Week attempts to raise awareness

By NANCY KERTIS
Jambar Managing Editor

Monday kicked off the beginning of National Collegiate Drug Awareness Week which runs until Friday, Feb. 16.

The week is designed to raise an awareness of scholarly as well as recreational alternatives to substance use and consequently prevent substance abuse on the YSU campus.

Special events planned for the week include a special "Graffiti Board" in Kilcawley Arcade that invites the public to respond to the question, "How would you solve the drug problem." That will remain up all day today.

A coffin display designed to graphically illustrate unchecked drug use will be on display Thursday and Friday in Kilcawley's Second floor arcade.

Other special events include:

- Scavenger Hunt starting at noon today in Kilcawley Art Gallery. Cash prizes will be awarded to top finishers.

- Health fair from 11 a.m.-1 p.m. Wednesday in Kilcawley Arcade. Representatives from drug and alcohol treatment services will be on hand to hand out information and answer questions.

Tuning in: As part of Awareness Week, members of "Dementia" lip-synch to music during a contest.

Lecture examines problems for women in black society

By KRISTINE HARRINGTON
Jambar Assistant News Editor

Low self-esteem on the part of black women is the major cause of their position in society, said the executive director of the Black Think Tank of San Francisco.

Dr. Julia Hare said, "Have you forgotten that we built the pyramids? I sometimes wonder how we went from the pyramids to the projects."

Hare spoke Friday night in the Kilcawley Center Chestnut room to an audience that was primarily composed of black women. The topic of Hare's presentation was "Crisis in the Lives of African-American Females and Coping Strategies."

She said that black women have never given themselves credit. "Bad or good we have to take credit for it," Hare said. She said that if society refuses to place black women on a pedestal, they have to put themselves there.

Hare talked about the important roles of black women during slavery and during the civil rights riots of the sixties. She reassured her audience and said, "Is it not right that black women have always coped?"

Domestic violence and disruption, according to Hare, are serious problems in black society. She said that a high incarceration rate among black men has caused a shortage of men in the black culture and has left many black women to raise families alone.

As a result, Hare said that the society has lost control of its children. She said that black children are running the streets and that action must be taken. Hare said that if something is not done, "We will have a generation of crazies or dead people."

She continued and said that black men and women are fighting against each other for jobs and that successful black women are intimidating to black men. Hare also said that successful black men are starting to marry non-black women.

Hare said that the black society has to band together and try to solve their problems. She said, "The one thing I would like to see us become is united."

Valentine's Day is more than chocolate, lace hearts

YSU — "Will you be my valentine?" Those are words many hope to hear on Valentine's Day, Feb. 14. Others hope to receive at least a box of candy or a dozen roses.

But according to YSU's Dr. Nancy White, psychology, Valentine's Day should be more than counting the number of pounds of chocolate a loved one sends you.

"Valentine's Day should be used as an opportunity to re-affirm the couple's commitment," said White, who teaches a human sexuality class at YSU. But, White admits, couples usually do not use Valentine's Day for this purpose.

"There's so much commercial hype that I don't think people really sit down and think about how much their loved one means to them," said White.

While Valentine's Day remains quite popular with many Americans, White said the day is most popular among youths and young adults.

"Giving gifts on Valentine's Day is something you will see of younger people rather than something you would see among people over 30 years old," said White. "It's a phenomenon that is specific to the young."

White said couples should not wait for Valentine's Day to express their love for each other, despite the fact that companies are counting on individuals to believe that they must buy their loved ones something special.

"Valentine's Day is no different than any other day of the year," said White.

She also said that individuals should not hunt for someone to fall in love with; rather, let love occur on its own.

"Most of us walk around with a vague notion of our ideal person to fall in love with. When you meet that person who matches that image, then it's love at first sight," said White. "Then you find out that the guy's not right for you, because the fantasy does not have much to do with reality."

"Real love, whatever that is, is a process that happens over time. It can't happen overnight and be enduring as we would like it to be the way it's in the soap operas," said White.

White said real love includes trust, respect and caring.

"It also entails intimacy, and I don't mean sexual, but intimacy in a more general sense, where you trust this person with your innermost feelings and secrets, and know that that person will never betray you," said White.

White said she does not believe in love at first sight. "Infatuation is actually finding the person who matches your fantasy of the ideal person," said White. "Infatuation is fast. You flirt around for weeks, months, but if problems exist with honesty, trust, or if jealousy shows its ugly head, then you don't have true love."

Official from Ohio Department of Health to visit YSU

YSU — An official from the Ohio Department of Health will visit YSU on Wednesday, Feb. 14, to observe dental hygiene students applying dental sealants to area second and sixth graders.

Dr. Isable Garcia, dental research and evaluation administrator with the state health department, will observe the program from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. in the Dental Hygiene Clinic, Room 1114, Cushman Hall.

