Stambaugh renovations enter second phase

By BRIAN J. MACALA

The colossus on the North side of campus is currently receiving a facelift. Stambaugh Stadium is in the second stage of repairs to the seven-year-old structure.

According to Mike Skurich, manager, technical services, Executive Director's office, the renovation has entered stage two of a three-stage project. The work is being done by Daniel Terreri and Sons of Youngstown.

"The work that is being done now is the biggest part of the renovation of the stadium," Skurich said. "There will be $900,000 worth of work done at Stambaugh this summer."

Skurich said workmen are working on the seating and concourse area of the stadium. He explained that the workers will be putting in new caulking and concrete to improve the waterproofing of the stadium.

"The process that they are currently working on will take three to four months," Skurich said. "They should be done with this phase by mid-August. They are scheduled to finish repairs by Sept. 15, just before the start of school and football season."

The Penguins are scheduled to open their home football schedule on Sept. 23 against the University of Akron.

Schroeder addresses government meeting

By MARALI N. KUBIK

Jambar Assistant News Editor

"One of the things I think students have forgotten is how much power they really do have," pointed out Congresswoman Pat Schroeder, (D-Colo.), during a brief address to Student Government during Monday's meeting.

Voter turnout is very low in this country, she pointed out, alluding to the fact that students really do have power in electing legislators. Too often, she said, people who write to senators and congressional representatives get angry when they don't receive a reply or when they receive a form letter. Rather than voting for someone else, these people respond by not voting at all, she explained.

Because of this, "we have people dropping out of the system," Schroeder said. "Start taking the government back rather than writing the government off."

Schroeder also addressed the National Service Bill, a proposal that, if passed, would offer people a way to contribute to the government.

"What about you?" sang out another unknown audience member, and the comment prompted applause from the rest of the audience and a smile on Schroeder's face.

Schroeder, who has served her Colorado district in Congress for 15 years, visited YSU as a Speaky Lecturer Monday evening. Her ambition to enter the presiden­tial race in 1987 may have been short-lived, but her desire to call attention to public health care, child care and housing concerns currently is leading her down a different trail — a public speaking tour.

The 20th century has been declared America's century, Schroeder said, because of the role the United States played in national and international affairs prior to the 1980s. Now that this country is approaching a new century, its citizens must find "some way to get excellence back into the public sector...or we're not going to have much of a role," she said.

Despite the fact that "very few countries have been blessed with the civil service we have," said Schroeder, Americans should not take it for granted.

YSU — The University is observing Holistic Health Month in May with special programs focusing on the physical, mental, emotional, social, intellectual and occupational aspects that comprise holistic health.

Holistic health is a new term for the concept of developing personal responsibility to maximize one's own well being and to establish patterns to promote a healthy lifestyle.

Events for the month are being coordinated by YSU's campus Recreation, Student Services, the Student Activities Office and the President's Office.

Major events, in chronological order are:

Spirituality Panel, noon to 1:30 p.m., Wednesday, May 10 in the Kilcawley Center Audio. Dr. Anthony Whitney, BPhil, and YSU health and physical education major, will speak on the topic "What is Spirituality?" How do you incorporate spirituality into your daily life? The forum will feature Robert Stanko, criminal justice, and Ma­

The Department of Social Action of Catholic Charities will conduct a free, anti-nuclear activist, speaking for mandatory AIDS testing. Dr. Mark Kittleson, BPhil, and Dr. Linda Tanier, philosophy and religion studies major, will respond to mandatory AIDS testing. Dr. David Roberts, speech communication major, will serve as moderator.

Forum speaks to school funding.

By BRIAN J. MACALA

Jambar Managing Editor

The public school system in the state of Ohio is facing major problems with funding and it seems the problems will become worse unless something is done quickly.

This was the message conveyed at the Faculty Forum held yesterday in DeBartolo Hall. The forum was attended by three members of the WYSU faculty who currently hold positions on public school boards.

