Students voice concern for safety

By Emmi Gordon
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

During Thursday's Open Forum, which resulted from the recent violence that has touched the campus, one YSU junior voiced the fears of many YSU students concerning the safety of Youngstown.

"We feel absolutely unsafe where we are and we feel like we are left out there in the dark," Jonathan Butler, junior, studying computer graphics, said referring to the recent deaths of two YSU students.

Two students were gunned down within two weeks. A member of Tau Kappa Epsilon, Sean Kessler, 22, was found shot to death in Mill Creek Park on Jan. 19. On Jan. 28, 21-year-old Jermaine Hopkins was killed outside his Park Avenue home.

Jim Esperon, a local psychologist and campus counselor, said the events have taken a toll on students.

"It's hard to deal with the gross unfairness of it all," he said. Esperon said that students need to know that Counseling Services is there for them if they need to talk—it is free and confidential.

The open forum was held in Kilcawley's Ohio Room at noon. Counseling and Health Enhancement Services, Student Life, Campus Police, Student Government and YSU administrators were present. About 50 people attended and spoke openly, but did not dwell on the deaths. They talked mostly about their own safety.

Students criticized the city police for slow response time. George Hammar, a YSU police officer, said that his department's jurisdiction covers up to one mile around the campus and are available during crises.

Chrissy Heineman, senior, psychology/social work, said community members near her home are planning to start a neighborhood crime watch so that there will be a "safe zone." She said she belongs to a sorority and feels the sorority house residents want to feel safe when they are outside.

She and Butler, Kessler's fraternity brother, said they hope others will want to help. Butler said that he, "wants YSU to stand up for people living in Youngstown." And as another student at the forum stated, "We don't want to live in a violent society."

Butler also remarked on the absence of YSU President Leslie Cochran. "Where's our President at and what is he going to do for us?" he said.

Cochran never attended the meeting. "We don't have to go looking for violence, it will find us," Maryann Echols, counseling services, said. "We must join in a collective work to curb our violence and guard against the tendency to strike back."

Also a campus counselor, Echols said she believes the violence affects everyone, not only those who died or their families.

"We are all in this together. We must carry on the hopes and dreams of these young men as peacemakers," she said.

Jain Savage, counselor, Health Enhancement Services, said that some people may feel numb, but that is "very natural

Candlelight vigil to be held

A candlelight vigil for Sean Kessler and Jermaine Hopkins will be held at 5:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Feb. 6, around "The Rock" in front of YSU's Kilcawley Center.

Sean Kessler, an education major at the University, died of gun shot wounds last weekend in Mill Creek Park.

The second student victim, Jermaine Hopkins, a YSU All-American defensive lineman from Florida, was shot outside his Park Avenue home last Sunday.

Participants will assemble around the rock with lighted candles and march to 107 Park Ave. the site of the second homicide.

The vigil is co-sponsored by Peace and Conflict Studies, the Catholic Newman Center, Cooperative Campus Ministry and the Student Government and the Concerned Citizens for a Safer Youngstown (CCSY).

For further information, call Dr. Victor Wan-Tatah at 742-7120 or 759-8740.

Student organization establishes scholarship in Hopkins' name

YSU - The YSU Hospitality Management Society, a student group, is responding to the death of a YSU football standout by establishing the Jermaine Hopkins Memorial Scholarship in his honor.

Hopkins, 22, of Miami, FL, former senior defensive lineman for the YSU Penguins, died of gunshot wounds in front of his north side residence early on Sunday, Jan. 28. Two men have been charged in conjunction with the shooting death. Robert Campbell, human ecology, and coordinator of the hospitality management program, said the scholarship is being started because of the "tremendous outpouring of sympathy, and the desire to do something positive."

Juniors and seniors with majors in hospitality management will be eligible to apply for the scholarship.

According to Campbell, advisor to the society, Hopkins had dreams of opening up a restaurant with his friend, Leon Jones, another YSU football standout. "What we want to do is to help someone fulfill those dreams for themselves," he said.

Contributions can be made in care of the Jermaine Hopkins Memorial Scholarship at any National City Bank location.

On Tuesday, Jan. 30, the YSU Athletics Department announced the initiation of the Jermaine Hopkins Scholarship. Contributions to that fund should be sent to Hopkins Athletic Scholarship, c/o The Penguin Club, YSU, Youngstown, OH 44555.

