Financial aid to go to part-time students

YSU part-time and graduate students will soon be eligible to receive scholarships and grants-in-aid, announced the Youngstown Education Foundation's board Tuesday.

These monies will be extended to students taking nine hours or less and will vary up to half the student's tuition, reports Dr. Howard W. Jones, the foundations president, although the details of eligibility have not been worked out.

Between 1,000 and 1,100 full-time students have received scholarships from the foundation since the program was begun in 1967, and the amount of assistance has increased from $284,309 in 1973-74 to $338,334 in 1974-75, according to Jones.

Also announced by the board were three appointments including Dr. Thomas D.Y. Fok, member of the YSU board of trustees. Earl W. Brauning, president of the Union National Bank, and Thomas J. Travers, board chairman of Commercial Shearing are the other two appointees.

Students interested should contact Financial Aid for more information, ext 212.

Brown gives lecture on treasurer manual

A half-hour lecture on the use of the Student Organization Treasurers' Handbook given by Bill Brown to a large group of student organization presidents and treasurers highlighted yesterday's Student Council meeting.

Brown emphasized and clarified all the links in the budget utilization procedure which had caused frequent problems.

In other business, council expressed a consensus in favor of continuing Student Government's newsletter, the S.G. News, in response to Student Council vice-chairperson Chuck Owens' request.

Owens said the Student Publication's Committee wanted to know Council's sentiments before ruling on S.G. News' status as a student publication.

George Kafantaris, the Student Council representative, who edited the S.G. News Spring Quarter, said Student Council needed a format independent of The Jambar to protect its own image.

Liz Strouss, Student Council publicity chairperson, pointed out that Student Council could buy advertising space in The Jambar, and noted recently that The Jambar had printed a lengthy article submitted by Council as an input column. She said she had arranged a meeting with the The Jambar editorial staff for future articles.

"Do we want our opinions to be stifled by someone down at The Jambar with a red pen?" replied George Galaris, Student Council Representative, who noted The Jambar's right to edit all letters to the editor and input columns.

Student Council Representatives Darryl Tukufu said that the newsletter's format was not appealing to the students, whereas The Jambar format was.

"The S.G. News has been better received than we expected," replied Kafantaris, who said he had received many SEEING HISTORY— is more interesting than reading about it.

This theory is used as a teaching tool by the Society for Colonial Military Re-enactments which depicts early Ohio and Western Pennsylvania culture in presentations to interested groups, like this social sciences class at YSU.

Bob Talbott, a society member and a YSU law enforcement major, is shown wearing authentic replicas of 18th century Iroquois Indian garb, complete with tribal war paint, scalp lock hairstyle, crow beads and deerskin leggings. The French marine officer standing guard during the historical recreation is Roger Jespersen. Both uniforms were designed from patterns described in old diaries. The deadly art of scalping was taught to the Iroquois by the British and French.

Kent State elects faculty union follows lead set by Youngstown

Collective bargaining at KSU has passed by a narrow 21 vote edge, 492 to 471, making KSU the third major university in Ohio to elect a faculty union, according to the Daily Kent Stater.

YSU became the first public university in Ohio to adopt collective bargaining with the initiation of the YSU-OEA in May 1972.

The collective bargaining measure passed despite opposing Kent Stater editorials. Upon passage of the measure, the Kent Stater reminded its readers that the bargaining process "will cost about $100,000 in administrative costs alone" and students could easily be left out of the whole process. They urged the union to work with students.

The bargaining agent for KSU is the United Faculty Professional Association, (UFPA), and according to the Kent Stater it may still be challenged by the Concerned Faculty for No Agent. The group has seven days to decide whether it will challenge the UFPA election before the results are certified by the American Arbitration Association, administrators of the election.

When the KSU Board of Trustees approved the elections to determine whether the faculty was to unionize, they made a provision stating that student participation will be assured in any collective bargaining negotiations, noted John McCown, news editor of the Kent Stater. McCown said what kind of participation students will be allowed is not defined in the provision.

Students at YSU, through a Student Government representative, are allowed to suggest items to be put on OEA-Administration agendas and are briefed as to items that will be discussed at the meetings; they cannot attend sessions.

According to the Kent Stater more than 90 percent of the eligible KSU faculty voted in the ## Student seeking post on Board of Education

"Don't vote for me just because I'm a student. I'm not running just because I'm young." This is how Joe Rafidi, one of eight aspirants to four seats on the Youngstown Board of Education, appeals to city voters.

But his age—he's 22—and his status as a YSU senior pre-law student make Rafidi an unusual candidate in today's election to the Board of Education, traditionally composed of older, more conservative community elements.

