YSU installs new phone system for deaf

By ROCHELLE LARKIN
Staff Reporter

YSU recently spent over $7,000 on five Telephone Device for the Deaf (TDD) units to accommodate the hearing impaired in accordance with the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA).

This act requires public entities to provide appropriate auxiliary aids, such as TDDs, for effective communication with people who have disabilities.

A TDD looks very much like a word processor with a one-sentence screen. When an incoming call has more letters than what can fit onto the screen, the TDD automatically prints the message. Even if no one responds to the incoming message, the TDD acts as an answering machine and prints the message.

A TDD was installed in the Admissions Office and in the New Student Relations Office in order to try to increase the enrollment of the hearing impaired. Each of these TDDs cost about $500.

YSU also purchased three $2,000 TDD pay phones for the public use which are located in the lobby of Maag Library, in Kilcawley Center by the Buckeye Suite and at northeast Beeghly Center.

A committee, headed by Joseph Scarnecchia, assistant director of Administrative Services, chose to install the TDDs in these areas because of the high accessibility to the public and the extended hours of these buildings.

If an emergency situation occurs involving a hearing impaired person after buildings are closed, contact the Campus Police. "The police know where these phones are located, and they know that, in case of an emergency, they can take the hearing impaired person into one of those buildings," Scarnecchia said.

"We don't know at this point if Telephone Services needs to install a TDD in Campus Police. We're investigating that now," Scarnecchia added.

According to Scarnecchia, YSU had to pay for the installation of the TDDs because the phone companies do not provide this service. Also, if a hearing impaired person was hired by YSU and needed a TDD, YSU would be responsible for installing the machine.

Also, concern has been shown by the department where the TDDs were installed. Since the installation of the TDD, the Admissions Office has not received any incoming calls. Dr. George Letchworth, director of Counseling and Health Enhancement Services, said, "This may be because there are only a few hearing impaired students enrolled each quarter. The hearing impaired students may not have had the need to contact either one of these administrative offices."

Other concerns about the TDD stem from the TDD

phone numbers not being listed in the Ohio Bell telephone directory. According to Scarnecchia, Telephone Services missed the date to enter these numbers in the phone book because the TDD equipment was not yet installed. The numbers will be listed in next year's phone directory.

However, the TDD numbers are listed in YSU's phone directory. The Admissions Office can be reached by TDD at 742-1564. The New Student Relations Office can be reached by TDD at 742-1565. In case of an emergency, the Youngstown Police can be reached by TDD at 747-9324.

The TDD is very simple to use, according to Scarnecchia. After the machine is turned on, a light will flash signaling a dial tone. Next, hold down the "select" key, located where the shift key would be on a typewriter, and type the number of the TDD you wish to reach. A light will flash signaling confirmation between the two TDDs and the parties can begin to type a conversation.

To make sure that it would be used properly, the Admissions Office and New Student Relations Office were trained on the TDD. The two offices practiced typing conversations to one another. Gina McHenry of the Admissions Office said that the training was brief, but the staff is ready for any incoming calls.

Diet Guru visits Youngstown

Richard Simmons appeared last Friday at Stambaugh Auditorium as part of the Junior League's Town Hall lecture series.

The audience exercised and laughed with Simmons as he delivered his message about the importance of healthy living.

The enthusiastic audience, predominantly women, crowded around Simmons before and after the show as he visited the lobby to dole out autographs, hugs and kisses in abundance.

Dressed in red and white striped shorts and a red tank top, Simmons made his entrance onto the stage accompanied by the dance standard, "Shout." Saying nothing, he motioned the audience to its feet for a few minutes of "Sweatin' to the Oldies"--live. Most of the hour-long presentation featured audience members in large groups joining Simmons on stage for more of the same.

Under his report, Student Government President Bill Burley took the opportunity to open the floor to the gallery and the representatives for questions, problems and/or suggestions.

At yesterday's meeting, only one question was addressed to Burley concerning the freezing of funds under the Financial Appropriations Committee.

"The funds were frozen because Student Government has an obligation to fund some of the awards at the [Student Government Annual Awards] banquet," he said. "The funds were not diverted into any other project or event other than the banquet."

During the report, Burley also informed the representatives and cabinet members they are invited to the banquet.

"Members of Student Government have been thanked in various ways over the past years," Burley said. "This year we figured the least we could do was have the cabinet members and the representatives attend the banquet."