The program was developed by the Mahoning County Dental Health Task Force and the Youngstown Health Department. It is funded by a $25,000 grant from the state health department and $6,000 from the United Way.

A dental sealant is a safe, plastic coating that keeps plaque-causing bacteria out of crevices in back teeth, where a toothbrush or dental floss cannot reach.

The painless three-step application process consists of cleaning teeth applying a special cleansing liquid, and painting on the seal.

Participating schools include Martin Luther King Jr., Harrison, Jefferson and Mary Haddow elementary schools in Youngstown and Jackson-Milton Elementary School.

First, parents fill out consent and dental history forms. Dr. Karl Soller, a member of the Dental Health Task Force, then visits schools and examines each child for tooth decay or other dental problems. He prescribes either sealants or other dental care.

Parents receive the results of their children's examinations and assistance with specific problems their children may have. Pupils view a videotape about the dental sealant application process.

At YSU, senior dental hygiene students apply sealants. Supervising the process are Soller and Chris Chamberlain, a registered dental hygienist with the Mahoning-Shenango Area Health Education Network and program coordinator.

Dental hygienists from the Tri-County Dental Hygiene Association also have volunteered to assist in the program.

Second and sixth graders were selected for the development of their six-year and 12-year molars. Schools with a preponderance of children from low-income families also were targeted.

"We want to get kids who may not otherwise receive dental care," said Alice D. Betz, allied health, who is coordinating the University's role in the program.

For more information about the dental sealants program, contact Betz at 742-3328 or 742-3342.

Fast-food breakfasts may do more harm than good

By RICK GEORGE
Jambar Editor

It's twenty minutes before you start work and there is no time to fix a well-balanced breakfast. There is only one option left, breakfast from a fast-food restaurant.

The egg and sausage muffin ends the hunger, but did it do the job?

According to Jean Hassell, home economics, frequent stops for a breakfast at a fast food restaurant may do a person harm in the future.

"Most fast food places have breakfasts that are high in saturated fat, cholesterol, sodium and are calorie dense," said Hassell. "It really depends on how often you eat there."

Hassell said most fast food places serve breakfasts that are high in saturated fats, which are harmful for the cholesterol level. For example, she said one medium fried egg usually has about 6.9 grams of fat.

"That is a lot of fat compared to an egg that was not fried," said Hassell. "A medium egg that was poached, for example, has only 5.1 grams of fat."

Another type of food that is high in saturated fat is sausage. "It's a killer," said Hassell.

She said a substitute for sausage or bacon that is leaner in saturated fat is Canadian bacon.

"Even a blueberry muffin has a high amount of saturated fat compared to a French roll," said Hassell.

She said the amount of fat varies on the recipe, but it is estimated that a homemade blueberry muffin has 3.7 grams of fat while a French dinner roll has only .4 grams.

Hassell said that it is hard to determine the actual saturated fat content in all restaurant food because of the different ways the food is prepared.

"Each place may have a different way of preparing the food," she said. "Some may use more butter than others. You really have to know what you are talking about."

"It probably will not hurt you if you only get a breakfast once a month or even once a week," Hassell said. "But if you eat there every morning then there may possibly be problems in the future."

She said some places have tried to combat the high fat and calorie problem by providing other alternatives.

"Some have English muffins and pita pockets," said Hassell, who is in charge of National Nutrition Month in March. "The pita bread has carbohydrates and less fat. But, if there is sausage and cheese on either, the saturated fat and calorie content will be higher. It comes down to what is in the sandwich or muffin."

"Cereals would be healthy," she said. "Or possibly a nutritional drink. I realize they are in the business of serving food fast, but a drink could work."

Government recommends addendum to format at WUGS

By KRISTINE HARRINGTON
Jambar Assistant News Editor

Student Government voted to recommend an addendum to the format of YSU's WUGS radio station yesterday.

WUGS is the University's radio station which operates under the speech communication and theatre departments. The station is heard only in specific areas of Kilcawley Center and serves as a resource for students learning about radio station operations.

Secretary of Minority Affairs Mohan Subramanian submitted the WUGS Format Addendum to Student Government for approval. From there the addendum will go on to Dick James, the professor in charge of WUGS.

The addendum calls for the addition of Urban Contemporary Music to the station format. The kinds of music that are considered Urban Contemporary are R&B, Soul, Dance and Rap.

Subramanian said that this addition is necessary because there are no radio stations in the area with an Urban Contemporary format.

He said, "There's a viable market out there that is not being catered to."

Subramanian said that two WUGS dj's approached him about the addendum after requests at the rate of 12-15 an hour asking that Urban Contemporary music be played.

These dj's also submitted petitions to Student Government with the signatures of over 200 students who are in favor of the format change.

President Brian Fry said, "I can't see why it shouldn't be adjusted a few hours a week to appeal to more students."

Fry also said that the format change will not include Rap music that contains vulgar or violent lyrics. He said, "We want it to appeal to the mass of the student body."

