Professors talk of job increase

By DEBORA SHAULIS
Jambar Editor

The growth rate experienced by many local businesses in 1988 may slow somewhat in 1989, according to YSU economics professors, but employment opportunities in the Mahoning Valley should increase overall.

Dr. Anthony H. Stocks, chair of the department, and Dr. Yih-Wu Liu presented their annual Economic Forecast for the Youngstown-Warren Thursday at Mr. Anthony's in Boardman. The forecast was presented at an early bird breakfast, which was sponsored by the Youngstown Area Chamber of Commerce.

The professors have been giving their view of economic conditions for the upcoming year since 1982, and their projections are based on a model the pair designed in the late 1970s.

The past year was a good one for local businesses, Stocks and Liu reported, because the national economy was expanding as the value of the dollar

Winter brings more students onto campus

YSU — New momentum in graduate school programs at YSU is getting a share of the credit for keeping winter quarter enrollment figures on a steady keel.

The University's 14-day winter quarter enrollment summary reveals graduate school enrollment up 9.3 percent over the same quarter a year ago. Total campus enrollment, graduate and undergraduate, stands at 14,178, up 1.4 percent compared to 13,989 enrolled a year ago.

Fall quarter figures released last October reported the first enrollment increase at YSU in five years.

Winter quarter figures show total undergraduate and graduate student enrollment up by 189 students, when compared to winter quarter enrollment a year ago.

YSU President Neil D. Humphrey called the figures "very encouraging," and noted, "The University is getting its message out and is obviously attracting new students, particularly graduate students."

"New programs that keep pace with student, and potential student, needs are

Successful athletes emerge despite law

Editor's note: The name of the athlete in this story was withheld upon request.

By RICK GEORGE
Jambar Sports Reporter

Since its inception three years ago, NCAA Bylaw 5-1-(j), also known as Proposition 48, still is one of the most controversial laws ever passed by the NCAA.

Proposition 48 was originated at the 1983 NCAA Convention in San Diego by the American Council on Education and took effect during the 1986-87 academic year.

The rule states that a student must have a 2.0 in 11 core courses in high school, and either a 700 on the SAT or a 15 on the ACT. If a student-athlete does not pass this criteria, then he would have to sit out his freshman season and lose the year of eligibility.

At YSU, the athletes who fell victim of Proposition 48 are turning out successful according to academic advisor Doreen Anderson.

"Our Proposition 48ers are being successful," said Anderson. "They can definitely succeed in the outside world."

Anderson said she felt that Proposition 48 has its good and bad points.

"It has been successful in making high school athletes aware of academics, making them work harder," said Anderson. "The part I have a problem with is that it puts an unfair label on athletes. Why is 15 on the ACT the magical point? Many athletes just miss with a 14," said Anderson.

"Athletes do a lot more than people think," said Anderson. "We are not a bunch of illiterate jocks. The standards for an athlete to get aid are higher since they must have 36 completed hours of a C or better which is more than the minimal standard."

"Athletes are similar to any cross-section of the University," said Anderson. "If you go by the 15 on the ACT, then one-third of the students at YSU are considered 'dumb jocks'. Since YSU is an open-admission university, everyone has a chance to prove himself."

"We start with athletes who have a 4.0 in pre-med and go all the way down. Some get A's just like other students, and some get C's just like other students."

One YSU athlete who fell victim of Proposition 48 said he will always have that stigma with him despite getting a 14 on the ACT.

"Proposition 48 does give a freshman experience under his belt, but one should get to play a fourth year. Student-athletes should not suffer. I feel bad for many other athletes who have to have a bad rap put on them. It hurts because you only get to play three years despite working hard. It's like you get knocked back down."

The athlete, who currently has a 2.5 GPA in physical education, is also upset the label "dumb jocks."

"You can't say we don't work, in fact, we work harder. A normal student could not handle three hours of practice, then go and study."

"Proposition 48 doesn't show how good I am. I will always have it on my back."

Police sniff out stolen shoes, other reports

By JONI DOBRAN
Jambar News Editor

Two cases of stolen athletic shoes, a stolen wallet and two damaged automobiles were cited in the Campus Police report.

On Monday, Jan. 23, Abdul-Salam Borgi, senior, engineering, reported his wallet stolen from the pocket of his jacket, which was in the fourth floor men's rest room of the Engineering Science building.

The report said Borgi placed his jacket on a shelf in the rest room and forgot to pick it up before he left for class. When he returned after the class, the jacket was there but the wallet was not.

A search by police could turn up no leads to the wallet. The report listed the following as stolen: Michigan driver's license; YSU ID; $4.50; solar calculator; social security card and 10 credit cards. The total value was $100.

In another incident on Jan. 23, the report said Maury Bibent had two pairs of tennis shoes stolen from his locker in Stambaugh Auditorium.

On Jan. 20, the report stated, Bibent secured his shoes in his locker. When he returned Monday, the items were missing. The report noted the locker's handle had been broken with an "unknown smashing instrument."

