Annual Fund Director Appointed

YSU - Cheryl Staib, former director of alumni relations at Heidelberg College in Tiffin has been named director of the Annual Fund at YSU.

At Heidelberg, where she served for seven years, she was involved in alumni fund-raising and special events. During that time she raised the percentage of alumni members contributing to Heidelberg from 35 percent to 47 percent.

Greater emphasis is being placed on fund raising at YSU under the leadership of President Leslie Cochran. Staib will oversee YSU's Annual Fund, the University's key fund-raising effort, under the direction of Vern Snyder, executive director of the University Development Office.

"The Annual Fund represents the [YSU] Foundation for all future fund-raising by YSU," Snyder said. "Cheryl will provide the creativity and leadership needed to build a strong Annual Fund as well as heighten the awareness for the needs of the University."

Staib also will work with members of YSU's Development Council, which include representatives from the Development Office, Athletics Office, the Alumni Association, the YSU Foundation, WYSU-FM and McDonough Museum of Art.

"The urban setting puts YSU in a unique position for fund raising. Our location allows greater interaction with businesses and the community," Staib said. "Also, over two-thirds of our 48,000 alumni members are within 50 miles. So there's a lot of potential to increase our contact with them and increase their involvement in the support of YSU." Staib joined Heidelberg in 1986. Before that, she was an English teacher at Springboro High School in Springboro from 1985 to 1986.

She graduated cum laude from Heidelberg in 1985 with a bachelor's degree in English. In 1990, she earned a master's degree in education at Heidelberg. Her thesis project was an in-depth survey of alumni members.

Sessions Examine Phys Ed

Matthew Deutsch
Acting News Editor

Physical education teachers from around the state are on campus this week for the National Physical Education Conference. The event, yesterday and today in Kilcawley Center and Beegly Center, is sponsored by the Ohio Advisory Board.

Richard Walker, human performance and exercise science, said the event has been at YSU for the past three years.

One reason YSU was chosen is that many members of the University are on the board, including Dr. Barbara Wright, human performance and exercise science.

The conference is focusing on elementary physical education.

"A wide variety of movements will be studied," said Walker, "as well as sports and games and what's appropriate for certain age groups. The program is basically half presentation - half participation, which means the teachers are learning while being actively involved in what's going on."

Some of the areas from which teachers are coming for the event include Dayton, Howland, Springfield, Poland, Warren, New Wilmington and Kent. Participants can earn a one-hour graduate credit toward recertification.

The activities will continue from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. today.

Lecturer To Discuss Urban Issues

YSU - David Beach, editor of EcoCity Cleveland Journal and former environmental columnist for the Cleveland Edition, will speak at YSU at 7:30 p.m. on Oct. 14.

The lecture will be held in the Art Gallery of Kilcawley Center. It is being sponsored by Students for Peace and Students for a Healthier Planet. The Sierra Club, a national environmental club and The Mahoning Valley Greens, a local environmental club, are also sponsoring the lecture.

Beach will discuss how cities are interlocked with the environment around it. He will demonstrate how residents of cities such as Youngstown and Cleveland are part of what he calls a much larger picture - the Great Lakes watershed. He will emphasize that pollution does not stop at city limits.

The event is free and open to the public. For more information call Paul Davis at 744-2948.

New Organization To Feature Films This Fall

YSU - The YSU Cinematheque, in cooperation with the Student Activities Office and Student Government, will present Stanley Kubrick's classic film, A Clockwork Orange, at 8 tonight in the Chestnut Room of Kilcawley Center.

The film is free to YSU students with a current ID. The cost is $3 for the general public. Future films will be shown at the same time and location.

"A Clockwork Orange is one of the few perfect movies I have ever seen in my lifetime," said Rex Reed, film critic of the New York Sunday News.

The YSU Cinematheque is a new student organization whose goal is to provide the Youngstown-

Warren area with access to quality cinema that may not otherwise reach the area.

Beginning this fall, the Cinematheque will feature a minimum of two films per quarter.

Films scheduled include:

- Tonight, A Clockwork Orange.

- Thursday, Oct. 28, It Came

From Outer Space, in 3-D; and the Three Stooges' feature, If a Body Meets a Body.

- Saturday, Dec. 4, Manufacturing Consent: Noam Chomsky and the Media.

Other films to be offered, beginning in January, are Wings of Desire, International Journey of Animation, and Ann Arbor Film Festival.