WUGS currently plays Album Oriented Rock, a format that, according to Subramanian, does not appeal to a large number of students.

The new format would only take up 3-4 hours of airtime per week.

Police report details suspected arson

By GARY HALL
Jambar News Editor

A suspected arson causing $600 in damages was the subject of a report filed at the YSU Police Station.

At 3:05 a.m. on Saturday, Feb. 10, an officer on patrol observed a dumpster in the south-east corner of the FI parking lot on Rayen Avenue on fire, the report said.

The officer contacted radio and advised that the Youngstown Fire Department be called. However, prior to their arrival, the flames grew and began to burn a hole in an exterior loading dock roof.

When the fire department did arrive, at 3:09 a.m., they requested that the dumpster be moved away from the dock area so they could open it and put out some of the hot spots, the report said.

Because of the steady rain fall, numerous checks of the area by campus officers and the spontaneity of the fire, suggests evidence that the fire was intentionally set, the report said.

A check of the area for additional evidence produced negative results.

Mockery made of condom week

From Feb. 14-21, Ohio will observe National Condom Week as announced by Governor Richard Celeste.

The week was established in order to call attention to AIDS prevention.

This is a positive step in trying to stop the spread of AIDS. However, a brochure published by the Ohio Department of Health and sent to Ohio communities seemed to send a dangerously "light-hearted" message about the issue.

The Feb. 10 Akron Beacon Journal reported that the brochure recommended that communities set up "vegetable stands where people can learn to put condoms on cucumbers." The brochure also advised a "water-filled condom toss," and selling Valentine's Day roses with condoms should be part of community activities during the week.

By recommending these carnival-like activities, some people may not get an important message that may save their lives.

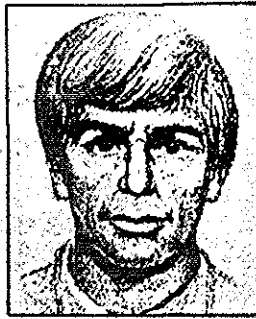

There is no educational value in a "water-filled condom toss." If Celeste is serious about stopping the spread of AIDS and promoting safe sex, there ought to be a more serious and effective approach to the matter.

The state could begin by sending educational materials to all school systems and colleges in Ohio or mail brochures to all the citizens.

National Condom Week was advised as an opportunity to educate people about a serious health threat, not to entertain.

Search continues for suspect

The police are looking for this man in possible connection with the murder of ten-year old Amy Mihaljevic in Bay Village, Ohio.

COMMENTARY

Kidnappers deserve the worst

Everyone knows that children are naive, weak, and defenseless compared to adults, but why then do some people insist on taking advantage of them?

When I say take advantage, I mean kidnapping.

It's hard to believe that there are sick and demented people in our society that would take an innocent child out of their familiar surroundings and away from their families to torture and brutally murder them.

The ten year old Bay Village girl, Amy Mihaljevic, whose body was just discovered this past Thursday, was abducted on Oct. 27 from a shopping mall.

The entire Bay Village community kept their hopes up for the safe return of Amy for over three months, but their rays of sunshine were clouded with despair, all because of some freak who wanted to possess something that didn't belong to him.

Educating children about how dangerous it is to be alone is always a good precaution, but obviously it is not a full proof solution to the child snatching problem. I guess there really isn't any full proof solution.

Even now I don't feel safe when I go some places by myself. I am aware of the fact that you can be abducted no matter what age or gender you may be — but children aren't.

Can you imagine the terror and fear that these young children must go through? What about the torture and beatings?

It makes me sick to my stomach when I think about it. As adults most of us have developed some sort of tolerance level for pain, but children haven't. They are so small and fragile.

Voice of the People

SAS empathizes with commentary

Dear Editor:

We at Substance Abuse Services (SAS) read Gary Hall's commentary in last Tuesday's Jambar with keen interest. We can feel with him the agonizing consequences of alcohol abuse upon his friendship. Not only friends are affected; for others their loved ones and relatives are lost as a result of alcoholism and/or alcohol abuse. Count yourself lucky that your friend is, at least, still alive and might get help someday.

SAS is here on campus to answer questions like the ones you raised in your commentary. "Is it necessary to drink to extremes? To make your personality change? To make your friends walk away?" We would like to add to these questions "And make your loved ones lose you?"

Not many of us are aware of what constitutes alcoholism, and even less know what to do to help ourselves or someone else. That is why this service exists on campus—to help shed some light on these problems. At SAS we can provide an understanding of the difference between use and abuse of alcohol. We can tell you about the progressive route of alcoholism and chemical dependency in general. And most importantly, we can give anyone the first assistance he or she must have in order to deal with an alcohol or other drug problem.

Suffice it to say that everyone must understand that alcoholism can make a person ill even

My stupidest interview ever

What is a Valentine's Day without an interview with Cupid, right?

