Annual blood drive asks 'No chickens, please...'

By NANCY KERTIS
Jambar Managing Editor

The annual fall quarter Red Cross blood drive will take place today and Wednesday from 9:00 a.m.-3:00 p.m. in the Kilcawley Chestnut Room.

The theme of the blood drive this quarter is, "Don't Chicken Out." Co-coordinator of the drive, Keith Rubenstein, said he hopes the strong theme will help make this quarter's blood drive the "best blood drive in Ohio."

Rubenstein said that he and co-coordinators Kathy Kibler and Shelly Stevens have been doing a lot of work behind the scenes to insure that this will be the most successful drive ever.

Rubenstein said his goal is to have 1,000 donors. He said a free t-shirt will be given to every fifth donor and $100 will be given to the organization who brings the most members to donate.

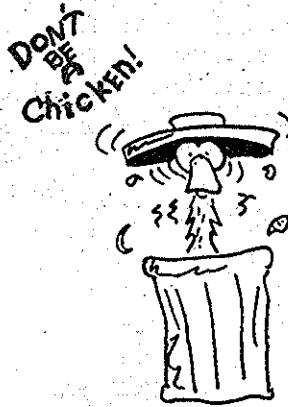

In addition, 95-K rock will also be present at the drive to help promote the event.

Rubenstein said, "I feel it is everybody's duty to give blood as long as the individual is able to donate." He said the whole process takes only half an hour from start to finish. Donating blood is relatively painless and can even be relaxing.

Blood collected at the local drawing is shipped to the Northern Ohio Red Cross office in Cleveland. From there, the blood is distributed to hospitals throughout northern Ohio.

The blood drive is being sponsored by Student Government and the Red Cross. Anyone interested in volunteering their time to help out with the drive should contact Rubenstein at 742-3591.

Greek Week calls for chapter interaction

By GARY HALL
Jambar News Editor

Cabbage Patch Tossing?
No, it's not a new bar room game reminiscent of midget tossing, but rather one of the numerous events going on this week as part of the YSU Greek Week '89.

Sponsored by the Greek Activities Council, the five day event pits members of each organization against each other as a method of encouraging involvement in the Greek system. The whole week is then topped off with "Pledge Appreciation Night" at the Tau Kappa Epsilon House.

According to Carol Sorenson, activities assistant and advisor to the Inter-fraternity Council (IFC), the Panhellenic Council and Greek Activities, Greek Week is "a celebration of the fraternity and sorority system."

"It's one way to bring them all together and encourage chapter interaction," she said, "and it also gives them a chance to showcase their organization for the University community by doing something very social and, hopefully, a lot of fun."

As for the crazy activities such as the "Cabbage Patch Tossing Contest," the ideas originate from each organization. "Each chapter decides what they want to do," said Sorenson, "and makes up a set of rules and how many from each team."

Sorenson added that she would like to encourage people to come and watch the events taking place on campus.

The events scheduled on campus for the rest of the week include:

Today:
• 1:30 p.m.—Kilcawley Center Mounds, Delta Zeta Cabbage Patch Tossing Contest

Wednesday, November 15:
• 11:30 a.m.—Dairy Queen, Tau Kappa Epsilon Pudding Eating Contest.

• 12:15 p.m.—Dairy Queen, Xi Delta Gamma Pretzel Eating Contest

• 1 p.m.—Dairy Queen, Alpha Phi Delta Cotton Ball Contest
• 2 p.m.—Track, Sigma Phi Epsilon 440 Relay

Thursday, November 16:

• 3 p.m.—Beeghly Swimming Pool, Phi Mu Swimming Events

Friday, November 17:

Great American Smokeout looks to clear the air

By RICK GEORGE
Jambar Editor

Thursday, Nov. 16, just may be a smoke-free day on the YSU campus as the eighth consecutive Great American Smokeout is observed on the YSU campus.

Sponsoring the annual event is the American Cancer Society with help from Student Government.

Doug Sherl, chair of external affairs for Student Government, is in charge of the event this year and foresees cooperation from all of the YSU community on Thursday despite the newly adopted smoking policy.

"It (Great American Smokeout) has always been a great success and I think it will continue," said Sherl.

"It (smoking) is an important issue," he said. "We want to explain the harm smoking can cause and offer more awareness to the dangers of smoking."

Even though the smokeout is Thursday, Sherl said activities will take place throughout the week.

Sherl said an English essay contest will be held, along with an office decorating contest.

He also said the respiratory therapy students will get involved by offering tests to determine an individual's lung size. The testing will be done in Kilcawley during the week.

Fraternities and sororities will compete against each other to obtain the greatest number of smokers pledging to stop their smoking for one day.

The Pittsburgh Penguin hockey team mascot will appear and 95K-Rock will broadcast live from the University.

Sherl also said it is in the planning stage that anyone trading in their pack of cigarettes will receive a free turkey sandwich.

"This is to try and make people stop 'cold turkey,'" said Sherl.

In an effort to include the students living in the dorms, a banner contest will be held. Each floor will design a banner which will be judged on their ability to promote the annual event.

People who pledge to stop smoking for a day will receive coupons for fast food restaurants.

Affairs Club attends conference

The YSU International Affairs Club was the winner of three awards last week in a model United Nations conference held on the campus of the University of West Virginia.

In addition to club members, students from Dr. David Porter's International Organization class (Political Science) attended the conference for class credit. Porter stated, "It was an excellent opportunity to allow students a hands-on experience into how the United Nations works."

A model United Nations consists of students researching a country and then representing that country's position in debate on issues such as drug trafficking, international terrorism, or international debt.

YSU representatives winning awards were: President's Award, Ruth Reese, senior, education, (Canada); Best Delegation, James Herrholtz, junior, education, and Deanna Powers, junior, A&S, (Yugoslavia); and Best Delegation, Istvan Domonkos, junior, A&S, (France).

