Kessler murder still baffles; Hopkins suspects go to county

By M. Ferguson Tinsley
NEWS EDITOR

Mill Creek Park police Captain John Lynch said he has hit a brick wall in the investigation surrounding the shooting death of Sean Kessler, 22.

Kessler, an education major at YSU, was found dead Jan. 19 in the park. He had been shot four times.

Lynch said he has interviewed more than 30 people, but has yet to turn up one clue.

"We believe it was somebody who knew him and knew him well," Lynch said Thursday. "Nobody who was as popular as he was would be shot that many times without it being somebody he knew."

He said because there were no signs of struggle or robbery, he believes whoever may have driven Kessler to the park was a close acquaintance of the student.

A 30-year veteran in police work, Lynch said he needs help from the public to solve the crime.

"He had to confide in somebody," he said. "And I believe that somebody would've been one of his frat brothers."

Lynch said he believes Kessler could have been in trouble with someone but may not have felt he could talk with anyone other than the friend about it. He added he is desperate to find answers.

"Appeal to them. To anybody, anybody who has any sympathy. Tell 'em to call Crimestoppers. It'll be kept anonymous. We'll keep it that way. Just tell 'em to call," he said.

Meanwhile, the two men charged in the Jan. 23 murder of YSU linebacker Jermaine Hopkins will be arraigned in Mahoning County Common Pleas Court Feb. 27.

Eric Moore, 22, and Timothy Slocum, 22, were arrested in January after the 21-year-old hospitality management student was gunned down in front of his own home.

On Thursday, Municipal Judge Andrew Polovischak ordered that Moore and Slocum be turned over the county on a direct indictment. Because murder and attempted murder are first-degree felonies, the defendants must be tried in a higher court. A direct indictment allows the county to take jurisdiction of Moore and Slocum's cases.

Both remain in the Mahoning County Jail.

Moore is charged with aggravated murder and attempted aggravated murder with gun specifications. His bond is set at $100,000 and $50,000.

Slocum is held on complicity to aggravated murder and complicity to attempted aggravated murder with gun specifications. Slocum's bond is $75,000 and $35,000.

A court spokeswoman said the gun specifications on the charges will buy each man an extra six years in prison if they are convicted.

Lighting problem leaves students in dark

Female students reported that they felt unsafe on campus because of light deprivation.

By Kim Mitchell
ASSISTANT NEWS EDITOR

YSU students were recently in the dark as some of the University's outdoor lights malfunctioned. Whole strings of lights were out, but most are repaired. Will they all go out again?

"It is not likely, but there is no guarantee. Anything is possible," said John Hyden, associate director, Maintenance and Repairs of Buildings.

Hyden said that the horrendous winter weather was the cause of the lighting problem.

When all of the snow from the two major storms melted into the ground, the sub-zero temperatures froze the water causing problems.

Because of old age and construction, Hyden said, the underground conduits, which are pipe-like structures that connect and carry the lighting wires, sometimes break. When the snow melted, the conduits filled with water and froze, causing the lighting wires to break.

Repairing the wires was not, Hyden said, as easy as changing a lightbulb. Repairmen had to find out exactly which wires needed to be repaired. He said that was difficult because the conduits were iced. In addition, the frozen grounds had to be dug up to get to the conduits.

He said that the lack of outdoor lights was a big concern. Other projects were abandoned so that repairmen could make the malfunctioning lights a high priority.

The lights also were a big concern for students. On Jan. 18, four female students reported to the YSU police that many lights were out between Cushwa and Kilcawley. The females told police they felt unsafe on the campus. They also reported that the lights had been out at least a week before they reported it.

Police said that at least 18 lights were out or blinking just in the inner core and fountain area of the campus. They said it was probable that many more were out on the rest of the campus.

Hyden said repairmen worked very diligently to keep the lights on, but the weather just worked against them. He went on to say that most lights are now repaired. Many wires have been completely repaired or replaced entirely.

However, a string of lights between Kilcawley and Cushwa remains dark. They are unable to be repaired at this time because the ground is still frozen. However, according to Hyden, the area is not completely blacked out because other lights have been repaired, providing an ample amount of light for the time being.