Jambar staffer stands by past commentary

In the Jan. 23 issue of The Jambar, I sought to inform students at YSU of the many activities on campus during the '60s. My research was fascinating, (or so I thought), and I felt that by sharing some of my observations, perhaps groups, clubs and organizations of today could benefit.

Well, apparently I stepped on some toes. I received a letter from a Heather Bland, letting me know that I have "no clue what is going on [on] our campus," and that I need a "reality check, it's 1996 not 1965."

I beg to differ, Heather. I do know quite a bit of what goes on our campus; as an assistant news editor, it's one of my responsibilities. I also know what year it is. I said it before and I'll say it again: we can take a lesson from the past in many ways not everything old is outdated.

Apparently it is "obvious" that I've "never been in a sorority and have no clue about Greek life today." Well, score one for Heather. I've never belonged to a sorority. I have, however, belonged to numerous service organizations in my life, and I can tell you a thing or two about publicity.

First, if you are hosting an event, tell the world about it; the greater number of people who know, the greater the attendance and the more money you make.

I personally am assigned to cover the Greek beat, and until the printing of my commentary, I couldn't find one person to answer my calls.

Brian Hoffman is apparently in charge of public relations for Sigma Alpha, and he contacted me to let me know he will have some news for me in the near future. Thank you Brian.

I will be happy and proud to promote and cover anything any sorority or fraternity on this campus does. The problem lies in communication; one can only beat on so many doors and leave so many messages until one gets the idea that they are wasting valuable study time.

Why did my commentary elicit such a hostile response? I don't think I singled out anyone in particular. I think almost every organization on campus suffers from complacency.

A great many students don't even know of the existence of many groups, and The Jambar isn't the only way to advertise. What happened to fliers, posters and banners? I recall a great use of paper and skill in plastering the campus with Homecoming fliers. Why not other events as well?

Heather asks why the Greeks don't have a special section in The Jambar. It is not Jambar policy to devote column space to any group. However, we will happily cover newsworthy events that any organization is holding.

Once again, it all goes back to communication. If your group or organization is doing something, or has done something, let someone know about it. I tried to cover Rush Week and could find no one to talk to me about it. Pretty sad isn't it Heather? Where were you then?

Heather goes on to say that "Greeks of today spend a lot of time on not only their organization, but their grades and of course JOBS! Now maybe back in the '60s they didn't have to pay their own way through college because mom and dad did it for them."

YSU has always been a blue-collar, commuter college. To insinuate that students of yesterday had it any easier than the ones of today is completely unfair.

Many students at this University not only belong to groups, but are also working to pay for school and striving to get good grades. Some are actually parents on top of it all.

As a non-trad, I can sympathize with you in many aspects, but would never belittle anyone else, let alone a whole generation, to make a point.

Heather also accused The Jambar of "pushing them [the Greeks] off, restricting them to the classifieds, and not falling all over themselves to write articles about them."

In the two quarters I have been assistant news editor, I have never received a request to cover anything by any Greek organization.

Thank you, Heather, for giving me a "chance" to cover the swimming event to be held Feb. 9 at 7 p.m. So, what is the event? It is a fund raiser, but where does the money go, and who gives this money to you? Is there admission charged? Can I compete? What exactly is going on?

I promise to get off my "high horse" and cover anything and everything that I can possibly cover for any and all organizations on this campus. That is what The Jambar is a means of providing information to the student body; the entire staff is dedicated to doing so.

Now, let's get back to what is really important -- promoting your University. If we all work together to do this instead of throwing stones and calling names, we all benefit. At a time when the University is receiving such negative publicity, this is especially important.

If you want something to appear in The Jambar, call 742-3095. Just know that we can't print everything, so don't take it personally.

Copy editor says rethinking one's future is natural

By Joyce Dorbish
 COPY EDITOR

Get a life! And that's what I intend to do after graduating this spring.

As I enter the midway point of my last quarter of YSU classes, thoughts of all I've learned, the personal growth I've experienced and the broad horizon's appearing to be within my grasp have often been taking precedence over my class work.

Some may call this daydreaming, I call it internalizing my future. I'm coming to the conclusion that all of the long hours put into my studies have been well worth my efforts.

Many students gauge their degree's success on how marketable it makes them appear. This may be fine for those only interested in the salary they will earn, but I prefer to view my future career in a broader scope. Although money is a necessary commodity, only with which to pay the bills, no job can pay enough if it isn't personally satisfying enough to fully capture and satisfy me.