Executive Secretary Malik Mostella discussed the poor registration for the basketball tournament under his report yesterday.

"I'm still upset that only six teams, including [Student Government] have signed up so far," Mostella said. "There is a $250 prize for the winners, and with funds being cut left and right this year, you would think more groups would be participating to win the money."

The deadline to enter the tournament is before 3 p.m. on May 1.

Mostella also announced that the Minority Awareness Day is scheduled from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Friday, May 14. He said a change of programming was necessary since approximately 100 to 150 area high school students will attend the event.

Mostella said any organizations still interested in participating may sign up in the Student Government Offices, or call him at ext. 3382.

YSU readies for biological conference

By MATTHEW DEUTSCH
Assistant News Editor

On April 30, May 1 and May 2, YSU will be hosting the 102nd Annual Meeting of the Ohio Academy of Science.

The meeting, which is co-sponsored by Browning-Ferris Industries (BFI), is being held here on campus for the first time. This is due in large part to Dr. David MacLean, biology, who is also chairman of the meeting's Local Arrangements Committee.

In 1988, MacLean approached former YSU President Neil Humphrey about hosting the annual meeting. That same year, a formal invitation was extended to the executive director of the Academy. That invitation was accepted the following year and the date was set for 1993.

MacLean, who has been at YSU since 1968, is enthusiastic about the event and is hoping to give the University a little exposure.

"Very few people have had the opportunity to visit this campus," MacLean said. "We're hoping people will walk away with a favorable impression."

The Ohio Academy of Science, of which Youngstown State is a member, is comprised of a wide range of scientific fields. All in all, eleven different YSU departments will participate, with both students and faculty presenting papers and/or posters.

The meeting will begin on Friday, April 30, starting with registration at The Wick-Pollock Inn. The campus will be crowded that day since the English Festival will also be taking place.

On Saturday, the focus of attention shifts over to Cushman Hall. The paper and poster presentations will be made during this day and at 11 a.m., Dr. James Adovasio will speak on "Ice Age Hunters in the Central Russian Plain," during the All-Academy Lecture. Adovasio is a native of Youngstown and a former professor of anthropology.

That afternoon, the physics and astronomy department will present a show on the Milky Way in the Ward Beecher Planetarium. In the evening, an

All-Academy banquet is scheduled, which will include a presidential address.

On Sunday, two field trips will take place: one to the BFI Carbon Limestone Landfill in Poland Township and the other to Mill Creek Park.

Phil Orlando, a YSU graduate, will be presenting a poster at the meeting concerning a new technique in molecular biology. Orlando and Dr. Anthony Sobota have collaborated on an article about the technique which will be published in the May issue of Biotechniques.

"This is a good opportunity for presenting material such as this to other people," said Orlando, expressing his appreciation for the upcoming event.

According to MacLean, the meeting usually averages between 500 and 600 people. This year, however, there may be a bit more, especially because of an expected "good turnout from nearby Pennsylvania."

"I suspect this may be the largest meeting of this type for YSU," MacLean said.

laced with humor, shared stories of his personal struggle with excess weight.

"I look at a box of cookies and my thighs quiver," he quipped. In the early 1970s, before he began work as a fitness motivator, the self-proclaimed compulsive-obsessive eater lost 137 pounds.

At a press conference before the show, the 45-year-old Simmons was asked if he ever gains weight.

"Yes, I do. When my father passed away, I put on 30 pounds in one month," he said. He has since lost the weight and noted that to maintain his current 150 pounds, he must eat 1600 calories, 15 to 20 grams of fat and exercise 1½ hours each day.

Simmons encouraged his audience members to take care of themselves through proper diet and exercise. "Never Give Up," he told them.

Simmons made news recently because a lawsuit alleging sexual harassment has been filed against him.

According to the Youngstown Vindicator, Lori Pastor, a former employee of QVC Network, Inc., claims that Simmons made "lewd, lecherous, wanton and lascivious comments" to her.

Simmons was asked for a response at Friday's press conference.

"If you saw me outside, there were all these thousands of women out there and they hug me and they kiss me. I don't even actually know too much about this suit except that I hugged and kissed a woman and told her that she had a gorgeous chest," he said.

In spite of the pending lawsuit, the Simmons lecture was the most popular of the season, selling over 2,000 tickets, according to a Junior League committee member.

