Cafaro challenges graduates

By RICK GEORGE
Jambar Editor

Graduation does not mean the end of competition.

On Saturday, John J. Cafaro, executive vice-president of The Cafaro Company, told the 924 graduates at spring commencement in Beeghly Center to thrive on competition when it arises.

"To be competitive, means you rise to the highest level possible," said Cafaro.

"The problems may be bigger in the future, but you can overcome it, as you all have made it this far," he said.

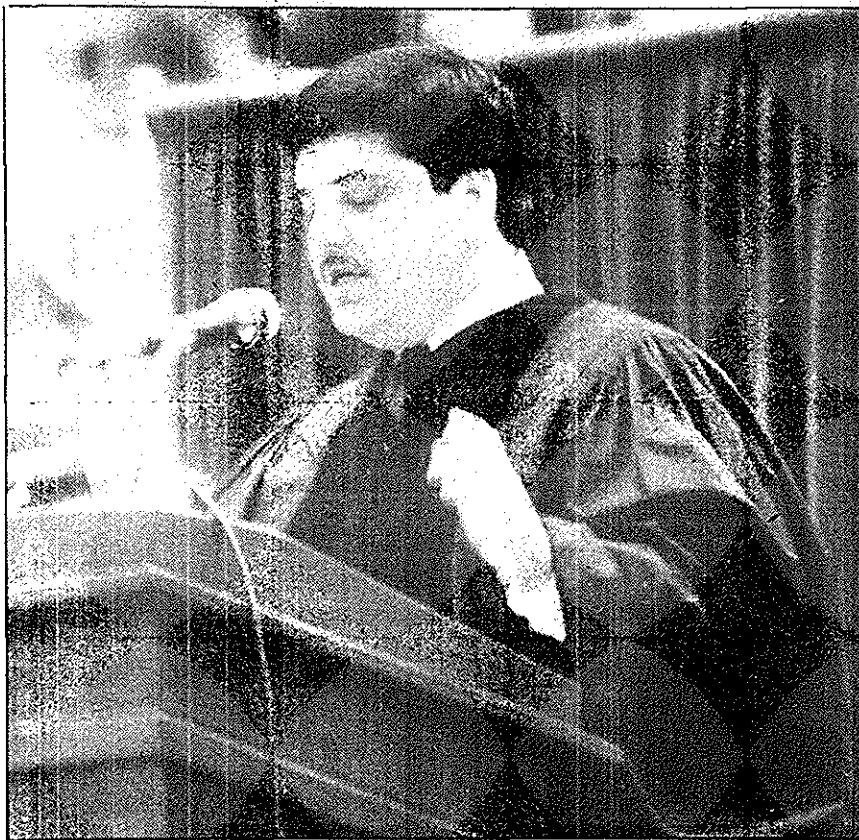

Besides urging the graduates about competition, he reminded them not to forget the Mahoning Valley no matter where they might be working in the nation or world.

In closing, Cafaro challenged not only the graduates, but also the Board of Trustees to make YSU a nationally-known campus.

"The time has come to look toward the nation and world," said Cafaro.

Besides giving the address, Cafaro was also received an honorary Law degree which was presented to him by

Faculty, trustees come to standstill

Fall quarter may be starting later than expected.

A state-appointed fact finder, James M. Mancini, has reviewed the issues of the current faculty contract negotiations and has made recommendations, which recently have been rejected by the Administration and endorsed by the faculty. Unless an agreement can be reached by Sept. 20, 1989 between the Administration and the YSU chapter of the Ohio Education Association, the faculty may strike.

The main issues of the discussion are salaries and retirement.

According to data provided by the fact finder, YSU ranks eighth out of the eleven Ohio public universities in faculty salaries.

The report stated, that for each year of the proposed three year term of agreement, "an eight percent increase is necessary so that the University's faculty can retain their relative ranking in comparison to other comparably situated faculty at other Ohio public universities."

The fact finder found that "the University can finance the recommended pay increases." The Administration proposed "a 1.94 percent [increase] for each of the three years of the proposed agreement term."