The three were: Dr. William Jenkins, Jr., history, a member of the Board of Education at Northwest Hills School Board; Dr. John Yerena, chair of the Struthers School Board; and Dr. Warren Young, chair of the Board of Education in the Board of Education for the Struthers School District.

Jenkins spoke about current misconceptions associated with the state of Ohio's public school system. He stated that the financing of public schools is complex and difficult to understand and may take a brand new member over a year before he fully understands it.

The constitution of the state of Ohio, Jenkins said, only states that there must be an education system and that each child has an equal opportunity and education.

The issue of financing the schools is not mentioned. Jenkins discussed the issue of how schools receive their funding and that roughly 50 percent of a district's budget is made up of property taxes, which provides roughly 50 percent of a district's budget. He also mentioned that if a levy is not passed, it is difficult for the district to continue.

Thefts, fire alarms ring at YSU

By JONIDOBRAN
Jambar News Editor

Several thefts and false fire alarms occurred over the past few days, as listed in the YSU Police report.

On Monday, May 1, Mercedes Golonko of Youngstown reported that several books and a digital alarm clock were stolen from her library study carrel.

She told police she last saw the items on Friday, April 28 when she locked her door at 2:50 p.m. Returning at 12:45 p.m. Monday, her property was gone.

The report said there were scuff marks on the outside wall, which could have been caused by someone climbing over the wall to gain entrance. There were no marks on the door or lock.

Stolen were the following:

- The Lost Honor of Katherine Blum, $27
- A digital alarm clock, $15
- Handbook for Writing, $17
- The first and second editions of Contracts, $50 and two paperbacks, $8

Two false fire alarms went off on Monday. The first happened in Maag Library in the 4A stack area.

Police found that someone had pulled the alarm down at 10:37 a.m. Maintenance reset the alarm and occupants were readmitted at 10:49 a.m.

The second fire alarm went off at 11:50 a.m. on the third floor of DeBartolo Hall.

The report said a smoke detector malfunctioned. It was reset by maintenance and those waiting outside were let back in at 11:59 a.m.

On Saturday, April 29, Doug Sherl, junior, CAST, reported that items were stolen from his car between the hours of 7 p.m. and 12:12 a.m. Sherl told police his girlfriend parked the car in the P-5 (DeBartolo Hall) parking lot and returned to find that the following items had been stolen: black camera bag, $60; 12-15 rolls of color film, $42 and a camera battery, $14.

The Wick Avenue pedestrian bridge had one of its windows shattered Friday, April 28. Joseph Angelino, junior, engineering, was walking on the deck's control room when an unidentified female student told him about the window.

Officers were notified and maintained traffic while maintenance removed the glass from the bridge, the report said.

In another incident on Friday, Hugh Sorey, junior, CAST, reported his astronomy book, valued at $27, was stolen from the vending machine area in Kilcawley Center.

He told police he was using the phone at 3 p.m. and set his book atop a pile of Jambars. When he hung up the phone, he left the area, leaving his book. When he returned at 4 p.m., the book was gone.

Stephanie Keffer, freshman, CAST, told police on Friday at 10:20 a.m. she placed her purse on a chair and covered it with her jacket. She pushed it under her receptionist's desk and left the office for 30 minutes. When she returned her purse was gone.

An unknown male found the purse on the stairwell floor and returned it to her. Missing were her wallet, $25, and $30 cash.

YSU — In cooperation with the area's public libraries, the Office of Continuing Education and Education Outreach of YSU is offering free information and counseling sessions through May 18.

Anyone seeking assistance in exploring educational options and careers can meet with YSU representatives at their local library by calling the YSU Office of Continuing Education.

The program is aimed at adults who are considering starting or returning to college.

Continuing Education/Education Outreach also offers off-campus classes for busy adults.