Hyden said it is impossible to know what will happen. He said he can only react to what happens when it happens.

Departments team up for friendly 'fun' raising

ASSISTANT COPY EDITOR

Two YSU departments, the Alumni Association and the Office of University Development, have "teamed up" the past three years to develop an alumni-outreach program. Lori A. Factor and Cheryl M. Staib say that the alumni-outreach program is "fun" raising and "friend" raising, rather than fund-raising.

Through the alumni-outreach program, the Alumni Association and the Office of University Development sponsor receptions for alumni not only to meet one another, but also to meet University administration, deans, faculty and staff and current students. The events feature a social hour, student and staff speakers, and a video presentation.

Factor, executive director, Alumni Association said, "This [alumni outreach] program is intended for fellowship, networking and information. We want our [YSU] alumni to get to know each other and the changes being made at the University."

According to Factor, about 70 percent of the more than 70,000 YSU alumni live in the five-county area surrounding Youngstown.

"We want to 'take the show to them' [the YSU alumni] through receptions so they can see just how many people in the community attended YSU, and they can network with their fellow alumni," she added.

Each year the themes for the receptions change. According to Staib, director, Annual Fund (Office of University Development), the 1994 receptions focused on Campus 2000, and the 1995 receptions focused on the history of YSU and its transformation from a college to a state university.

For 1996, the YSU capital campaign is the focus. The campaign is geared around working toward goals and raising money for YSU and for the program and innovations it offers to the community, such as Campus 2000 and the Electronic Campus.

Staib commented, "Through the [1996] receptions, the YSU alumni and friends are discovering where the money goes to make YSU a better institution."

Factor said the 1996 receptions also are focused around YSU students since Student Affairs will be a large part of the outreach effort. "Student representatives from athletics, Greek and student organizations and University Scholars also will speak at the alumni receptions to give the alumni a better perspective of student life at YSU," she commented.

From 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. on Tuesday, Feb. 6, the first reception of 1996 was held at Mr. Anthony's for alumni in the Boardman/Poland/Canfield area. Approximately 150 people attended the event, but Factor said the average is about 70 to 125 people for most of the receptions. Dr. Leslie H. Cochran, YSU President, spoke at the reception and the attending deans were: Dr. John Yemma, H&HS; Dr. Peter Kasvinsky, Graduate; and Dr. Clara Jennings, Education.

The following is a schedule of alumni outreach receptions for 1996 (all the receptions are held on Tuesday evenings):

Feb. 20 (5-6:30 p.m., Bliss Hall Lobby and Recital Hall): The speaker will be Bassam Deeb, executive director, Student Life, and the attending deans will be Dr. John Yemma, H&HS, and Dr. David Sweetkind, F&PA. This reception is for Youngstown and faculty/staff alumni.

March 5 (6-8 p.m., Avalon Inn): The speaker will be Dr. Cynthia Anderson, vice president.

"We want our (YSU) alumni to get to know each other and the changes being made at the University."

Lori Factor, executive director, Alumni Association

Student Affairs; attending deans will be Dr. Barbara Brothers, A&S, and Dr. Betty Jo Licata, Business. This reception is for Warren alumni.

March 19 (6:30-8 p.m., West Middlesex Raddison): Jim Tressel, executive director, Intercollegiate/Athletics, and head football coach will be the speaker, and the attending dean will be Dr. Charles Stevens, Engineering. This reception is for Western-Pennsylvania alumni.

April 16 (6-8 p.m., The Timberlans): The speaker will be Dr. Nathan P. Ritchey, mathematics, and the director of University Scholars Dr. James Scanlon, Provost, will be in attendance. This reception is for Salem/Alliance/Columbiana alumni.

April 30 (6-7:30 p.m., Holiday Inn Greentree): The speaker will be Dr. Cynthia Anderson, vice president, Student Affairs, and the attending dean will be Dr. Betty Jo Licata, business. This reception is for Pittsburgh alumni.

Jambar finally makes its way on to Web e Well, it's 1996, and The Jambar is finally becoming a modern collegiate publication. After years of poking and prodding, YSU's campus newspaper will make its way on-line Monday — much to the satisfaction of many in the University community.

