted to help inform the faculty about the OEA.

Phase One of the OEA development was the organization and the establishing of the group on campus. Phase Three will be the actual collective bargaining they hope to do in the Spring when negotiation begins.

Shipka said that many faculty members are afraid to associate themselves with the OEA. He, thus, has set up a system in which a faculty member can authorize the OEA to be its bargaining agent without the member's identity being known.

Promotion of collective bargaining in order to get a master contract from the university is the top priority of the OEA. Shipka, using the Ohio Board of Regents figures, points out that YSU has the lowest paid full-time faculty, has the highest student-faculty ratio and has the highest administrative costs in the state.

Shipka said that the OEA's primary concern is that attainment of self-determination for both faculty and students.

Commenting on the President Albert L. Pugsley's recent announcement that there might be some full-time faculty cutbacks, Shipka said the OEA will demand a justification for the cutback and stated the move must be opposed with the greatest force we can muster. "Their organization will have a policy paper on this subject and will argue that there is no need for the cutbacks and that the ad-

Former editor alone in suit

A libel suit against a former Jambar editor, YSU, and YSU President A.L. Pugsley will be continued with the former editor named as sole defendant according to Samuel E. Karam, attorney for Charles Carolyne a Youngstown jeweler who filed the original suit.

The law suit has not to date been tried on its own merits and asks $150,000 in damages. Carolyne alleges he was libeled when the Jambar in one of its issues made a negative comment on his credit ratings.

The U.S. Supreme Court dismissed an appeal earlier this week and so doing removed Pres. Pugsley and the university as defendants in the case. The dismissal by the nation's highest court upheld the Ohio constitution section protecting the state, its agents, and agencies from suit, by sovereign immunity.

Parking hassle fails to delay Evans' lecture

YSU students who feel that they are the only ones subject to the towing of the Youngstown Police department no longer have grounds for those feelings.

Wednesday the rented car of the Artist Lecture Series speaker Robert Evans was towed from the corner of Spring St. and Bryson. He had no previous record of parking violations in Youngstown nor did his rented car. It was the first visit for both of them.

The car was retrieved by Assistant Security Chief Jim Evans after some deliberation with both the Youngstown Police Department and their contracted towing service.

Mr. Evans came to his audience at 2 p.m. Wednesday as an admitted transgressor of Youngstown parking regulations and assured YSU students that the Youngstown Police department does not discriminate against them.

Evans told the audience of 300 that the Soviet Union has never before attempted to exercise its might and muscle outside its own boundaries as it is now doing in Egypt's.

Campus Shorts

Godot Flick

The English department will present the movie: "Waiting For Godot," made from the play by Nobel prize winning author Samuel Beckett, this morning from 10-12 and this afternoon from 2-4 in the audio-visual room of the library. The movie will also be shown twice Monday, from 9-11 and 1-3. Admission is free and all university students and faculty are invited to attend.

McCarthy Delegates

The YSU McCarthy for President Committee will hold a public meeting at 7 p.m., Saturday, Jan. 22, at 3 Oak Park Drive for the purpose of electing delegates for the Democratic National Convention. Any voter registered in the 19th congressional district is eligible to run as a delegate.

Students interested in working for McCarthy are urged to attend this meeting or contact Jim at 746-0191.

Libbies Meet

The introductory meeting for the Youngstown Women's Liberation will be held at 2 p.m., Sunday, January 16, at St. Augustine's Church 1614 Parmalee Ave., Youngstown.

The meeting is for all Youngstown women interested in getting involved in some phase of the feminist movement. For more information call 545-2838.

McGovern Delegates

Dr. Elizabeth Sterenberg, professor of Political Science; Dr. Alice Budge, assistant professor of English; Joan Kraynanski, Arts and Sciences freshmen; and Dennis Zapka, Arts and Sciences senior were among those who received a high number of votes at a meeting held in Steel Workers Hall, Tuesday to elect a McGovern for president slate for the nineteenth district.

State Representative

Timothy McGowan, senior in Arts and Sciences, has announced his candidacy for state representative in the 52nd Congressional district. He is a Republican candidate for the May 2 primary. McGowan is asking for volunteers to run his campaign and is asking help in circulating his petitions. Anyone interested can contact Tim at 757-3492.