The dates and times YSU representatives will be at the various libraries are:

- May 1, New Castle Library, 2-7 p.m.
- May 2, Boardman Library, 2-7 p.m.
- May 3, Poland Library, 2-7 p.m.
- May 6, Boardman Library, 2-7 p.m.
- May 8, Boardman Library, 2-7 p.m.
- May 10, Hubbard Library, 2-7 p.m.
- May 13, Sharon-Buhl Library, 2-7 p.m.
- May 16, Hubbard Library, 2-7 p.m.
- May 18, Canfield Library, 2-7 p.m.

The closing date for new and transfer students for Summer Session I and II is May 15, but former students may be readmitted up to June 2.

Efforts of two student groups will beat apathy

Politics and apathy seem to go hand-in-hand in American circles, especially when those circles involve college campuses. After all, now is the time that apathy shows. Primary elections are being held today, yet a 50 percent turnout at the polls won't be surprising to anyone. Student Government elections will be held next week here, and voter turnout here will be much lighter. But apathy problems with our Student Government rate much deeper. The co-chairs of Student Government's election committee recently told a Jambar reporter that apathy is the number one image problem and that YSU students are hesitant to vote because "I don't have time to vote." There's validity to both statements, consider the following:

—More students voted last year than in the previous four years, yet voter turnout was a mere 10 percent of the student body.

—Empty spots will be found on next week's poll, since student turnout in the primary elections will be held today.

There's validity to both statements, considering:

—Students need to see the connection between apathy and Student Government. We have all the people we need to run the body's image problem.

—They need to appear around campus more. If part of the apathy problem stems from the fact that names and faces aren't being promoted, then they need to appear around campus more. If Student Government is going to help conquer apathy on campus, its energy and strength must be evident outside its offices as well.

Physical education is forced, not chosen

I still have not fulfilled the physical part of my H&PE requirement.

I hate sweat. No, I hate exercise. I looked for a walking class — there is not one available. I don't mind walking to class; in fact, I often run to class. It would be great to earn credits for one class while jogging to another. Why is H&PE a requirement? I consider myself an adult. It is my responsibility to take care of my own body. The health education classes should be kept as a requirement, so education about issues like AIDS is very important. I had no problem with that class.

However — Why are we all required to jump around for three quarter hours as a part of our continuing education?

It seems to me physical education classes will be an opportunity for an ascent to produce deja-vu — the resurrection of the hellish nightmare: the high school gym class. I would rather spend those three quarter hours, safe, in another class.

Test monsters invade during midterms

It was getting more difficult to see the words on the pages of the astronomy book. They were getting fuzzier and fuzzier and I realized my thought processes had ceased functioning a short time earlier. Two quizzes and a test in the span of two days convinced me it was a conspiracy among the professors to see if my brain was functioning.

I closed the book, sat back in the recliner, and closed my eyes. If I could only get a few hours sleep... And then it all began. Someone was standing in front of me with a mostינה כְּהַלָּוָה, and closed the book, sat back in the recliner, and closed my eyes. If I could only get a few hours sleep... And then it all began. Someone was standing in front of me with a flashlight, scuba diving, or listening to music? I have been putting it off. I go over the list every quarter and I think, "Okay, maybe next quarter." Will it be bowling? scarf doing or lift and square dance? Why is H&PE a requirement? I consider myself an adult. It is my responsibility to take care of my own body. The health education classes should be kept as a requirement, so education about issues like AIDS is very important. I had no problem with that class.

GREEKS PREPARE TO SING IN ANNUAL VOCAL CONTEST

By RICHARD M. JENKINS

On Friday, May 5 at 7 p.m. the Greek Activities Council will sponsor the 57th Annual Greek Sing. This year’s event will be held at Stambaugh Auditorium and will be dedicated to the memory of Todd James Wargo a recently deceased Sigma Chi brother.

This event will be hosted by Russell Wilkow (Theta Chi) and Gretchen Bruce (Delta Zeta), co-chairs of the Greek Activities Council.