This will be The Jambar's first stint on-line, and we encourage readers (and viewers) to let us know what they think of the project. Thanks to Bob Hogue, computer information systems, and our on-line editorial staff, Joe Simons and Rick Blanch, for their outstanding and unpaid efforts in making this vision a reality.

With the Electronic Campus and Campus 2000 sneaking up on us, The Jambar's trek on line was a long and time consuming course. If students choose to utilize the service, they need to let us, administrators and Student Government officials know what they think about it. We, just as much as administrators, seek input from students — especially when we venture into unfamiliar territory, such as the Web. Please note that while The Jambar Online, as it is called, will continue to be updated weekly and innovated as the staff gains experience and input, the original home page may begin a little primitive. Hopefully, though, with the constructive input from campus community, our staff will quickly discover what the campus community wants to see on our home page. Remember, though, we will never know unless you tell us because we are not psychics.

So, take a look at The Jambar's new web page, and let us know what you think. Because Simons and Blanch are not paid for their service at this time, if the craving for this type of "Campus Coverage" is noted, then The Jambar can petition that positions be added to the staff. But we need to know whether on-line access to your campus newspaper is something you value or not.

Non-trad confused over differing priorities of traditional students

By Judi Schepka
 CONTRIBUTING WRITER

As a non-traditional student at YSU, I have noticed some minor differences between the older students that I have come to know, and the much younger (19-25) students on campus.

I'm not talking about clothing, hairstyles or even music; I'm referring to "attitude" — attitude towards the professors, school work, studying and of course, priorities.

In my experience at YSU, (I'll be a junior after winter quarter), I have found that the majority of the non-traditional students that I have talked to strive for A's. They worry about getting to classes on time, getting their papers written, studying for tests, midterms and finals and anything else that pertains to school.

That is not to say that the 19-25 age group doesn't worry about the same issues, because I know many who do; but when I sit in Burger King or Arby's, the majority of the conversations I hear center around who's having a party, how so-and-so got "totally wasted" the night before or how someone failed a psychology test because he/she forgot to study.

These sorts of conversations simply amaze me. How does one forget to study for a test? And why would anyone get "totally wasted" during the week when there are classes to attend the next day? Don't these students save anything for the weekend? I don't know, call me stupid or naive, but isn't that what the weekends are all about?

This is where priorities with a capital "P" come into focus. Maybe it's my age (43) that makes me so obsessed with getting A's and making the dean's list every quarter, I really don't know. But my 19-year-old nephew, who lives with me, is in his second quarter at YSU, and his study habits really irk the hell out of me!

I'll ask him about his homework, and his answer is either, "I don't have any" or "I just have to read." Now, come on, everyone here at YSU with 12 or more hours, knows that there is always some kind of homework, a paper that has to be written, or a test to study for — am I right or am I right?

When I asked him during his first quarter when his midterms and finals were, he said, "I don't know." I gritted my teeth and asked him if he could read the syllabus for any of his classes, and his answer, of course, was "no." Just like that. "No."

I spend whole days studying for mid-terms and finals. My nephew spends two hours in his room with Nine Inch Nails screaming in the background, and he feels that is sufficient. Well, maybe it would be if he had a photographic memory, which he doesn't, or if he was some sort of genius, which he isn't.

The way I see it, two hours of studying is not sufficient time to pull an A on a midterm or a final, especially if the only time the book was ever opened during the whole quarter was when it accidentally fell off letters Do you or your parents ever sit around complaining about matters that concern the area in which you live?

Have you ever heard your parents say that they are going to the next meeting of your city council or your local board of trustees to try to get something done?

You, as students of YSU, have the same representation as anyone else, and it comes in the form of your Student Government representatives.

Each school on campus has these representatives so that you can voice your opinions to us, and we can relay your views to the correct officials.

As a student representative, I have been in my respective college every week, and not one person has ever approached me with a problem concerning the campus.

As student representatives, we are elected by you (the few who vote) to help you and to find out a way to solve any problems you are having.

You must come to us. We cannot read minds, nor can we assume what you are thinking.

If you call the Student Government office you can find out when the representative for your school will be holding office hours, or you can come to our weekly meetings at 4 p.m. Mondays.