Stolen were Reebok tennis shoes, valued at $91, and Nike tennis shoes, worth $65.

In a separate shoe incident, athletic trainer Dan Wathen reported two pairs of shoes stolen from his locker as well.

He also secured his belongings on Jan. 23 and found them missing upon his return on Monday. The report added there were four pairs of shoes in the locker, but only two pairs were taken.

Stolen were Converse tennis shoes, worth $65, and Puma tennis shoes, valued at $25. The report stated the locker handle was bent but the lock was still attached.

In an automobile incident, the report said a student's car was damaged while parked on level five of the M-1 (Wick Avenue) parking deck.

Beverly Smith, senior, CAST, told police she parked her car at 7:40 a.m. Jan. 23. When she returned at 9 a.m., she found a rip in the convertible top. Damage was listed at $200.

Another auto incident occurred on Thursday, Jan. 19 at the Wick entrance of the M-1 deck, the report said.

Martin Petrin of Parking Services was working in the entrance control booth when he pushed the control knob to raise the gate so a University vehicle could pass through.

The gate on the far right went up, but the vehicle entered through the center gate, leaving the far right gate still in an upright position, the report said.

It added that Petrin saw a car enter through the raised gate, the pressure of this act causing the gate to then return to a horizontal position.

A car driven by Chris Brienik, freshman, CAST, immediately followed the first car through the raised gate, the report said. Brienik didn't stop to put in his access card.

The gate came down on his car, causing scratches to the front left rooftop and front left side of the windshield. Total damage was listed at $40.

Students attend history-in-making inauguration

By JONI DOBRAN
Jambar News Editor

Few people get the chance to personally witness a presidential inauguration, but four students were able to see the historic event firsthand.

Members of YSU's College Republicans were chosen to travel to Washington, D.C. to view the event and take part in several activities.

Chosen were Keith Rubenstein, president, John P. Conroy II, second vice-president, Brian Schwelling, first vice-president and Dee Howren, secretary.

According to Rubenstein, they were chosen to attend the event because of their "extensive work on the campaign for this past year."

They left the Thursday before George Bush's swearing in and returned Sunday night. During their stay in Washington they participated a veritable whirlwind of activities.

"The list of people we met was unreal," Rubenstein said. Included among the politicians, ambassadors and celebrities were Jack Kemp, Dan Rather, Tom Brokaw, Ted Kennedy and Charleton Heston.

He also stressed that the four met Republicans and Democrats alike. "There were no party concerns at all," he said, adding "it was just an all-American experience."

Most impressive, Rubenstein noted, was the lunch with Vice-President Dan Quayle and meeting President Bush.

The 30-minute lunch took place in the Museum of Natural History with approximately 50 College Republicans, Rubenstein said. Quayle spoke on his own past experience as a member of that group.

Meeting Bush, he said, though it was only a handshake and a greeting, was "very intimidating, because he just has a certain presence about him."

They attended two balls on Saturday night — the National Young Americans Ball and the National College Republicans Ball.

At the parties, he said there were scores of entertainers and they also made numerous connections "with many good people who can really make things happen."

Rubenstein said the only disappointing event of the weekend was at the first ball. Upon entering, National Security guards exposed two rolls of film and dismantled his 35 mm camera so he couldn't take pictures of the party.

Conroy added that "what the College Republicans worked for so many months all came to light in a matter of hours in Washington, D.C., as we met the most prominent figures in this nation."

Research is highlight of academia

By BRIAN J. MACALA
Jambar Managing Editor

A major part of the academic experience, both for scholars and students, is basic research. YSU's Academic Research Committee is giving faculty, staff and students a chance to share their research in Quest '89, a series of presentations by researchers at YSU about their current area of study.

Dr. Clement Psenicka, management, chair of the Academic Research Committee, said that Quest '89 will be series of short sessions that will allow individuals a chance to explain the area of research in which they are currently involved.

"There will be split sessions going on. The sessions will have four speakers in each, but they will not all be from the same discipline, so you may have someone from chemistry in with someone from psychology. This will force the speaker to talk in lay-man's terms," Psenicka said.

Quest '89 will be held May 22, in Kilcawley Center. Discussions are welcome from faculty and students who might be presently involved in research Psenicka said. Awards will be presented for the best student papers and activities.

"The presentations will be given solely by members of the YSU community," Psenicka stated. "We decided against a large luncheon and a guest speaker as this is the first year of the event."

Psenicka added that topics may be grouped together that are on common ground and of interest to all.

Those wishing to make a presentation must submit a 250 word abstract of your idea to Beth Kushner, Graduate School, by Jan. 31.

The committee stresses that presentations are not limited to papers alone, but can be experiments, displays or live performances. Each presentation will be limited to 15 minutes.

Persons who have published research since 1984 are urged to submit their work for a public display.

An informal reception of participants and those in attendance will follow the presentations.

The proceedings are divided into five hourly sessions beginning at 10:00 a.m. with the final session at 2:00 p.m. Quest '89 is free and open to the public.