The League also announced the 1993-94 season line-up which will include lectures by Debbie Reynolds, Dr. Henry Heimlich, Faith Daniels, Colonel Chuck Scott and Suzanne Sommers.

YSU celebrates Earth Day

By STACY ARMSTRONG
Staff Reporter

The 23rd annual celebration of Earth Day was observed last Thursday outside Kilcawley and was organized by Students for a Healthier Planet member Olivia Flak, sophomore, F&PA.

Different environmental organizations took part in this observance by passing out information about what the public can do to preserve the planet.

Tables were set up and brochures were available to educate people about environmental racism, animal rights, the problems with automobile fuel and recycling.

The Sierra Club displayed a solar-powered fan to show the public it is safe for the environment.

Some other activities included people selling clothes and jewelry, poetry readings and painting the rock like a globe.

"The rock was painted to draw attention to the activities," Flak said.

Heather Moser, junior, education, has participated in Earth Day at YSU for the past three years and said this year's event seemed successful. "Usually, people do not want to listen to me, but this year people have been really open to this. They come up and ask me what they can do," Moser said.

Earth Day is held at YSU "to get the campus motivated to do something everyday," Flak said. "It is held on the campus core to go along with the Earth Day theme."

"This year there's been a lot of support from the public; they've been very receptive," Flak said.

Several organizations participated in Earth Day -- Students for a Healthier Planet, the Coalition for Animal Rights Education, Humans Against Gender Stereotypes, the Sierra Club, Students for Peace, Youngstown Green Party and the Youngstown Peace Council.

Campus police aid YPD in robbery arrest

By PIA BRADY
Assistant News Editor

On April 18, Patrolman Lomax was notified by radio that an attempted robbery had occurred on Elm Street in the parking lot near Rayen Avenue and the subject had "run onto YSU property."

The victim told Campus Police that a subject grabbed him and proceeded to drag him "across the ground" in an effort to "take [his] money." The perpetrator was described as a male wearing a black hat and a black and red jacket.

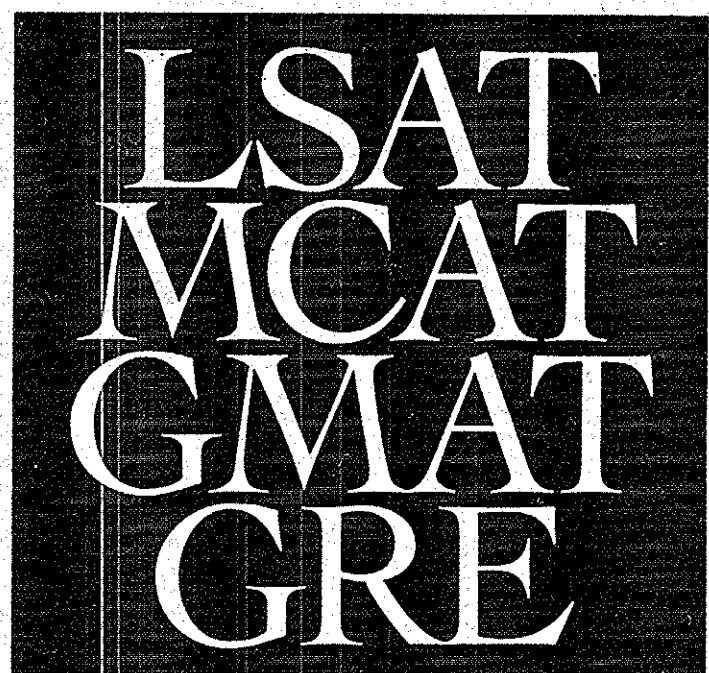

Officers recognized the description as a subject that was seen before the incident. Lomax and Officer C. Davis were in the process of searching the area when Lomax "observed a subject hiding behind the dumpster near Kilcawley Bookstore's loading dock," which is located on Spring Street.

The subject was apprehended and "positively identified by the victim and witnesses" as John Johnson.

Johnson is listed as having previous arrests. Johnson refrained from giving a voluntary statement on the issue and was transported to the YPD and booked.

The YSU brochure entitled: Campus Safety At YSU, encourages the campus community to practice safety. "Stay in well-lit areas, walk mid-point between curbs and buildings and away from alleys and bushes." Other safety tips include carrying a whistle, walking with others and enlisting the assistance of the Campus Escort Service. If a crime does occur, please contact Campus Police as soon as possible.