Hritzko Speaks

Dr. Hritzko will speak to the YSU Philiatric Society in Ward Beecher Science Hall at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday in Room 212. Dr. Hritzko is a surgeon at St. Elizabeth Hospital. Everyone is welcome.

Chuey is Candidate

Carl F. Chuey, an instructor of biology at YSU has announced that he is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for state representative in the 71st district for the May 2 primary.

Chuey is a resident of North Jackson and is currently a vice-president of the Jackson-Milton Board of Education and a vice-president of the Mahoning Valley Historical Society. Chuey received his B.S. from YSU and his M.S. from Ohio University and has also attended the University of Akron and the Ohio State University.

Health Prof. Attends Conference

Dr. Joseph M. Marshall, associate professor of health and physical education is currently attending the 75th annual conference of the National College Physical Education Association for Men at New Orleans, La.

Atty. Karam said that sovereign immunity for a government should apply only when a government is engaged in government actions. He said that when a state university engages in the publication of a newspaper it ceases to function in a government activity and should not be granted the protection of sovereign immunity.

He said that if a state university published a newspaper which seeks support through advertising then it should be responsible for content just as is any other publisher of a newspaper. The fact that a state university cannot be sued for alleged libelous content when a private published can is outright discrimination he said.

Atty. Karam said that with the recent Supreme Court decision there is little if any administration is presenting a "false economy".

Shipka said, "If the President is not interested in good education and is not interested in the students, then he should go ahead with the cutbacks-but we'll fight him every step of the way." He also said that if there is a shortage of funds that "poor administration is the blame."

Shipka noted that the OEA has always supported students and has pushed "militantly" to include students on the University Senate. He said that students will be placed on the bargaining committee and said that the whole university community will benefit if the OEA became the bargaining agent.

Free Medical Clinic pleases YSU students

The most common response of YSU students serviced by the Free Medical Clinic has been, "Gee we're glad it's here," claims Jean Heck, Co-ordinator of Counseling for the Clinic.

The Clinic which has been helping approximately six persons on each Wed. night, fills a need for free referrals and low cost medical aid. It eliminates the cost of an office visit to find out if one needs medical treatment.

Besides referring patients to appropriate physicians willing to receive such referrals, the Clinic provides treatment for minor ailments at no cost. Some of the patients return to the Clinic for further treatment.

Also available are Planned Parenthood Counseling and group counseling for persons with psychosomatic problems.

The YSU Health Clinic is not allowed to diagnose but can make referrals to medical sources or treat minor injuries or emergencies. Since the beginning of the winter quarter 260 students, most of whom were afflicted with the flu, have used the health services on campus, Mary Catherine Murphy R.N., of the YSU Health Clinic said.

The Free Medical Clinic, operated by the Cooperative Campus Ministry, needs volunteers for work projects to help paint and clean the Clinic rooms.

Since the majority of persons serviced at the Clinic are YSU students, Olin Knudsen, the assistant director, hopes "that the students will feel responsible for keeping the clinic going." The clinic relies entirely on volunteers.

Staffed by six volunteers each Wed. night the Clinic is opened from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m., Dr. Donald Steffy, Clinic Director, said. The Clinic located in the Disciple House, is open to YSU students and persons in the near north and east side communities.

Anyone willing to volunteer their services can contact Olin Knudsen at 788-2471.

Pro Musica tickets are now available

Tickets for the Artists Lecture Series program by the New York Pro Musica went on sale to YSU students this week and will go on sale to faculty and staff Monday January 17, at the athletic Business Office in Kilcawley, room 104.

YSU students, faculty, and staff will be required to present an I.D. card to obtain tickets and will be limited to two tickets per person. All seats are reserved and student prices are $.50 per ticket, while faculty and staff are $1.00 per ticket.

The New York Pro Musica, which is comprised of young singers and instrumentalists who perform medieval, renaissance and baroque music, will appear at 8 p.m., Saturday, February 19 in Powers Auditorium.

The ensemble's repertoire provides an excursion into the musical past with sacred works first performed in 13th century French cathedrals; songs, dances and Flemish tradition, Tudor reign and Renaissance Spain.

Under the musical direction of Paul Maynard, the ten soloists are noted for their authenticity and artistry. They are supported by a library of available scholarly editions, microfilms, books dealing with every aspect of medieval and renaissance music, the services of a research associate and their now famous collection of early instruments.

They have toured the Soviet Union and had two successful tours of South America, with appearances at music festivals in Berlin, Spain, Holland, Israel and Dubrovnik.