In a prepared statement given to the Vindicator, the Chair of the YSU Board of Trustees, Dr. Earnest Perry, said "The fact finder recommended salary increases of eight percent in

Deiderick gets award for YSU's SBI program

By RICHARD M. JENKINS
Jambar News Editor

The Small Business Institute (SBI) of YSU under Dr. E. Terry Deiderick, marketing, has recognized by the Youngstown Area Chamber of Commerce for its work with area small businesses.

SBI is a four credit class designed to help small businesses in the area solve their problems and complete tasks they cannot complete themselves. "The three main purposes of SBI is to give students some practical experience, to assist area small businesses and to build an interchange between the students and the area business world," said Deiderick.

SBI is crosslisted as 871 in Finance, Marketing and Management. It is designed for seniors and graduate business majors in Accounting, Finance, Business Education/Office Administration, Management, Marketing and Real Estate/Insurance.

"The class is a wonderful learning experience for the students involved," said Deiderick.

The program is offered to area small businesses that apply for and need the assistance. The most appealing things about SBI is that the coordinator is not and strictly confidential stated Deiderick.

SBI is operated under the direct supervision of a college and business professor and in direct contact with the small business in question.

According to Deiderick the students do all the work. The supervisor simply tells them where to find the information they need and how to apply if to the problem they encounter.

"The coordinator of the program acts more like an adviser rather than a teacher," said Deiderick.

Terrace Room reopens; D.Q. closes

By RICK GEORGE
Jambar Editor

As the summer quarter began this week, students found a change in food services in Kilcawley Center.

The Terrace Room opened for the summer while the Dairy Queen decided to go out of business.

For the first time ever, the Terrace Room is open during the summer to serve breakfast and lunch.

Phil Hirsch, director of student activities at Kilcawley Center said the opening is just a trial basis to see if it can make a profit.

"A lot of people on campus requested that it open this summer," said Hirsch. "In past years it was closed for economic reasons."

Mark Zetts, director of food services at Kilcawley Center, is happy with the progress so far.

"We are right on track of where we want to be," said Zetts. "I am real excited how everything is working out."

He (Zetts) expects more success throughout the summer because many people on campus are not aware of its opening.

Zetts also said that self-serving is in the possible near future. "We have been talking about self-service for some time," said Zetts.

The Terrace Room is still serving hot lunches and breakfasts along with sandwiches.

Despite the opening of one restaurant, the loss of another occurred when the Dairy Queen decided to leave.

"They just decided to move out a couple of weeks ago," said

Hirsch.

Hirsch mentioned that one of the reasons for the closing was that sales have been going down.

To make a profit, it needed to average between $120,000 and $125,000 a year. In the last year, it made less than $110,000.

The Dairy Queen had been part of Kilcawley Center for seven years before its closing.

Hirsch said that he and his staff will have to evaluate the space before deciding what other business can occupy the area.

"Hopefully, we will have a business in that space before the fall quarter begins," said Hirsch.

Some of the criteria that has to be considered is the current arrangement in the space and what type of restaurant that the students would enjoy.

Students lose out on honors

This past Saturday was spring commencement at YSU. It was a time of sadness and happiness as the graduates said good-bye to YSU and hello to the real world.

Despite all the festivities, a major error was committed. Some people were left out from graduating with honors.

Since 1982, it has been YSU policy that all grades be counted when figuring for honors. If a student receives a D in a course and then retakes that course and receives an A, both the A and D will be included when figuring for honors.

This means a student may have a grade point average of 3.4 on his or her report card, but when figuring the grade point average for honors, this person may have a 3.3.

Why should a student be penalized because he or she chose to retake a course?

It is true that the University has to uphold tough standards to graduate with honors, but the current standards need to be revised.

The rule should state that a student be permitted to retake one course and not have the original grade be counted when figuring the grade point average for honors.

If a student has a history of getting high grades and has problems with one class, then that should not be held against the student.

The University must re-evaluate the guidelines for graduating with honors.

Bush takes firm stand with China

President George Bush's new policy regarding the crisis in China is a bold move in the right direction.

The new policy blocks China's access to loans from international financial institutions and dissolves high level contacts between the two nations.