Department offers degree in hospitality

By LAURA CAVUCCI
Staff Reporter

Have you ever wanted to be the proud manager of a successful restaurant or hotel but weren't quite certain how to go about it? Well now YSU has a major for you.

The home economics department is offering a two-year-degree in the field of Hospitality Management. The major, which was approved in the summer, deals primarily with students interested in management opportunities in the hospitality industry, including job opportunities in such fields as hotels, restaurants, cruise ships, and catering.

According to Dr. Mary Beaubien, chairperson, home economics, the state of Ohio is having a big push for tourism. All of Ohio, and especially this area, would like to provide better services for travelers, whether it be business or pleasure.

The program provides students with the knowledge and skills necessary to become competent professional managers in the hospitality field. "When hiring a graduate of a two-year degree, employers know that the person has passed English so they can write a little bit, they've had some math and probably know how to run a computer," said Beaubien, "so they've at least had some type of formal training which seems to save some of the companies time."

Some classes which are offered in Hospitality Management overlap with the home economics curriculum while others deal primarily with the major. One class, housekeeping, security and maintenance, shows students the importance of knowing how to do the simplest chore the correct way. Beaubien said, "The students aren't going to make the beds but they have to know how the beds are to be made and supervise the person who's making them."

Another class, food and beverage management control, enables students to learn about licenses and permits which regulate the food and beverage industry, plus working with Health Department and Liquor Commission.

Students must also learn to sell their business to people and this is taught through hospitality

"They have to think of all the different aspects that we (customers) don't usually think of unless we have some problems."

DR. MARY BEAUBIEN
Chairperson, Home Economics

and also small issues such as parking. "They have to think of all the different aspects that we (customers) don't usually think of unless we have some problems," said Beaubien.

In January, Jim Dishaw, University of Nevada, will join the staff as a full-time program coordinator for Hospitality Management. Beaubien said that Dishaw is very enthusiastic about coming to Youngstown.

Career opportunities for Hospitality graduates are great and Beaubien said that students won't have to relocate. Some opportunities areas include front office manager, convention sales manager, sales representative, employment manager, benefits coordinator, restaurant manager, and director of catering. There are currently about 15 students enrolled in the major.

United States should be careful with East German progress

History was made last Thursday as the Berlin wall came crumbling down and the East German government permitted its citizens to freely visit the west.

Over the weekend Egon Krenz, the East German Communist Party leader, has called for an emergency meeting of congress. He plans to oust the old hard-line government officials in favor of new modern thinking officials.

Within the last week, swift changes have been made in East Germany. It appears that progress for world-wide democracy is being made, but the United States should proceed slowly with their warm embrace of the changes.

The United States was wise in not sending aid yet. Secretary of State James Baker said the United States is waiting for "clear evidence that it is willing to reform its economy, not just its borders" before the Bush Administration sends any aid to the East German government.

The December meeting between Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and President Bush will indeed be crucial.

At this meeting, Bush will have to see what realistic future plans Gorbachev has for perestroika among communist nations.

The falling of the Berlin Wall is a momentous event, but the United States, or any other democratic nation, should not get caught up in the emotion of the moment.

Smokeout proves helpful to all

The Great American Smokeout will again take place at YSU on Thursday.

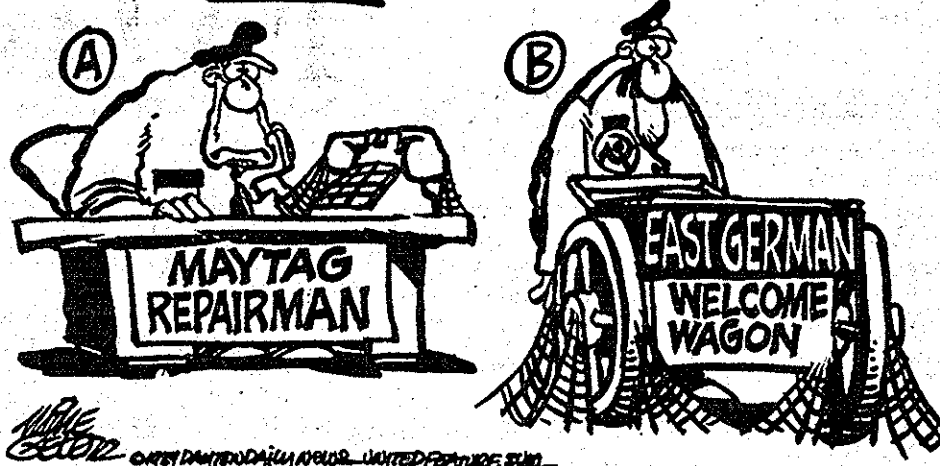

Even though there is a newly adopted smoking policy on campus, everyone at YSU should try to attempt not to smoke for one day. The American Cancer Society, which sponsors the event nationally, wants all the people to be aware of the dangers of smoking.

By not smoking for one day, it is possible that some people may give up smoking permanently.

For years, the Great American Smokeout has been successful in making people realize they do not need nicotine.

So, it would not hurt to stop smoking for one day. Even if you do not quit, there are still 364 days to smoke.

PICK THE LONELIEST JOB IN THE WORLD....

COMMENTARIES

Men should learn to take hints

I'm so sick and tired of being nice to pencil-neck geeks and vagrants that approach me in bars.

Doesn't it become obvious to a person once they get up and move to the opposite end of the bar, that they don't want to be bothered?

Well, apparently, last Friday one derelict couldn't take the hint.

I'm sitting at the bar, drinking a beer and having a good time with my friends.

All of a sudden this creature from hell comes up to me with slobber hanging off his lip and asks, "Do you want to dance blonde?" I'm like, "No thank you, I'm paralyzed from the neck down, maybe next time!"

He calmly staggers away, sits at the end of the bar and stares at me, giving me this smile that not even his own mother could love.

I knew it was only a matter of time before he made his second attempt, so I decided to go shoot a game of pool in the other room.