Not restricting itself to the concert stage, Pro Musica, presents in full costume three 13th century music dramas, "The Play of Daliel," "The Play of Herol" and "The Resurrection Play of Tours."

During the past season the ensemble conducted seminars in early music at Yale University, City University of New York, nine campuses of the State University of New York, Stanford University, University of Oklahoma, and Case Western Reserve University.

chance of the Krause suit ever being aired. The Krause suit was filed by the parents of one of the four Kent State University students killed in May of 1970. The suit names the then governor, James Rhodes, then, Ohio National Guard Commandant, William DeCorso, and many unidentified national guard troops as defendants.

In all courts where the Carolyne suit was tested the courts upheld that Mark Shutes, the former editor, was not acting as an arm of the state in his duties as editor and therefore sovereign immunity did not apply.

Letters to the Editor

Asks more respect for speakers

To the editor of the Jambar:

At Wednesday's Skeggs lecture, I was amazed at the disrespect shown to Mr. Evans and the audience by students who walked out. Such manners reflect on the rest of the university.

I am not condemning the few students who sat at the rear and left quietly for classes. But others continued to leave from all parts of the audience which was only half full at the end.

I encourage all students to attend these lectures since you paid for them. The next features Dr. Jeanne Noble on February 10.

Says students get shafted again

To the editor of the Jambar:

Well, YSU has succeeded in shafting the student body in yet another area. Campus security, if any, the horrendous rip-off on parking stickers, and rotten food in Kilcawley Cafeteria have previously been points upon which the student's patience has been tried of the last few years. Now, as if to out-do themselves, we find the bookstore moving off to some far corner of the earth, in a location accessible only by car during the day, and at night for safety's sake, by tank.

Unit pricing may aid student budget woes

By John Lencyk
Staff Writer

Unit pricing, an aid in comparative shopping, will allow YSU students residing in the university area to make a personal dent in the inflationary spiral.

This new system was recently introduced at the Elm Street Sparkle Market in conjunction with their new computer ordering program. The concept of unit pricing gives shoppers the chance to make an easy visual cost comparison between different brands and different sizes.

Mr. Peter Gelsimino, manager of the Elm Street Sparkle Market explained how the new method works. Unit pricing essentially means that marketable items are distinguishable not only by brand name and size but also by volume or bulk weight and by cost per unit of weight, be it ounces, pounds, quarts or gallons.

Also discernable is the number of items contained in a marketable lot. This information printed on adhesive stickers is placed beneath the items it refers to. The consumer, by scanning the information stickers, can then easily ascertain the commodity selling at the most favorable price.

Illustrating this can be done by utilizing different sized cans of stewed tomatoes. The prices observed are entirely representative but not binding at any later date.

The information given to the consumer is the weight (8 oz.), the price per unit (21 cents), and the price per unit of weight, is this case ounces (2.6 cents). This can be easily compared to a larger can (16 oz.) and its cost per unit of weight (1.8 cents). A yet larger can (29 oz.) will sell for 1.4 cents per ounce. The consumer easily notices the cost decreasing as the weight and/or size of the product increases.

Mr. Gelsimino noted that this inverse relationship between price and weight is true in the majority of items that he sells but that the average consumer "rarely notices some of the large differences in price between different sizes of the same brand and also between like sizes of competing brands."

A noteworthy case in point is the difference in price between a nationally advertised brand of bleach and one which is sold only through the Sparkle chain.

Both bleaches contain exactly the same ingredients as indicated on their respective labels. Yet in spite of show-casing apparently identical elements, the prices for which they sell are remarkably different.

The lesser-known brand sells for 25% less in half-gallon size and for 33% less in one gallon size than does the nationally known brand. This can be translated into a 10% saving on a 40 cent purchase in the former case and into a 20 cent saving on a 60 cent purchase in the latter. In many cases a one gallon bottle of bleach manufactured by a little known company can be bought for the same price as only a half-gallon bottle put out by a nationwide company. The only difference is the shape, color and price of the bottles. The contents are the same.

Thus, the situation has become highly advantageous to those attempting to keep their living expenses in check. They only need to observe the items they desire and make a comparison which has been facilitated by the unit pricing labels.

This type of shopping, as Mr. Gelsimino noted, is still seldom utilized. Hopefully students will realize that although he may make a somewhat greater initial outlay by purchasing larger sized commodities, once he has done this his ensuing food bills will be lessened.

