Government makes election plans

By MARALINE KUBIK
Jambar Assistant News Editor

Planning elections, electing a new secretary, appointing representatives to the Academic Grievance Committee and putting together a coaching staff were all on Student Government's agenda Monday afternoon during the first spring quarter meeting.

Elections for Student Government representatives are slated for May 10 and 11, reported Bernadette Martyak, co-chair of the Elections Committee and petitions, which are currently available, must be returned by April 14.

Three debates are also planned, two where candidates for Student Government president will face off and one where vice presidential candidates will have the opportunity to confront each other, she explained.

Bob Walls, Student Government vice president, also announced the resignation of Chris Ciabattini, secretary, effective April 3. Terri Richards, representative from CAST, was elected to fill the vacancy.

Dan Davis, second vice president, in his report nominated four students to fill vacancies on the Academic Grievance Committee. Mike Lattro, senior, CAST; Stephen Evans, junior, A&S; Chad Frank, senior, engineering; and Dale Lipscomb, junior, education, were all accepted.

Jim Tressel, head football coach, also made an appearance at the meeting to appeal for Student Government representatives interested in coaching the Penguins annual red-white game, scheduled for Saturday, May 6.

Student coaches from various campus organizations will draft players, run a one-hour practice session and call plays during the game, Tressel explained. In the past, he added, guest coaches for the annual event have included YSU alumni Ron Jaworski, a quarterback for the Kansas City Chiefs, and Cliff Stoudt, a quarterback for the Phoenix Cardinals.

Safety week blows into action

YSU — As part of the growing consciousness for tornado safety, YSU will test its outdoor warning system at 10:10 a.m. Wednesday as part of observances for Tornado Safety Week, April 2-8.

Students, faculty and staff will not be required to proceed to a tornado shelter during the test, but all are urged to become familiar with designated torado shelters in campus buildings.

In the event of an actual emergency, the following is recommended:

— proceed immediately to a tornado shelter area or the lowest level of a building, closet or bathroom;

— avoid large open areas where a roof may collapse;

— stay away from windows and glass;

— remain indoors;

— if in an automobile, find a shelter area or low ground and do not leave a shelter area until an all-clear is sounded.

DR. ALFRED ROBERT BADER

Collector-chemist to speak at YSU

YSU — "The Adventures of a Chemist-Collector" will be the topic of a talk by Dr. Alfred Robert Bader, the featured speaker at YSU's spring Schermer Scholar-In-Residence program.

The public lecture is to be held Wednesday, April 5, at 7:30 p.m.

Bader is chair of the multi-national conglomerate Sigma-Aldrich, and founder of Aldrich chemical company. His love of art and art history competes with his chemistry and marketing genius.

According to Aldrichimica Acta, a technical journal launched by Bader, he built Aldrich into the world's foremost supplier of high quality fine organic chemicals, research chemicals and bulk specialty chemicals.

In 1951, Bader began what was to become a chemical dynasty in a garage which he rented for $25 a month. Later, Bader formed ABC Division of Rare Chemicals to help those who needed chemicals which were difficult to obtain. Over 23,000 rare chemicals are now offered.

Aldrich also developed a unique free computer search service to locate required compounds now used by scientists worldwide, along with reference books such as The Aldrich Library of Infrared Spectra and its subsequent companion, The Aldrich Library of NMR Spectra.

EGA Chemie, a German supplier, and Ralph N. Emanuel, Ltd., which Bader founded with a friend, became wholly owned Aldrich subsidiaries in 1970. In 1972, Aldrich acquired Diaprep, Inc., a supplier of deuterated compounds, making Aldrich one of the world's major suppliers of such stable isotopes.

Also in 1972, Bader established Boranes, Inc., to develop new technology based on borane chemistry.

Aldrich merged in 1975 with Sigma Chemical Company to form Sigma-Aldrich Corporation. Over the years, other smaller companies were acquired by Sigma-Aldrich.

Questions ethics: Dr. Brendan Minogue, philosophy, will help the Western Reserve Care System decide ethical dilemmas.

Minogue to aid medical ethics

YSU — Dr. Brendan Minogue, philosophy and religious studies, has been recently appointed by the Western Reserve Care System as a bioethicist. He will be shaping WRCS policies about important ethical dilemmas such as withholding treatment from patients, the role of technology in the practice of medicine and the limits of the doctor-patient relationship.