Within minutes he was by my side.

Dawn Marzano

"Do you want to shoot a game, baby?" he says.

"As I wiped the spray of spit off of my face, I nodded a quick "No."

At this point, the dude starts to get a little upset and called me names I only hear in my nightmares — yeah right!

I knew that the best thing to do at this point was to leave, so I did. It's idiots like that that make it difficult to have a decent time.

WISE UP guys! If a lady doesn't want your company and makes it known, don't make a bigger fool of yourself, walk away, you'll save yourself a load of embarrassment!

Changes make you appreciate life

Each new year brings about change. Friends come and go their separate ways, jobs change, another year of school goes by bringing us another year closer to graduation. Although the college experience may force changes in certain friendships and situations, family ties always seem to provide certain stability and permanence.

I recently found out that we are selling our house and that some members of my family will be moving out of state. I'll be staying here in Youngstown to finish out my last year of school.

I'll probably find a roommate and get an apartment until I graduate. After that I'll probably look for a job out of town. The reasons for my family's decision isn't relevant, but it really made me think. I'll have to make this Thanksgiving memorable because next year it's likely that my family won't be able to spend it together.

For a while I thought that it might be great to have my own apartment. I wouldn't have to fight to use the telephone, my friends could call me and for once the line wouldn't be busy. I could study in my apartment because it would be quiet. Therefore, I wouldn't have to go to the library all the time to find

Age causes all to become wise

They say the older you get, the smarter you get. That's part hogwash and part truth. The hogwash part is that we get smarter.

Actually, we don't get smarter, but we do tend to wise up. In other words, we figure out ways to beat the system, or God forbid I say we cheat.

Remember the old days when we used to sort of cheat by buying Cliff Notes in high school.

In a recent poll, it was discovered that 20 percent of the high school students have used Cliff Notes.

But once we get to college the percentage of students who use them drops to a mere five percent, and that five percent is destined to drop out of college. Trust me.

So what happens between high school and college?

We wise up, that's what. We figure out better ways to sort of cheat.

Everybody cheats. I cheat. You cheat. We all cheat.

Come on, now. Haven't you ever cheated on a diet, a round of golf, a game of Trivial Pursuit, a wife, or even a game of cards.

Then there are the students who cheat in the classroom.

These students cheat on tests. We've all cheated on at least one test, right?

Heck, in a recent poll by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, 43 percent of the college professors who were polled felt students were more willing to cheat

Constitution stops short with privileges

Two years ago, Prof. Charles Lawrence of Stanford Law School produced a scholarly essay of 31 pages, 62 footnotes and one weird idea. It was that the real purport and proper effect of the Supreme Court's 1954 school-desegregation decision is to permit, and perhaps require, sweeping censorship of speech.

Lawrence argued that the Court found segregated schools inherently unequal and unconstitutional because of "the message" of inferiority that segregation conveys. Therefore it is constitutional to suppress speech with a racist message.

It is but a short step — via the manufacture of yet another right (the right to respect)—to the notion that the Constitution sanctions suppression of all speech offensive to any of America's "traditionally subjugated groups" or "victims." Only one group is ineligible for the privileged status of victim: There can be no limits on speech about white males. Speech that liberals disapprove should be suppressed because it expresses ideas that are "culturally engendered" by America's sick society.

Were Lawrence's argument merely one man's eccentricity, it would not matter. However, it exemplified the ongoing attempt to give intellectual respectability to the spreading movement of censorship by liberals on campuses.

Many colleges and universities have adopted stringent codes stipulating impermissible speech. Such codes often come in a package with mandatory "awareness" classes. These are inflicted by sensitivity-tutors and other official consciousness-raisers. Their task is to make students "aware" of officially approved thinking about race, "sexual preference" and other items of liberal orthodoxy.

The proliferating rules proscribe speech that "slurs" or "stereotypes" or "stigmatizes" or "victimizes." The rules forbid giving offense to any group enjoying the coveted status of victim. The University of Michigan's rule (which a judge laughed out of court) forbade all speech giving offense "on the basis of race, ethnicity, religion, national origin, sex, sexual orientation, creed, ancestry, age, marital status, handicap or Vietnam-era veteran status."

Many such codes strikingly resemble something that recently enraged liberals: Sen. Jess Helms' amendment to prohibit federal funding of art that "denigrates, debases or reviles a person, group or class of citizens on the basis of race, creed, sex, handicap, age or national origin." "Tyranny!" exclaimed some liberals who, pausing over their lengthening lists of forbidden forms of speech, declared that denial of a subsidy constitutes censorship.

Prof. Alan Kors of the University of Pennsylvania shrewdly notes that in the 1960s, when most students seemed to the left of faculty and administrations, liberals said: It is illegitimate for universities to assert moral authority over students. But today, most students seem to be to the right of the academic establishment, so liberalism encourages that establishment to control ("raise") the consciousness of retrograde students caught deviating from liberal orthodoxy.

More than at any time in memory, there are many subjects "too sensitive" to talk about freely on campuses that are patrolled by prowling sensitivity-police. Courses on, for example, the history or sociology of race can be considered too problematic to undertake. This is a broader threat to freedom than the liberal mobs that howled down speakers supporting the U.S. commitment to Vietnam. It has more of a "chilling effect" than McCarthyism did because today the forces of censorship arise from within the academic culture.

The censorship that liberals like might seem especially odd in an era of permissiveness regarding curricula. But the permissiveness is itself a ploy in the liberals' struggle to politicize the curricula by ending the "domination" by DWEMs—dead white European males.

Liberals have been First Amendment fanatics (All forms of expression are of equal value — who is to say otherwise?) for a long time. Therefore, only conservatives can make the case for the kernel of truth in what the liberals are saying. Conservatives can say:

An academic community is not a haphazard aggregation of individuals. Rather, it is a community, a complex, fragile organism with distinctive purposes. Fulfillment of those purposes requires a particular atmosphere of civility that can be incompatible with unrestricted expression.