Though Mr. Gelsimino is on a first name basis with many of his customers and usually involved in discussion with one or more of them, very few have (Cont. on page 6)

The Middle East situation, Evans said, is a ticklish and tricky one, and a risk to the whole world. It contains the possibility of going on indefinitely and is highly subject to miscalculation. Although not identical, the parallel to the U.S. involvement in Vietnam during the sixties is "disturbing." In 1962, he pointed out, President Kennedy sent military advisors into Vietnam. In 1972, Soviet Premier Kosygin has been continuing the influx of Soviet military advisors into Egypt. The Red Army, however would probably rather not fight a land war in the middle East, after seeing a great power fight in the Far East.

He described the MIG-23 weaponry system "the envy of Western engineers," that travels at three times the speed of sound. It by far out-performs, he said, anything the Phantom system can do.

From Moscow's openness of supplying the MIG-23 system to the Egyptians, observers have stated that it seems the Soviet Union is Russianizing the Middle-East.

"Egypt may be becoming another Soviet satellite" from the indications of a 15-year treaty of friendship and cooperation signed between Egypt and Russia in May 1971. Never before, he said, has the Soviet Union formed this type of treaty with another nation. This arrangement represents the first time the Russians have attempted to locate a weapon system of its own design outside of its borders.

He pointed out that although no journalist, Western or Communist, has been permitted to see the weapon system, there has been heavy diplomatic traffic between Cairo and Moscow and there are at least 100 Soviet officers in the Cairo-west command headquarters.

Third in this year's YSU Artist Lecture Series, Evans was CBS Moscow bureau chief from 1967 to 1970. More recently he covered the capture of the Pueblo and the release of the crew, the trial of Clay Shaw in New Orleans and the affair of James Earl Ray in Memphis, Tenn.

More Letters

Upon arrival, one is to park in a lot designed for the clientele of a grocery store and not a university. If one is fortunate to find a space, he is immediately approached by a lot attendant. He curses your parking ability.

Entering the book store, however, it is found that everything is the same as in the old location; gross overcharging on the sale of books, and a staff who may take as long as 20 minutes to fill an order for one book (that is if one escapes death from old age waiting in line before his order is even placed).

The logic used in moving the bookstore to this new location must have been borrowed from that little man on the three-wheeler (motorized of course) who tickets student cars anywhere and everywhere he can.

Dave Long

review Movie "Together" ---isn't

by John Manser

One approach to exploitation films has been to make them in a pseudo educational-documentary style. Two advantages of this style are, first, a seemingly legitimate reason for putting nude bodies on the screen, and second, it gives a movie-goer with hang-ups a rationalization for seeing nude bodies. One distinct disadvantage is the movies are usually extremely boring. Together is no exception. Its so-called purpose is to educate married couples in the art of love, both physically and mentally. To fulfill this aim a lot of time is wasted spewing out sophomoric psychology about relating and communicating. Interspersed between and during the nauseating narration are the nude scenes which seem a bit liberal for documentary type movies and reveal that the director's attempt at versatility in a tried and true formula is simply limited to excess. Cry Uncle proved soft-core porno movies could be done, aside from their obvious enticement, entertainingly. Together appears to be trying to show the opposite and, I think, does so eminently. Actually, sometimes the directors of movies like Together appear ambivalent toward sex; they are willing to uncover forbidden fruit but while doing so exact penance from the viewer.

Washington & Jefferson and Cal. State go down the drain to Penguin tankers

"One helluva meet," commented elated swimming mentor Bob Leahy after his Penguin tankers registered their second and third wins of the young season, Wednesday in a double-dual meet at California, Pa.

YSU sunk: California State (Pa) 35-47 and Washington and Jefferson, 60-53. The aquamen beat Thiel 63-41 early last December in their initial outing.

Leahy felt it was one of his most satisfying victories in five years of coaching, citing the win as "a total effort with clutch performances from everyone." Statistics seem to bear him out.

The 400-yard medley relay team of Tom McGee, Rami Yehudai, Chuck Cook and Jeff Suain lowered their time 27 seconds (4:05.9) from the Thiel meet.