That's what I figured, too. So I set out to find Cupid himself. But seeing it was Valentine's Day, he was too busy for an interview. So his press agent asked if I would mind interviewing Cupid's twin brother Stupid.

I said, yes, though I must admit I didn't know he had a twin brother named Stupid.

The first question I asked was why no one ever heard of Stupid.

"My brother Cupid doesn't really want anyone to know," said Stupid. "I bet Cupid's press agent is new and Cupid doesn't even know about this interview. I think his press agent is about to get fired."

Tell me, Stupid, do you have a job like your brother?

"Oh, yeah. I'm his little helper. Of course my romances don't always work out like his do. He's responsible for Ron and Nancy, Tammy and Jim, and even George and Barbara.

"Now I'm responsible for the stupid ones. Like Sonny and Cher, Sean and Madonna, and Rocky and Bullwinkle. Now that's one I'm still in trouble for. Not too many people knew about Rocky and Bullwinkle. But, let me tell you, Cupid is still hot about that one. I will admit I made a mistake. I'll be the first to admit it."

"What can I say, I'm a bad shot with the arrow of love. My brother Cupid is the greatest. But nine out of ten of my love matches end.

"I don't really think I should be doing this interview. I'm going to have to end this, but let me leave your readers with one thing. Be careful when it comes to love. Sure, maybe you'll get lucky and get shot by Cupid's arrow, but then again, you might get shot by my arrow.

"Be careful!"

GEORGE WILL / WASHINGTON POST

Celebration should not include statue

An equestrian statue stands high on Connecticut Avenue, facing south toward the White House which the man on horseback coveted, and beyond toward the Potomac which, had he not been unhorsed by the President he despised, might today be an international boundary. With Eastern Europeans putting away stupid statues of disagreeable people, let us celebrate Lincoln's birthday by banishing this statue of his tormentor: Gen. George B. McClellan.

Just kidding. Constantly rearranging the public furniture, shuffling public symbols in and out of favor, is a disagreeable European habit, a reflection of ideological fads and political immaturity. In America, surely, we know better than to be so foolish. We should not, for example, send to society's attic the bust of John Foster Dulles that today adorns the airport that — for now — bears his name.

Talk about an untimely idea: Victory in the Cold War is coinciding with a proposal to repeal on honor accorded to a man who insisted there was no substitute for victory. Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas is among those urging that Washington's Dulles Airport be renamed for Dwight D. Eisenhower, who was born in Texas 100 years ago this year but who spent his formative years in Kansas.

John Foster Dulles' grandfather was President Benjamin Harrison's secretary of state. His uncle was Robert Lansing, Woodrow Wilson's secretary of state. If Taft rather than Eisenhower had won the presidency in 1952, Dulles still would have become secretary of state.

He had prepared all his life for that office. He had served Roosevelt and Truman, had helped lift a reluctant Republican Party up from isolationism by supporting the Marshall Plan and NATO, had insisted that the word "justice" be as prominent as "peace" in the U.N. Charter.

His preeminence was particularly impressive because it owed nothing to his personality. Stephen Ambrose, Eisenhower's biographer, says that aside from Eisenhower almost everyone found Dulles unbearably pompous and dull — "dull, duller, Dulles," was the jape. Churchill deliberately lipped Dulles' name and when told that Allen Dulles was to head the CIA he said, "They tell me that there is another Dullith. Is that possible?"

But Dulles' starchy personality was suited to implementation of the policies that came from the carefully amiable, always guileful man for whom he worked. "The Truth," wrote Ambrose, "was that Eisenhower, not Dulles, made the policy, as anyone who knew anything about the inner workings of the Eisenhower administration realized." Eisenhower shrewdly used Dulles as a lightning rod to draw away the hostility that vigorous prosecution of the Cold War generated among much of the intelligensia.

Dulles, like Eisenhower, only more so, was despised by much of the chattering class. Dulles' sin was his "moralistic" vision of the Cold War, and of the evil empire responsible for it. But Eisenhower fully shares Dulles' belief that no real peace would be possible until the Soviet system changed internally.

One reason the 1980s ended so well for the West is that they began with the election of a President who joined the Republican Party when Dulles was helping set the tone of it. Ronald Reagan remoralized the Cold War after the demoralization called detente — which coincided in the 1970s with unprecedented Soviet aggressiveness. Re-moralizing the Cold War was necessary for re-summoning the stamina for winning it.

America was never more American than in the 1950s when America was at the wheel of the world and was sure it was right, and was. By all means rename something for Eisenhower, the man who embodied the Fifties. Rename something as big as he was, something as broad as his inspiring grin that contrasted so with Dulles' grimness. Rename Kansas. Call it with Midwestern informality: Ike.

But leave Dulles in peace and in his place of honor.

For those of you who have broken any bone in your body before, you know the amount of pain involved, and it isn't a pleasant feeling.

But it isn't just broken bones these unlucky children face. Most of them are sexually assaulted, stabbed with sharp objects, and some are deprived of food, water and sleep.