Liberals, however, have long preached universal disdain for all authority, intellectual as well as political. Having asserted that tolerance is the only obvious value, they are singularly unsuited to digging their heels into the academic soil that liberalism has made marshy.

In attempting to temper individualism with communitarian concerns, academic liberals are asserting a right they ferociously deny to every other community — local, state or national: the right to defend community values by circumscribing individual rights.

Among today's academic list-makers, listing all the forms of forbidden speech, are there any who defend the right of the national community to nurture its values by limiting the "symbolic speech" of flag desecration? Any who defend a community's right to defend its standards against pornography? Imagine the incredulity, quickly becoming outrage, if anyone suggested campus restrictions on speech slandering the United States?

Government plans race, drive for canned foods

By KRISTINE HARRINGTON
Assistant News Editor

Student Government, in cooperation with the American Cancer Society, is holding the first Great American Smokeout
race.

The Great American Smokeout is scheduled to take place on Thursday Nov. 16. According to Student Government President Brian Fry, Secretary of External Affairs Doug Sherl was instrumental in establishing the first Great American Smokeout
Race.

The race is entitled Run Your Butts Off and will take place on Saturday Nov. 18 at 11 a.m. The location for the race is YSU Spring Street. The race will be five kilometers and registration is $10.00, which includes the purchase of a t-shirt. Without the t-shirt purchase, registration is $5.00. Fry said that all proceeds will go to the American Cancer Society.

Fry also wishes to remind students that the Red Cross blood drawing is scheduled for today and Wednesday.

Fry said that he is interested in organizing a bus trip to the football play-offs if YSU is successful in their bid for a play-off position. According to Fry, a trip of this kind was taken in the past, "I am very interested in doing this again."

Sherl and two other members of the Student Government cabinet met with representatives from 95-K Rock to discuss the possibility of sponsoring two community service programs.
The first is a canned food drive.
Fry said the drive will be open to all student organizations and the organization with the most cans will receive a prize. He said that the cans will be given to the Youngstown Food Bank for distribution.

According to Fry the second program in the works is a toys-for-tots program which will be scheduled for Christmas time.
He said that new and used toys will be accepted from sponsors.
Fry said, "These programs are still in the discussion stage."

Former reporter appointed to position at News Service

ELLEN J. SULLIVAN

By KRISTINE HARRINGTON
Jambar Assistant News Editor

YSU's News Service and Publications has appointed a new news editor.

Ellen J. Sullivan is a former reporter for the The Vindicator. As a reporter, Sullivan was responsible for news and features in Boardman and Poland. Prior to that she served three years as an education reporter and covered YSU, the Youngstown City school district and education issues.

Sullivan earned her master's degree from Northwestern University's Medill School of Journalism in 1985 and a bachelor's degree in German and economics from Washington State University in 1984.

As the news editor of YSU News Service and Publications office, Sullivan will be responsible for distributing YSU press releases to local, state and national medias.

Sullivan will also be responsible for advising administration, faculty, staff and students in public relations and she will help the media in obtaining information about YSU.

Sullivan's interest in the position came about after serving as an educational reporter for three years, "I became familiar with the people and the things that go on, that is what appealed to me."

Sullivan said, "I am really glad to be here for one main reason. The people here are open for change. They are open to someone taking the position and organizing the news."

She said that she wants to focus on the role of YSU in the community.

than students have been in the past in order to get good grades. Our professors are catching on, folks.

You would expect many students would be upset that almost half the professors polled would expect their students to be cheating.

But I'm not upset. Well, I am upset, though not because they feel we're cheating, but rather because there is another 50 percent that don't feel we are more prone to cheat than our peers in the past.

I think the 50 percent who feel we're more prone not to cheat don't feel we're smart enough to cheat.

I think they feel we don't have the ingenuity to find ways to cheat properly.

What do they take us for, saps?

We can cheat just as well as students in the past.

We just don't get caught as often as our older brothers and sisters did.

Yeah, that's it. Pound for pound we can out-cheat them any day of the week, even with one hand tied behind our backs.

Trust me, you'll be reading about us in the future when we take our position in society.

We are going to outdo Watergate, Irangate and the Ivan Boesky's of the world.

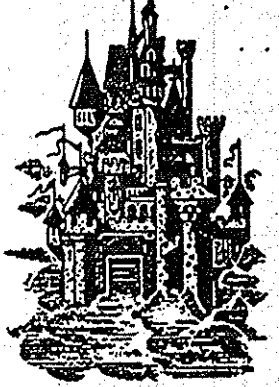

I'm just letting you know right now — don't mess with us.

Police report details arrest for theft, possession of syringe

GARY HALL
Jambar News Editor

A report at Campus Police detailed the arrest of a man for theft and the possession of a "drug abuse instrument."

At 9:54 p.m. on Thursday, Nov. 9, a theft of a purse occurred in the basement of Cushman Hall, the report stated. Officer Lally obtained a description from an eyewitness, describing the subject as "male, black, slim build, average height, with a moustache and beard, wearing a black jacket, with a black hat." The subject was also reportedly running north on foot pursuit. At 10:02 p.m., officers were advised that the subject was possibly inside the vacant home at 311 Grant St., the report continued.

At 10:10 p.m., Officer Beake notified Sergeant Clementi that he had a subject detained on Grant Street who possibly fit the description of the thief, the report continued. The officers responded to the area.

The report said that the subject there had a black jacket and hat in his left hand and a black clutch purse in his right which he dropped to the ground as Beake approached. Beake retrieved the clutch purse and discovered that it contained miscellaneous personal papers belonging to the subject and

"several rounds of .22 caliber ammunition and one round of .25 caliber ammunition."

At that time, the citizen who was chasing the subject approached Clementi, the report said, and stated that he could identify the individual responsible for the theft, and positively identified the subject as the perpetrator. The subject was placed under arrest for theft.

