Board approves plan

An affirmative action plan, recently approved by the Board of Trustees of YSU, is designed to step up the recruitment and retention of minority students, faculty and staff.

The trustees approved the first phase of an affirmative action plan at its meeting Friday, March 19.

Getting faculty and staff involved with the recruitment and retention of minority students is a major focus of the plan. YSU officials stressed that the recruiting and retaining of minority students strengthens efforts to recruit and retain minority faculty and staff members.

The plan is "intended to address the issues posed by the pattern of low enrollment of minority students and the comparatively low graduation rates among the minority students who attend YSU," said Dr. Leslie Cochran, president of YSU. "It is also designed to improve and ensure compliance and implementation of our affirmative action commitment."

President Cochran said the revised affirmative plan, which was drafted by Barbara C. Bacon, director of affirmative action, is based on a set of recommendations by the Minority Access/Success Committee.

Bacon said the revised plan "will institute a formalized process for affirmative action designed to help us realize our goal for increasing the number of minorities among students, faculty and staff."

The revisions are outlined in 11 objectives. Those objectives include:

1.) Having the admissions office continue its practice of involving faculty members in the recruitment of minority students. Faculty members will be encouraged to visit high schools, participate in college night programs and direct mail programs which focus on minority students.

2.) Having faculty members develop "articulation" programs with two-year colleges. This will involve efforts to recruit minority graduates of two-year colleges to YSU for four-year degree programs.

Trustees approve two loan plans for minority students

YSU — A Work Experience and Emergency Loan Program for minority students at YSU has been approved by the Board of Trustees of the YSU Foundation.

The Work Experience Program grant totals $20,000 to fund on-campus employment positions for YSU minority students in good academic standing during the 1993-94 school year.

Due to severe restrictions on the existing emergency loan program supported by the University, an additional $5,000 in funding will be for special and unexpected needs throughout a quarter.

"Youngstown State University is committed to recruiting and retaining excellent minority students," said

Dr. James J. Scanlon, University provost.

"The new Work Experience Program will offer minority students opportunities to work in university settings and to learn about careers that can be developed through study here," he continued.

Scanlon also said he sees the program as another opportunity for students to learn from the faculty and other members of the University community.

"The purpose of the Work Experience Program, therefore," he said, "is to assist minority students in several ways as they proceed to completion of their degrees at YSU."

Mears readies for executive position; sets up goals for April 1 change-over

Dr. G.L. Mears

By CHARLIE DEITCH
News Editor

On April 1, the executive director of Budgets and Institutional Services, Dr. G.L. Mears, will leave his current position and start his career as executive vice president of YSU.

Mears has been with the University for the past 13 years and he said he is looking forward to his new position.

"I've been at the University for 13 years, so over the course of time I have been doing pieces of the job that I will now be doing, and I am looking forward to doing the job full-time."

Mears has two primary goals that he would like to get started on as soon as his transition is complete.

The first goal is to provide financial stability at YSU.

"YSU has been on a financial roller coaster with the cuts from the state and tuition caps; financial stability is an important thing," said Mears.

Mears also said that the state is cutting higher education drastically. He said that YSU has lost more than 10 percent of its budget which amounts to millions of dollars. These cuts resulted in Mears said, the first lay-offs in YSU history. Mears said that in order to gain the stability, he needs to build reserves.

"In case the state pulls the rug out from under us again, we'll have reserves to cushion the blow," Mears said.

Mears said that reserves won't eliminate the affects of cuts, but it will help greatly.

Mears said that YSU's reserves are too low and he needs to get them to a reasonable level.

Mears said that building reserves will not directly come from the students.

After expenditures are met, all the extra money is put on reserve.

Mears' second goal is affirmative action recruiting of minority students and faculty members.

"We're a University sitting in the middle of a community with a 30-40 percent minority population, and yet less than 10 percent of the University is minority. That's not good," Mears said.