My personal achievements and rate of success also must be measured in terms of self-fulfillment. I feel that this is nothing that money could ever buy.

There is one dilemma to face as the completion of a degree closely looms overhead. Do you really want to pursue the career you lived and breathed for upon entering YSU, or have your interests and dreams taken a turn in a different direction?

How many times have you questioned yourself about the career choice you made years ago? I mention this because I think I am slowly joining the ranks of these undecided. A chosen career doesn't seem to take on the light of reality until it presents itself as "your" career—something you may be involved in for the rest of your life.

If not a sudden change of mind, then possibly we are questioning our ability to satisfactorily perform our chosen career. Are we being too hard on ourselves and expecting immediate perfection?

When I consider both of these options in unison, my opinion is that we're doing a little of both. Leaving YSU's campus, where we have become comfortably attuned for the past four-plus years, is in itself a major step.

The familiar faces and buildings will no longer be a part of our daily lives. The standard campus procedures that we automatically succumb to will soon be replaced by nothing but new and unknown rules of our trade.

Although these thoughts may seem disturbing, I see them as being a natural reaction to change. We are always most fearful of the unknown. But the unknown won't become the familiar until we launch ourselves into it.

So, it's time to view graduation and the pursuit of a career in the same light we viewed the initial decision to attend college.

Trust in yourself enough to know that you did and will make decisions that may not live up to your expectations, but never lose sight of the fact that you have the power to change and rearrange your future until it becomes a comfortable place to be.

But in the meantime, just to be safe and secure, I'll be registering at YSU to pursue an MA in English. This way, I can have the best of both worlds—a tie to my academic past and a grasp on my career-oriented future.

First comes Ligeti, then comes marriage

By Chalet Seidel
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

Not many couples can say that Ligeti is the reason they are together.

However, Drs. Robert and Gwyneth Rollin can. Mutual interest in the European composer was the first sign of a shared love of music that has been one of the bases for their 17-year marriage. Without it, they may never have met.

As a graduate student at Cornell University, Robert studied Ligeti and other composers of the Sound Mass Movement.

The Sound Mass Movement rose in the 1960s with composers like Ligeti and Xenakis using clusters of notes simultaneously instead of the single notes of preceding movements.

Robert based part of his doctoral thesis in music theory and composition on an analysis of one of Ligeti's large orchestral pieces, and even spent a year at the Musik Hochschule in Hamburg studying under Ligeti himself.

Meanwhile, Gwyneth, a transplanted Canadian, was studying under Xenakis at Indiana University. Later, she studied the works of Xenakis, and Ligeti for her doctoral thesis in music theory. It was while working on her thesis in 1974 that Gwyneth met Robert.

Robert was employed by the music department of North Central College outside of Chicago. Knowing of his interest in the composer, a colleague in the city mentioned the girl down the street

Drs. Robert and Gwyneth Rollin who was also studying Ligeti.

The girl across the street was Gwyneth, then a department manager at Lyon-Healy, one of the largest music stores in the country at the time.

"I said 'call her up and tell her to come over' because I was excited at the chance to talk to someone else who had studied Ligeti," said Robert. "Then we didn't see each other again for six months."

"And then he forgot my name," adds Gwyneth.

However, they met again six months later and began dating. Four years later, they were married.

"I swore I'd never marry another musician," Robert said, "but we met and hit it off right away, and now I don't think we can conceive of not being together."

Today, both are published composers. Robert is a professor of music theory and composition, directs the YSU Composer's Ensemble and heads YSU's New Music Society. Gwyneth teaches music theory as a limited service faculty and gives private violin lessons. The two play music together "fairly regularly" said Robert. Two years ago, Gwyneth traveled to Mexico to perform one of Robert's violin concertos with the Guadalajara Orchestra.

They say their marriage revolves around their daughter Susan, music and each other.

"Music is all encompassing," said Gwyneth, "when you dedicate your life to it, you're not only practicing and composing, but listening to it all of the time."

"We're constantly involved in music," agrees Robert, adding, "But it means we have a lot to talk about and we're good friends."

Youngstown— Brian K. Anderson: "Recent Photographs", an exhibition of black and white photography documenting everyday life in Cambodia, is currently on display at the Beat Coffeehouse. The exhibition will be on display Feb. 5 through March 1.