Hunting season open for parking solutions

For YSU students, hunting season never ends when one particular endangered species is being sought — parking.

Monday's Student Government meeting was largely devoted to the issue of parking on campus, and the concept of parking stickers as "hunting permits" was introduced. Students may purchase the right to park, one speaker said, but that doesn't mean the parking space will be conveniently located.

It's no surprise that, on a commuter campus, parking problems surface and are discussed. But the issue of parking at YSU is an age-old one that has been talked about on several occasions, and it doesn't seem like anyone is hunting for a resolution.

Some members of the administration feel the student body doesn't use lots off Walnut Street because it is too far to walk. There is, undoubtedly, some truth to this theory; after all, if students own these "hunting permits," why shouldn't they hunt for the best space available?

The other side of the story is another highly-discussed issue — security. Students have been told that the lots in Smokey Hollow are patrolled regularly and are safe, but it's hard to convince someone of this when break-ins are reported on cars parked in the Lincoln and Wick decks. Students know they are expected to vacate these lots by 6 p.m., but it isn't always possible to move cars in the middle of hectic afternoon schedules.

The Board of Trustees expressed a concern for student security at their last meeting, when the issue of student housing in the Hollow was discussed and killed. The athletic department doesn't want its guests walking to and from remote parts of campus for safety reasons, either, so students are justified in their concern for personal safety.

The administration made a good move in building lots off Rayen Avenue. They are constantly used not only because they are located near campus, but also because they are found in busier areas. Unfortunately, those lots only fill the needs of approximately 100 YSU commuters.

Hunting season is open at YSU, and the only kill the University should aim for is an end to these parking problems.

Bundy's death not meant to be spectacle

Burn Bundy Burn!

The execution of serial killer Ted Bundy was probably the biggest news event this week. This attention is justified now that the world is free from the threat that he might have killed again.

As I watched the news of his execution Tuesday, I was sickened by the actions of many so-called upstanding citizens rallying outside the prison at the time of the execution.

What does the sale of t-shirts commemorating the occasion say about the condition of humanity in today's world?

Don't misunderstand me, I'm not defending Bundy. If anyone deserved to die, it was him.

However, if a person has any respect for the complexity of human life, any death, no matter the circumstances, should be a solemn occasion.

I see the attitude of the American public as anything but healthy: People were actually cheering as the hearse drove past.

ROB CICCOTELLI
 Entertainment
 Editor

I think the reaction of one victim's mother was the attitude that should have been adopted by the rest of the nation. According to an article in Tuesday's Vindicator, Vivian Rancourt reacting to the execution said "The only thing I can say is thank God, it's finally over."

Some people wouldn't let it die. Over the last couple of days I've heard a number of Bundy jokes, most of them are not funny at all.

Local radio personalities have joked about this in their

Says commentary has utopic view

Dear Editor:
 Miriam Klein's vision of utopia based on her wishes for the world has triggered our need to express our similarly idealistic, albeit slightly modified vision of our common wishes for a just world. They include:

—Americans would continue to exercise good judgement and foresight by electing presidents such as George Bush.

—That those who spray airport counter check-ins with automatic machine gun fire and place plastic explosives aboard passenger aircraft under the guise of acting as "freedom fighters" would be vilified as vigorously as the Contras.

—That people would continue to realize that the existence of nuclear weapons has prevented another world war for forty years and that people that advocate their modernization and deployment are not "warmongers", but, rather, treasure that cause of peace as well.

—That the plight of persecuted Christians and Jews in the Soviet Union, murdered in the Soviet Union, murdered

Lauds expression of dreams, hopes

Dear Editor:
 I appreciated the reflections that your copy editor, Miriam Klein, offered about her hope for a better world (Jambar, Tuesday 24 January). One of the most important activities that takes place on a university campus is that people have an opportunity to develop and nurture their dreams. This process is particularly important when it comes to an interest so vital as the survival of our planet.

Frosh depressed, study concludes

By College Press Service

This year's freshmen are depressed, disappointed and debt-ridden, the biggest survey of national student attitudes reported Jan. 9.

The findings of the American Council on Education and University of California at Los Angeles (UCLA) annual survey of 308,000 freshmen paint a picture of collegians "who are not sanguine about the future," summarized UCLA's Kenneth Green.

A record number of students, for example, reported frequently feeling "overwhelmed" and depressed.

"We have very high suicide rates among college students now," added Alexander Astin, the UCLA professor who directs the survey.

He attributes them to "tremendous pressures on young people to achieve." Whatever the reason, 10.5 percent of the nation's freshmen reported feeling "depressed" frequently, up from 8.3 percent of 1987's freshmen and 8.2 percent of the 1985 freshmen class.

More than one of every five freshmen felt "overwhelmed by all I have to do."

Green added freshmen may be unhappier than previous generations because "a larger number than ever before are not attending their first-choice college."