Minogue teaches medical ethics at YSU and has taught biomedical ethics and philosophy in medicine for twelve years at the Northeastern Ohio Universities College of Medicine.

For the last three years, Minogue has been a member of an ethics committee at WRCS.

"As the hospital ethicist, I assist in ethics policy development," said Minogue. "Do not resuscitate, withholding life support and comfort measures only are some of the policies I've helped shape."

In the classes he teaches at YSU, Minogue challenges students to resolve health care problems by using the ethical policies of the WRCS. "I help the students understand the central issues, then I give them the principles and frequently there are substantial disagreements, which I think are healthy," Minogue said.

The myriad of controversial topics discussed in class make those arguments practically unavoidable. The rights of minors, abortion, cost benefits and risk benefit analyses, the disclosure of information, active and passive euthanasia and genetic research are covered in the class.

Minogue's students learn about the emergence of the practice of defensive medicine, which has grown in the face of malpractice suits. The curriculum also includes the Nuremberg code,

Accidents, thefts subject of report

By JONI DOBRAN
Jambar News Editor

Automobile mishaps and two thefts on campus were listed in the Campus Police report.

On Sunday, April 2, Max Palma, CAST, told police the windshield of his car was smashed while it was parked in the V-4 lot near Meshel Hall.

The report said Palma parked his car at approximately 1 p.m. while he went to work in the building. At around 3 p.m., he looked out the window and saw that his car was okay.

When Palma left work at 5 p.m., he discovered the window had been broken at the top of the driver's side.

The outer layer of the glass was shattered in an irregular pattern, the report said, while some of the inner layer was broken and was on the front seat. Damage was listed at $800.

Another accident occurred near midnight Friday, March 31, in the F-1 parking lot on Rayen Avenue.

The report said Brad Barringer, sophomore, WSBA, was backing up from a spot when he struck the driver's side door of the car belonging to Cynthia Salvatore of Campbell.

Also cited in the report was the fact that Patrick Masterson, junior, CAST, was guiding Barringer out of the spot.

An accident on the 4C level of the M-2 (Lincoln Avenue) deck involved Tiffin Thomas, sophomore, A&S, and Scott Hall, sophomore, A&S, the report said.

Thomas told police she was parked in the east bound lane while waiting for a parking space, when Hall started backing up his car and struck Thomas' left front fender.

Hall told police he didn't see Thomas before he hit her. His car sustained damage to its right quarter panel.

A student who lives in the Kilcawley Residence Hall had the stereo cassette player stolen from his car while it was parked in the M-19 lot on Thursday, March 30.

John B. Patton, freshman, A&S, told police he parked and locked his car at 8:30 p.m. on March 29 and didn't return to it until 8:30 the following day. When he did, he found his $250 Pioneer system was gone. There was also damage to the car's dashboard.

In another incident on March 30, the report said M. Mary Wojciak, senior, A&S, was involved in a car accident with Pamela Kish, senior, A&S, on the 2A level of the M-1 (Wick Avenue) parking deck.

Wojciak told police she was northbound making a left turn around the northeast corner of the level to travel in a westerly direction. She went past an empty parking spot, the report continued, then stopped to back up, making a left turn into the spot.

Kish told police she was traveling east and making a left turn around the northeast corner to begin westward travel when she was struck by Wojciak. Kish's car was damaged in the front end and license plate.

Change in financial aid could alter social groups

Swapping student labor for financial aid — regardless of how much work Congress puts into such a plan — does not sound like a good idea.

Democratic leaders met last month to discuss the feasibility of requiring students who apply for financial aid to perform military or community service first. Students would receive grants instead of loans and the money vouchers could be used for education or a down payment of a house.

Several versions of this idea currently are being considered by Congress, and Senator Sam Nunn of Georgia is co-sponsor of one of the more popular plans. Under Nunn's proposal, students would work full time for one year if performing community work, two years if enlisting in the military. Those students would be paid $100 per week and, at the end of their service, receive vouchers for educational or housing costs.

It seems like a good idea on the surface. Students would fill gaps in volunteerism that currently exist across the nation while working toward educational goals. Below the surface, serious problems are evident — problems that would contribute, if not create, a division between students of different social statuses.

Students who would fall under Nunn's guidelines would not attend school during their year or years of service, thus leaving college campuses to only those who do not need federal assistance. Statistics from the American Council on Education show that only 20 percent of those who stopped going to school in 1980 to pursue work had graduated by 1986. The weekly pay is not enough to make a living from, so second jobs would be necessary, and students could always bypass the plan's educational objectives by using their vouchers to buy a house.