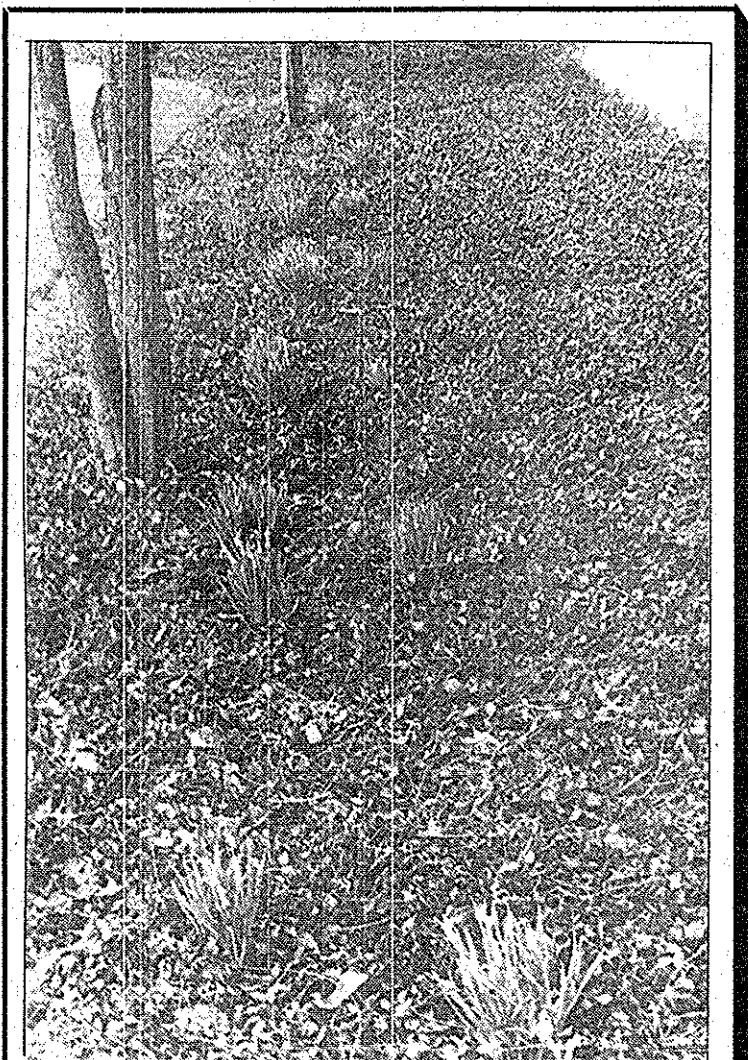

Mears said the University has to be very "pro-active" in its minority recruiting. He also said YSU has more facility capacity than it is using, and that is not a good use of resources.

Mears said that he wants to reach all minorities in the area. "We have to be aggressive and active to get all minorities on campus," he said.

Mears said that minority recruiting was not purposely overlooked, but it is an area that he wants to emphasize.

Mears' biggest concern in his new position is getting students to voice their concerns.

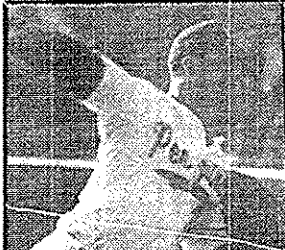

"I can't help a student if I don't know the problem."

Student dies in accident

By CHARLIE DEITCH
News Editor

YSU — YSU student Mary Ellen Hartman, 40, of 71 Labelle Ave., died on March 20 from injuries related to an automobile accident.

Hartman was a junior at YSU, studying to become a medical laboratory technician.

She was born on Nov. 1, 1952 in Youngstown, a daughter of Robert and Virginia Ryhal.

She worked for five years at Gallery catering in Hubbard, and was a member of St. Charles Church in Boardman.

She is survived by Bruce A., her husband of almost 18 years. They were married on April 26, 1975.

Hartman also leaves two children, Amanda and Eric, still at home; her mother; two brothers, Robert and William Ryhal of Hubbard; and two sisters, Rose Marie Lowery and Yvonne Hartman of Brookfield.

Her father is deceased. Funeral services were held March 23 at the Kelley-Robb Funeral Home and in St. Patrick Church, both in Hubbard.

YSU business grad vows 'I will not sink'

Peggy Wolfe

YSU — No one can say Peggy Wolfe is a quitter. She graduated with 776 other students at YSU on Saturday, March 27, despite the fact that she has been confined to a wheelchair since 1985.

Wolfe was diagnosed as a manic depressive in 1983 and was stricken with encephalomyelitis in 1985. The ailments were not related.

Despite the fact that the encephalomyelitis resulted in loss of balance, slurring of speech and brief blindness, Wolfe decided to return to college in 1987 at the suggestion of a friend. At YSU, she combined her credits from the East Liverpool Branch of Kent State University and her vast business experience to major in marketing management technology.

The 45-year-old graduate used her wheelchair to attend classes and rode the Western Reserve Transit System buses to go for workout sessions at the downtown YMCA.

She plans to continue working at her current job in sales support and information management at Store Systems and Service Inc. in Youngstown.