The report also stated that police found one "hypodermic syringe, disposable, containing a clear liquid" in the lining of the jacket he was carrying. The subject was additionally charged with "possession of drug abuse instruments," and transported to the City Jail.

Talking Penguins claim top honors in tournament

YSU — Although reduced in numbers due to conflicting commitments, the YSU Forensics Team — "The Talking Penguins" — carried home an armload of trophies from Ohio University's Appalachian Fall Classic Tournament, held on Veterans' Day weekend at the Ohio University campus in Athens. Every member of the YSU squad returned home with at least one trophy in hand.

Al Franklin, junior, F&PA led the Penguins with a second in Prose Interpretation, a third in Poetry Interpretation, and a fifth in Dramatic Duo Interpretation.

Dave Mularchik, freshman, F&PA, shared the Duo win with Franklin.

Team captain Rebecca Tally, sophomore, F&PA and Shannon Jones, sophomore, A&S, each scored in Persuasion, Tally taking fifth and Jones sixth.

The combined efforts of the tiny squad netted YSU its first sweepstakes award of the year. The Penguins finished sixth in a field which included a number of national forensics powerhouses such as Bowling Green, Towson (MD) State University, Wayne State and Michigan State.

New organization works to better YSU programming

By DORRI AGGER
Staff Reporter

The African-American Student Union is a new group on campus that began to organize in May of this year.

The purpose of the African-American Student Union is to create better programming of interest to black students, faculty and staff at YSU with emphasis on community involvement, said Teresa Mitchell, president.

Educational programming will include bringing in more minority speakers and setting up a scholarship fund for incoming minority students from Youngstown.

Social programming will include an Awards Dinner Dance to honor the achievements of black students, faculty and staff members.

The union hopes to feature minority cultural activities, highlighted during Black History Month in February.

"If we as African-Americans are not willing to help out in the preservation of our own communities, then the communities will begin to decay. We as a people have to stop depending on others and start trying to help ourselves. I really want this union to go into the neighborhoods and give something back to them," Mitchell said.

With this goal in mind, the group has plans to volunteer its services to different organizations in the community, and to make donations to community organizations throughout the year.

The union also hopes to help smooth the transition from high school to college for incoming freshmen by offering tours of the campus and setting up a mentor program for freshmen. "Role models are hard to find in drug-infested neighborhoods and so we as college students should try to promote the advantages of an education to the youth today," Mitchell said.