Nunn's plan has merit but not in its current form: adaptations need to be made. Senator Barbara Milulski of Maryland has proposed part-time volunteer work in exchange for financial aid. It would mean smaller amounts of funding but would permit students to remain in school while still serving the needs of students and the country. Hopefully it will be considered because it appears one plan will be adopted before the end of the year.

Worms replace canines as our best friends

Rainy days and Mondays and worms always get me down.

It was just last Thursday that it hit. In epidemic proportions on the YSU campus, worms covered the sidewalks.

Don't you think college students should have more important things to worry about, like the measles? But now they seem to be concerned with those earthworms.

Every where I went yesterday and last Thursday the topic of conversation was those doggone worms.

"Someone should call President Humphrey," said one person, "and demand that he do something about those stupid worms."

"Oh, they give me the creeps," said another. "I can't stand them. Everyone's walking around campus dodging them, trying not to step on them. I've never seen so many worms as there were on the sidewalks last Thursday."

It appears that everyone on campus hates those slithering creatures. In fact, it was just last week that I felt the same way, but it was yesterday after overhearing a conversation between two YSU students that I had seen the light and realized the worm, not the dog, just might be man's best friend.

It was a conversation between a young man and woman in Kilcawley Center.

"Did you see the worms this morning?" she said. "I See Worms, page 5"

"Hate worms, I hate worms, I hate worms."

"Slow down," he said.

"What's the problem?"

"God," she said, "didn't you see the zillion worms outside on the sidewalks?"

"Yes," he said, "but what's the problem?"

"I hate stepping on worms, and they stink, too," she said.

"I've hated worms ever since third grade when some jerk threw a worm at a group of us girls and it hit me in the lip. I washed my lips for weeks. Oh, that still gives me the creeps."

"Yeah, but did you know, without worms this University's grounds probably wouldn't look as nice? It's our friend the worm, by digging its way through the ground, that allows the necessary air and water to go farther into the ground which is needed for the plants to grow. You didn't know that, did you?"

"So what?" she said. "That doesn't mean I can't hate those slimy buggers."

"Those worms have every right to be on this campus as you," he said.

"Yeah, right," she said.

"When they start paying over $600 a quarter for rent then you can say that."

"You're a bird-lover, right?"

he asked, and she nodded. "You know, the reason we have so many lovely birds around campus is because the birds know this area is load with their favorite snack — worms."

"Yeah, I guess you're right on that," she said, appearing to loosen up on the issue of hating worms.

As I sat there I was hoping he would next hit her with the fact that the worms made good bait for fishing, too. But he didn't.

"But I still wish they didn't come out of the ground when it rains," she said. "Why can't they stay down in the ground and mind their own business?"

"They would if they could," he said. "But they would drown from the rainwater if they stayed down in the ground while it's raining."

"Really?" she said.

"Yeah," he said. "You see, the worm doesn't have any lungs or gills. It breathes through its skin and if it rains the worms drown if they don't get to the surface."

"Ahhh, I didn't know that," she said, feeling sorry for the little "buggers."

"And I bet you didn't know that if the worms didn't get back underground shortly after the rain has stopped, they'll die because they are sensitive to the heat because their skin is so thin," he said.

"I never realized how sad the life of the worm really was," she said. "The worm is a really interesting creature. How do you know so much about worms?"

"I read a lot, I guess," he said.

"I can suggest reading materials about the worm if you like."

"I'm not that interested," she said. "Let's go, I don't think I'm hungry anymore."

It was for those five short minutes that I realized that the worm was man's best friend.

Then I got up from my table, wandered outside, saw a worm slithering up the sidewalk and said, "Nah."

Crum's one-year term will end this May. Her two-year term will expire in May 1990. Applications for students interested in applying for the two-year term which will expire May 1991, currently available, are due April 23.

McFarland also announced appointing Paul Conley, freshman, business, and Juanita Bass, freshman, A&S, to serve as assistants on minority affairs to the president.

ALFRED BADER

When Alfred Bader was ten years old, he spent money given to him for another purpose to buy an Old Master drawing at an auction. Thus began a lifetime of collecting and studying art, a pursuit which today is almost as much Bader's trademark as his internationally known and respected chemical firm, Sigma-Aldrich Corporation.