Wolfe's goal, however, is to own a grocery store; and she has plenty of business experience on her side. She worked for Hattenbach Co. in Cleveland where she trained grocery store employees how to use the equipment the company sells. She also owned and operated her own deli and corner grocery store in New Jersey.

When Wolfe started classes at YSU, she couldn't speak or write well. She said the most difficult part of coming back to college after her illness was accepting the way students and teachers perceived her.

"I felt retarded," she said, "but I still wanted to learn and I had to figure out how I was going to take care of myself."

Not being a quitter, she practiced speaking into a tape recorder. "I knew what words sounded like in my head but when I said them into a tape recorder, they didn't sound right. I had to adjust."

The graduate is grateful that a lot of people helped to make her graduation possible. In fact, she is so grateful that she is throwing a party. Not just any party, a pool party.

"I can stand in water," Wolfe said. "It might be nice to talk to you face to face." She said a pool party seemed appropriate. After all, she added, her choice was to "sink or swim." Convincingly, she said, "I will not sink."

Self-defense classes to be offered on campus

By DOUG FAIR
Staff Reporter

Are you afraid to walk to your car? Do you feel intimidated by people? Do you lack self-confidence? Do you have trouble making schedules and sticking to them? Would you like to learn how to motivate yourself? If so, then martial arts could be just the thing for you.

Black belt Jim Mullins, freshman, A&S, is offering classes in self-defense in the Beeghly Center in room 114, Monday through Friday from noon until 7 p.m. for $19 a month. Each class starts every hour on the hour, but you may need to call Mullins at 788-9834 or 758-4143 for an appointment.

The styles of Tae Kwan Do, hapkido, judo and karate will be taught to students. Emphasis will be placed on drills consisting of: stretching, self-defense, techniques in breaking away from attackers, passive and aggressive restraining of attackers and various ways to defend yourself both standing and on the ground.

"Students need to know how to fight both standing and lying down," said Mullins, "because the majority of fights end up on the ground."

Classes in knife and gun defenses will also be offered to advanced students, as well as instruction in using various self-defense weapons.

When asked why he was devoting his time to this class, Mullins responded, "People need to learn how to defend themselves, especially today.

Martial arts also gives students help in school, along with giving better confidence and discipline."

Mullins hopes to have indoor and outdoor classes on campus this spring. Students wishing more training, are also free to attend Mullins' classes at Master Parks studio, where Mullins' is an assistant instructor.

Mullins has studied martial arts for seven years under various instructors.

"It was something I always wanted to do," said Mullins. He

Highway Safety

NEWS AND VIEWS

Many Ohioans may be unaware of the role they can play in getting drunk drivers off the roads.

The Ohio Department of Highway Safety has made available a toll-free hotline to encourage help in apprehending drunk drivers.

Motorists who see an impaired driver on the highway, or know someone who is driving without a license after a Driving Under the Influence (DUI) conviction, can dial 1-800-GRAB-DUI (1-800-472-2384).