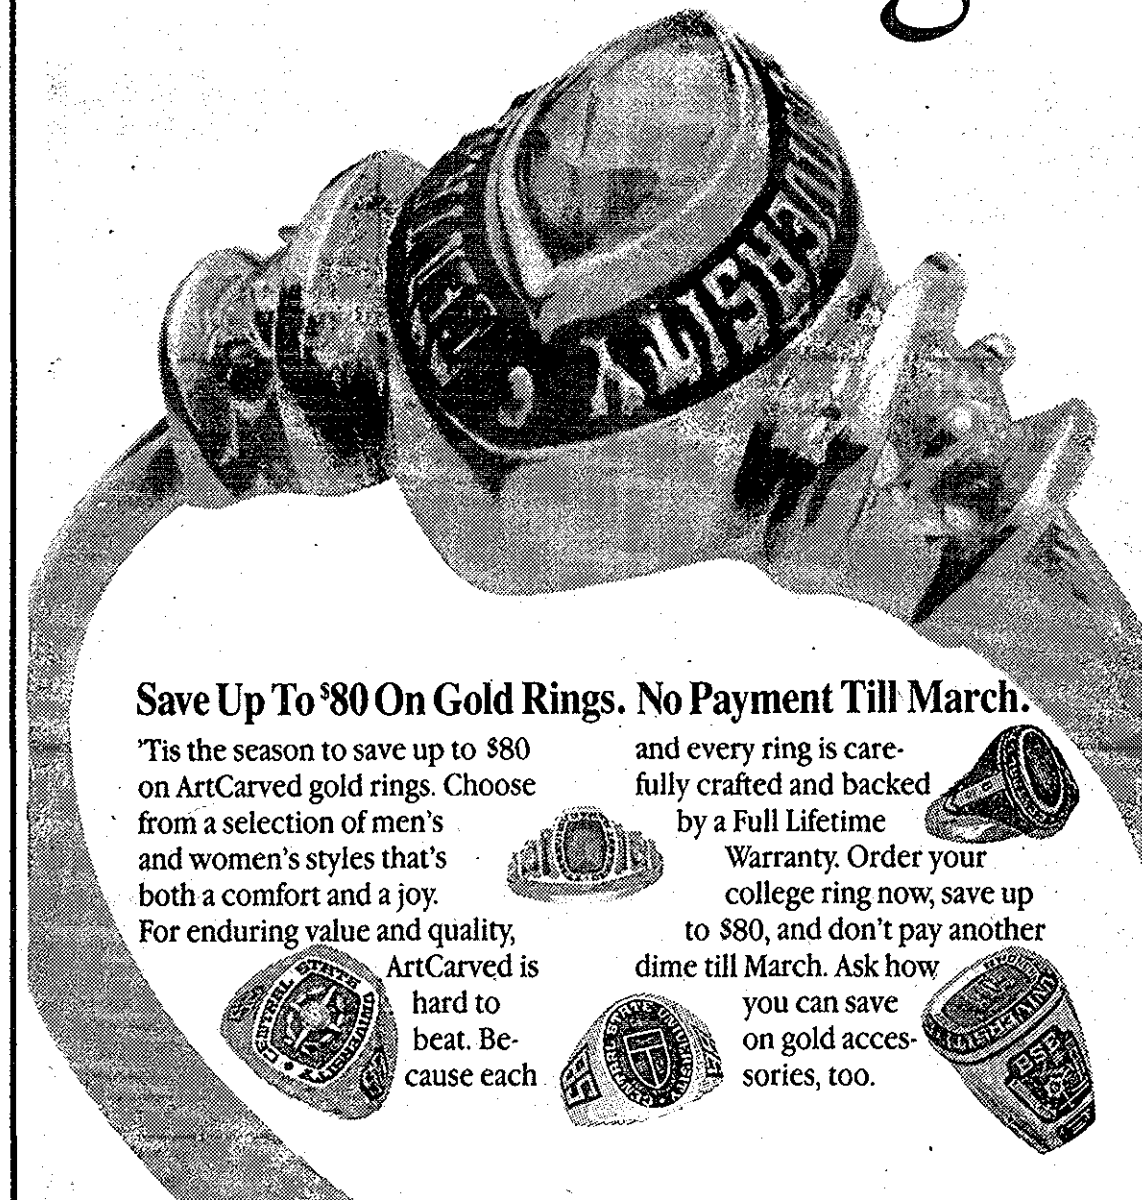

With a current membership of about 25 people, the group hopes to make the YSU campus a place where "we can all feel like we're a part of this campus," said Mitchell. This goal can be realized, in part, by creating unity within the black student community, she said.

Mitchell believes that by uniting the black students and gaining their participation in the union, some of the racial differences on campus will be extinguished.

A meeting of the African-American Student Union will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Cardinal Room, Kilcawley Center. A fund-raiser dance with a D.J. will follow in the Chestnut Room from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. The dance is open to the public.

Although my family might think differently, the truth is, I'm going to miss waking up on Sunday mornings knowing that everyone is home. I'm going to miss shooting the breeze with my brother and just hanging around the house.

I'm especially going to miss the holidays. In my house the holidays were always a time to bring up all the hilarious times of the past. And my mom never lets a holiday go by without saying, "I remember when you were born." Somehow stories like that you never get bored of hearing.

Our decision to move was sudden and unexpected, and its not necessarily permanent.

However, I do wish that I would have appreciated our time together as a family a little more.

High defaults boost move to cut off loans to first-year students

By The College Press Service

A new government audit that shows an alarming increase in the default rate for Supplemental Loans for Students (SLS) may help build political enthusiasm in Congress for a bill to bar first-year students from getting such loans, sources say.

"The report adds credence" to the bill, passed by the House but stalled in the Senate, to cut off first-year students from Supplemental Loans, said Rick Jerue, staff director of the House Postsecondary Education Subcommittee.

First-year students, Jerue said, are more likely to drop out and default on their loans.

"It's not a very sophisticated way to reduce defaults, but at least it works," said Philip Rever of the Washington, D.C.-based Higher Education Assistance Program, the nation's largest guarantor of student loans.

The measure generally is aimed at cutting off students at proprietary, for-profit trade schools.

Lecture scheduled in celebration of Geography Awareness Week

YOUNGSTOWN — Geography is much more than maps and placenames. Geographers play a crucial role in addressing national and global concerns such as acid rain, hazardous waste and world population growth. They study people, their environments and their resources in the context of space, location and place.

Geographers and educators throughout the nation are planning activities to celebrate this year's Geography Awareness Week, Nov. 12-18. As a part of this celebration the public is invited to attend a lecture by Dr. Thomas Schmidlin of Kent State University on Ohio tornadoes.

The lecture will be held in Room 2028 of Cushman Hall at noon on Thursday, Nov. 16.

In addition to directing the study of some thirty-five majors in geography, geographers at YSU pursue varied research interests. Current topics include Society Air Transportation, Economic Development in the Bahamas, Shoreline Erosion on the Great Lakes and Early Settlement Patterns in Eastern Ohio.

A joint resolution of Congress created the third national Geography Awareness Week to heighten public awareness of geography across the nation.

Saraya brings Youngstown to its knees at Park Inn

JOHN CHARIGNON/THE JAMBAR

Burnin' down the house: Sandi Saraya of the band Saraya, sings to an enthusiastic crowd Friday evening at the Park Inn.

By JOHN CHARIGNON
Jambar Photo Editor

The Park Inn was on fire Friday evening as the New Jersey based band Saraya ripped through their set for conclusion of the 95 K-Rock first anniversary bash. It was apparent from the moment they took to the stage that Youngstown was in for some serious music and a fine hour-long show. These people were hot and they rocked the pants off everyone in attendance from the word go. From their opening number to the Rod Stewart encore, they kept the intensity so high that Glenwood Avenue seemed more like downtown San Francisco several weeks ago. No one could have been disappointed with this performance; it was first rate all the way.

I applaud the radio station for this choice to cap off their celebration; however, it's too bad that two shows couldn't have been booked — especially since many people had to be turned away. Most of those who were able to make it in to see Saraya were probably as unfamiliar with them as I was, but not anymore. After this concert either you're a new follower or a solidified fan. I think I'm both.

I was afforded the opportunity to interview Saraya Saturday evening over dinner and I was impressed by the fact that they are as tight off stage as they are on. "Ohio rocks," claims Gregg Munier, the band's keyboardist. "No matter where we play the people are very, very into the show. This is one of our best states." Drummer Chuck Bonfante added, "It's funny, but you can never predict a gig," he went on to say, "the feedback and response from the audience is everything; last night all the things were on. It was one of those nights when you say, 'Oh, why can't every night be like this?', and that's why we're here — to hopefully give the fans their money's worth so they'll remember and want to come back."

Saraya debuted this spring and has been touring since May. They have been over most of the U.S. and parts of Canada; they even did a two week stint in England. At the moment, they're doing a short run in the Ohio area and in the upcoming month will be teaming up with Bad English for a North/South-Eastern coast tour. "This is the first album and we want to ride it as long as we can," admitted Bonfante. Munier agreed, "If the second single 'Back to the Bullet' goes well, then we'll release a third. We don't want this to die now."