We are here for you, but you must make the effort to talk to us to express your feelings.

Powers audience sees, feels and loves The Who's 'Tommy'

By Chalet Seidel
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

For those of you who missed the national touring company of Tommy that visited Powers Auditorium this week, we have one word—loser. Not only did you lose the opportunity to see The Who's famous rock-opera live, you might have missed the most creatively staged production Powers has ever hosted.

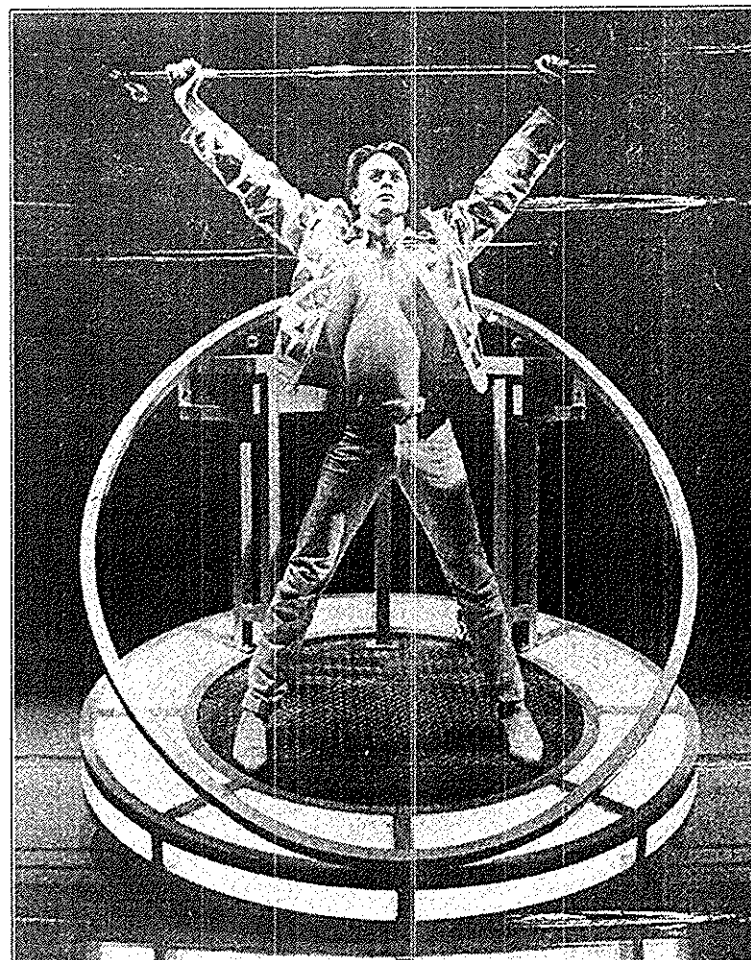

Instead of an orchestra pit in front of the stage, Tommy's orchestra was perched atop a scaffold over the stage like a heavenly choir.

While clearly visible to the audience, there was too much going on beneath the scaffold to allow the orchestra to be distracting. Versatile scenery, lighting and pyrotechnics made Tommy both unique and exciting.

The most unusual element of the stage design was the transparent screen stretched across the length of the stage. The show opened with a giant collage of propaganda posters projected onto the screen that gave way to a formation of bombers flying across the stage. The planes were quickly shot down, showering the stage with hundreds of tiny parachutes.

The production quality didn't disappear when the screen did in scene 3. In this scene, four-year-old Tommy witnesses his father kill his mother's lover, causing the boy to completely close himself off from the world.

Without the screen separating them from the audience, the actors were able to convey this pivotal scene in brutal clarity, making it easy to see why this single act impacted Tommy so deeply.

From this point on, he refuses to speak or even acknowledge the outside world, choosing instead, to stare at his own reflection in a mirror for hours. The only thing he responds to is pinball.

Michael Seelbach, the adult Tommy, was a singing and dancing dynamo who stole scenes by just standing onstage. In fact, the majority of cast members were outstanding performers, earning a standing ovation from the crowd that packed the auditorium.

Tommy was the last show of this year's Broadway in the Mahoning Valley season. The Powers box office is taking reservations for season passes to next year's lineup which will include professional productions of 42nd Street, Mame and Grease.