Bush initiated tougher policy to protest the death sentences handed down to 11 pro-democracy demonstrators and the executions that have been reported to have been already carried out against three of the demonstrators.

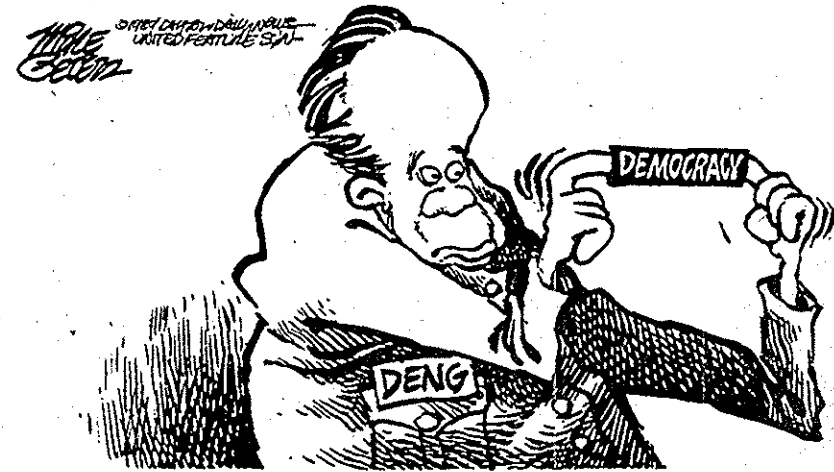

Despite installing these new sanctions, the United States still continues its diplomatic relationship with the Chinese government. These actions show that Bush and his administration are willing to install stricter sanctions if necessary.

By blocking loans, China may have problems when it applies for a loan from the World Bank. This was a strategic way for Bush to get his message across.

Since the Chinese government quelled the students with gunfire, Bush has been handling the situation with great success. The United States still has an open door policy while issuing sanctions.

COMMENTARY

Summer school is the answer

Summer school-what a thought! I can't believe that I will be spending most of my time this summer going to classes and working on The Jambar.

Richard M. Jenkins

It seems like only yesterday I vowed to never to attend summer school.

Well it wasn't yesterday. It was four years ago, and now I'm a senior. I have been able to put it off for four years, but I finally had to enroll in six hours of scholastic study over the summer.

I still cannot believe it has taken me this long to enroll in summer school. I probably could have graduated at the end of spring quarter if I would have attended summer school in years past.

Why did it take so long to wake up and smell the coffee?

It's my opinion the reason so many people need five years to graduate from YSU is students refuse to attend summer school. Six hours here, six hours there, add up.

I understand that college is intense and that everyone feels that they have earned those three months of relaxation in the summer. But just think for a minute how relaxing that fifth year would be if you graduate and find a job.

As I look back over those three summers when I avoided school, it hardly seems I did anything worth an extra year of school. There are those people who cannot go to summer school because they have to work to earn money for the fall, winter and spring quarters.

EXERCISING FOR THE HEALTH OF IT

Exercising helps conquer weight problems

By TIM LEONARD
Jambar Managing Editor

TIM LEONARD/THE JAMBAR

So you want to lose some weight so you will look good at the beach.

Well, losing weight this summer may just be a mathematical problem, according to Dr. Anthony Whitney, health and physical education.

Though, if you follow Whitney's advice you may not lose it all in one day like many of those diet books on the market promise, but you will lose it and you'll end up keeping that extra weight off if you heed Whitney's advice.

Whitney says that if your weight has been constant for a long period of time then you're half way toward losing that weight.

Whitney says the best way to lose weight is to lose one pound a week. He explained that all he or she has to do is get rid of 3,500 calories a week, which equals 500 calories a day. Whitney says that each day you should cut 250 calories from your regular diet. (Remember, this is if your weight has been constant for a long period time).

After cutting the 250 calories from your diet, the next step is to burn off 250 calories through exercise.

Why does Whitney feel a person should lose weight slowly?

"Because losing weight, in order to make it work, is a gradual process....If you lose a pound a day, that's 50 pounds a year," said Whitney. "You lose it slowly, so you developed good habits. Now that weights going to stay off."