They went on to explain the difficulties in getting a recording contract and related the fact that many times a record company requests new material five or six times before they decide to sign the artists. "They might want two albums worth of songs before you get a contract and then they'll turn around and say, 'Start from scratch and start writing the record now, because that was

Kinison keeps fans in stitches with latest visit

By MOHAN SUBRAMANIAN
Staff Reporter

Sam Kinison provided plenty of laughs at Stambaugh Auditorium Nov. 8 as he helped celebrate 95 K-Rock's first year on the air.

Kinison, the brash, rude, and loud standup comedian, exploded on the scene three years ago. His performance on Rodney Dangerfield's HBO special catapulted Kinison to stardom.

Kinison's piercing delivery, earned him the title of "the screamer." Kinison mercilessly attacked everyone from homosexuals to his ex-lover Jessica Hahn.

The show was supposed to feature Kinison and opening act Carl LaBove. LaBove never showed, and there were no excuses offered for his absence. I sat in my seat for 45 minutes after the scheduled opening time waiting for the show to begin. Like the rest of the audience, I was not pleased.

Those of you who don't know the type of show Kinison performs should take note: he is very rude, screams tremendously, and doesn't care who is offended. Like the press release says, "...if you want family entertainment — rent Bambi!" Kinison's show is for adults only.

Entering with his traditional long coat and floppy hat, Kinison drew laughs immediately. The first group to suffer Kinison's wrath were women. Kinison berated women who undergo breast reduction as "the cruelest people in the world." The predominantly male crowd whooped and hollered.

Kinison also did some Iran-bashing which the crowd enjoyed. Kinison worked the Stambaugh Auditorium like a con-man selling insurance.

Perhaps the funniest material Kinison did was his drug-related humor. Kinison was hilarious. It was material reminiscent of Lenny Bruce. Bruce, the great comedian of the 60's, did stinging satire about social issues that endeared him to fans, but caused him to be censored. Kinison called the war on drugs ridiculous.

Kinison was at his best that evening. He earned the hard gut-wrenching laughs that one rarely experiences. The crowd loved his show, and Kinison enjoyed himself as well, performing for 90 minutes. Although the price was a little steep (17.50 plus tax), Kinison gave his all.

Dana faculty performs in concert series

By DOROTHY KAGLIC

YSU's Dana School of Music faculty, which includes the Westbrook String Quartet, will present Schubert's Schubert Octet Opus 166 at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 15, in Bliss Recital Hall on Wick Avenue.

The concert was written for three wind and five string instruments, and the romantic chamber features the clarinet, bassoon, horn and strings. The YSU performance will mark the first time in over two decades that the concert has been performed locally.

Saraya

 good enough for us to sign you but we think that you can do better that's just so there's a pool to choose from for a follow-up album," claims Bonfante. Saraya consists of members Sandi Saraya, lead vocals, Gregg Munier, keyboards and vocals, Tony Rey, guitar and vocals, Gary "Skid" Taylor, bass, bass pedal and vocals, and Chuck Bonfante, drums.

When I asked how they finally decided upon a name for the band, both Munier and Bonfante agreed that it was one of the most difficult things that a band is faced with. As Bonfante explained, "We were nameless throughout the whole recording session, but we just tried to concentrate on making a good record. The name Saraya wasn't in mind at all; in fact, Sandi was the most against it. She was afraid that the band would be pegged as a female lead singer with four backup musicians, which is not what the band is about. That's why there are five faces on the cover." It finally turned out to be an executive decision since they couldn't agree on a name and the records and CDs were already being manufactured.

It's a really unfair thing in our society," laments Bonfante, "something sexist I guess. Nobody thought that Van Halen was Eddy and Alex's band and that David Lee Roth and Michael Anthony were hired guns. It's just a name, a label and hopefully after you've seen the band, when you hear the name Saraya you don't think of the word and what it means, you think of the band, the songs and what you felt at the show."

"I can remember when I first saw her," claims Munier. "I thought, wow, she's really believable, I felt that she was very much a musician and that her heart was in the right place. I don't even look at her as a girl singer, she's a great singer, she's not just pretty thing that dances. Sandi becomes a song for sure and she just rocks."

She was joking with Howard the tour manager, about her finger nails and how she, "didn't know how long she could stand to let them grow." I asked her why that was so, and she explained, "It's not that I don't like being a girl, but when that gets in the way of doing the things I like — playing the piano or guitar — that's vain and then I think it's wrong." Well said indeed I must say.

Concert

"What makes this concert different from others is the unusual combination of instruments," explained Joseph Edwards of Poland, Dana professor of music. Edwards, who organized the YSU presentation, stressed that Schubert only began writing romantic chamber music in the autumn of his life.

The Schubert Octet Opus 166 is one of the strongest examples of grand romanticism written for small chamber ensemble," he said. "It's a very mature work of this famous composer and rivals some of the monumental works of others."

Dana faculty members who will perform include: Edwards, clarinet; Donald Byo of Liberty, bassoon; and Robert Cole of Youngstown, horn. Westbrook quartet members include: Andrew Bruck of Boardman, violin; Susan Brenneis of Youngstown, violin; Cynthia Kempf of Boardman, viola; and Cheeko Matsusaka of Boardman, cello. YSU graduate and Youngstown Symphony Orchestra member, Jeff Bremer of Youngstown, will join the faculty and play the horn.

For more information about the upcoming concert, call the Dana School of Music at 742-3636.

 board when junior Wide Receiver Ernest Priester pulled in a 36-yard pass from junior Quarterback Hal Galupi. The score came on the second play of a drive that spanned 75 yards and lasted a mere 22 seconds.

After the touchdown junior Placekicker Darren Weber kicked the extra point to make the score 21-7.

Also in the third quarter junior Tailback Leo Hawkins sprinted to a 60-yard touchdown on the third play of a 73-yard drive. Hawkins' run was followed by another Fozkos kick.

This final kick of Fozkos brought his team leading scoring total to 71 points.

In the fourth quarter Edinboro scored again as Priester caught his second touchdown pass of the day. Weber's point after brought the score up to 28-14 and closed out the scoring for the day.