The entire event will feature the musical talents of three sororities (Delta Zeta, Phi Mu and Zeta Tau Alpha) and four fraternities (Phi Kappa Tau, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Sigma Chi and Sigma Phi Epsilon). These seven organizations will compete in the formal class. Individuals from these seven organizations will also be voting for honors in the open class.

In addition to awards for musical performances, awards will be given to the sorority woman and fraternity man of the year. Continuing membership, Fraternity of the Year and All Sports. There will also be a presentation of service awards to members who serve on Panhellenic, Interfraternity and Greek Activities Councils.

The committee that planned Greek Sing began its preparations in January. The members of the planning committee include Wilkow, Bruce, Phil Bova (Sigma Alpha Epsilon), Carol Green (Delta Zeta), Rocky Soloman (Sigma Epsilon) and the two Greek advisors, Kim One and Rick Delores.

Through this committee the Greek System was able to raise the $2,200 needed to sponsor Greek Sing. This money was raised by the members of the various organizations selling business and personal advertisements to be published in this program for the running event.

"Greek Sing has a rich tradition on this campus," said Wilkow.

"It was founded in 1935 when the Phi Mu sorority brought it to the then Youngstown College campus. "If you now become the grand culmination of the Greek System's year of events," said Wilkow.

"Greek Sing is a time when many alumni return and remember their own years as members of the Greek system," said Wilkow. "The most important part is that through all the hours of practicing for Greek Sing the bands of brotherhood and sisterhood are strengthened and that is what it is all about," said Wilkow.

Fraternity lends hand to scraping, painting chores

A smile would have come to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev’s face if he saw what was happening on the north-side of Youngstown on Saturday.

The Cheloff family, who left the Soviet Union in March to escape Jewish oppression, had a helping hand from YSU’s Sigma Chi.

For five hours, the Sigma Chi helped the Cheloffs repaint their two-story house on 55 W. Drunkirk Avenue. “We really enjoyed doing it,” said Mick Janovick, social chairman of Sigma Chi.

Samuel A. Cheloff, 84-year-old, brought his family back to the Youngstown area. For ten years, 1923 to 1933, Cheloff lived in Youngstown with his parents before going back to the Soviet Union after earning his American citizenship and a degree in accounting.

Cheloff was stripped of his United States citizenship upon his return, but it was restored recently by Gorbachev.

Besides Cheloff, his wife Gina, son Michael, daughter-in-law Natalia and grandson Gregory came to start a new life in Youngstown.

Cheloff’s son Michael is anesthesiologist and hopes he can find an opportunity to practice in the United States. The family hopes to move to another house after getting settled in their new land.

Janovick also said it was great hearing stories about life in the Soviet Union and communicating with different people.

“Before we helped them on Saturday, we went and visited them when they first came,” said Janovick.

Homeless may not be as noticeable as Youngstowners might think. There are families living in automobiles, the box cars of freight trains, and more and more in garages and alleys. "It is a serious problem," said Maraune Kubik, Jambar Assistant News Editor. "I will tell you what I think we're going to call the clearing house. It is a clearing house of services. In other words, it brings all the services together so that people will know where to go and can get the help that they need." "That means the organization is not going to do anything for them, but it does the best we can to make sure that the people will have the best possible setting for what they need," she continued.

Transitional shelter differs from emergency shelter in that people are able to stay for up to 90 days whereas transitional shelters allow people to remain for up to 180 days. "There needs to be a monitored situation where, when someone can have housing for 90 days, 180 days, however long it takes for that person to the get the help that they need," she explained. "Although we admitted about 1,000 transitional shelter to our shelter room, we only paid people $3.50 per hour. Adding to this, people get all the help they need and what they need so they can get back on their feet."

The study arrived at two main conclusions. First, emergency assistance is needed for people who need help on a short-term basis. Second, rent subsidies must be combined with more affordable housing and made available to those who need the housing the most.