Through the years, Dr. Bader has continued his study, particularly of the Old Masters and the Bible. He is a recognized art historian, and it has been said of him, "All art lovers are indebted to his zeal, his perspicacity and his often proven generosity in sharing his treasures with them."

Maker Chemicals, Ltd. in Jerusalem, which had the ability to produce bacterial and fungal toxins, and Floyd Green's Dyes and Stains Company are among the companies now owned by Sigma-Aldrich.

Despite the acquisitions, the major growth was internal, based on the development of new products and related supplies. Sigma and Aldrich products are purchased by universities, research institutions, hospitals, and industries in nearly every country in the world. Over one million catalogues are distributed.

Apart from the USA, Sigma-Aldrich now has warehousing and production plants in England, Germany and Israel, and sales locations in Canada, Belgium, France and Japan. The company employs nearly 2,000 people.

Business acumen and chemistry expertise are not Bader's only talents. While building his company, Bader continued pursuing his intense interest in art, an interest that developed at an early age.

Born in Austria to an aristocratic family and raised by a widowed aunt, Bader bought his first Old Master drawing at an auction when he was only ten years old.

Bader's life took some interesting turns when at age 14 he was sent to school in Britain along with other Jewish youngsters as Austria headed toward the Anschluss with Germany. He eventually found himself part of a shipload of German Jewish refugees destined for a prisoner-of-war camp in Canada. He was ultimately paroled from the camp and became a successful, active student at Queens University in Kingston, Ontario, where he earned a bachelor of science degree in chemical engineering in 1945, a bachelor of arts in history in 1946 and a masters of science in 1947.

Bader has continued his interest in art, particularly Old Masters and the Bible. He has assembled an important private collection of 17th century Dutch Masters and has found time to teach Bible studies at a religious school. Bader was selected to act as guest curator of the Milwaukee Art Center, and to organize the exhibition "The Bible through Dutch Eyes." He was also selected as Fellow of the Royal Society of Arts in London in recognition of his achievements as an art collector and historian, and his research in art restorations.

Bader has authored or co-authored 25 scientific publications covering a wide range of topics in the field of organic chemistry.

For his contributions to science, industry and art, Bader was recognized with a honorary doctorate of science degree from the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, the Milwaukee-area 1983 Engineer of the Year award and honorary doctorate from the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

Grateful Dead bring living rock history to arena

JOHN CHARIGNON/THE JAMBAR

Grateful: Guitarist and singer Bob Weir of the Grateful Dead performs to a sold out Civic Arena crowd last Sunday.

By ROB CICCOTELLI
Jambar Entertainment Editor

Upon arrival at the Civic Arena Sunday for the first of the Grateful Dead's two shows in Pittsburgh it was obvious that this was much more than another rock concert.

I had heard many times my first Dead show would be an unforgettable experience and the concert certainly proved to be beyond my expectations.

Trudging through the light rain to the arena I found a veritable carnival of Deadheads selling their wares. There were even canopies to shield the artistic tie-dyes and other products of this American subculture from the weather.

The Deadheads come from all over the country, following the band on their tours. One Deadhead, Paul, from Delaware, said he had ridden five hours in the open back of a pickup truck to Pittsburgh. He didn't have a ticket for the show and he didn't seem to mind.

Once inside the arena, I saw people dancing all over, in the outer concourse, in the aisles, and on their chairs. Many of the fans were clothed in the hippie styles of the early 70's, complete with long hair, tie-dyed garments from head to toe and either sandals or bare feet.

The overriding emotion of the capacity Civic Arena crowd throughout the show was characterized by peaceful, happiness.

The performance was flawless. The lead vocals by frontmen Jerry Garcia and Bob Weir and their harmonies give the Grateful Dead's live performance an emotional quality unattainable in a recording studio.

The Dead's performing style is unique in that they consistently run songs together with no break in the music.

The second set was highlighted by a lengthy drum solo followed by the return of Weir and Garcia to the stage and the lyrics, "Tennessee, Tennessee, ain't no place I'd rather be," echoed through the arena.

The songs the band performed included more popular works

Dead: The three hour plus performance of the band lead by Jerry Garcia pleased fans of all ages once again.

Messer to speak at Butler

YOUNGSTOWN — The successful On America lecture series, which brings to the Butler Institute major personalities in the world of art, will continue April 12 with a lecture by the distinguished former director of the Guggenheim Museum, Thomas M. Messer.