Why does a college student, who sidelines as an independent insurance agent and plans to begin law school in the near future, want the job as Board of Education member?

Rafidi answered by charging that "the present Board has been ineffective, playing too much politics and causing problems. We've been having problems because the Board has been acting politically and not in an impartial manner."

Rafidi, who is on hiatus from YSU this quarter but plans to return in the spring and finish requirements for his degree said he began attending Board meetings last year to protest the lack of warning lights or flashers on WRTA buses which transport children to city schools.

Rafidi is outspoken on the larger issues of education in the community, and the country. For instance, he thinks the courts in this country ought to reconsider their decisions to bus students to achieve racial balance in schools. He said, "busing is not a good alternative. You waste money when you bus; this money could be used to upgrade and revitalize city schools."

Rafidi spent part of the summer knocking on doors, talking with voters and rallying support for a new young face on the Board of Education. He has spoken before PTA committees, booster clubs and citizens' groups, and has stood outside factory gates in order to discuss his ideas and plans with workers, many of them the parents of city school children.

He reports he has noticed a "favorable reaction" to his campaign by older citizens in the community. "It surprised me," he said. He feels city voters may be looking for a change.

Listing his qualifications for a Board position as extensive involvement in business—he is self-employed—and community affairs. He is also treasurer of Mahoning County Young Democrats, and a past president of YSU's Association of Future Lawyers.

Rafidi feels confident of victory at the polls today, predicting that incumbents will not be reelected to the Board.

As for causes he will promote if elected, Rafidi said he will "play it by ear."

YSU will host conferences on Law Careers Day, Nov. 15

Law school representatives from Akron, Case-Western Reserve, Toledo, and Cleveland-Marshall Universities, among others, are expected to attend the 1975 Law Careers Day Saturday, Nov. 15, sponsored annually by the political science department.

A luncheon will begin at 12:15 p.m. and conference sessions with law school faculty members, admissions officers and senior law students, often YSU alumni, will follow at 1:30 p.m. Both the luncheon and conferences will be in Rooms 216 and 217 of Kilcawley Center.

Conferences allow students who are planning a career in law to meet in an informal setting with various law school representatives to discuss the Law Schools Admissions Test, school admissions policies and standards, financial assistance and minority recruitment programs, law school curriculums, and career opportunities in the field of law.

Some additional law schools may be represented at Law Careers Day, including Capital University of Columbus and the National School of Law of

Washington D.C.

Also present at sessions will be Larry Esterly, assistant professor of political science and coordinator of Careers Day. Esterly recently attended the Midwest Conference of Pre-Law Advisors in Chicago, sponsored by the School of Law of Northwestern University, where he heard guest speaker Harry B. Reese of the national Law School Admissions Council talk about new developments relative to LSAT and general admissions policy. Esterly is pre-law advisor for YSU.

Students interested in attending the $3 luncheon can make reservations until 5 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 13 in the political science department office, Room 109 of Arts and Sciences office building. Students need not attend the luncheon in order to attend conference sessions. There is no registration fee for the sessions.

Questions about Law Careers Day may be directed to Esterly in the political science department, ext. 387.

Auditing

While Student Council's decision yesterday to begin auditing the private records of student organizations financed by Council is necessary and within its rights, the decision in its present form could lead to grave consequences.

The decision arises from good intentions. Council has recently become concerned that some student organizations may be mismanaging their funds, neglecting to keep records, or even spending funds illegally.

Also, Council is not too eager to give funds to organizations with fat bank accounts if it can avoid doing so. Auditing private records is the essential first step in stopping these abuses.

But in the procedure outlined for auditing, Council neglected to consider the abuses an unscrupulous student administration could impose on a disfavored organization with this power. Instead of auditing all organizations in a systematic and unprejudicial manner, the decision will allow the Student Government Budget Committee to audit any organization they chose.

For an unscrupulous administration, this selective auditing could be quite a tool in harrasing any organization with which it has less than an amiable relationship. The auditing is not only a hassle for organization treasurers (certainly the most wearying office one can hold in an organization); it also tends to sully their image with suspicions of dishonest conduct.

The harassment potential cannot be entirely alleviated, but some safeguards could be put into the process to discourage abuse. One would be to require the Budget Committee to audit every organization's books at least once every two years. A maximum number of audits on a single organization could be set also, to discourage harassment.

A more complex but maybe more workable safeguard would be put specific guidelines on what the Budget committee could base its decision to audit on. Some factual evidence could be required, or the decision could be put in the hands of a combination of widely separated powers. Perhaps the simplest safeguard, though the one most subject to corruption, would be to put the decision in the hands of an administrator, such as Student Organizations Director Mark Shanley, who would have no direct conflicts of interest.