The YSU Police can be contacted at ext. 3333 and the Campus Escort Service can be contacted at ext. 1515. Safety brochures can be obtained at the Campus Police department.

Since last Wednesday night's reported rape on campus, has anybody noticed anything different?

We're not talking about an increase in calls to the Escort Service or sales of mace and whistles. No, the change isn't anything like that.

It's much more obvious than that and, in fact, the changes should not have been necessary in the first place.

For instance, has anybody noticed that the bushes located where the alleged incident occurred have been rather hastily removed?

It seems a bit odd that these bushes were removed a little less than 36 hours after the incident was reported and on one of the slowest days of the week on campus, Friday.

The speed and efficiency of this action (it took only a few hours to complete what probably would have been an all-day job) has made us wonder if this was a delayed action or rash action.

Perhaps the Grounds Crew had been planning to remove these shrubs for some time, but kept putting it off until it was too late.

Or perhaps no one had ever thought about the bushes being a hazard until this happened and the Administration, the Campus Police and the Grounds Crew then realized that they had messed up big time and tried to fix it as fast as they could.

Surely, the highly decorated Grounds Department wouldn't just haphazardly hack bushes out of an area just to cover everybody's hides, would they?

To us, ripping them out with such haste is as close to an admission of guilt from these departments as we're going to get.

Well, if you hadn't noticed that change, than you probably haven't noticed the other one either.

It seems there has been a marked increase in the visibility of Campus Police officers on patrol, especially in the campus core.

Now, maybe we've been a tad myopic in the last few years, but we've both been here on campus and the cops haven't always been around.

Every time we leave the office to go to a class, we seem to run across an officer walking a beat. Sure, there were cops assigned to patrols before the rape was reported, but you were probably more likely to see them gabbing with someone outside a building than actually walking their beat.

However, after dark, you were lucky if you found a cop in Arby's, let alone outside.

Ah, but all that is seemingly changed now and the Campus Police department looks to have adopted a "cop on every corner" policy.

Better late than never or a little too late?

But, besides increasing patrols, they should look to increase some other things as well, such as awareness.

See, another name for police officers is public safety officials and their job is to maximize protection of the general populous (which in this case is students, faculty and staff of YSU).

If they see something that jeopardizes the safety of the people and they can remove or control it by lawful means, then they should do so.

We think the bushes next to Kilcawley West qualified as such.

We will admit that we never thought of the bushes as hazards, but then, that kind of thing is not our job.

We, as most students on this campus, are concerned with things such as classes, midterms, papers, etc. We don't always have time to sit down, look at things and say: "Gosh, I think those bushes by Kilcawley could be dangerous."

That, we think, is the job that the Campus Police officers, the YSU public safety officials, were hired to do and in this case they didn't do it.

Maybe things are changing and maybe things are getting better, but we still say there should have never been a need for change.

It might be better late than never, but for one 19-year-old student, it's too little, too late.

1-800-Punch

Matthew Deutsch
Assistant News Editor

The other day I was in Arby's, staring at the wall and trying to figure out how to become rich and famous, when I noticed something about my can of Hawaiian Punch. It had a phone number on it. This aroused my curiosity and I took a closer look. Apparently, you could call this number if you had any questions or comments about Hawaiian Punch. So, I stopped thinking about fame and fortune for a second and pondered the usefulness of this phone number. (Along the way, I thought it would make a good commentary. That's why you're reading this.)

What possible reason could you have for calling this number? What comment or question would be so pressing that you'd have to run for the phone? "Hello? Hawaiian Punch? I had a particularly delicious can of your drink today and I just thought I'd tell you about it."

And what if you're on the phone and somebody needs you for some reason. What are you going to say to them, "Go away, I'm on the phone with Hawaiian Punch?"

I'm sorry, I don't see it happening. Being a Maytag repairman can't be half as easy as being an operator for the Hawaiian Punch Comment Hotline.

Curious as I was, I decided to look at other products to see if they had phone numbers on them. A lot of them did, such as N'ice throat lozenges and Robin Hood Flour. This is all fine and good, but also very boring. If you're going to put phone numbers on consumer products, you should put them on the right ones.