Just once I would like to see someone found guilty of doing any of these things to a helpless child, and make that person suffer the way the child did.

This way a person could feel the hell and torment others suffer through when tragedies such as these occur.

I'm sure some won't agree with my opinion, and that's okay, but if one of these things happened to you or someone you love, you would probably change your mind. Revenge would probably become the overwhelming feeling in your heart and mind.

Students at two more campuses blast quality of education

By The College Press Service

University of Rhode Island students, tired of overcrowded classes and what they call the declining quality of education, barged into a faculty meeting Jan. 26 to demand a response to their complaints from President Edward Eddy.

In the latest in an erratic series of protests of "quality of life" issues at various campuses nationwide, URI students complained they could not get into certain courses despite paying for them with higher tuition rates.

Some said they will have to enroll for an extra semester to complete the courses they need to graduate.

Several school laboratories and programs have been shut down because the school has cut back on student jobs. Students say they need those jobs for money and practical training.

"A lot of students are very angry," said Amy Lehrman, vice president of the student government. "Students aren't getting classes they need or want. They get four classes instead of five, and they can't graduate on time."

Student complaints about the quality of campus services they paid for were heard elsewhere, too.

At Kansas State University in Manhattan, about 300 students took part in a 24-hour sit-in that ended Jan. 26 to protest the condition of the library.

Demonstrators said they hoped to convince the state legislature, KSU's alumni association and the state Board of Regents to spend $19 million to expand and improve the library, which students say is too small to seat everyone or give them full access to information. Since the start of the school year, students at Clarkson and Syracuse universities, the University of South Carolina—Columbia, Marygrove College in Detroit and Paine College in Georgia, among others, also have protested "quality" issues like housing, the balance between professor research and teaching, their teachers' qualifications and the availability of courses.

Lack of professors at Rhode Island have also been part of the decline in the quality of education.

Animation isn't just for kids anymore, says cartoonist

By DIANE TUCHEK
Staff Reporter

Looking for an easy way to make some money? Make an animated film. All you need are a few good cartoonists, some odd voices and a small orchestra. It's cheap, it's easy, it's for kids, and it's probably all profit.

Not so, says cartoonist Bob Barko, president of YSU's new Cartoon Club. "Animation isn't just for kids anymore. Take Who Framed Roger Rabbit? for example. It's an expensive medium. Just one minute of film requires 1140 frames of animation."

Producing 68,000 frames to make a one-hour film is an involved process requiring collaboration of a host of talents and disciplines—writers, editors, scientists, linguists, historians, musicians, artists, film editors and business advisors, to name a few.

Authorities in different disciplines are essential to producing a script because all facts and language must be affirmed. Barko says, "A good English background is needed for cartooning, as well as others like science and history."

Once the script is ready, the soundtrack is developed, and only after that is completed does the drawing begin.

If animated films sound too involved, maybe you could try making comic books—they're easier, and artists can do everything without paper people's help.

Wrong again. Comic books also begin with an idea and a script before the artists take over. "Most major comic books have collaboration. It's the exception for someone to do all the work themselves," Barko says. "One of the most important authorities in the comic book field is the editor, who checks the spelling, grammar and the flow of the script."

Ideas are the heart of a cartoon. "Ideas are sparked by things that happen around me. A lot just pop out of the air," says Barko. His brainchild, Ohio

Force, a full-length, military story, resulted from combining his childhood passion for playing "army" and a creative writing assignment in an English class. "I've been working on it for nine years, changing the characters and improving the artwork," Barko says proudly, displaying his brightly-colored, carefully-drawn work. "My characters are based on my friends and myself. I have a copyright, but I haven't published it yet."

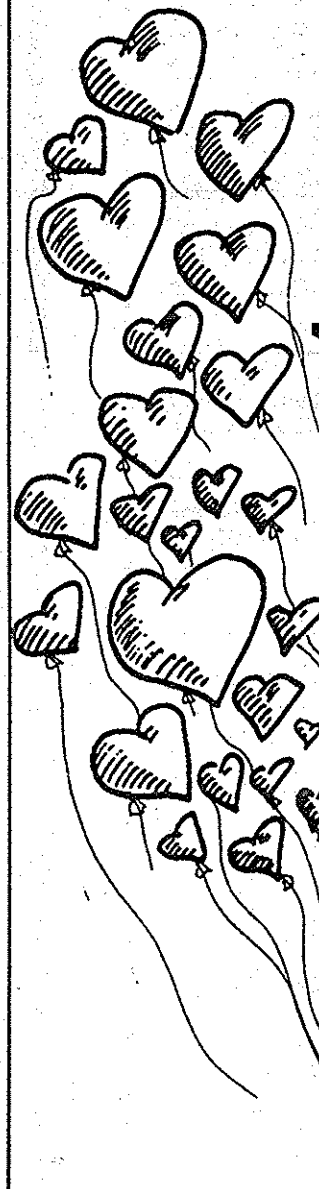

What if you have some ideas but can't draw too well?