Anderson took the photographs over a four-month period in Cambodia while employed by the Cambodia Daily, The Phnom Post and Agence France Presse as a journalist. Taken during his off hours, the photographs display the pulse of a country emerging from a 30-year nightmare of war, civil violence and famine. They are edgy, ambivalent photographs that attempt to show the tension and doubt that most Cambodians seem to feel about the future of their country.

Dana Chamber Orchestra to present winter concert

YSU— The Dana Chamber Orchestra will present their winter concert at 4 p.m., Sun., Feb. 4, in Bliss Recital Hall.

The Dana Chamber Orchestra will then perform J.S. Bach's "Cantata No. 211" with three guest vocalists. Featured for this work will be baritone Allan Mosher, assistant professor, voice; soprano Mary Ann Tishov, a recent graduate of the Dana School of Music in vocal performance; Craig Raymaley, senior, vocal performance major.

"The Cantata No. 211" is better known as the "Coffee Cantata." It is a secular cantata about a father who wants to stop his daughter from drinking coffee. To this extent, he refuses to find her a suitable husband unless she gives up her precious coffee. She relents, but has the last word by resorting to trickery.

The Dana Chamber Orchestra concert is sponsored by the Dana Concert Series and the Beat Coffeehouse. Coffee will be served following the performance.

This performance is free and open to the public.

Lady Penguins slam Central Connecticut University, 87-68

By Michael Grazier
SPORTS EDITOR

The Lady Penguin basketball team upped their conference record to 6-3 as they defeated Central Connecticut State, 87-68, in league action Monday.

It was a balanced effort for YSU as four players scored in double digits en route to the convincing victory.

Sophomore Ann Marie Martin jammed in 20 markers for the red and white on six of 10 shooting from the floor, while collecting six caroms in the process. Junior Liz Hauger netted 16 in continuing the steady offensive performance she has shown all season long.

Sophomores Shannon Beach and Caroline McCombs added 15 apiece to fuel the potent Penguin charge, while another sophomore, Colleen Cook, contributed an unexpected six rebounds from her point-guard position. Beach grabbed a game-high nine misses, and Cook dished out seven assists.

YSU used an aggressive defense to force the Lady Blue Devils into an uncharacteristic 29 turnovers. Martin had four steals, while Hauger and McCombs each registered three thefts in keeping with a tough defensive theme that allowed the Lady Penguins to score an impressive 26 points off of turnovers.

While YSU was still having trouble from behind the arc, making just one of nine attempts, they did cure their sometimes erratic foul shooting by making good on 26 of 33 from the charity stripe (78 percent).

For Central Connecticut, Heather Whitehead scored 14 and Beth McBroom added 13 as no other Lady Blue Devil could seem to get a handle on the Penguin pressure.

The win brings YSU's overall record to 9-7 as they look to begin their second go around the conference with a matchup against the University of Buffalo.

Men cagers get bounced by Blue Devils, mired in 3-way tie for 7th in Mid-Con

By Michael Grazier

The YSU men's basketball team dropped their sixth conference matchup Monday as the Blue Devils of Central Connecticut State used 61 percent shooting from the floor to take the Penguins 79-65 at Beeghly Center.

Dwhawn Edwards and Garrett Petteway each netted 16 points for the Blue Devils, while Keith Closs contributed 14. With the win Central Connecticut improves to 8-9 (5-4 in the Mid-Continent Conference).

The Blue Devils jumped out to a 34-26 halftime advantage by hitting 14 of 24 field goals (58 percent) in the first half, only to come out in the second stanza and make 18 of 28 (64 percent) to put the game away.

Juniors Hank Raber and Marcus Culbreth led the Penguin charge, both flipping in 15 points. Senior Leroy King banked in 12 markers and added six rebounds in the losing effort.

YSU shot 40 percent from the floor and made just seven out of their 19 three-point attempts, while the Blue devils made good on five of eight from beyond the arc.

For the Penguins, it was their first trip through the conference schedule as they prepare to take on a University of Buffalo team that bested them by a slim four-point margin on Jan. 2.

"We didn't play exceptionally well against Central Connecticut yesterday, and it cost us," said Dan Peters, head coach. "The Bulls are a tough team, and they want to continue their winning ways as they make a run for the top spot in the league."

The University of Buffalo is currently tied for second place in the conference with Western Illinois at 6-3, but are just 2-7 away from home, while the Penguins sport a 6-2 home record.