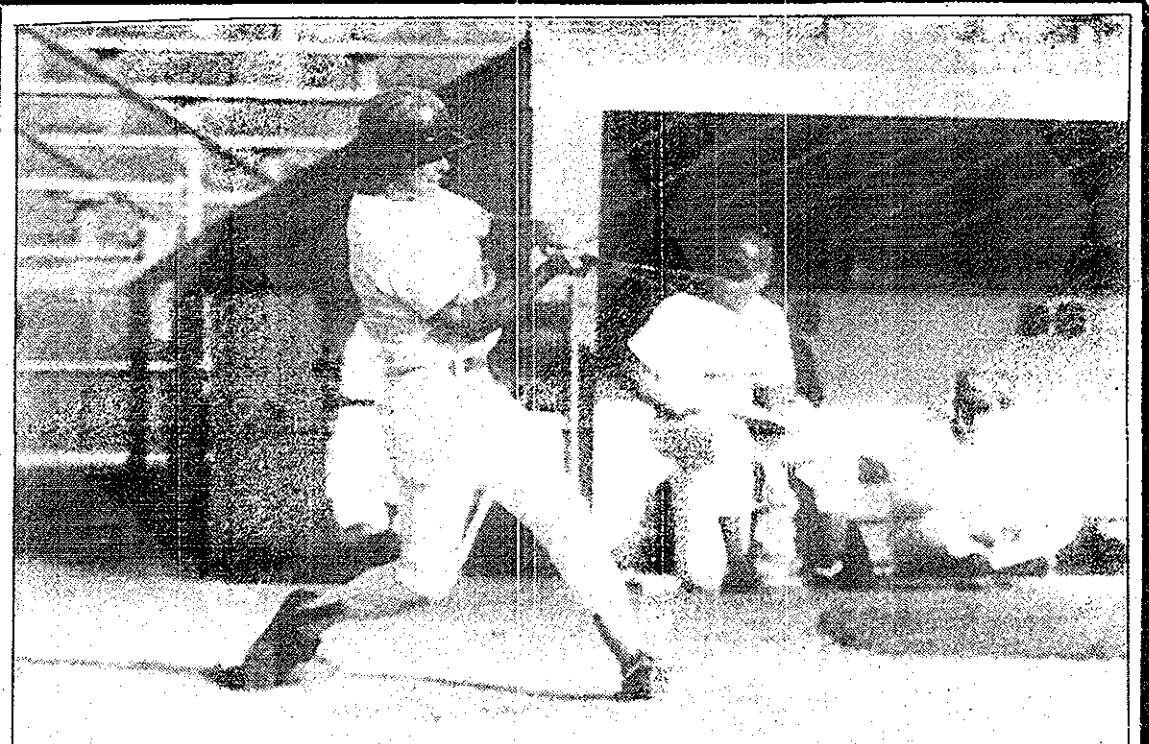

The number rings into one of nine Highway Patrol District headquarters, depending on the caller's location, and the information is quickly routed to a trooper or other law enforcement officer in the area of the violation.

Signs that promote the hotline have been posted on the highways at rest areas around the state.

The hotline is just one part of Highway Safety's Multiple Offenders' Project, which was designed to attack habitual drunk drivers.

The Department of Highway Safety is doing all they can to rid the roads of drunk and destructive drivers, but they could use your help. So, if you see an impaired driver or know someone who is driving without a license after a DUI conviction, blow the whistle — dial 1-800-GRAB-DUI.

For more information, contact the Ohio Department of Highway Safety's Public Information Office at 240 Parsons Ave., P.O. Box 7167, Columbus, Ohio, 43266-0563, (614) 466-2550.

YSU becomes smoke-free

YSU will be replacing its existing smoking regulations with a revised policy that will eliminate smoking in all non-residential campus buildings.

The adoption of this policy by the Board of Trustees at its meeting on March 19 will eliminate designated smoking areas in certain buildings on the campus. The modified policy, which takes effect on July 1, 1993, parallels Governor George Voinovich's Executive Order banning smoking in public buildings.

Smoke cessation classes will be offered to students, faculty and staff and standardized signs will be posted at each building. Faculty, staff, students and visitors are asked to observe the policy. Signs will be posted when the policy is implemented.

Plan

- Continued from page 1

  - 6.) Having the faculty and staff members serve as mentors for minority students, faculty and staff members.
  - 7.) Having the University generate strategies for developing and motivating personal attitudes which contribute to acceptance and encouragement of minority students.

chose Master Parks' school because he felt "It was the best in the area."

Mullins' classes are open to all YSU students, faculty, staff and alumnus. All levels of martial art students are welcome, but Mullins is more interested in beginners and females, the two groups he feels are in the most need of help.

Mullins earned his black belt three years ago from Master Parks. Master Parks, who has a school in Boardman, has attained the highest levels of black belt in judo, hapkido, Tae Kwon Do and karate.

Mullins also offers private seminars and demonstrations at sorority houses on campus.

Over his years of training, Mullins has successfully competed in many area tournaments.

For those primarily concerned with the sports aspect of martial arts, Master Parks students can go to Colorado Springs each year for Olympic try-outs.

Tuition hikes are good for you

The YSU Board of Trustees recently approved a 4 percent tuition hike at their March meeting. What exactly 4 percent is, we're not sure, but we think it's a good deal. In fact, 4 percent seems like a very fair increase, considering the quality of education and services we students receive from this institution of higher learning. Heck, the Board should have just increased tuition to 5 percent.

What's 4 percent between friends? Me, you, the Administration—we're all friends, and we are all in this education business together. So, what's a little increase every now and then between friends? Now, for all you pouting students: There's really no need to feel blue about this increase. Just make sure you dig a little deeper into your blue jean pockets for a few more dollars, work 40 more hours at the local department store for a measly $4.25 or get a second job. Hit up any rich friends and relatives for additional money and if all else fails, try to get into someone's will.