The Women's Council and Salvation Army -- both on a national scale and locally. They stated that neither the New Life Maternity Home is a sufficient emergency short-term housing, since most of the questioned individuals had been homeless for less than three month time spans.

The creation of the survey also decided that there was a definite stage of affordability, both on a national scale and locally. The research revealed that, nationally, only 5% of those eligible for a federally subsidized lease actually have that lease. A percent who would qualify for the federal rent subsidy can't get it.

Anyone who shops buys books at the bookstore has found one or two or at the bottom of their bag, everything attached to the receipt. You see them on every bulletin board around campus and in every classroom. They are in every department store and bank, attractive to the eye, yet deadly to the pocket book, they are easily obtained and a catch to use.

More and more credit card applications and brochures are being at America college campuses as credit card companies invade campuses in an effort to woo college undergrads to carry major credit cards.

The student market, "the right place to be now," to sell credit, said Colleen Galls of American Express (AMEX). Students, advertisers probably will prove a good resource of business for the company in the future. "The credit card companies are already making their money by extending these seven percent of problems made with their cards, and by changing customers interest on the unpaid balances on their bills.

Until a few years ago, students were considered to be risky and incapable of repaying loans regularly. Major credit card companies such as VISA and AMEX began aggressively marketing students in 1989 when, "students became more responsible," said Frank of America (VISA) spokesman, Susan Cleaver. Not that anything magical happened in 1986, credit card companies' abrupt decision to start signing up more students had more to do with demographics, said finance professor, Arnold Heggstad.

To be honest, "70 years from now the paper society of checks will be gone. The company that can put that plastic into people's pockets will be the big winners. The college market is the future," said Heggestad. "There is a large pool of students who may be the best group to go into," added Heggestad.

Credit card companies try to lure students to apply for the credit card with bait like deductions and of course, "MMY. "It was right after Lent, and I was dying for some chocolate," said Lisa Constantelo, senior, CAST. "I think it was a good idea to get the card. I've used it [VISA] to buy books and to fix my car." Lisa was among many students to obtain her credit card through a promotional booth set up in Kilcawiey Center last year. Constantelo, who has a part time job, said she was able to make her payments because she used the card with extreme caution. "Some students have had trouble getting cards," said Lisa, "I have a major credit card."

Richard M. Jenkins, junior, English, explained that the card has been helpful in emergencies, "I used it to get hold when I got arrested in Dayton Beach, during the week. He currently owns AMEX. Rental car advocates claim that the reason the bill is so big due to the fact that he also needed to rent a "SRW Loaded Pontiac 4000... for the drive down." Credit card abuse by students has become so popular that many universities have taken measures to warn students of the dangers of the use and abuse of credit cards. Credit card abuses have become such common that the University of Southern Maine has decided to drop credit cards at its sporting orientation. Indiana University hosts budget planning workshops for its dorms. University of Texas students get a written warning about limiting credit card use dates when they pick up their financial aid applications. Thirty-five percent of the students who asked University of California at Los Angeles (UCLA) for extra financial aid see credit.

YSU - Approximately 250 high schools in the tri-county area, as well as Western Pennsylvania and Cleveland, participated Friday in YSU's first model United Nations competition, which was co-sponsored by the political science department and the International Affairs Club. During the day long event, United Nations Security Council meetings were held and students, acting as delegates from various countries, represented these countries on four different topics. The Council meeting focused on the effects of the arms race, chemical weapons, Central America and the future status of Namibia. Awards were presented for outstanding delegations in each council.

According to Jonathan Brog, secretary general of the club, the purpose of the event is to increase student awareness in international issues. Plans are to be made for next year's event, he added.

President of the International Affairs Club is Kathy Thompson. The club is assisted by Dr. William Bom-<ref>ing and David Parker, both of the political science department</ref>
YSU — WorldFEST '89, which is intended to highlight the global scope of the University, the community and the international activities of the University's various departments, will get under way Monday, May 8 and conclude Friday, May 12.