"First-choice" colleges are often expensive, and the survey indicated students are not getting enough financial aid to afford them. Those who are getting aid are getting it in the form of loans that have to be repaid.

Only 15.6 percent of the students entering college for the Fall '88 term received Pell Grants, which don't have to be repaid. It was the lowest level in the survey's history, Green said. In 1980, almost a third of the freshmen got grants.

"The federal government has, in effect, cut back on most of the financial aid programs intended to help college students from low- and middle-income families," Astin concluded.

As a result, he said, "The burden of paying for college has shifted increasingly to students, their families and the nation's colleges and universities."

The resulting money pressure apparently has changed the way the freshmen view the world, Astin and Green said. The economic recession that plagued families nationwide in the early 1980s and continues to plague them in many farm and energy states changed the students, too.

"These are the children of economic upheaval," Green said. "The recession of the '80s was worse than anything since the Depression (of the 1930s). Their loss of faith and preoccupation with jobs comes from that."

A record number of freshmen — 72.6 percent — said they were going to college primarily to get higher-paying jobs later in life.

By contrast, a majority of freshmen in 1968 viewed "the college years as a time for learning and personal development," Green said.

This year's freshmen "are like their grandparents who experienced the Depression."

broadcasts, alluding repeatedly to fried foods.

I have also heard that the mayor of the hometown of one of Bundy's victims was planning a party in celebration of his death.

Wouldn't it be much better to take this execution as an opportunity to reflect on the lives of his victims, all of whom have been dead over ten years.

Perhaps the most morbid event associated with his death was the sale of t-shirts outside the prison. Death for profit.

I associate the idea of profiting on event through the sale of t-shirts and souvenirs with some sort of entertainment like a concert or the Super Bowl.

Anyone who would be entertained by an electrocution is as sick as Bundy himself.

If there is going to be so much hype over something of this nature, why don't we have public executions? Who knows, maybe we could sell tickets or put it on closed-circuit television. It would at least pay for the electricity they used.

If the execution were on television, maybe people would adopt a different attitude. I've heard it is one of the singularly most disgusting things in this world to witness.

Maybe they should have let the ralliers in to see it.

Letter

Even more necessary (on a campus or elsewhere), as Ms. Klein points out, is to have "participated in events which promote these ideals..." Having just completed celebrations in honor of the birth of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., we must be aware that having a dream is not enough. As Dr. King and so many others have reminded us by their words and actions, such lofty ideals demand that we put considerable energy into their promotion and development, lest they remain simply dreams.

Issues such as discrimination, hunger, the poisoning of the environment and the growing threat of chemical and nuclear weapons can not be the concerns of idealists and utopian visionaries alone. Unless and until each one of us makes those her own and his own concerns, our future and that of our children remains threatened. Such hopes may seem far-fetched, but as we continue to work for justice, we can gradually see them realized.

Cubans who attempt to flee to other Latin American embassies in Havana, Poles who protest the subjugation of their homeland by the Soviet Empire and Kampuchean refugees fleeing a Communist regime in Vietnam would similarly become embedded in the lexicon of human rights abuse rhetoric offered by "religious people in the community" who editorialize about such problems.

—That others besides those in the West could become responsible for the alleviation of disease and suffering by, perhaps, encouraging the internationalization of Moammar Khaddafy's persecuted "pharmaceutical" plant, and that its operation and research could discover a more palatable flavor of Hall's cough drop (say, banana) that would eliminate the unpleasant after-taste of this product while retraining its effectiveness.

Although only our first wish has any real chance of coming to fruition, this does not preclude our dreaming of the consideration of a different approach to the problems of this blemished world we all share.

Energy, research is topic of lecture by "father"

YSU — If Dr. Roger Billings has his way, gas will be a thing of the past.

Frequently called "the father of modern hydrogen energy, technology and research," Billings will visit the YSU campus for a free lecture on hydrogen energy and research at 7 p.m., Feb. 1. The lecture will be held in the Ohio Room of Kilcawley Center and is sponsored by the Monus Entrepreneurship Chair of the Warren P. Williamson School of Business at YSU.

Dr. Gary Benson, entrepreneurship chair, said Billings was the first to develop hydrogen powered vehicles — automobiles and buses — and uses hydrogen to power other traditional gasoline-powered devices such as lawn mowers. The engines emit water, rather than harmful pollutants.

He also developed hydrogen-powered home heating and cooling devices.

"Billings is currently on the cutting edge of technology developments in hydrogen research and hydrogen energy cells. He has one of the greatest scientific minds of the 20th century," says Benson.

It has been pointed out that Billings' developments offer the opportunity to change how the world thinks about energy and transportation problems and provides a means of solving many of the world's current environmental problems.

Scholarship applications ready for French majors

YSU — Those studying French at YSU have two opportunities to earn scholarships that help cover the costs of studying abroad.

The Rosemary Pecchio Johns Legacy and the French Club scholarships are open to students who are declared French majors and have completed 35 credit hours. Students enrolled in a French class during winter or spring quarter and have previously completed two or more French classes with at least a grade of 'B' also are eligible to apply.