Like toilet paper, for instance. Now, that's a product ripe with possibilities. I can see it now: "If you have any questions or comments about our product, please call 1-800-GOOD-WIPE."

Or maybe instead of a phone number, you could write and join a product's fan club. Think of it: "Act now and you, too, can be a member of the Summer's Eve Fan Club."

Or perhaps for the more romantic customer, a 1-900 number would be more in order. You could call and listen to someone tell you how sexy they feel when they eat a Fig Newton.

Crude, I know, but necessary when you're trying to make the world a weirder place.

Financial Aid office: helpful, saintly

Letter

Dear Editor,

Last Tuesday's commentary ["Student calls for reform in financial aid dept."] was so totally discordant with my personal experiences I felt compelled to offer an 'alternative' perspective.

I have been a client of the Financial Aid department's services for over two years now. Had I not been, I would undoubtedly be working my way up the promotional ladder at a local branch of McDonald's, or doing some other general, but nonetheless respectable, task the like of which I hope to eventually become overqualified for. The Financial Aid department and its generous contributors are not one of the major factors in my academic progress; they are the major factor.

Throughout my entire affiliation with this over-worked and under-recognized department, I have only dealt with the saintliest of people; congenial, helpful, concerned men and women who implored my patience and in return offered to do what they could for me: and they did. Even in the darkest nadir of my personal economic uncertainties, I credit their enthusiasm and commitment for maintaining my will to fight on in the seemingly eternal battle to offset ever increasing tuition fees. I am forced, therefore, to assume that by some strange twist of destiny the cantankerous ogres and ogresses that Ms. George refers to were all conveniently on leave during the numerous occasions on which I have visited the office, but this I find somewhat unlikely.

Personally, I accept the reams of paperwork that presumably constitute "financial aid red tape" as a small price to pay in exchange for financial contributions from philanthropic-minded individuals, and the minimum essential for any serious contracting of an investment (read: student loan) in my education.

This dissonance in perspective may ultimately rest on the fact that I have never been turned down for financial aid, and so have no reason to transpose anger and bitterness into an 'us' against 'them' journalistic tirade. I do not adhere to the popular belief that administrative offshoots of the Great Bureaucracy are fair game for arbitrary critical lashings. Perhaps I am a conservative anachronism in that I take personal responsibility for exhausting potential sources of income, even if it means having to think! Sober deliberation leads me to believe I am not, as the thought of assessing the serviceability of any campus department not by what they do for the University in general, but by what they do for me personally, seems to me no effective guarantee of ensuring the continued high quality of service that I, along with hundreds, even thousands of others over the years, have consistently been provided with.

Perspectives are a fascinating and wonderful affair, but extremities ultimately require at least some form of reconciliation.

Indecent Proposal is entertaining despite minor flaws

By J. M. WALSH
Staff Reporter

How far will YOU go for $1 million? That's the question everyone is asked in the mildly entertaining new drama, Indecent Proposal.

Directed by Adrian Lyne (Fatal Attraction, 9 1/2 Weeks), Indecent Proposal offers a look at the dilemma surrounding an offer made by a billionaire for one night with another man's wife.

Robert Redford stars as billionaire John Gage, who propositions the down-on-their-luck couple David (Woody Harrelson) and Diana (Demi Moore) Murphy. Though it struggles with a few technical inadequacies and a miscast Harrelson, Indecent Proposal proves to be, at least, entertaining overall.

The relationship between David, an award-winning architect, and Diana, a top real-estate agent, is touchingly depicted through their own narration and home-movie-like flashbacks. Their fairy tale romance and yuppie success seems indestructible until the recession hits hard costing the Murphys everything. They decide the only way left to salvage their dreamy future is to go to Las Vegas and try to turn their last (borrowed) $5,000 into enough money to pull them out of debt.

At first, they are extremely lucky, but can't seem to quit while they're ahead. While David is held in the lure of the casino, Diana goes off to eye an expensive dress in a hotel boutique, but discovers she's being eyed, too. The plight of the couple catches the attention of billionaire John Gage who offers what he considers to be the perfect solution to their troubles.

Gage offers them a million bucks for just one night with Diana.

"The night will come and go, but a million dollars can last you an entire lifetime," he tells them.

David and Diana, at first, are outraged, but later, philosophical.

"Think what this money can do for us," Diana says. "It's just my body. It's not my mind. It's not my heart."