The event is comprised of films, guest speakers, workshops, discussions and displays. It is sponsored and arranged by a campus-community steering committee, coordinated by YSU's Office of International Student Services under Susan Emery, vice president of International Student Services.

Represented at YSU are all the world's major language groups, races, creeds, all continents, over 50 countries and perhaps 100 varying ethnicities and cultural baggage in our intercultural lives.

The public is invited to two free presentations by Singer to be held in the Kilcawley Center Art Gallery. "Perception and Culture" is scheduled for 9 a.m., Tuesday, May 9 and "International Communication" is scheduled for 9 a.m., Wednesday, May 10.

In addition to these workshops, a keynote luncheon meeting will be held at LUR, Tuesday, May 9. The cost is $12 and reservations may be made at YSU's Office of International Student Services for Intercultural Interactivities.

The main presenter, Dr. Marshall R. Singer, is a founder of this discipline and a veteran of the United Nations Human Rights Commission. Singer is chair of the University of Pittsburgh's Graduate School of Public and International Affairs.

Cortez to read at Butler

YOUNGSTOWN — Chicago poet and artist Carlos Cortez will give a reading of his poetry in the Ash Can Gallery at the Butler Institute of American Art this Friday, May 6th at 7:30 p.m.

Cortez was born in Milwaukee in 1953, of Indian and Mexican ancestry. He writes poetry and fiction, and is a member of the editorial staff of the Industrial Worker magazine. His poetry has been published most recently in an anthology of Chicago poets, Emergency Traces. His work has also appeared in Rebel Voice, originally published by the University of Michigan, and in Scott Foresman and Company's American Literature Series, tests for high school literature courses.

Also an artist, Cortez works in linocut and woodcuts. His art appeared in the show "Conceptual Print" at the New York Museum of Modern Art in 1989, and in "Arte anos la Frontera," a recent exhibit in Mexico City. Since 1983, his art has been touring the capitals of Europe with the show, "Other Americas."

The reading is sponsored by Pig Iron Press, the Tri-Centennial Art Gallery and the Butler Institute of American Art. The reading is free and open to the public.

Movie depicts real life problems; divorce, death

By ERIC RAHNEY

JOURNAL-NEWS REPORTER

See You is the Monday's beginning with a scene from a marriage, namely, that of psychiatrist Larry (Al Pacino) and fashion model Jo (Farrah Fawcett) Livingstone. It's a happy moment, but we soon discover that the marriage has been troubled. The following are several scenes that are recounted by Larry's mother at times spent with and her two children at Jo's mother's home in Maine.

Beth Goodwin (Alice Krige) is introduced. She is a professional photographer and mother of two mar­ried to concert pianist Peter (David Duke). Their marriage is also unhappy. Several scenes follow in which we learn through flashback that Peter committed suicide, Beth is grieved, her life emotionally unbalanced.

They fall in love and marry. From this point on, we witness many trials and tribulations of the new Living­stone family, who reside in Beth's townhouse. Larry finds himself at ease with Beth's children Cathy (Drew Barrymore) and Petey (Lukas Haas), and is relieved that they don't resent him for taking the place of their dead father.

Larry's warmth is realistic and engaging and Bridges as an actor is certainly one of the most underrated performers in film today. He gives his usual amount of charm and humor to his character, just as he did with last season's Tender. The Man and His Dream.

However, as the movie progresses, Larry finds himself devolving between himself and children. He takes the time of the film for him to iron these differences out, but this is a difficult process, for Beth is overbearing, cli­nic, or overbearing, but this doesn't matter. It is a drama about everyday, real extraordinary, people. The theme of divorce is a backdrop — it's what brings Beth and Larry together. The audience sees Larry bring happiness to Beth again and ease for his children and stepchildren.