Whitney said the best form of exercise to lose body fat is aerobic exercise, such as cross country skiing, jogging, cycling, swimming and walking.

Bicycling: Leo Hawkins gets his daily workout.

"If you're interested in losing body fat, then the more time you invest in exercising," said Dan Wathen, YSU athletic trainer, referring to aerobic exercise, "the more you are likely to lose that fat." He said that all this is assured if your heart rate is between 60-80 percent its maximum.

If these previously mention forms of exercise are done for more than 20 minutes, Whitney said weight loss will start to occur.

Wathen said walking is probably the best form of exercise for a person beginning to exercise while attempting to lose weight.

As for other sports and activities Wathen said, "Anything that involves power—football, basketball—[sports] that can only be done for a short period of time, that's going to used stored energy."

Wathen said that lifting weights, while good exercise, doesn't burn off body fat. "Because [lifting weights] itself doesn't require any fat as an energy source," said Wathen.

As for the person looking to lose weight just because he or she wants to look nice for the trip to the beach Wathen supplies some information.

"The problem with people who want to trim up for bathing suit time is that the only time you're going to [exercise] is once a year," said Wathen.

"People who lose weight, gain weight, lose weight, gain weight typically have more health problems than those who maintain an equal weight. It's really hard on your body to lose and gain weight," said Wathen.

Whitney said students interested inquire at the Health Fitness Center in Beeghly Center Room 212.

Whitney said that close to 50 percent of U.S. adults have a weight problem.

Fried foods cause extra pounds

By TIM LEONARD
Jambar Managing Editor

Want to lose. Stop eating fry foods, for starters. "You have to stay away from fry foods," said Dan Wathen, YSU athletic trainer. "That's the biggie—fry foods. Everything at [fast restaurants] are fried, except for salads, and when they figure out how to do that then they'll fry that, too. They'll sell more salads, but it won't be quite as good for you."

Wathen said that the average American's diet is made up of more than 50 percent fat, while the standard recommendation is 30 percent fat.

Wathen said people shouldn't include foods that contain what he calls "empty calories."

"You have to stay away from fried foods. That's the biggie—fry foods."

DAN WATHEN
YSU Athletic Trainer

"Pop is a good example. A sixteen ounce bottle of [pop] is about 220 calories and has no nutrients to speak of. Orange juice also has 220 calories, plus it has carbohydrates, vitamins and minerals. So choose something that has more than just calories," said Wathen.

Wathen also suggested that dieters should always eat serving from all the food groups every day.

Campus Police have no vacation

RICHARD M. JENKINS
Jambar News Editor

A stolen purse, a broken window, a theft in Stambaugh Stadium and an attempted breaking and entering into some storage cabinets are listed in the YSU Police files since June 15, 1989.

On Monday, June 19 at 3:50 p.m. Officer A. Lally was called to Arby's in Kilcawley Center to the scene of the theft of a tan and beige leather purse. The victim stated that the purse was on the table in the office of the restaurant and a few minutes later it was missing.

Lally reported that along with the stolen purse went a driver's license, a Visa Card and a checkbook. At this time the YSU Police department has no solid leads.

Also on Monday a window was broken in Room 410 of the Kilcawley Residence Hall. As reported by Officer Farmakis an unknown assailant apparently broke the window by throwing a spoon through it.

The dorms are currently occupied by members of Coach Tressel's basketball camp which runs till the end of the week.

At 5:00 a.m. on Friday, June 16 Sargent G. L. Clementi was called to the pedestrian bridge located between Cushwa Hall and the Engineering Science Building. The call was to investigate the attempted break-in by an unknown person into the storage cabinets by the vending machines. Clementi reported that nothing was stolen but that the locks on the cabinets were damaged.

On Thursday, June 15 at 5:30 p.m. in the second floor hallway of Stambaugh Stadium two gentlemen reported a theft. Listed as missing by the two men were a pair of gray sweat pants, four sets of keys, a blue jacket and a pair of prescription eyeglasses.

The reporting officer stated that apparently the two men left their things outside the racquetball courts and when they had finished playing their things were gone.

each of the three years of a proposed agreement. The University believes that no evidence was established to support salary increases of this magnitude, particularly in light of the cost to the University and the present levels of faculty compensation."