The regulations of the Legacy scholarship state that the award should be granted to students who could not afford otherwise to study abroad. Active members of the French Club, Les Bon Vivants, are given preference in awarding the French Club scholarship.

Students interested in either or both scholarships should turn in application letters to the French Club by the ninth week of winter quarter. The letter should include students' current plans for studying abroad, including the name of the school or institution to be attended and a description and dates of the program.

The letter also should state the candidate's need for the scholarship. The Legacy scholarship annually awards $500, while the French Club scholarship has no set amount.

Candidates must submit two letters of recommendation with the application. Other students, advisers, relatives or personnel at the foreign institution may write these letters on behalf of the candidate.

Both scholarships will be awarded only after the winner has made preliminary arrangements with the school abroad.

Further information is available from the Department of Foreign Languages, DeBartolo Hall.

Aid for social workers available

YSU — The department of Anthropology, Sociology and Social Work is now accepting applications for the Burdman Pasman Scholarship, a grant of $2,000 which will be awarded to a student majoring in Social Work for the 1989-1990 academic year. The winner will be selected on the basis of the following criteria:

—Minimum of 24 q.h. in the department and 20 q.h. in social work by Jan. 1990.

—A 3.00 average in the departmental courses.

—Junior or senior standing by April 1988.

The deadline for submission of the application is 5:00 p.m., Feb. 14, 1989. Forms are available in the departmental office and the award will be publicly announced on Honors Day.

Don't forget your "Honey" on Valentine's Day, Tuesday, February 14th.

Send them a "Love Note" in The Jambar classifieds for only $1.00. Deadline for classifieds is 5pm Friday, February 10th.

Griffith shines in "Girl"

By JAMES E. BRAHNEY
Jambar Entertainment Reporter

Working Girl is a rare film these days. It has a convoluted plot that is enjoyable to watch. A sophisticated comedy of this type hasn't been made for a long time. It is reminiscent of the types of smart comedies of the 1930s and 1940s.

Working Girl is a sophisticated, witty, and deftly played comedy about a young, hardworking New York girl, played by Melanie Griffith, who wants to use her brains and business acumen to succeed in the business world. He is inhibited, however, by her social position and the meager job she holds at a big corporation.

Then Griffith is hired as a secretary to a major executive (Sigourney Weaver). Griffith begins to admire her boss's manner and tries to imitate her style. Along the way, Griffith makes suggestions to her boss about a big business deal currently underway between their company and another big company. Griffith never dreams that Weaver is stealing those ideas, saying they were hers instead of giving Griffith any credit.

Meanwhile, Weaver goes on vacation, leaving her office and apartment in Griffith's care. When the boss has a skiing accident, she calls Griffith to tell her the news. Griffith's involvement with Harrison Ford, who plays an executive from another company also participating in the big deal, begins, and Griffith acts after realizing her ideas were stolen by her own boss.

Griffith, who appeared in the relentlessly sleazy Body Double a few years ago, sheds her uninteresting image for that of a sexy, smart and endearing girl who can think for herself. Her performance is charming, giving a quiet, subtle edge to her comic ability.

Ford's part in this film is unique to his accomplished career. He proves he can do sophisticated comedy and delivers his funny lines effortlessly, savoring the humor. His performance reminds one of Cary Grant's best work.

Weaver, after starring in the highly praised Corillas in the Mist appears sporadically in Working Girl, but she makes her scenes count. Weaver combines villainy with humor and comes off quite well. Her skiing accident is hilarious; as she enthusiastically prepares to conquer a slope, she realizes (too late) that it is actually a cliff.

Mike Nichols, who directed the classic The Graduate in 1967, proves he's still able to do comedy, evoking some fine, funny performances from the supporting cast as well as the leads. Joan Cusack, as Griffith's low-brow friend, is hilarious, especially when she poses as Griffith's secretary. Nichols also skillfully directs some intimate, funny, and sweet scenes between Ford and Griffith as their characters fall in love.

Probably the best scene in the film is near the end, when Ford lovingly sends Griffith off to work after packing a lunch for her in a metal lunchbox. It's this type of scene that exemplifies the type of film Working Girl is — intelligent, well-acted, and well-directed entertainment. It's great to to to the movies again and relax while watching talented actors per-

Accomplished pianist to make area debut

Youngstown — Jeffrey Kahane, winner of the 1983 Arthur Rubinstein Competition will make his Youngstown debut on Saturday, February 11, when he joins guest conductor, Sheldon Morganstern and the Youngstown Symphony Orchestra performing Leonard Bernstein's Symphony No. 2. The evening's program will also include the Prelude to Die Meistersinger by Wagner, Britten's Variations and Fugue on a Theme of Purcell, and Symphonic Metamorphosis by Hindemith. The concert, the fifth of the current season, will begin at 8:30 p.m. in Edward W. Powers Auditorium.