"Most people are born with the ability to draw. If you draw geometric shapes, you can learn to draw cartoons. All you need are patience and will," says

CPS reports wrongful information in computer virus story

By RICK GEORGE
Jambar Editor

It was reported in the Friday, Feb. 8 edition of The Jambar by College Press Service that YSU had a "copycat" computer virus after a Cornell University student created a computer problem in Nov. 1988.

Lou Anshuetz, associate director of the computer center, said YSU did not have a virus during that time.

"We could not have had a virus because we were not connected with that system," said Anshuetz.

Anshuetz said YSU has never been connected with the Internet computer system, the system which the virus infected, so something of that magnitude could not have happened here.

According to Anshuetz, Internet has installed more security so another attempt to cause a virus does not succeed.

For the past year, YSU has been connected to the Bitnet computer system.

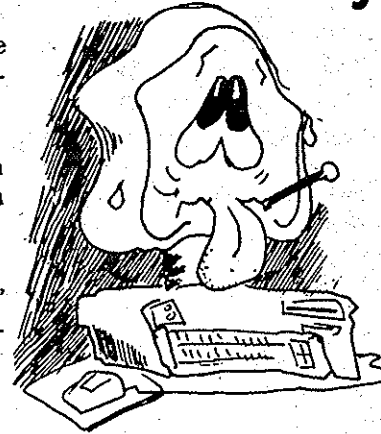

The release reported that Robert Morris broke into the Internet computer system to try and write a national program. Eventually, the "worm" forced 6,000 college computers to be shut down.

The release said Morris is the first to be convicted under the new federal Computer Abuse and Fraud Act that was invoked in 1986.

Morris could face a maximum sentence of five years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

Anshuetz said Morris' "worm" would have caused a major problem if it did infect the computers at YSU.

Cartoon

Barko. "Look at this table," he says, pointing out the simple geometric shapes in the Kilcawley Pub table. "It has a square top, a cylinder pedestal and a circular base.

"Look at Mickey Mouse," he says, penciling a quick drawing. "His face is made up of circles. Everything in life is based on shapes, and cartoonists keep them as simple as possible."

Maybe by now you've decided animation and comic books are too complicated, but you still like cartooning. There are other angles.

"There's the merchandising aspect of cartooning—tee-shirts and jackets—silkscreening. It's a good way to advertise. Magazines and textbooks use cartoons, and newspapers print comic strips and political cartoons," Barko says enthusiastically. "People are pulled into cartooning from many fields. The Discover Program in Career Services lists 15 to 20 fields that can contribute to cartooning."

Students majoring in some of those fields—art, business, education, English, advertising, and communications, have joined the Cartoon Club, sharing their interest or learning how to use their talents. Some want to create animated films or cartoons; some collect and trade comic books; and some are just cartooning fans.

Ellington to be honored by YSU Jazz Ensemble

YSU — YSU's Jazz Ensemble will pay tribute to Duke Ellington, a master of American jazz, during a free concert at 8 p.m. Monday, Feb. 19, in the Chestnut Room of Kilcawley Center.

Director Anthony S. Leonardi, music, said the tribute will feature works composed between 1930 and 1942, the period many historians consider to be Ellington's most fertile.

The extraordinary mass of music which Ellington composed over such an extended period of time (over fifty years of creativity) included jazz miniatures, suites, sacred music as well as music for film, ballet and symphony orchestra. Some of the selections for this performance will include "Rockin' in Rhythm," "Cottontail," "In a Sentimental Mood," "Sophisticated Lady," "Mood Indigo," and his theme song, "Take the 'A' Train."

Some pieces will be exact recreations of Ellington's arrangements, including the original instrumentation and solos by such Ellington sidemen as Cootie Williams, Joe "Tricky Sam" Nanton, Harry Carney, Cat Anderson, Johnny Hodges, Ben Webster and Jimmy Blanton.

While a complete list of Ellington's works is not available, it is estimated that he composed 1,500 to 3,000 compositions.

For years, however, Ellington's works never received detailed study or critical acclaim, first, because jazz itself was the object of prejudice and only lightweight analysis and, second, because the vast quantity of works composed by Ellington deterred musical scholars.

His writing included short pop and jazz pieces, sacred works and extended compositions.

REVIEW

Pulitzer Prize winning play makes excellent movie

By LEO J. FUCHS
Staff Reporter

When you make a film that's based on a Pulitzer Prize-winning play, you've got a heck of an act to follow. The makers of Driving Miss Daisy have done a fine job, and created a movie that meets viewer expectations.

The film opens in Georgia in 1948, when Miss Daisy Werthan (Jessica Tandy), a seventy-ish, well-to-do widow, suddenly discovers that her days of driving a car are behind her. Her son Boolie (Dan Aykroyd) hires her a chauffeur named Hoke (Morgan Freeman), whose presence she fiercely objects to. She doesn't want to depend on someone else in order to get around, nor does she want to appear as if she's flaunting her wealth.