Dr. Messer, who directed the Guggenheim from 1961 through 1987, is a native of Bratislava Czechoslovakia. He first came to America as an exchange student at nearby Thiel College, later becoming a U.S. citizen. With degrees from Boston University, Sorbonne, Harvard and the University of Massachusetts, Dr. Messer has had a most distinguished career which has included international awards from Germany and Belgium.

He recently retired as director of the Solomon R. Guggenheim Foundation and the Peggy Guggenheim Collection in Venice, Italy. Dr. Messer is now dedicating his time to writing books and articles. An essay for the Tasende Gallery 10th Anniversary catalogue is among his upcoming publications. Dr. Messer will speak about his experiences as director of the Guggenheim Museum.

Nina Castelli Sundell, a distinguished scholar on contemporary American art, will speak on May 17 at the Butler Institute. She is the founder of "Independent Curators" — an organization based in Washington, D.C. which curates and travels select exhibitions of contemporary art, and the co-founder of Cleveland's "New Gallery of Contemporary Art" with Marjorie Talalay.

Under the guidance of its first teacher, James Clute, DeMark made such rapid progress that he made his solo debut with the Minnesota Orchestra eighteen months after beginning the double bass. He has subsequently performed with the New York Philharmonic, the St. Paul Chamber Orchestra, Buffalo Philharmonic, Mostly Mozart Festival Orchestra, Chautauqua Festival Orchestra, Netherlands Radio Symphony and countless others.

Van DeMark's recitals with Andre Watts, Samuel Sanders, Robert Spillman, Anthony Newman, and James Dick have won him great acclaim. He has also been hailed for his chamber music collaborations with the Guarneri, Cleveland, and Colorado Quartets, the Los Angeles Piano Quartet and with pianists Gary Graffman and Alfred Brendel. such as "Turn on Your Love Light." However, they didn't perform a single song from their latest album, Touch of Grey.

This band that seems to be continually touring defies the commercial 'isms' of the record industry in ways such as this. They know that their fans aren't specifically interested in hearing their hits. This is part of the non-conformist, communal, Deadhead philosophy.

A notable difference between their show and other concerts

I've seen was the fact that they never spoke to the audience. The music and lyrics said all that needed to be said and the audience responded in the most positive fashion that I've ever witnessed.

This concert provided me with an experience that I will never forget. The Grateful Dead's performing ability is exceptional. However the real highlight of this experience was my interaction with the peaceful, friendly Dead faithful without whom this would probably have been just another quality concert.

YSU suffers 3-1 loss to Wittenburg

By RUSSELL FARMINTINO
Assistant Sports Editor

The YSU baseball team were the victims of foul weather this weekend as the Penguins dropped a 3-1 decision to host Wittenburg in a game that was halted after 4½ innings due to rain.

The loss dropped the Penguins spring record to 1-9 and their overall 1988-89 record to 9-10.

After falling behind 1-0 after one inning of play, the Penguins scratched the scoring column with a run of their own in the top of the third to knot the game up at 1-1.

However, the deadlock would not last long as Wittenburg retaliated with two tallies in the bottom of the fourth inning to take a 3-1 advantage. After failing to score in the top of the fifth inning, Mother Nature made certain that a YSU comeback would not occur.

Jim Timko suffered the tough-luck loss for the Penguins as he and Bob Susa limited Wittenburg to just five hits. Unfortunately, the Penguins bats fell asleep as YSU managed just two hits for the contest.

Throwing heat

JOHN CHARIGNON/THE JAMBAR

John Crays is a freshman pitcher for the Penguin baseball team warms up in his arm in practice. The baseball team has had a hard time playing because of the nasty weather. YSU's next home game is with Kent State on Wednesday at 1:00.

YSU Softball looks for brighter season

By RICK GEORGE
Jambar Sports Reporter

After going 3-9 on the Florida trip, the YSU softball team has hit a stop. Because of inclement weather, the Penguins have yet to play another game.

"This has been the worst weather in the five years that I have been here," said head coach Ed Strauss. The team is supposed to have their home opener today against Akron.

While waiting for the weather to break, Strauss said he hopes the practices are helping his team.

After only 12 games, Strauss said he feels the pitching is the team's strongest point.

"If we played more games I would have a better idea," he said.

So far, junior Chris Rohan leads the team with a 2.19 era while freshman Sherry Huff and senior Ruth Pleskovic have an era of 3.33 and 3.95.

"All three pitched well on the trip south," said Strauss. "Some of the losses they suffered were close ones."