Jeffrey Kahane is a serious pianist who plays both contemporary music and the mainstream repertory in a probing poetic style. He excels in competitions — he was a prize winner (fourth place) in the 1981 Van Cliburn Competition before winning the Rubinstein Competition.

His success continues to be reflected in his busy schedule of performances with leading orchestras both here and abroad. Recent and current engagements include appearances with the New York Philharmonic, the Los Angeles Philharmonic, the Philadelphia Orchestra and the symphonies of Chicago, Atlanta, Milwaukee, Indianapolis, Pittsburgh, San Francisco and Saint Louis.

March of 1985 marked Kahane's London debut with the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra at the Barbican Centre. A return visit to London in 1987 included a re-engagement with the Royal Philharmonic as well as appearances with the Halle and Royal Liverpool Orchestras. That same year he also visited Israel for concerts with the Israel Philharmonic.

Highlights of his current season include an orchestral debut at the Caramoor Festival, a return visit to the Hollywood Bowl with the Los Angeles Philharmonic and Edo de Waart, recitals at New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Kennedy Center and Wigmore Hall in London.

Kahane's other awards include the Avery Fisher Grant in 1983 and the first Andrew Wolf Chamber Music Award in 1987. He was also chosen Affiliate Artist Xerox Pianist for the 1983-84 and 1984-85 seasons.

Sheldon Morganstern, music director of the renowned Eastern Philharmonic Orchestra in North Carolina, is one of the most highly respected and sought-after conductors on the international scene. He maintains an extensive guest conducting schedule that has taken him to twenty-one countries.

Morganstern has been the recipient of two ASCAP programming awards, the O. Henry Award for Artistic Excellence and serves on the Board of Advisors for the Avery Fisher Competition, the Istanbul International Festival and also has been the music advisor for the Mississippi Symphony and the Wolf Trap Performing Arts Center, and has served as a consultant for the National Endowment for the Arts.

Tickets ranging from $6 to $14 are now available and may be reserved by calling the Symphony Center box office (216) 744-0264. Mastercard and Visa accepted.

Actors, actresses needed to help directing class

By BETH MOYER
Jambar Entertainment Reporter

Wanted: Actors and actresses. No previous acting experience required.

YSU's Principles of Play Direction class will be holding auditions for an academic directing exercise.

Casts are needed for nine 30-minute cuttings. The first auditions will be held Tuesday, Jan. 31, at 4 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. in the Spotlight Arena Theatre in Bliss Hall. Those trying out for parts will be asked to read selected dialogue from the chosen plays.

Cuttings will be made from The Actor's Nightmare, Days of Wine and Roses, I'm Herbert, Lone Star, No Exit, Shadow Box, Vanities, Vieux Carre, and Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?

The plays will be presented during the week before finals. They will be free and open to the public.

The class is taught by Dr. Henneman, Fine and Performing Arts. It's designed to acquaint the students with the problems and practices involved in directing for the legitimate stage. It involves the application of various directing theories and basic principles of stage direction with special emphasis given to play selection, script analysis, blocking principles and rehearsal techniques.

Through lecture, in-class directing exercises, script production analyses, reviews, project papers and a final exam, the students will gain knowledge about the principles of play direction.

These various exercises will culminate in the presentation of one-act plays.

The students will take on the role of director with their selected cuttings as they hold auditions, prepare promptbooks with blocking and stage direction, conduct rehearsals and present the play.

Spiritual Group

The Harlem Spiritual Ensemble will perform at 7:30 p.m. next Friday, Feb. 3, in the Chestnut Room. The event is being held in conjunction with Black History Month.

Look to The Jambar entertainment section next Tuesday for the interview with Giffen recording artists The Toll.

Hopefully, Griffith will go on to higher fame. And long live Harrison Ford, for he's the Raising the money: YSU recently hired Jim McNally as Athletic fundraiser.

Raising Funds McNally embarks on new career

By RICK GEORGE
Jambar Sports Reporter

Jim McNally is still setting precedents despite being out of law. McNally has been named to the newly created position of athletic fundraiser.

Since 1987, McNally was associated with the law firm of Flask and Policy after graduating from the University of Dayton Law School in 1977. He also earned a BA in Liberal Arts from YSU in 1974 before earning his law degree.

McNally said he felt a change of venues, from law to athletics, would be exciting.

"Primarily I am a sports enthusiast. It is a nice change of careers especially dealing with a credible institution like YSU," said McNally. "I think it is the opportunity to pursue something I'd be comfortable with and enjoy. YSU is one of the best institutions in the nation."

McNally's duties will be to raise funds for YSU athletics.

"I will be trying to coordinate a long term funding program instead of a one time activity fund," he said. "I am looking forward to work with the alumni association as well as Dr. Looby in the institutional advancement program."

"Since I am limited with just athletics, I don't want to create a conflict with other parts of the University."

One idea McNally will be working on involves corporate contributor matching funds.

"It works by getting various publications and corporations willing to provide funds to athletics. For each amount an alumni contributes, a certain corporation will match it."