The film traces, in episodic fashion, the relationship between Miss Daisy and Hoke, and how it develops over a period of twenty-plus years. As they go through birthday parties and funerals, through backwoods Alabama and high-society Atlanta, the wealthy Jewish woman and the black man of modest means get to know each other, and a few other things in the process.

This film is extremely well-written, and the outstanding cast makes the most of it. Jessica Tandy, the stage veteran who's recently starred in the movie Cocoon and the TV-movie Foxfire, makes a forceful yet vulnerable Miss Daisy, effectively showing the character's good and bad points. She goes from feisty independence to reluctant dependence, and pulls us right along with her.

Her strong performance is matched by Morgan Freeman as Hoke. Freeman, who received critical acclaim and an Oscar nomination for his role as a vicious pimp in Street Smart a few years ago, shows his range as the gentle but proud chauffeur. Hoke is a man who has seen many hardships and will no doubt see many more, but he manages to make the best of things with his wit and resourcefulness. Freeman plays the part perfectly.

Rounding out the principal cast is Dan Aykroyd as Boolie, Miss Daisy's son and Hoke's employer. Though he might seem like a gimmicky casting choice, Aykroyd does his best work since Saturday Night Live, though of a very different kind. He's very good as Boolie, a man who must make some difficult decisions regarding the future of both his mother and the family factory.

These actors do good work with the excellent screenplay by Alfred Uhry, who adapted his play into this film. Uhry has created memorable characters, and given them words that are funny, poignant and believable. And while the situations that they face examines the bigotry found in society and themselves, the film never gets preachy or contrived. Well, almost never.

The one time it does is the film's only flaw. It comes near the end of the movie, when Miss Daisy attends a dinner in honor of Martin Luther King Jr. It's a significant development, because it involved the three main characters and sheds some light on all of them.

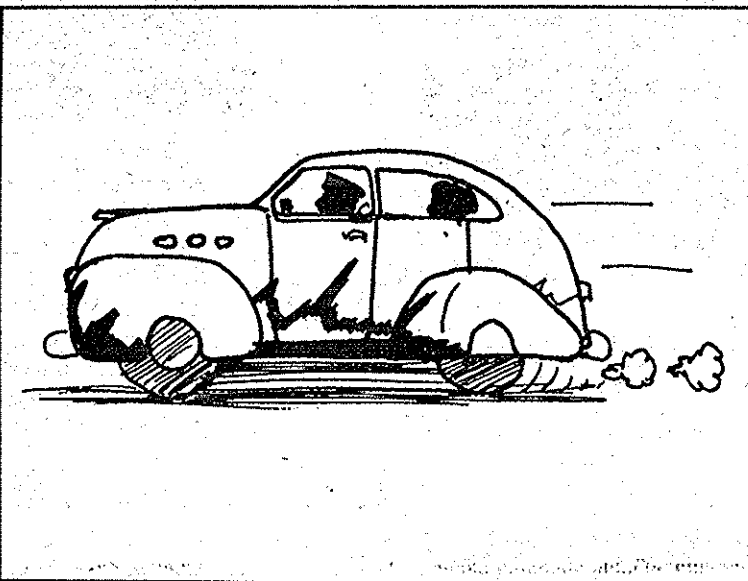

The problem comes when an excerpt of one of King's speeches is read from off-screen, while some action plays out on-screen. While the speech offers important ideas, the inclusion of it here is about as subtle as an anvil to the head. Any message that Uhry wanted to get across has already been conveyed through the words and actions of his characters. This speech is not only out of place here, but is also an insult to the audience's intelligence, implying that we needed some things explained.

Fortunately, this is a brief part of the film, and it doesn't take away from the enjoyment of the rest of it. Without this sequence, however, the screenplay and the movie would be near-perfect. Still, Uhry deserves credit for most of the success of this film.

Driving Miss Daisy has already been chosen as the best film of 1989 by the National Board of Review, and should certainly receive many more honors. Tandy, Freeman, Aykroyd, director Bruce Beresford, and especially Uhry have all done excellent work here. They've come together to create memorable characters and a very good film, accomplishments that are all too rare.

PAC continues to sponsor afternoon laughs at the Pub

By LIZ BOBECK
Special to The Jambar

The Comedy Store continues! At noon on Wednesday, Feb. 21, the Program and Activities Council will present comedian Tony Powell in the Kilcawley Center Pub.

Powell is in a class by himself. His refreshing, narrative approach to comedy grabs an audience's attention much like his idol, Bill Cosby. Tony's engaging, affable personality on stage belies his tough Brooklyn upbringing. He is best known for his impersonations of Eddie Murphy, Richard Pryor and Bill Cosby.