Fine music and wine benefit WYSU and McDonough

YSU—Would you like to show your support for the fine arts of the Mahoning Valley? Do you want to know more about our area's cultural history? Or do you just want a fun and exciting night out to help usher in spring?

If you answered "yes" to any of these, plan to attend Mad About the Arts at 8 p.m. on Friday, March 1 at the John J. McDonough Museum of Art.

The agenda for the evening provides fine art, classical and jazz performances and wine and hors d'oeuvres that are sure to please. This event also will serve as a fund raiser for WYSU-FM Public Radio and the McDonough Museum of Art.

The Museum, which opened in 1991, was initiated with a gift by the local physician and art collector John J. McDonough. The McDonough features modern art works by both YSU faculty and students and nationally renowned artists. The featured exhibit for the evening will be "Portraits in Steel" by Milton Rogovin. Photographic portraits of steel workers at work and at home also will be displayed to help convey the cultural history that is so pertinent to our region.

Musicians Timothy Ehlen, Tony Leonardi, Caroline Oltmanns and Kent Engelhardt will all be contributing their musical talents to Mad About the Arts.

In addition to the visual arts, live musical performances will be provided.

Teaming up for a jazz duo on bass and saxophone will be Tony Leonardi and Kent Engelhardt. These accomplished musicians are also faculty members at the Dana School of Music. The two will rotate sets with the classical piano duo of Timothy Ehlen and Caroline Oltmanns.

Oltmanns, also a faculty member at Dana, and Ehlen have won critics' favor and have played numerous top-notch recitals across the country.

The March 1 event is underwritten in part by Second National Bank.

Diane Bastic, senior vice president at Second National believes that there are essentials of life, but "unless you add the arts, you do not have a total person."

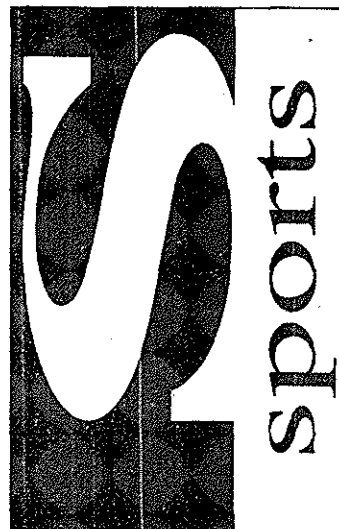

If you too want to get Mad About the Arts, call (216)742-3363 for reservations. Tickets are $20 per person, $15 for WYSU-FM members and YSU fine and performing arts alumni and $50 for "Friends of the Arts."

YSU runners continue to assail record books

School records are quietly becoming a thing of the past for Brian Gorby, head coach of YSU's men's and women's indoor track teams.

Last weekend both squads bested rivals Akron, Marshall and Robert Morris to take their season records to 7-2, while seven more individual school records were broken.

"We have prepared both teams to peak at the Mid-Continent Conference Championships," Gorby said. "To have such successful results this early really gives us the confidence we need to compete at the top of Ohio and the Mid-Continent Conference Championships over the next two weeks."

Lady Penguins notch 10th Mid-Con victory against Golden Eagles

By Michael Grazier
SPORTS EDITOR

The Lady Penguin basketball squad gained its tenth Mid-Continent Conference win Monday by defeating the Golden Eagles of Northeastern Illinois, 89-78, to remain tied with the University of Buffalo for the top conference spot.

Sophomore Caroline McCombs jammed in 27 points, hitting 10 of her 13 field goals, while junior Liz Hauger sank nine of 16 to register 22. McCombs also had a game-high nine assists.

Sophomores Shannon Beach and Ann Marie Martin contributed 14 and 13 markers respectively with Beach adding a team-high nine rebounds.

As a team the Lady Penguins once again shot very well, cashing in on 57 percent of their attempts from the field, including a six-for-eight performance from three-point range and a 17-for-22 night from the charity stripe.

Trailing by one late in the first half, junior Lauren Blausier buried a three-pointer as part of an 11-2 run to give the Lady Penguins the lead which they would never relinquish.