Don't worry that you don't have a social life or that you have been neglecting your family due to that second job and having to take out a second mortgage on the house just to pay for a tuition increase.

Go beg your parents for some additional cash. What are parents for anyway? We all know they are loaded; they just stash the cash somewhere so they can leave it to you someday.

Ignore the fact that you're taking 12 hours of classes you don't really need to graduate because the classes that you actually need aren't expected to be offered until Campus 2000 is unveiled and if you don't keep matriculating, the bank is going to come down on you hard to collect those hefty student loans.

Forget that while our tuition keeps getting higher and higher, the level of services keeps getting lower and lower.

Don't worry that there's not enough convenient parking available. Hey, that mile walk from the Hollow to DeBartolo will do you some good.

You just remember that there's millions of kids your age around the world that would kill for the chance to walk miles to classes they don't need or care about at a university that offers few services, has food that's close to burying the needle on a Geiger counter and keeps getting more expensive to go to every minute. After all, these are supposed to be the best days of our lives; make the best of it! Just think, things can always (and probably will) get worse.

Happy April Fools!!! You didn't really think we'd endorse a tuition increase, did you?

Don't get lost in a pothole

Joe DeMay
Staff Reporter

Well, here we are again, embarking on another adventure otherwise known as spring quarter. I must admit that out of all the quarters, spring is my favorite.

However, even though the sun is shining and the air is getting warmer, I haven't gotten the winter blahs completely out of my system yet. I have some leftover gripes that I have to get off my chest.

Number one on my list is definitely the most annoying and, at times, painful grievance I have. And that is POTHOLE. I'm sure you have your favorite, as do I, but for some reason it seems that of late, there is no street in the Mahoning Valley that is not absolutely littered with the detestable beasts.

I know that the street departments are starting to work hard to repair these nuisances and I'm sure the unusually harsh winter probably conspired to make the darn things even worse than usual.

But, you know, the things scare me. I mean, I've got a little car and I fear that one of these huge crevices could swallow me whole and I'll never be heard from again. As a matter of fact, I've started carrying provisions (you know, non-perishable foods, blankets, a miner's helmet with a light...) just in case I should one day get stuck in one.

Next up on the list are you morons that insist on following the instructions that come along with your parking stickers and actually put the things on your windshields. A word of advice to you boobs -- never listen to a bureaucrat, their job is to think of ways to make you look like a jackass!

Not only does sticking your parking pass on your windshield look incredibly geeky, but, as safety pup will tell you, it impairs your vision while driving. Have you people ever stopped to consider that if you keep up this practice one day your windshield will be totally covered with parking stickers? Where will you be then (probably in a ditch somewhere)?

Look, they sell little plastic thingees (that's a technical term I don't have the time to fully explain) in the bookstore so you can hang your sticker from your rearview mirror like most normal and, this is a key word, intelligent people do. The cost of said plastic thingee is a mere $.75. If, for some inhuman reason, you cannot scrape that much money together from under your sofa cushions or from the backseat of your car (under the car seats is also an ideal location to search), come see me. We'll talk.

Ah, with all of that said, I feel much better and I can now go out and enjoy spring, unless, of course, I happen to tumble into a pothole before I am able to make it home.

And the winners are.... They certainly weren't who this critic picked

By CHARLIE DEITCH
News Editor

My first year out as an Oscar prognosticator did not go as well as I would have hoped.

Of the six main Oscars that I predicted, I got a grand whopping total of two correct. Some expert, but I've figured out the "Oscar system."

My picks were of who I thought would win. Everyone knows that the academy has a weird way of voting. Rather than relinquish my integrity, I will continue to pick the awards the right way, my way.

Let's look at the awards as a whole.

The Opening

Billy was back and in my opinion, he did a great job. My friend, myself and Jack Nicholson, however, looked like the only ones who enjoyed his comedy. Billy had them in the beginning, but he slowly lost the audience towards the end. I think he did super, but I only picked two awards, so who am I to judge?

Jack Palance dragging out the Oscar with Billy Crystal astride was the funniest opening I have ever seen in Oscar history. Crystal's opening song medley was also brilliant.

The Awards

Although I only correctly picked two awards, I feel a moral victory.

I'm not sure, but I think I was one of the few critics to pick Marisa Tomei for Best Supporting Actress. I was happy that politics didn't come into play and the best woman won.

My other victory was Gene Hackman in the male supporting role. Hackman's portrayal of Unforgiven's Little Bill Dagget got the recognition he deserved.