What follows changes the course of their relationship forever.

The trailer for the film is very seamless and seductive, but nothing about the entire work equals this smooth, sultry preview. Lyne includes many jump-cut scenes in order to convey each character's point of view, but the scenes end up disturbing the continuity of the visual image.

The musical score behind a number of scenes is also misused, because the wrong portions of songs are used in edited scenes which are too short. Sade's "No Ordinary Love," which worked so well in the trailer, is edited to ineffectual length in the movie. The seductive lure is lost. Once a mood is begun, it's cut short.

Harrelson is miscast as David Murphy. His character is supposed to be the top graduate in his class at architectural college and the recipient of a national architectural award, but one can't help but expect some simple-minded blurb about Hanover, Indiana, to come from his mouth.

The still sexy Redford further promotes his Jay Gatsbyish image to convincingly portray the charming and tempting John Gage.

Demi Moore turns out an occasionally appropriate, though often demeaning, performance as Diana. She fails her audience, as does director Lyne, in succumbing to a number of unnecessary and gratuitous nude shots. So much for the Year of the Woman.

Despite its shortcomings, Indecent Proposal actually proves to be pretty decent, overall. The film makes the viewer want David and Diana's relationship to endure and for them to prove that money really can't buy love. Besides, Redford looks great in a tux.

Indian Summer breaks through thirty-something stereotypes

By CHARLIE DEITCH
Acting News Editor

Do you hate movies like The Big Chill or TV shows like thirtysomething?

If you answered yes to either of these questions, then I have a film for you. Indian Summer, written and directed by Mike Binder, opened on Friday and finally there is a movie about babyboomers that won't make you puke.

The film could have very well been eight 40-year-olds sitting around the campfire sipping pelligrino and listening to Yanni or John Tesh.

—CHARLIE DEITCH

Ready, set, go: Eight friends reunite to commemorate the final season of Camp Tamakwa, the summer camp where they came of age in Indian Summer. The film stars Kimberly Williams, left, Matt Craven, Diane Lane, Kevin Pollack, Julie Warner, Vincent Spano, Elizabeth Perkins, Bill Paxton, Sam Raimi and Alan Arkin.

Tamakwa, gather and reminisce about old times and slowly disclose the unpleasantries in their lives.

The film could have very well been eight 40-year-olds sitting around the campfire sipping pelligrino and listening to Yanni or John Tesh albums. The great news is, it wasn't.

No one performance stands out in this ensemble cast, but all were equally outstanding.

Unca Lou (Arkin) invites seven of his aging campers back to the woods for one last summer fling before the camp closes.

All of the favored campers, plus a 21-year-old knock-out on her first trip to Camp the part of Jack Belston. Jack is set apart from the others because he isn't trying to cope with his adulthood, he tries to wrestle with the secret that got him thrown out of camp 20, long years ago. Paxton is the anchor of this talented cast and it appears he is making a cinematic comeback.

Old-timer Arkin (Glengarry, Glen Ross, Edward Scissorhands) lends his vast experience and talent playing the camp director. Arkin is like somebody's dear, old grandfather that you love to get hugs from and he has neat old stories to tell.

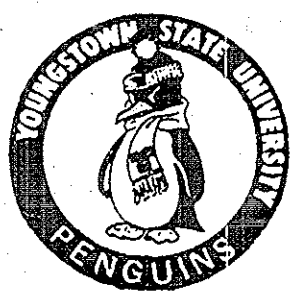

Stand-up-comic-turned-actor, Kevin Pollack (A Few Good Men, Ricochet) plays the former camp nerd. His character, the self-proclaimed "Shrek (which in campers terms means prank) King," adds to the constant humor with phrases like: "I thought this camp was smaller," and "Did it always smell this much like urine?"

Elizabeth Perkins (Big) also turns in a fine performance as the former camp heartbreaker, Jennifer.

Other top performances are turned in by Vincent Spano (City of Hope), Julie Warner (Doc Hollywood), Diane Lane (Chaplin) and Kimberly Williams (Father of the Bride).

A scene-stealing performance is also given by writer/director Sam Raimi (Army of Darkness).

Indian Summer looks to be a box-office flop after its first weekend in theaters. This would be a tragic mistake. The film is fun to watch and it will make you love your parents more.