The Golden Eagles came as close as 70-67 with 4:43 remaining, but back-to-back three-pointers by McCombs and Martin sealed their fate. YSU cruised to its thirteenth victory of the season.

Radiance Clarke led the Golden Eagles with 22 points, while Delores Jones added 18 points and a game-high 10 rebounds. Rayjanette Lampkin recorded 10 points in the losing effort.

With the win the Lady Penguins improve to 13-7 overall and 10-3 in the Mid-Continent Conference, while Northeastern Illinois drops to 11-10 (8-5).

Next up for YSU will be conference rival Valparaiso University at 5:20 p.m., Saturday, Feb. 17 at Beeghly Center.

Volleyball stock rises with signing of new recruits

By Michael Grazier
SPORTS EDITOR

Joe Conroy, head coach of the YSU volleyball team, might have prematurely secured his third consecutive Mid-Continent Conference "Coach of the Year" honor by announcing the signing of two of Pennsylvania's top high school prospects.

Both Tamara Rudy and Vickie Robinson have inked national letters of intent to attend YSU in the fall and Conroy couldn't be more pleased with how well his recruiting has turned out heading into the 1996 campaign.

"I am extremely excited to secure the services of such talented players the caliber of Tamara Rudy and Vickie Robinson," Conroy said. "Our program is headed in the right direction and I honestly believe that the talents of both players will enable us to continue our success of the past several seasons."

Rudy, a 5' 9" southpaw setter from Maplewood High School, led her team to an undefeated campaign in 1995, capturing the Pennsylvania Class AA state championship, and was given All-State First-Team laurels in the process.

As her school's all-time assists leader with 2,513, Rudy boasts a long list of accomplishments, including being named to the All-District First-Team in both her junior and senior seasons, and was an All-State Second-Team selection in 1994.

Rudy was also a member of the Gold Medal PA Keystone State Games squad last year and has been honored as being her school's "Most Outstanding Setter" for the past three seasons. However, Conroy is quick to note that being an athlete is not the only thing which Rudy excels at.

"Tamara is not only an excellent athlete, but as a member of her school's National Honor Society, she is equally adept in the classroom as well," Conroy stated. "She is a leader both on and off the court and someone who should see plenty of playing time during her collegiate career."

Robinson, a 5' 10" middle hitter from Senaca High School, has also amassed some striking statistics during her high school career, both in and out of the

Hunt's 23 points not enough to lead Penguins past Northeastern Illinois

By Michael Grazier
SPORTS EDITOR

The YSU men's basketball team dropped another Mid-Continent Conference tilt Monday as the Golden Eagles of Northeastern Illinois used stellar performances from Monte O'Quinn and Andre Hoard to upend the Penguins, 76-62.

O'Quinn was good on nine of his 15 field-goal tries for 27 points, while Hoard went nine-for-18 and scored 23. The two combined for 66 percent of Northeastern's total offense and did most of the board work for the Golden Eagles with O'Quinn yanking down eight rebounds, and Hoard grabbing seven.

The Penguin offense was stone cold in the first half hitting just nine of their 38 field-goal attempts, while their usually stingy defense let them down in the second half as Northeastern tallied 50 points after the intermission.

Sophomore Anthony Hunt led the Penguin charge scoring 23 points and hitting eight of his 12 attempts from the floor, including a three-for-five night from beyond the arc. He was also a perfect four-for-four from the free-throw line and managed a game-high five steals.

Junior Marcus Culbreth flipped in 13 points and added 10 rebounds, while junior Matt McMurray contributed 10 markers and nine caroms.

The Penguins held the lead with 9:46 remaining in the game, but the Golden Eagles rattled off nine unanswered points to take the lead for good in gaining their seventh conference win of the season.

For Dan Peters, YSU head coach, the loss to Northeastern served as a wake-up call concerning the rest of the season.

"First things first, and that is we need to play extremely well beginning this Saturday night against Valparaiso University," Peters said. "It would be nice to play that complete game that we've been searching for, especially against the league-leading Crusaders."

The loss dropped YSU's overall record to 10-12 and 5-9 in conference play, while the Golden Eagles improve to 11-11 (7-6). The game against Valparaiso will start at 7:40 p.m. at Beeghly Center.