YSU/Sanray to honor Ed O'Neill as "Man of the Year"

Ed O'Neill, former YSU griddier who has gone on to fame and glory as cult hero Al Bundy on the popular Fox Network sitcom Married...With Children, will be in Youngstown, OH, on Thursday, Feb. 8. O'Neill will be honored as the YSU/Sanray "Man of the Year," announced Joe Malmisur, former YSU executive director of athletics and current Penguin Club executive director.

"The entire Penguin athletics family is delighted with the successes of Ed O'Neill," Malmisur said. "He represents us in the finest tradition: talent and loyalty," he added. "Talent is a gift from God and the other a quality of breeding, both of which we are so very proud."

The banquet also will honor the memory of the late Chuck Perazich, former executive sports editor of The Vindicator and a former YSU football manager who also served as the school's sports information director.

His love for his hometown was reflected in his helping to coin the phrase, "There's a Youngstown connection everywhere in sports."

O'Neill is a Youngstown native who first performed as a budding thespian and on the gridiron while in high school at nearby Ursuline High School. He starred for the Penguins and the late Dwight "Dike" Beede in the late '60s. He was a late cut by this year's Super Bowl runners-up, the Pittsburgh Steelers in 1969, and acting is the road that he followed.

The banquet is slated for Wednesday, Feb. 8 at Mr. Anthony's Banquet Center, South Ave., Boardman, OH.

Single tickets are still available by calling the YSU Athletics Ticket Office at (216) 742-3482.

The cost is $75 per ticket.

Men and Women Indoor Track

The men's and women's indoor track teams picked up where the Conference Championship Cross Country team left off by besting Mid-Continent rivals Chicago State, Western Illinois and Milwaukee Wisconsin at the quadrangular team meet at the University of Milwaukee, WI, indoor facility.

Both the men and the women post match records of 3-1 thus far, while many of the 40 newly recruited all-state freshmen quickly adjusted to collegiate competition by setting new school records and winning their events in only their second competition.

"The foundation of success is set if we continue to work hard and prepare properly as a team, as well as prevent sickness and injury," said Brian Gorby, head coach and current Mid-Continent Conference "Coach of the Year." "We will have the opportunity to be champions in the state and the Mid-Continent Conference."

Jan. 22 A parking service employee was assaulted in the Breezeway of the Kilcawley House at around 8:15 p.m. He said a male approached him, objected to getting a parking ticket in the M-8 lot, and then struck the employee in the chest.

Jan. 23 A female student realized she left her leather jacket in a room in Cushman at 9:50 a.m. A professor found the jacket and brought it to the Lost and Found in Kilcawley at 10:50 a.m. When the female went to claim the jacket at the Lost and Found at 1:00 p.m., she discovered $45 missing from her checkbook.

Jan. 24 At approximately 4:05 a.m. students found the south elevator in the Cafaro House was vandalized. Two pairs of female panties, two empty beer bottles with cigarettes inside them, and one sock were found outside of the elevator. One pair of male underwear and one condom that appeared to have been used and then blown up and hung from the ceiling appeared inside the elevator.

Jan. 28 A female Lyden House resident received 10 harassing phone calls from another female. Earlier in the day the resident had a verbal confrontation with the female and her friends in her room. The floor RA escorted the female and her friends down into the lobby after hearing the argument, and the women finally left. The resident and the female had been arguing at a party the night before about a male.

Jan. 29 A non-student attempted to steal a book from the Maag Library at 7:45 p.m. The male removed the bar code from the book, thinking it would not set off the alarm; however, the alarm did sound. He admitted to removing the bar code and paid the damages for the book. The man had previously been given a written trespass warning and was told to stay off YSU property.

All of the counselors wanted students to know that the feelings they are having are expected after such tragic incidences. Savage also said, "Violence can touch each and every one of us. To stop the violence, it takes each and every one of us foremost."

Hammar said, "This is the safest campus in Ohio and we are always there to help."

But, Butler said that YSU being the "safest campus" was a "blank and empty statistic" because it doesn't include the area surrounding the campus, where many students live. Some solutions to safety problems were neighborhood watches, fixing the lights on campus, using the safety call boxes and using the YSU escort service.

Hammar said, "We try to get people to get involved and they don't want to get involved."

Esperon stated, "The more student involvement the better." While Bassam Deeb, executive director, student life, said one thing to do is "be aware of your environment."