In any case, Council should institute some form of safeguard, rather than wait for the administration or the courts to impose one. We urge the representatives to consider the matter carefully.

Feedback

Calls for concern on student lots

To the editor of The Jambor:

Friday's article concerning rental of the church parking lot seemed a bit inconsiderate. Father Marnureanu suggested that the faculty and staff should have no concern for students. Without students, who would need faculty and staff? YSU parking problems have become a concern for all parties, not just the students.

Henry Dietz
Junior
Business Administration

Editor's note: Marnureanu did not say that YSU faculty and staff shouldn't have concern for students.

He said that they already are provided by the administration with adequate parking.

All-day seminar scheduled at KSU for B.S. & M.D. degree students

The 42 students enrolled in the combined six-year B.S./M.D. degree program of the University of Akron, Kent State University, and YSU in conjunction with Northeastern Ohio Universities College of Medicine, will meet each other for the first time Tuesday, Nov. 11, for an all-day seminar.

The students, 14 from each campus, will join Dr. Robert A. Liebelt, Dean, at the College of Medicine offices at 9 a.m. for coffee and an opportunity to become acquainted with each other.

Students will receive a progress report on development of the College of Medicine during the morning session from Dr. Stanley W. Olson, Provost; Dean Liebelt; and Dr. E. J. Wheeler, Director of Medical Education Research and Curriculum Development.

Students will lunch on the KSU campus and then break up for small group discussions, followed by group reports.

The first class of students in the combined B.S./M.D. degree program will attend one of the consortium universities for the first two years of the program.

Year three will be spent at the basic medical sciences campus in Rootstown, and years four through six in the community hospitals associated with the College to provide undergraduate clinical education for the students.

Vacation planned in Virgin Islands by Omicron Lambda

If this year's spring break is unplanned, Omicron Lambda is arranging a vacation trip.

For the fourth consecutive year, Omicron Lambda and the American Institute of Biological Sciences are sponsoring a trip to St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands. From Monday, March 22 through Friday, the 26th students can enjoy the tropical climate, attractive beaches, the National Park or any number of things the Virgin Islands have to offer. Whatever one's interests, chances are they will be satisfied.

The tentative schedule for the trip is as follows: A bus will leave YSU for the Pittsburgh Airport where Vacationers will board a plane to either Miami or San Juan, depending on the amount of passengers for that flight. Upon arrival in St. Thomas a bus will take the group to the Hotel Michele overlooking the Caribbean. The trip will include four nights in St. Thomas plus breakfast each morning with an expected return to YSU set for 8 p.m. Friday evening. If one should decide to remain in Miami after the stop over on the return trip, the ticket will still be valid after a week for a later flight back home, but any additional expenses are the student's responsibility.

For a YSU students the price of the trip is only $275 while the price for a non-students is $285. A down payment of $50 to reserve a seat is to be paid to Dr. Carl Chuey by Nov. 30 room 410, Ward Beecher. There are 100 seats available on a first come, first serve basis.

Anyone with questions should see Dr. Chuey or any Omicron or A.I.B.S. member.

Students find inner strength with Outward Bound

Have you ever wondered how you would react under stress in a wilderness situation? If so, the Outward Bound (O.B.) program may interest you.

Outward Bound is a non-profit, tax exempt organization designed to help people overcome self-imposed limits and find inner strength they might not have known they had. By placing people in a wilderness situation, they demand that the participants put out everything they have 24 hours a day.

At YSU are two faculty members who have participated in the outward bound program. Dr. Gordon E. Longmuir and Dr. Lawrence A. Whitney, attended the Snowmass Wilderness area in Colorado two years ago.

Drs. Longmuir and Whitney set out in separate nine man patrols for their 26 day experience. The leaders of the patrols are experienced in their particular area and type of skills used during the course. Longmuir said that when he found his patrol leader was a woman he was disappointed, but as the course progressed he found that her qualifications and skills were quite sufficient.

One third of the participants and a good portion of the patrol leaders are women in the O.B. program. Many of the courses, in fact more than half of them, are offered in co-ed form. Whitney told of a woman in one of the patrols who completed a 26 day course with a broken ankle.

An important segment of the program was the three day solo course every member makes. In the days before the solo each member is asked how he thinks he will react on the solo experience. The solo time is spent in a limited area. No roaming from area to area is allowed. The only supplies that are permitted are a sleeping bag and a full canteen of water which they may fill from any stream and they may build their own shelter.

One of the most fascinating aspects of the course the two Drs. found was how people began changing before their eyes. Inside each of the groups people became more like individuals to each other instead of faceless things. The consciousness of the group members was raised and they began to see things in a different light, they said.