In the 1000-yard freestyle, Chuck Nienhuis shattered his previous clocking by over a minute with a remarkable 12:05 timing. John Carroll followed suit by trimming 30 seconds off his best time in the 500-yard freestyle (Cont. on page 8)

Catch - YSU The Award Winners

by Carl Basic

"Good afternoon ladies and gentlemen, this is Roger Mudd, CBS news, on the campus of Youngstown State University in Youngstown, Ohio. We are here today to interview the winners of the 73rd annual Circumvention and Subterfuge Award. The winner this year is the administration of Youngstown State University. This group has the unique distinction of being the only non-governmental body to ever win this coveted award seven consecutive times. Here with us today is the man who has just accepted the award on behalf of the Youngstown State University administration from the Chancellor of the National Bureaucrats Coalition, Curtis Muskie. Here is a member of that triumphant YSU administration. What is your name, sir and what is your job?"

"My name is John Law and I don't have a job—I'm on the administration here. I am the associate, assistant, vice-chairman of the On Campus Student Non-academic Activity Committee."

"Sounds like you must be a busy man."

"Are you kidding?"

"What are you going to do with the award?"

"I'm going to put it next to the Silver Tongue Award that I received from the American Rappers Association."

"To what do you attribute your victory in the competition for the Circumvention and Subterfuge Award? I understand you had some pretty stiff competition."

"Yes, that Wage and Price Control Board was pretty tough for an expansion team, but our resounding victory over a group of concerned students last Monday clinched the award for us."

"Yes, I watched you in action on Monday. You certainly came up with some good quips. When the students asked you about the frequent change of text books, how did you ever think of saying that you were on their side?"

"It wasn't easy. In fact it even got me into a controversy with my colleagues who held that the discussion table is no place for levity. Anyway, I got the idea from reading a book titled 'Explosive Punching And Aggressive Defense' by Jack Dempsey. That particular remark was part of my aggressive defense. I caught those students completely off guard because I knew that that was the last thing they expected to here from one of us."

"I see, and when you were asked about the quality and prices of food in the student cafeteria you referred them to Mr. Pappas, the director of the cafeteria. What kind of reaction did that evoke?"

"Well, Mr. Pappas wasn't too happy."

"How did you think of shifting attention to Mr. Pappas?"

"I got that idea from reading a book called 'My Secrets of Championship Chess' by Rocky Graziano. The move you are referring to is known as a gambit. That is when a player sacrifices one of his pawns in order to win the game."

"Does that mean there is a lot of dissention among the administration here?"

"No. With all these students hanging around we humans have to stick together."

"I see, the administration here at YSU must consider bargaining with students a serious subject?"

"Not exactly. You see some university administrations consider bargaining with students over student rights as a duty, others consider it a privilege. We at YSU consider it a sport."

"Thank you Mr. Law. This has been Roger Mudd, CBS news, in Youngstown, Ohio."

YSU cagers top Gannon

The Penguin cagers toppled the Knights of Gannon College, 70-54, Wednesday evening in the Struthers Field House before 3,120 fans.

The United Press International ranks the Birds number 20 in the small college basketball poll and the Associated Press lists YSU in their mention list. Akron University is ranked no. 10 in the UPI poll but that should change as they were upset by Cleveland State 64-58 on Wednesday evening.

The Pens play CSU this coming Tuesday at Cleveland and will meet Akron Jan. 29 in Struthers hoping to avenge their earlier loss.

Tomorrow night the Birds face Alliance College at 8 p.m. in the Struthers Field House. Greg Merrill who is having a bout with the flu plus an ear infection, and Jeff Skeeles, who is also sick are not expected to see action tomorrow.

Sophomore Ron Romine of Badger High got his first starting role of the season Wednesday and was impressive as he scored 18 points. Bill Wells was the high scorer for the Penguins as he totaled 20 points, his second best of the season. Bill McMeans scored 15 points, Ron Smith had 10 points, and Bill Johnson rounded out the point total with 7 points.

The Pens hit on 43.3% of their field goal shots and were 62.1% from the free throw line compared to Gannon's 41.1% field goal hitting and their 53.3% from the free throw stance.

The Penguins were ahead 24-16 at half time and then scored 46 points in the second half to wrap-up the ball game.

Unexpected surprises seemed to be the rule rather than the exception as several tankers turned in better than expected performances. Chuck Cook, competing for the first time in the 200-yard butterfly, captured two second places. Jeff Suain and Tom Evans swept the first two places against Calif. State in the 50-yd. freestyle.