Johnson scores 20 as YSU wins second

By TIM LEONARD
Jambar Sports Editor

It was their first win on the road. It was their second win of the season. And it was also a YSU 83-70 victory over Brooklyn Wednesday night.

The Penguins burst into an 11 point lead ten minutes into the game and, though it wasn't exactly easy, YSU never let their lead sink below five points.

Forward Shane Johnson led the Penguins attack with 20 points and 10 rebounds. Johnson, who was one of four YSU scorers in double figures, scored on 10-of-15 shots from the field.

"Shane's playing well, but you have to look at the whole ball game and not just certain statistics," said YSU coach Jim Clemons, referring to Johnson's increase in scoring and rebounding. "Now look at assists where he didn't have any, or his six turnovers [against Brooklyn], but then again he had three blocks. So you have to look at his whole game, and not just particular statistics. But, yes, he has played well in some areas."

YSU's Aundra Brown came off the bench to post an impressive stat in one those other areas — passing out nine assists in 21 minutes.

The Penguins rolled ahead for a 36-25 halftime lead which was built with the help of an early 19-8 lead 10 minutes into the game. After being down 8-6, the Penguins ran off 12 straight points with eight of them the courtesy of the 6-foot-7 Johnson.

Brooklyn cut the lead to 21-18 with 5:31 left in the half. But

Penguins seek revenge against Akron Zips

By RUSSELL FARMINTINO
Assistant Sports Editor

The YSU women's basketball team will not only attempt to continue their recent good play but also seek revenge when the Penguins host the arch-rival Akron Zips on Saturday night.

The Penguins will be coming into the contest as victors in three of their last four titles, including a 73-58 conquest over Niagara University at Beegly Center on Monday night. The win boosted the Penguins' overall record to 9-7.

There were many heroines for the Penguins on Monday night. Leading the way was senior guard Stephanie Coie, who scored 17 points on 8-of-12 from the field and 1-of-2 from the foul line. Next was Jenny Woodward, who pumped in 12 points on 6-of-10 from the field.

The Penguins were also aided by the play of Cara Hendrix and Julie Bray. Hendrix scored 10 points while grabbing 9 rebounds and Bray contributed 10 points and 7 boards.

Probably the most encouraging sign for the Penguins was the efforts of two freshmen, Donna Wertz and Diane Rap-pach. Wertz scored 11 points and grabbed 6 boards in her first collegiate start while Rappach dealt out a season-high 10 assists.

Statistically, the Penguins shot a shade under 50 percent (32-of-65 for 49.2 percent) and out-rebounded Niagara 48-29.

YSU head coach Ed DiGregorio was happy with the outcome of the contest and the progress of his squad. "I am pleased with our effort against Niagara," said DiGregorio. "Our freshman kids are starting to play really well."

"We have played great team ball the last couple of games," added DiGregorio.

"We've really been hustling and helping one another."

DiGregorio felt that there were a couple of key performers for his squad against Niagara. "Stephanie Coie has played two fantastic games in a row," stated DiGregorio. "She settles the team down with her experience. Donna Wertz also played really well. She just might be the three-person that we have been looking for."

Saturday night's contest against Akron will provide the Penguins with a possibility for revenge for the loss of a previous game, a 71-58 verdict, to the Zips at Akron on Jan. 7. It was a contest that saw YSU miss its first 13 shots from the field and fall behind by as many as 18 points before rallying. Unfortunately, the Penguins could never quite catch up.

DiGregorio realizes revenge will be no easy task. "Akron has been playing real well," said DiGregorio. "They have been playing good team defense and that is important for any basketball team."

This idea of the team concept is the key to a YSU win over Akron, according to DiGregorio. "We have to play good team offense and good team defense," stated DiGregorio. "We must play as a team. The team is bigger than any individual."

before the half after we failed to score for about a three minute period prior to the last few minutes of the half," said Clemons. "But for the last five or six minutes of the half I didn't think we missed on any of our trips down the court."

YSU didn't stop their assault as they continued their attack for the first four minutes of the second half. The Penguins outscored Brooklyn 11-2 to go ahead by 18 points, 46-28.

The Penguins biggest lead was 22 points after a Todd Lark three-pointer with 12:20 left in the game leading 61-39.

The Penguins shot 61 percent for the second half after having shot 50 percent during the first half. Following Johnson in scoring was Reggie Kemp with 15 points, Kevin Haddock with 13 and Tim Jackson with 10. Jackson also pulled down eight rebounds.

With the win and four players scoring in double figures against Brooklyn, Clemons feels the Penguins are improving.

"Without putting my foot in my mouth, I hope we are. But it's hard to see [which players] are going to show up. We show up physically, but not always mentally," said Clemons.

Brooklyn was led by Roger Brooks who scored 17 points, while John Shurina followed him with 15.

The Penguins are off until Monday when they play Hiram at Beeghly Center at 8:00.

he said. McNally does realize it will take time to become a major fund-raiser.