The one area that he hopes to improve is the hitting department as junior Marla Penza is leading the team with a .472 batting average while the team is hitting at a .273 clip.

"Our problem is that we were not hitting in key situations," said Strauss.

"Ruth Pleskovic, Marla Penza, and Jen Aurillio are the only three that have been hitting well," he said.

Aurillio is hitting at a .308 clip while Pleskovic is batting .278 while pitching and playing the outfield.

The Penguins have been hit with injuries to key players which has slowed their progress.

Fitcher Julie Croft had an operation on her shoulder before the season even began which sidelined her for the year.

The injury bug did not end there as shortstop Julie Yuhasz played in only three games before suffering a broken forearm which shelved her for the season. Taking her place is freshman Carey Johnson.

"At the beginning of the season we had a good nucleus and good experience at every position, but now we had to do some juggling," said Strauss.

Penguins prepare to snap on helmets for spring drills

By RICK GEORGE
Jambar Sports Reporter

Spring signals not only the beginning of baseball season, but also college football practice, as football teams nation wide, including YSU, are preparing for annual spring practice.

The YSU Penguins kick-off their spring practice this Thursday at 3:15.

"Spring practice is a time for young players to emerge and see how things come," said YSU head football coach Jim Tressel.

The players will practice four times a week for a month before the Spring Game on May 6 that concludes the schedule.

"We try and look at everybody during the spring," said Tressel. "It is a time to start over with no urgency of preparing for a game."

"We also try and hone in on the fundamentals and get the players in the right position for the season," he said.

One area that will draw some attention is the quarterback position, as Frank Edie, Chris Gamble and Ray Isaac are all vying for the start.

"We try and look at everybody during the spring. It's a time to start over with no urgency of preparing for a game."

JIM TRESSEL

"The nice thing about this year [as compared to] last year is that all three guys have game experience under their belts," said Tressel. "They know what they can do."

The linebacking position was hit hard by the loss of Jerry Pacifico and possibly second-team All-American Paul Soltis.

YSU is appealing to the NCAA to regain a year of eligibility for Soltis who transferred from Ohio State his sophomore year. Tressel has not heard anything yet on the appeal.

Even if both do not return, Tressel said he felt YSU has the right people to shore up the position.

Marrow set to try football

By TIM LEONARD
Jambar Sports Editor

YSU basketball player Vince Marrow has decided to try his luck at football this spring.

Marrow, a sophomore, ended this past basketball season averaging 7.6 ppg and 2.9 rpg while coming off the bench at the forward position.

Marrow will most likely be trying out at tight end, a position he played at Mooney High School where he was named All-State at the position.

Marrow said he was originally recruited by many of the big Division I football powers — like Miami, Fla., Michigan, Ohio State, Michigan State — to play football.

VINCE MARROW

"I've always wanted to play football," said Marrow. "I've been watching YSU football for the last two seasons and I decided I wanted to play."

Volleyball team signs athlete

Rosemary Pomper, a 5'10" middle/outside hitter from nearby Sharpsville (Pa.) High School, has inked a national letter-of-intent to attend YSU this fall on a volleyball scholarship, it was announced by Head Women's Volleyball Coach John McKenna.

A nine letter-winner while in high school (she earned four letters in volleyball, three in basketball and two in track and field), she was a First-Team Mercer County selection in volleyball this past season and plans to major in mall management in college.

"She is a stand-out player who led her squad this past season in spikes and blocks," McKenna said.

SOCCER: The YSU soccer club will be having a organizational meeting today in room 1099 of Stambaugh Stadium at 3. Eric Montgomery, club president, will conduct the meeting.

All present members are urged to attend as well as any other student with an interest in joining the soccer club at YSU. The club is open to any full-time student.

Minogue. "In philosophy open-mindedness is a primary virtue."

Gene A. Butcher, M.D., WRCS Vice President of Medical Affairs, said most large hospitals now employ an ethicist to decide ethical problems. "Certainly anyone who's now involved with health care knows that when we have to deal with the element of quality care and use of limited resources, it's inevitable that ethics questions and issues emerge," he said.

Butcher said Minogue has been a key figure on the WRCS institutional review board committee. "He brings a balance of human values and ethical principles into the practice of medicine." The review committee evaluates research studies, ensure that Federal Drug Administration standards are upheld and protects the rights of human subjects in research.

Minogue also guides residents and acts as a consultant in specific cases.

Minogue earned his M.A. and Ph.D. at The Ohio State Univer-