Powell is a regular at both Dangerfields and Catch a Rising Star nightclubs in New York City. He has performed on "Showtime at the Apollo" and "Comedy Tonight." He was also the recipient of the 1987 Henny Youngman Award for the most promising comedian. Quite a list for someone often referred to as "relatively new to the comedy scene."

Powell has performed at NYU and Columbia with YSU being his first stop on his Ohio tour.

Powell was spotted by PAC members at the National Association for Campus Activities Great Lakes Regional Conference held in Cleveland, where five states were represented by over 5000 college students.

Penguins lose to Panthers

By TIM LEONARD
Staff Reporter

Considering they shot a lousy 29 percent from the floor, it's amazing the Penguins were in the basketball game until the end.

But the Penguins suffered their sixteenth loss of the season with a 63-57 loss to Wisconsin/Milwaukee at Beeghly Center last night.

The Penguins (6-17) missed their first 14 shots from the field while falling behind 8-1. YSU's first basket from the field came with 14:09 left in the first half on an Aundra Brown 15-footer. Brown followed that basket with a three-point field goal to make it 8-6. Two points was the closest the Penguins could get during the first half.

The Panthers' Head Coach Steve Antrim said the early lead helped but it wasn't the key reason for their victory.

"I don't think the 8-1 lead affected us much," said Antrim, whose team is now 7-18. "If they had had the 8-1 lead then we would've been done, seeing that we were on the road, but with them at home it wasn't as difficult for them to overcome."

YSU's only lead of the game was after a Brown three-point field goal at the 2:36 mark to make it 51-50. It took the Panthers one minute to regain the lead on a Andy Ronan three point play for a 53-51 lead. The Penguins never regained the lead.

Ronan ended the game with 33 points, while connecting on 9-of-11 free throws in the last minute of the game. The 6-foot-5 Ronan finished the game shooting 15-of-17 from the free throw line. He also had a team-high 10 rebounds.

The Panthers' head coach cited Ronan and the Panthers' poise in the waning moments of the game as one of the keys to their victory.

"We had the poise to wait for Ronan to get into the offense," said Antrim. "We were very patient in our offense at the end. We moved it around until Ronan had a chance to work his way open."

The Penguins fired up 26 three-point attempts during the game while only hitting on five attempts, which equals out to 19 percent. The leading YSU shooter from three-point land was Brown, who hit 3-of-7.

The Penguins also shot 19-of-64 from the field (29 percent) while the Panthers didn't do much better 21-of-59 (35 percent). YSU hit 14-of-26 free throws compared to 18-of-21 for the Panthers.

"I think we are a better shooting team than what we showed tonight," said Stroia, whose Penguins were also outrebounded 48-40.

"I was surprised we were still in the ballgame down at the end," he said.

The Penguins were led by Reggie Kemp's 15 points and a game-high 13 rebounds, while Brown came off the bench to score 13. Tim Jackson added 12 points and nine rebounds.

The Panthers' center Randy Doss followed Ronan in the scoring column for the visitors with 12 points. He also had nine rebounds.

Prior to the Panthers' eight point lead at the :21 mark, the biggest led for the Panthers was 50-44 with 8:03 left in the game. YSU, however, recovered with a Lark basket, two Jackson free throws and Brown's three-point basket during the next five minutes as the Panthers failed to score during that time.

JOHN CHARIGNON/THE JAMBAR

Flying high: Tim Jackson soars to the hoop for two of his 12 points last night against the Panthers from the University of Wisconsin/Milwaukee. Jackson also had 9 rebounds as the Penguins went down 63-57.

DiGregorio tops all time record for wins in women's basketball by winning his 92

By DAVID LEE MORGAN, Jr.
Staff Reporter

Women's head basketball coach Ed DiGregorio became the all-time winningest coach in the school's history last night as the Penguins rallied from a 52-35 deficit with 12:00 minutes remaining to capture a thrilling 63-61 victory over the University of Niagara.

With the victory, DiGregorio surpasses former mentor Joyce Ramsey with 92 career wins.

Trailing 38-26 at halftime, the Penguins (14-10) used a bevy of players to help secure the win.

The Penguins had four players score in double figures on the night. Jenny Woodward, who had a team high 20 points in a loss to Canisius University the night before, once again led the Penguins with 19 points.

Margaret Somple and Jeanna Rex both canned 12 points apiece while freshman surprise Rachel Cowley tossed in 11.

After shooting a poor 9-26 from the floor in the first half, the Penguins shot 13-29 in the second half while holding Niagara (8-11) to just 8-34 in the second half for 23 percent.

Niagara shot a stunning 66 percent from 3-point range in the first half which lead to such a big halftime lead. Kim Kuhn canned 5 of 10 three pointers for Niagara en route to 24 points on the night.

The Penguins won the rebound battle by a huge 52-35 margin. Margaret Somple led YSU with 15 rebounds followed by Jenny Woodward's 10.

YSU returns to action Wednesday when they take on the Cleveland State Vikings.