"At this point we have not committed to a definite sum. We want to make our goals realistic," said McNally. "It would be nice to generate between $200,000 and $300,000 in the first step. There is no time frame now, but we want to start off slow and gradual to gain support and credibility. A foundation must first be laid. Right now we are at the creeping stage."

"It would also be helpful to develop an advisory board with ex-trustees and other community leaders. This would open the door for us while it would also be giving us credibility," said McNally. "It would help develop not only short-term, but also long-term plans."

Today's freshmen differ greatly from predecessors

By College Press Service

College freshmen are a little more politically conservative, tend to smoke more and seem more interested in going on to graduate school than their predecessors, the annual American Council on Education and University of California at Los Angeles (UCLA) survey of 308,000 first-year collegians indicated.

Among the survey's findings:

- More freshman than ever before — 21.8 percent of them — listed themselves as politically "conservative." The lowest percentage ever — 24.3 percent — identified themselves as "liberal" while slightly fewer students, 53.9 percent, characterized their views as "middle of the road."

Nevertheless, the students tended to take classically "liberal" stands when confronted with specific issues like what to do about pollution, requiring corporations to have consumer protection programs, abortion (more than half the freshmen thought it should be legal) and school busing.

- After several years of decline, more students are smoking.

- While 8.9 percent of 1987's freshmen said they smoked cigarettes, 10.1 percent of this year's class said they did.

- A record number of freshmen supported AIDS (acquired immune deficiency syndrome) and drug testing. More than two-thirds of the students supported mandatory AIDS testing. A still bigger percentage, 71 percent, favored employee drug testing.

- Nearly six of every ten freshmen said they planned to get an advanced degree of some kind.

"These rising degree aspirations," said survey associate director Kenneth Green of UCLA, "suggest that a growing proportion of students feel the bachelor's degree will not be an adequate credential in the job market during the next decade and into the next century."

Open house set for dental hygienists Enrollment

YSU — High school and college students interested in the Dental Hygiene Program at YSU are being invited to "Dental Hygiene Career Night" set for 7 p.m., Feb. 9 in Room 132 of DeBartolo Hall.

The on-campus event is designed to inform prospective students about the program's curriculum along with what high school requirements are needed as well as details about the dental hygiene profession, including wages and employment opportunities.

In addition to high school students, the program is open to YSU and other college and university students with undetermined majors who may be interested in the health career field.

A tour of the newly remodeled dental hygiene clinic will be offered.

Some of our faculty are very well-known and are attracting new graduate students from outside of our standard geographic area," added Hotchkiss.

Other highlights from the 14-day report show the freshman count at 4,416 up 5.4 percent over the same quarter a year ago; the sophomore count at 2,997, down slightly (2.9 percent) from 3,087; the junior count at 2,466, also down slightly (2.7 percent) from 2,535; and the senior count at 3,100, up slightly (0.6 percent) from 3,082.

Dr. Sally Hotchkiss, associate provost and dean of YSU's graduate school, said, "I am more than pleased with the enrollment numbers."

The graduate school has 1,199 students enrolled this quarter, compared with 1,097 for the same quarter a year ago.

Dr. Hotchkiss explained that a number of graduate school areas, including special counseling workshops for high school guidance counselors and community agency counselors, are drawing a significant number of new students. The counseling programs are offered on Saturdays and evenings. Some are offered on an out-reach basis.

She also pointed out that changes in Ohio's rules governing primary and secondary school teacher certification requirements also have drawn more teachers from area schools to the University.

"And, of course, we have been recruiting aggressively.

Of the University's undergraduate programs, the largest enrollment increase was reported in the education major area, where 1,739 students are enrolled, compared to 1,539 a year ago, representing a 13 percent increase. A 1.7 percent increase was reported in arts and sciences, but the number of students enrolled in the school of engineering showed a decline of 8.2 percent to stand at 705, compared to 768 a year ago.

There are 9,115 full-time students (those taking 12 credit hours or more) and 5,063 part-time students on campus this quarter. YSU has 1,079 (7.6 percent of the total enrollment) non-Ohio students taking classes.

Stocks and Liu said the Federal Reserve reacted out of concern over the possibility of demand-pull inflation. The Federal Reserve's actions did not slow economic growth as expected, the professors said, so further tightening of the money supply may be in order during 1989. If the national economy's growth rate is slowed, it will affect the growth rate locally as well, they added.

Stocks and Liu said they expected some job losses in the construction and transportation industries locally in the coming year, but added that they foresee overall employment increasing by as much as 2,000 jobs this year. If that prediction is accurate, they estimated a one percent decline in the local unemployment rate for 1989.

Forecast

Growth also was apparent in retail trade and services and wholesale trade. "This indicates that the local economy may be beginning to realize its potential as a regional distribution center — an expectation that we have discussed for some time," Stocks and Liu reported.

One concern noted by the duo was the national rise in short-term interest rates, which was triggered by the Federal Reserve's tight money in 1988.