I was not disappointed too badly when my other picks were passed over, although I would like to make a few comments.

Pacino was incredible in Scent Of A Woman but he was no Denzel Washington.

Washington gave the best performance of the five listed nominees. The same hatred that Hollywood has for Spike Lee and his films was exacted on Washington, and that was a shame.

The name is Eastwood, Clint Eastwood. Ol' Clint sure got his money's worth when he made Unforgiven, since his movie not only got Best Picture, but Best Director. Eastwood beat out my favorite, Robert Altman, but I'm not real bitter about that.

I am still bitter about the absence of The Player, and in a moment, I will be addressing that issue for the last time.

Random Observations

Tim Robbins was at the awards and the look on his face when they announced the best actor trophy showed that Tim knew what kind of dirty politics went down in Hollywood that night. Look for Tim to do some outlandish things this year to really spit on Hollywood.

It was great to see Jack Nicholson and Clint Eastwood shake hands. For a true fan, that was macho heaven.

The awards show, all in all, was entertaining, and disappointments aside, I was happy for all of the winners. One more thing, I got Marisa right, ha, ha, ha.

ALBUM REVIEW

Frank Black (or who ever he is) is back on music scene

By JOE DEMAY
Staff Reporter

All right kiddies. Listen up. Let's get one thing straight before I get this article started, Frank Black is Black Francis is Charles Thompson. Got that?

It's like this. Frank Black was born Charles Thompson but when he formed the Pixies he took, as he calls it, the nom de rock, Black Francis. Now, though, he's gone solo (kind of) and has taken on the new name of Frank Black, and that he will be called throughout the rest of this article.

Well, with that out of the way, let us go on. Black's platter du jour is a self-titled release that often harkens back to the good ol' Surfer Rosa, Come On Pilgrim Pixie days of yore.

Black has never been much of a straight forward lyricist, but if you're halfway decent in the brain department, and you think about the words for more than two minutes, you can usually figure out just what the hell he's talking about. Either that or you can be a lucky schmuck like me and get his bio where he explains what every song's about.

Black has a rather odd sense of humor, one with which I greatly identify (which could be why I like him so much).

Take, for instance, the album's first track, "Los Angeles." In this song, Black wants to live in Los Angeles, but not the one in Los Angeles. Got that? If not, too bad. Buy the album and figure it out for yourself.

From there we take off on a magical journey (oh puh-leease) that reveals love songs to the Ramones ("I Heard Ramona Sing"), a ditty about John Denver ("Czar") and a little something about blackholes ("Places Named After Numbers"), which Black said are "very in."

Now, if you're expecting a musical continuation of the Pixies last release, Trompe le

Monde, then you're wrong. Sure, there are a few tunes, especially near the end of the album that sound a whole lot like some of the early Pixies stuff, but on the whole, it's a new direction for Black.

The stuff that does sound like the early Pixies, such as "Ten Percenter," "Brackish Boy" and "Hang on to Your Ego" (a Brian Wilson tune), is thanks, in large part, to the fact that Joey Santiago, the former lead guitarist of the Pixies, helps out and provides some added bite to the songs.

Where this whole Frank Black thing is going, I'm not quite sure, but knowing Black, he's probably got something in mind.

Right now, though, Black's got his s**t together, and that means only one thing—everybody take cover and get the hell out of his way. Frank Black is back in town, don't you rile 'em now. Got that?

Penguins diamond men cap sweep of Bonnies

By MATTHEW DEUTSCH
Assistant News Editor

The YSU baseball team evened its season record at 6-6 with a pair of victories over St. Bonaventure Tuesday in their home-opening doubleheader.

In the first game, the Penguins pounded the Bonnies 11-5 breaking a tie with six runs in the sixth inning. Centerfielder Jamie Palumbo and third-baseman Joe Ayyette led off the inning with back-to-back infield singles and then advanced on a passed ball. After an intentional walk to rightfielder Jeff Cruber, shortstop Brad Heller also walked (unintentionally), forcing home a run.

St. Bonaventure then brought in relief pitcher William Harris in hopes that he would close out the inning without further incident. He didn't as firstbaseman Brian Myers greeted Harris with a two-run single, increasing the Penguins' lead to 8-5. Then, with two men still on base, catcher Tim Birkmeier crushed his second home run of the season over the left field fence, completing the barrage.

"He threw me a fastball," Birkmeier said afterwards. "I tell myself all the time to sit on the fastball and then adjust to the curveball. I've been having a little trouble with the fastball lately." He didn't have trouble with Harris' fastball.