The only requirements in the O.B. program is that applicants be in somewhat reasonably good health and at least 16½ years old. There are no other qualifications. All types of people attend the O.B. programs: Scrawney high school students, overgrown college types, businessmen, housewives and many others.

There are seven schools in the (Cont. on page 5)

600 students attend dance for Tri-Sigma

Over 600 students attended a benefit dance sponsored by the inter-fraternity council for the Tri Sigma sorority, to remodel the Tri-Sig's fire-damaged house. More than $500 was earned due to Hardee's donation of half their gross from that evening, and the Great Lakes Band which played for only a quarter of their normal fee.

"There were two reasons we decided to sponsor this concert," stated Becky Maikrantz, a member of Delta Zeta and concert promoter. "Of course, the main reason was to help the Sigmas, but we would also like to prove to those on campus that the Greek system does more than just party."

"It is a good example of the Greek system working for itself and should provide the system with good publicity."

The Great Lakes Band played mostly dance music in an excellent performance that moved the crowd to dance in the old cafeteria Thursday night.

O.B. program all with both summer and winter formats. Colorado, Dartmouth, Hurricane Island, Minnesota, North Carolina, Northwest US and Southwest US are the areas for the schools with courses being held in the immediate or surrounding locations.

Two types of schedule are offered by O.B.; the standard courses open to the general public and the special O.B. courses mainly for educators and special interest groups, also open to general public at times.

The length and prices of the standard courses range from 21 days in the Idaho wilds for $450 to a 26 day trip in the Hurricane Island, Maine area for $600. In the special program schedule there is a larger variety of courses to choose from. A journey on the Green River in Colorado runs for $150. A 13 day jaunt in the Southwest school would cost the general public $350. At the extreme end of the price range is a $900, 30 day journey in the Minnesota.

All of the prices stated here are basic tuition. Outward Bound provides food, equipment, and instruction. Personal clothing, footwear, and transportation to and from the school is the responsibility of the participant.

Financial aid is offered by Outward Bound according to the need of the participant.

If you knew then what you know now, would you have enrolled in Army ROTC?

Have you changed your perspective on Army ROTC—now that you've had an opportunity to talk with friends who are enrolled in the course? Maybe you've concluded it does have something to offer you; maybe you should have enrolled when starting your Freshman year.

Since we realize wise people change their mind, we've developed a special program for students like you. You can enroll with your friends in Army ROTC now and catch-up with them in your Sophomore year.

Then you'll be ready for the Advanced Course when you become a Junior.

You still make no commitment until you enroll in the Advanced Course. At that time, you'll start earning an extra $100 per month (for up to 10 months a year).

funded by Student Council must submit their financial records to Council's budget committee for audit upon demand, according to a motion passed at yesterday's session.

The audit would take place on an individual organization upon the decision of the finance committee.

Tukufu reported that since Student Council's action two weeks ago authorizing an investigation of discrimination charges against the athletic department, four previously dormant black players who were qualified to play were put on the field in a recent game. Tukufu said the athletic department denied being influenced by anti-discrimination pressure.

Kafantaris displayed for council a list of over 100 gripes he had received from students recently, and moved that each council member submit a list of 15 gripes received from students for the next council meeting. The motion passed over Student Council Advisor Dr. Dave Bertelsen's objection that "gripes" was too negative a term.

two-day election to decide the unionization issue. The total number of voters was 989, about 93 percent of the faculty. Only 969 votes were valid. Nine ballots were invalid, one was blank and 16 challenges which were not ruled on.

When the YSU-OEA defeated the American Association of University Professors, (AAUP), as the exclusive collective bargaining agent of the YSU faculty, the OEA received 58 percent of the voter turnout. Eighty-eight percent of the faculty that was eligible to vote had cast ballots in the election.

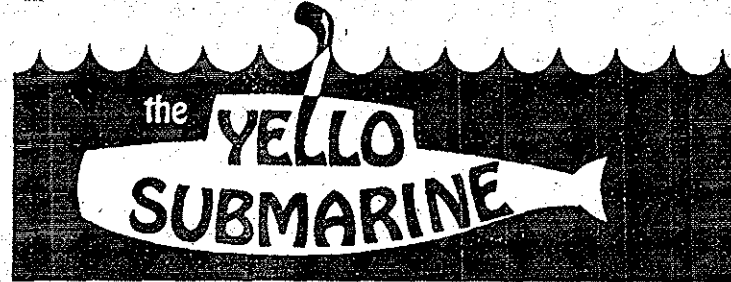

The KSU-UFAA is co-chaired by Drs. Robert Clawson and Harold Kitner. According to Clawson in the Kent Stater the next step in the bargaining process will be to "engage in correspondence with the Board of Trustees and invite them to negotiate a contract."