As Beth, Alice Krige gives an excellent portrayal of a strong, yet vulnerable woman who needs stability in her life again. Krige has a fine singing voice, a young woman who needs stability in her life again. Krige has a fine singing voice, a young woman who needs stability in her life again. Krige has a fine singing voice, a young woman who needs stability in her life again.

Farrah Fawcett's portrayal of Jo is good, but not as full-bodied as Krige's. Her character is a little too conventional, as Jo is a point for Larry to act around. She has a good voice, but she is not the type of woman that Larry would have in his life.

Drew Barrymore and Lukas Haas give fine performances as Beth's children, and Linda Lavin, as Sydney, is excellent. Alan J. Pakula, who wrote and directed the film, is as good as the actors. The Man and His Dream.

SYMPHONY ON AMERICAN ART is a lecture series made possible through the Interface Program of the YSU Art Department, College of Fine and Performing Arts and the Butler Institute of American Art, with the generous support of the Youngstown State University Foundation.

Lecture is free and open to the public.

Concert

Especially arranged for this concert by Dana faculty member Edward Largent of Boardman is the "Timeless movement of Charles Widor's Organ Symphony No. 5."

The members of the Wexner Reserve Brass Quintet are: Robert Schoder, baritone; Benjamin Matthews, baritone;

Symphonic Overture in F by Charles Gounod as well as the overture to Girl Crazy and RhAPSody in Blue will both be performed on this program as well as excerpts from Porgy and Bess.

Baritone Benjamin Matthews has performed with the New York City Opera, the Philadelphia Grand Opera and as a soloist with many of the world's leading orchestras. He has received critical acclaim for his performances of the works of George Gershwin. Mr. Bates began his formal music training at the age of six on both the piano and violin, and he has studied at the Settlement Music School and Temple University. In addition, he has been active in chamber music, playing many master classes annually as well as his current status as artist-in-reference at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point.

The "Gershwin By Request" program is the result of the Youngstown Symphony Orchestra's dedication to the music of George Gershwin throughout the world and has recently released a recording of Porgy and Bess.

The YSU baseball team put their brooms to good use this weekend as the Penguins swept a doubleheader from visiting Slippery Rock, 3-2 and 8-6. The sweep improved the Penguins' mark to 12-19 this spring.

The opener saw a fine pitching duel that was decided during the bottom of the seventh through the final inning. It was then that a two-out single by the Penguins' Bob Janeda scored pinch-runner Dean Ciccoretti with the deciding tally in the 3-2 YSU victory.

Junior starter Josh Baldwin, who continued his fine pitching the spring by giving up only two runs in his seven innings of work. Freshman Chris Durkin aided Baldwin's cause by cracking two hits.

The nightcap also proved to be a close encounter. The Penguins scored five times in the bottom of the sixth inning to erase a 4-3 deficit and then had to withstand a two-run rally by the Rock in the top of the seventh to gain an 8-6 win and a doubleheader sweep.

Offensively, the Penguins were paced by Janeda, who had two hits, and by Durkin and Jim Sotlar, who each had two RBIs. This was more than enough support for YSU starter Jim Timko. Timko went the distance, giving up eight hits while striking out 11 over his seven innings of work to seal the victory.

Next up for the Penguins is a home tilt today against Allegheny College. Game time at Pemberton Park is 3:00.

The Penguin softball team got rolling again as they took a doubleheader from Hiram College on Saturday.

In game one, the Penguins scored twice in the home half of the second inning which proved to be the margin of victory as they cruised to a 2-0 win.

Ruth Pleskovic notched her sixth win on the year against eight defeats while catcher Michelle McKee had two hits including a double.

Hiram could only muster two runs in the second game as YSU won again by the score of 12-2.

The bats were not needed as 11 runs came across the board in the fourth inning for the Penguins on account of six walks, one run and five wild pitches by Hiram pitching. Sherry Huff improved to 8-6 on the season with the win.

As a team, the Penguins have given up only 57 earned runs while having an era of 1.45. YSU has a week off after Wednesday's doubleheader at Indiana (PA).