Darrin Moore got the win for YSU in relief of starter Matt Nurczyk, who left in the top of the sixth inning with a 5-2 lead. The Bonnies managed three unearned runs off Moore before he shut them down the rest of the way.

A bit of controversy arose early in the first game when rightfielder Lou Vassalotti was hit by a pitch with the bases loaded in the bottom of the fourth inning and the score tied 1-1. The umpire promptly ruled that Vassalotti had leaned into the pitch and called the pitch a ball. Vassalotti ended up flying out to centerfield and later maintained that he had not leaned into the pitch, but that he hadn't leapt out of the way either.

"I have a right to the batter's box," he said.

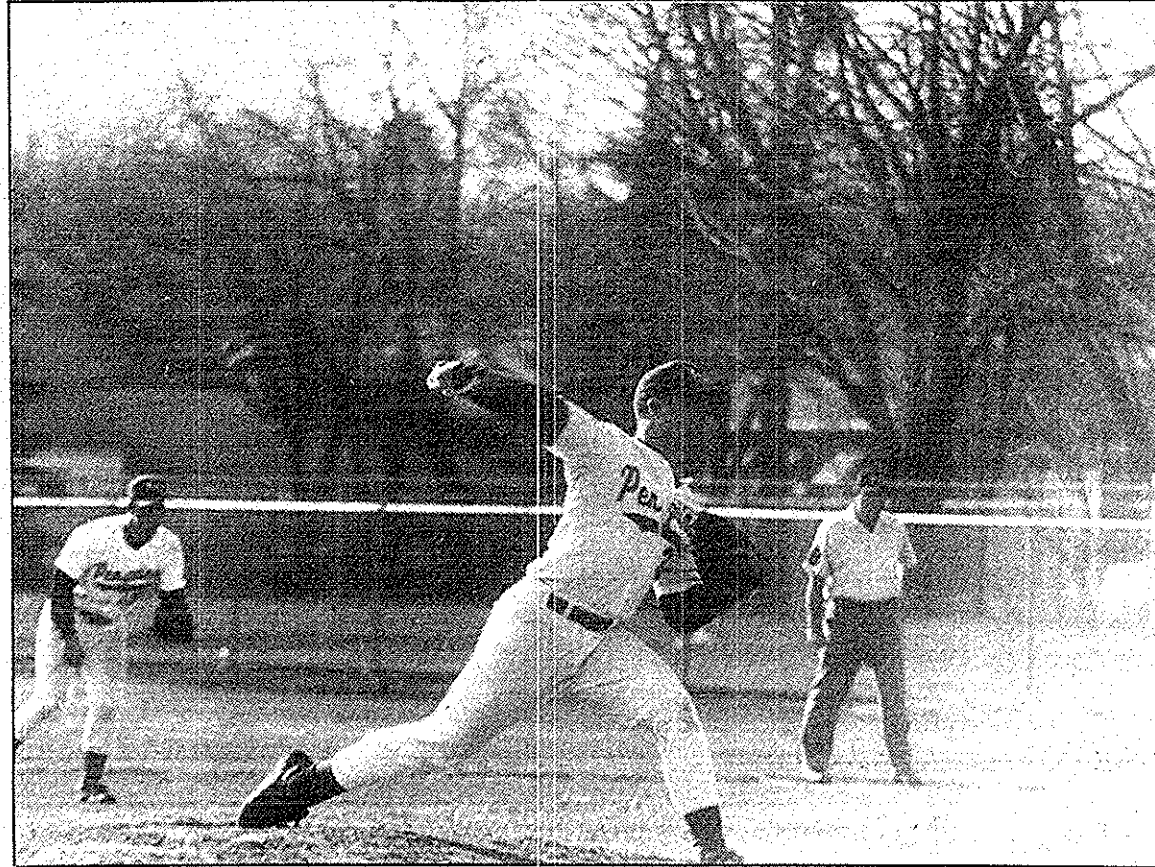

Ron Kitchen was the center of attention in the second game. The Penguins' star righthander threw a three-hitter against the Bonnies, striking out seven and walking just one in a 2-0 victory. Outfielder Matt Kalmbach produced the game-winning hit when he drove in both of YSU's runs with a single in the fourth inning. Two St. Bonaventure pitchers only gave up two hits to YSU altogether, but in a losing cause.

The Penguins play today at Canisus College before coming back home for a doubleheader against Eastern Illinois at 1 p.m. on Saturday at Pemberton Park.