Track team fares well at Taco Bell Classic

By MICHAEL YONKURA
Sports Editor

YSU Head Track and Field Coach Jack Rigney said this weekend's weather was the best his team has seen all spring. For those at the Taco Bell Run for the Border Track and Field Classic meet at the Elm Street Track Saturday, they probably wondered how much worse it has been.

Despite the cool temperatures and intermittent showers, YSU hosted the meet, attracting 12 different colleges, including a tough Ohio State team. The Penguin thincadders proved their worth in the various events, taking 10 first place finishes overall.

On the women's side, Julie Williamson and Holly Anderson finished high in both the shotput and the discus. Williamson won the discus with a throw of 142'11" while Anderson took third. Williamson also took fourth as Anderson was one spot behind.

Both had competed in the Penn Relays in Philadelphia on Thursday. According to Rigney, there was a fatigue factor for both.

"I think the travel time got to them more than anything," said Rigney. "We didn't think they were going to be here today, but that just shows you what kind of competitors they are."

The women's 4 x 100m relay team won its race as it edged out Robert Morris with a time of 49.3 seconds. Dawn Oddo took third in the 100m hurdles with a time of 16.2 seconds.

Stacy Bender, Lisa Clegg and April Mottram took the top three spots in the 400m. Mona Jackson won both the 100m and 200m with times of 12.2 and 25.1 seconds, respectively.

On the men's side, Randy Closson and Craig Needham finished high in the shotput. Closson took second place with a distance of 46' 4" while Needham took fifth with a throw of 44' 5".

In the discus, Needham's throw of 149'1" beat out his competition.

Jay Payne, who also competed at the Penn Relays, won the 110m hurdles in 14.7 seconds. Payne took second in the 200m with a time of 22.2.

The men almost completed sweeps in two events, as they took first, second and fourth in the long jump and the 3000m steeplechase.

In the long jump, Corey Reagle took the top prize with a leap of 22'7". Chris Vollmer took second, while Jim Whipkey placed fourth.

Paul Gorby won the steeplechase, followed by Joe Correll in second and Brian Snow in fourth.

Vollmer also won the triple jump with a distance of 45'3/4".

According to Assistant Coach Clarence Cockerall, the team has looked strong overall.

"This is a team that can beat anyone in the area," said Cockerall. "There were some people injured today, but as the season goes on, we're going to finish strong and break even more records."

Rigney agrees with those statements.

"This is the most in-shape team that's ever been here," said Rigney. "They're also the most determined and sometimes the most bull-headed team I've had. They just want to compete very badly."

This weekend, YSU will find out how competitive it is when it goes to the University of Toledo for a track meet.

Ker-Splash!!! Joe Gorrell and Paul Gorby make big splashes in the 3000m steeplechase in Saturday's Taco Bell Classic at YSU. Gorby and Gorrell finished one-two in this race. Brian Snow (on the hurdle) finished fourth.

Peters gets recruits; Baseball team swept

Men's Basketball

Head Coach Dan Peters has signed a recruit to play next season and has convinced another recruit, YSU's only early signee, to stay on.

Ryan Dennis, a 6'9" forward/center from George Junior Republic H.S. in Grove City has decided to attend YSU next year.

Dennis was recruited by former YSU Coach John Stroia in the early signing period last fall.

When Stroia's contract was not renewed, it was questioned whether or not Dennis was willing to come to YSU. He made it official Wednesday that he would stay.

"My best interest is in attending YSU this fall," said Dennis. "I honestly feel that Peters will turn the (program) around, and I very much want to be a part of that success."

Peters' first true recruit at YSU is Damon Johnson, a 6'8" forward from Stow, Oh. and Maine Central Institute, where he averaged 18 points and 11 rebounds a game in his senior season.

"I cannot tell you how happy I am that Dennis and Johnson have decided to attend YSU this fall," said Peters. "Both players can contribute immediately and both have an excellent chance to leave their marks at YSU."

Baseball

The YSU baseball team extended its losing streak to four games over the weekend as the Penguins dropped a doubleheader at Wright State on Saturday by the scores of 7-0 and 12-1. YSU is now 13-17 on the year and 2-6 in the MCC.

In the first game, Wright State scored all of their runs in the third and fourth, knocking out YSU starter Ron Kitchen. Raiders starter Tony Ramsdeli went the distance, striking out two while giving up five hits.