In regard to retirement, the fact-finder recommended that the University adopt an early retirement program similar to those at other universities. Perry in the same statement said the data for a twenty-year period that allow faculty to retire early, reveal that "the retirement buy-out appears to be a major expense."

After the YSU-OEA meeting in Kilcawley Center yesterday afternoon, Dr. Paul Dalbec, physics and astronomy, and president of the YSU-OEA said that the negotiating team had met with the administration last week and another meeting has been planned for next week. As far as reaching an agreement in the near future, Dalbec said, "I think there is still much work and more information needed. We have a lot of questions that need to be answered."

Amy McFarland, senior, engineering, and student member of the board, said she and other student Board member, Ralph Crum, junior, A&S, do not vote on or participate in the discussion of personnel matters. McFarland did comment that she hoped the summer would be enough time for the two sides to reach an agreement. "It's in everyone's best interest to make an agreement. No one wants a strike."

The Ghostbusters save the world this time

By RICHARD M. JENKINS
Jambar News Editor

The Ghostbusters are back! With the whole star-studded cast returning, "Ghostbusters II" is everything the moviegoer could want and then some.

Led by the psychotic exploits of Bill Murray's portrayal of Dr. Peter Venkman, this movie is by far the best all-round comedy I've seen in quite some time. Under the direction of Ivan Reitman, "Ghostbusters II" succeeds in taking hold of the audience and bringing true the adage that "Good always conquers evil."

In the opening frame, the audience is told that five years have past since the Ghostbusters first saved New York City.

The screen then fades to a serene Dana Barrett (played by Sigourney Weaver) pushing her eight-month-old boy, Oscar, down a New York City sidewalk. Everything appears to be normal until Oscar's baby carriage rolls off on its own into oncoming traffic. After Barrett rescues the child, she suspects supernatural interference and calls the Ghostbusters.

The Ghostbusters (played by Murray, Dan Aykroyd, Harold Ramis, and Ernie Hudson) are all doing their own thing when Barrett calls for help.

Venkman is hosting a cult cable TV talk show dealing with psychic phenomena. Ray Stantz (Aykroyd) and Winston Zeddemore (Hudson) are traveling around town as a couple of clown-like entertainers performing at children's parties. And Egan Spengler (Ramis) is still working on the effects of human emotional states on the psychomagnetic energy field.

The movie, written by Aykroyd and Ramis, is centered around approximately 100,000 gallons of slime that is brewing under the city. This slime is growing because of the immense amount of hate that exists in the world today.

The series of events the slime creates is the fuel that pumps life into this high energy comedy. The storyline comes to a climax shortly after the Ghostbusters bring the Statue Of Liberty to life. This is done in an effort to unite the people of New York as well as to combat the ensuing evil that comes from beneath the city.

The serge of this slime also brings a warrior, Vigo (played by Wilhem Von Homburg), to life from a picture. This warrior is out to take over the body of little Oscar and eventually the world.

Although the plot may seem a bit serious, the comic ability of the cast creates a very enjoyable experience for viewers. From Murray's high level of nonstop chattering to the antics of Aykroyd and Ramis, "Ghostbusters II" definitely deserves a thumbs up.

The depth of this comedy is even more apparent in the performances of Rick Moranis and Annie Potts. The on-screen presence of these two supporting characters puts a dimension into this film that many movies lack.

As a whole, "Ghostbusters II" is thriving with excitement and many well-placed laughs. This fact alone is enough for me to recommend this flick to the public.

Close encounters: Rick Moranis and Annie Potts get familiar on screen when the rest of the "Ghostbusters II" cast wasn't looking.

But I didn't work (too lazy). I didn't travel (lack of money). I didn't get in shape (lack of motivation). I surely didn't brush up on my study skills (lack of initiative).

All I did was waste time watching television and drinking beer. I think summer school might have been a bit more beneficial to my growth as an individual.

Let us not forget that if I had gone to summer school my graduation date would have been June, 1989 instead of June, 1990.