And heeere's the pitch. Pitcher Ron "If you can't take the heat, get out of the" Kitchen fires in a pitch in YSU's nightcap against St. Bonaventure on Tuesday. Kitchen led the Penguins to a 2-0 shutout of the Bonnies. With an 11-5 win in the opener, YSU now moves to 6-6 on the season.

Thincladder Kelley shows off prowess on track, in classroom

By HOLLY KUZMA
Staff Reporter

Brent Kelley, a YSU sophomore majoring in dietetics, is a second-year member of the men's track and cross country teams. Kelley believes, "Team work and dedication make it all possible."

Kelley, a graduate of Springfield Local High School, spends almost all of his time on the track. Track practice keeps him busy Monday through Friday, from 3 to 5 p.m.

Kelley's interest in running track began when he was in the sixth grade. He started going to his older brother's high school track meets and really developed a passion for the sport.

The next year, Kelley joined his junior high track team. He started by participating mostly in the field events. He excelled in the long jump and the high jump.

Kelley continued to run track all four years of high school. He ran the hurdles, the mile and the two-mile relay. Kelley practiced hard and by his senior year, he held the school record for both the hurdles and the two-mile relay.

Kelley's love for the sport pushed him to go on to run for the YSU track team. As a freshman, Kelley participated in almost every event, so that head coach Jack Rigney could see which events he was best qualified to run. Kelley said that he gained a lot of experience and confidence during his first year, which enabled him to better himself both physically and mentally during his second year on the team.

As a sophomore member of the track team, Kelley expanded his running talent when he joined the cross country team. Kelley said he prefers to run track instead of cross country because, "I've always been one to take the easy way out."

This year, Kelley is going to run the decathlon. He said that he doesn't think it will be too much of a challenge because he's participated in all of the track events, including the decathlon, last year.

When asked what he enjoys most about the sport of running, Kelley said, "I thrive on competition, but I mostly enjoy the fitness aspects of it."

Kelley said that he believes that the track team will do very well this season. The indoor track team has already broken a number of school records. Kelley was a member of the record-breaking team, which holds the new record for the mile relay.

When he's not on the track, Kelley keeps himself busy, working at Nemenz Giant Eagle in Struthers.

Kelley is also busy in the classroom. Kelley said that sometimes it is difficult to balance such a hectic schedule, but it's usually worth it in the end.

Kelley plans to continue running track for YSU until he graduates with a degree in dietetics. His long-term goal is to be a member of the Olympic track team. Even though he knows it's a long shot, Kelley said, "It doesn't hurt to dream."

Police Blotter

March 17

According to Campus Police reports, Officer Marsco "was dispatched to Maag Library" because a library employee reported that a subject had set off the library's alarm while attempting to leave with an unchecked library book. The subject used profanities several times while being questioned by Marsco. Marsco discovered two paperback books with missing covers in the subject's bookbag.

One book is YSU property and the other is from John Carroll University. The subject claimed the YSU book was found in the Pub and the John Carroll University book was setting off the gates' alarm. However, library files indicate that the YSU book was returned to the library on March 22. Marsco tested the gates reaction to the books. "The alarm was activated all but once by both books," said Marsco. The subject, who also has an outstanding library fine, will be referred to the YSU Disciplinary Board.

March 18

A student notified Campus Police that he parked and secured his vehicle in the V-2 parking lot located in the Alumni House parking area. Upon the student's return, the vehicle was discovered missing. The vehicle was later discovered completely burned in Mahoning Township. Hillside Police Department Assistant Chief Frank Klunk said: "The fire was so intense that it [the car] melted down into the pavement." The car did not appear to be stripped and its "radio was still intact." The vehicle was worth $4,000.

March 26

A lot attendant reported to Campus Police that two males walked through the parking lot urinating. The subjects were discovered by Sgt. Adovasio and Officer Marsco on Lincoln and Fifth Avenue. One subject continued to walk after being approached by the officers. The subject began to "yell and throw" his arms toward the officers.

Sgt. Adovasio subdued the subject in an effort to protect himself. The subject, who was identified as George Scott, has previously been "involved in a fight with a female" on YSU grounds. Scott reportedly "smelled of an alcoholic beverage" and his clothing was in disarray. Scott was transported to the Youngstown Police Department.

March 29

Students reported to Campus Police that they had been approached by a male wearing gray pants. The students said they felt "threatened" by the subject who asked them for money. The subject was discovered near Burger King and was transported to the city jail on an active warrant.