This Saturday the Penguins will be playing host to the Tigers from Towson State University.

Dravecky leaves baseball

SAN FRANCISCO — According to the Associated Press, Dave Dravecky, who made a brief comeback after having a cancerous tumor removed from his arm, announced his retirement from the San Francisco Giants on Monday.

The 33-year old left hander said he didn't want to risk any further injury.

The Associated Press said Dravecky told Giant President and General Manager that doctors have found new lump in his left arm and feel another comeback attempt will weaken it.

According to the Associated Press, Dravecky and his wife, Janice, are happy and proud of his tremendous baseball career.

Dravecky is currently writing a book and has no immediate plans for the future.

Dravecky is a graduate of YSU.

So what does L.H. do? He may want to play a tough, undefeated Alabama team in the Sugar Bowl in New Orleans, which could also decide the National Championship.

So that leads us back to Colorado, 9-0 and no place to go.

They may get their wish, to play in the Orange Bowl. As far as an opponent, that's a different story.

Well that's all I could gather from the past few episodes. You'll just have to keep reading to find out what happens next.

YSU jumps to 17th: play-offs are in sight

KEVIN O'CONNOR/THE JAMBAR

Giving the extra effort: Junior tailback Archie Herring stretches it out for the first down in Saturday's game against the Fighting Scots from Edinboro University.

RICHARD M. JENKINS
Jambar Sports Editor

Chalk another one up for the '89 Penguins.

Win number seven has moved YSU up the NCAA Division I-AA weekly top-20 poll and has landed them at 17th.

With this ranking the Penguins are poised and ready to join in on the post-season fun this year if they beat Towson State this weekend and if no other teams jump ahead of them.

With all this in mind one must certainly see the magnitude of last weekend's victory against the Fighting Scots from Edinboro University.

The final score was 28-14, but in no way does this tell the tale that unfolded last Saturday afternoon as Head Coach Jim Tressel and staff led the Penguins in an impressive victory.

The scoring began seven minutes and 34 seconds into the first quarter with YSU driving the ball 62 yards in 13 plays. Topping the drive off was senior Fullback Steve Jones who took the ball in from the four.

Jones' run was followed by a field goal from senior Placekicker Robert Fozkos.

Second to crack the end zone for the Penguins was senior Wide Receiver Lorenzo Davis. Fully extended Davis demonstrated his ability by hauling in a 33-yard pass from sophomore Quarterback Ray Isaac.

Davis' catch came after an 80-yard, nine-play drive which took 4:11 off the clock. Fozkos followed with the extra point.

Coming off the bench after Isaac was shook up to bring the score up to 21-0 was junior quarterback Frank Edie. Edie's 10-yard pass was pulled in by junior running back Ray Ellington.

Once again Fozkos was there to kick the extra point.

In the third quarter the Fighting Scots finally got on the

Prospective '89 bowl berths confuse college football fans

David Lee Morgan Jr.

For all you soap opera buffs who missed last week's episode, I'll recap it for you. By the way the soap opera is called... "As the Buffalo Roams."

First of all, Sal (Aunese), the Colorado Buffalo's starting quarterback going into the season, is dating the head coach's daughter. She becomes pregnant and they eventually break up. To complicate matters even more, Sal is diagnosed of having cancer and later dies. Following so far?

Now, Colorado has been playing outstanding football all season long, led by quarterback and Heisman-candidate Darian Hagan. The Buffaloes are eyeing a bowl bid and a chance at playing top-ranked Notre Dame for all the marbles — a national championship.

Everything is looking good for the Buffaloes, right? Wrong. You see, standing in the path of the Buffaloes is a man they call L.H. (Lou Holtz).

Holtz is in the driver's seat as far as bowl games are concerned. He is literally "bowling for dollars."

Barring any losses the rest of the season, Holtz and his Notre Dame Fighting Irish Team can practically pick which bowl, if any, they want to play in.

Everything seems to be going their way, right? Wrong. Another twist in the "A.T.B.R." plot.

What's eating Holtz is that his team finishes the regular season in Miami against the Miami Hurricanes. A win in Miami would in all probability, guarantee a Colorado, Notre Dame Orange Bowl confrontation for the National Championship.

However, the Orange Bowl is played in Miami, at the Hurricanes' homefield.

Holtz, being a shrewd business man that he is, doesn't want to go down to Miami twice especially if Notre Dame beats Miami. I don't think Notre Dame would be well received

Ready for the season: The YSU women's basketball team will tip-off their season tonight at the Annual Red-White Scrimmage at 5:15 p.m. Above they are as follows: (bottom left to right) Natalie Miller(24), Rachel Cowley(22), Sandra Stocz(14), Doneen Alo(12). Going up the left side bottom to top: Heather Bango(42), Dorna Wertz(13), Jenny Woodward(32), Margaret Somple(30). Going down to right side top to bottom: Julie Bray(23), Lisa Gabrielson(20), Jenny Robinson(44), Donna Djorovic(34). In the center we have Jeanna Rex(33) and Dianne Rappach.

Women cagers begin season

YSU — Head Coach Ed DiGregorio enters his seventh season at the helm of the Penguin basketball program with hope and cautious optimism.

DiGregorio stated, "We have some seasoned veterans as well as some newcomers that I am counting on for some valuable playing time," he added. "We've added some top-notch freshmen that I honestly believe can help immediately."

Only one senior dots the Penguin roster this season, team captain Julie Bray, Brookfield. Four juniors who will be counted on heavily are Lisa Gabrielson Bristol High School, Jenny Robinson Canton McKinley High School, Margaret Somple Liberty High School, and Jenny Woodward, Massillon Jackson-Milton High School.

Four sophomores returning to the fold are Heather Bango, Massillon Perry, Diane Rappach, Mathews High School, Jeanna Rex, Louisville St. Thomas Aquinas, and Donna Wertz, Cleveland Central