In the second game, WSU scored in spurts once again, tallying four runs in the second, three runs in the fifth and five in the sixth. Matt Nurezyk sustained the loss for YSU while Darrell Back threw a shutout for the Raiders, allowing four hits and striking out five. Overall, the Penguins batted .146 (7-48) in the two games.

This week, YSU plays at home today against Dayton in a doubleheader starting at 1 p.m. On Wednesday, the Penguins go up against Akron in a rare night game beginning at 7 p.m. All games are at Pemberton Park.

Softball

The Lady Penguin softball team swept a doubleheader on Friday at Cleveland State, taking the first game, 3-0 and capturing the nightcap, 7-2.

In the opener, pitcher Kim Givens threw a three-hitter enroute to her fourth win of the season, the most for any Lady Penguin pitcher. Denise Roadman (5-6) took the loss for CSU.

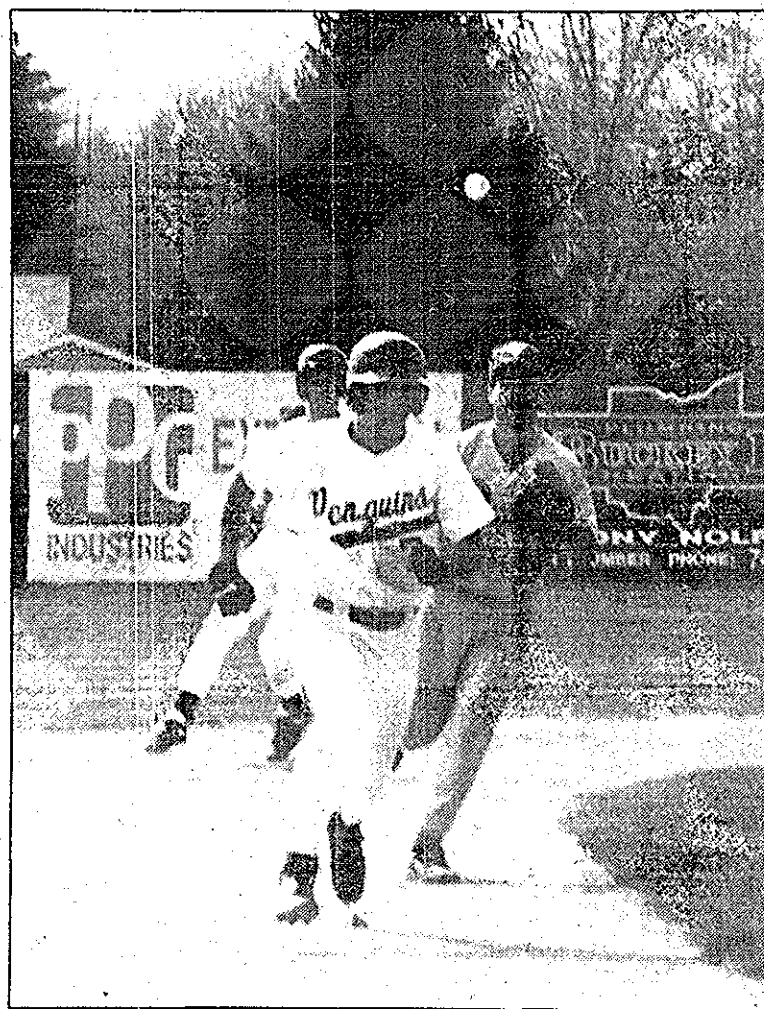

In the second game, Missy Medure starred for YSU, going two for three with two runs scored and two RBIs. Givens also scored twice, while going one for two. Lesley Molasky (3-3) picked up the win for YSU.

The Lady Pens are now 12-13 on the season. Their next home game will be Friday and Saturday when they host MCC rivals Eastern Illinois and Western Illinois at Mineral Ridge.

Caught in a rundown. Mark Salomone (number 7) is caught between second and third at a recent home game. The Penguins were swept over the weekend by Wright State, 7-0 and 12-1.

Tressel for the 21st annual Red-White Scrimmage at Stambaugh Stadium on May 6 at 8 p.m.

Schembechler is mostly remembered for his years at Michigan, where he won 12 Big Ten championships.

Russell had won three Division I-AA titles at Georgia Southern before retiring in 1989.

Other honorary coaches will include Ron Jaworski, Paul McFadden and Kirk Lowdermilk.