I really have no answer to this question. All I can do is hope I made the right decision.

After all, it seems useless to complain about all the time I've spent in school when I've never done anything to keep my June, 1989 graduation date.

Ultimately, I'm left with the opinion that summer school could be the answer to the five-year plan here at YSU.

The presidence Deiderick has set with this class will be hard to surpass because it has become the model for all similar SBI programs.

"On May 11, 1984 the Small Business Administration out of Cleveland, Ohio gave an award to YSU and myself stating that all similar programs should be run in the image of our SBI," said Deiderick.

The impact of this program has created a lot of recognition. "Inveritably it has helped the small businesses in the area to grow and prosper," said Deiderick.

YSU rejected by AMCU, still eyes league bid

By TIM LEONARD
Jambar Managing Editor

Akron University has beaten YSU on the basketball court many of times, but now their making it a habit of beating YSU in the battle to enter a league. For the second time in less than four months, YSU was nosed out for a position in a league. First, it was the Northeast Conference in March, and just last week it was the Association of Mid-Continent Universities (AMCU).

YSU Athletic Director Joe Malmisur made a presentation to AMCU officials Tuesday, June 13. Along with YSU making a presentation to the league Akron, Northern Iowa and Wright State did as well. It was Akron and Northern Iowa which the AMCU decided to invite into the league.

In March, Akron verbally committed itself to the NEC.

"We didn't expect them [Akron] to do it," said Ray Cella, NEC assistance commissioner. "They did what they felt was best for them."

Cella went on to say that, "Geographically, it was a great move for Akron, but from an ethical point of view, we won't discuss it," referring to the fact that Akron backed out of its oral commitment to the NEC.

Malmisur said he was shocked when he heard Akron was attempting to apply for the AMCU after already being accepted to the NEC.

"Obviously, I was surprised when I first heard it, but that was just a rumor," said Malmisur. "We couldn't corroborate it, though."

Malmisur said that what the AMCU was looking for from potential members was what Akron had to offer. He also said he felt Cleveland State, an AMCU member, played an important role in getting Akron into the conference.

"I think Cleveland State had a lot to do with Akron getting in. One important thing is that they are both in the same television market," said Malmisur.

In regards to YSU joining a league for basketball, Malmisur said he thinks YSU will be in a league within two years, though he couldn't guarantee anything sooner.

"I think Cleveland State had a lot to do with Akron getting in [the AMCU]."

Cella said the athletic directors of the NEC schools met Tuesday to discuss the Akron situation. He also said that expansion was discussed, but no decision was made on what the NEC's future plans were. He did say the league members will probably meet again in July to discuss expansion.

Akron was scheduled to start competing in the NEC in 1990-91. As of now, the NEC will have eight members for the '90-91 season.

Kosar, Newsome attend camps

By TIM LEONARD
Jambar Managing Editor

Remember the old days, when kids went to camp it meant they would swim and sit around the camp fire?

Not any more though. Today, they camping at Jim Tressel's football camp and Jim Cleamons' basketball camp.

And to top it off, they're camping with the stars.

Among the football stars were the Cleveland Browns quarterback Bernie Kosar. Kosar visited the camp Sunday and Wednesday and made an unexpected visit on Monday morning.

"We came into camp stressing the importance of academics," said Kosar. "We wanted the kids to understand how important it is to study."

Some of the football players visiting the football camp, besides Kosar, were his teammate Ozzie Newsome, Denver kicker Rich Karlis and Pitt's Jerry Olsevsky.

"When the kids heard comments from them, they listened to them," said Tressel.

Cleamons' basketball camp was running during the same period as Tressel's camp, but in Beeghly Center.

The star of Cleamons' camp this week is Brad Sellers, former Ohio State stand-out and now a forward for the Chicago Bulls. Sellers will return for next week's basketball camp along with Dennis Hopson, currently with the New Jersey Nets. Cleamons said his goal for the campers was to have them leave camp a better basketball player.

"If one of these kids came in here on Monday not able to catch a basketball, then on Friday I want them to leave being able to catch. If they couldn't make a lay-up on Monday, then on Friday I want to leave being able to make a lay-up."