Those wishing to be placed on the mailing list for future film should call the McDonough Museum of Art at 742-1400.

Kilcawley Center

Dr. Robert Ballard

The entire world was captivated in September 1985 by the news that the legendary ocean liner Titanic had been located at 13,000 feet in the Atlantic Ocean's icy waters east of Newfoundland.

Marine geologist, Robert Ballard, leader of the expedition that had discovered and photographed the sunken ship with the computer-controlled robot Argo, showed a fascinated public images of the great ship sitting upright, a gaping hole in its hull - an eerily peaceful monument to the hundreds who died there. Among the victims was Youngstown industrialist Col. George D. Wick whose wife, daughter and cousin survived the disaster.

Ballard is a tenured senior scientist in the Department of Ocean Engineering, and head of the Deep Submergence Laboratory at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution. He serves on the marine board of the National Academy of Sciences, the advisory board of the U.S. Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey, and the advisory board for the Living Seas Pavilion at Disney's EPCOT Center.

The lecture is free and open to the public. Seating is available on a first-come, first-served basis.

Guests may park in the Wick Avenue parking deck for a charge of $2.

Last Chance Today

For CBS Tour

Who said you "don't get something for nothing" and "nothing is for free?" Well maybe it is true under most circumstances, but the CBS College Tour is definitely free. Hours of free games and prizes are being awarded to everyone who stops by the booths.

Most of the campus community attended the event yesterday, but there is still hope for those of you who missed the first day of festivities. The CBS College Tour is still at YSU. That's right - you have one day left to have a great time before the tour travels to another university.

Sure, you could say to yourself today is Friday and all I want to do is get home and start my weekend, but you will be sure to miss the opportunity of a lifetime.

It is not often that something of this caliber comes to YSU that offers something to everyone absolutely free. Take a chance. Make today an adventure and attend the CBS College Tour. The tour, which runs from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., is located in the Spring Street area next to Kilcawley Center.

U.S. And Somalia Relations

It has been said before, but it is worth repeating - the United States cannot afford to police the world.

First of all, it is not the U.S.'s job to be the eternal policeman of the world. It is true that the U.S. has always proclaimed itself to be dedicated to encouraging democracy, but democracy should be achieved in a non-violent manner.

The U.S. already has sent a number of military people to Somalia and nothing positive seems to have come from the action. Thus far President Clinton maintains that the U.S. went to Somalia only in an effort to stop massive starvation and corruption. Clinton also believes the United Nations has not handled the situation in Somalia well. It may be true that the U.N. has not done a satisfactory job of helping the people of Somalia.

Perhaps, Clinton was so upset with the situation that he believed it could be handled through the military. The result has placed soldiers' lives on the lines. This is something they are trained to do, but it is upsetting to see their lives risked for something the U.S. never should have been militarily involved with in the first place.

Many Americans are upset with the news reports they have received about the fate of our troops. For instance, the corpse of a U.S. soldier was dragged up and down the streets of Somalia and footage is being shown of a battered soldier being compelled by his captors to talk.

It all boils down to this - there are rumors that Clinton is going to send more U.S. military to Somalia. Let's hope Clinton has enough sense not to throw good after bad. It's time for the U.S. military to leave Somalia and figure out some other means to help the people there.

Student Comments On Somalia

Dear Editor,

It should come as no surprise that President Clinton is thinking about "staying the course" in Somalia, but it is distressing. Our president is also pushing hard for an agreement on N.A.F.T.A. The thought of it leaves me feeling a little queasy. One might surmise that the two topics are worlds apart, but they aren't.

The "mission" in Somalia is oil rights and, perhaps just as important, a redefined purpose for our military. True, we have fed huge numbers of refugees from the tribal fighting in Somalia, but now our military is merely another clan fighting for control of a bleak landscape covering a sea of oil. I believe this is wrong. Political realism does not encourage effective use of war. To win wars one must have the support of the citizenry. Although Americans might get behind the feeding of Somalia, I doubt many of us will have much stomach for squishing any uppity tribal types so a pro-business government of our choosing can be installed. (Remember Panama.)

My opposition to the N.A.F.T.A. package follows a similar thread. This agreement transfers a great deal of power from our government to multi-national corporations. These corps would like to operate in an environment free of political persuasions and trot out their talking heads, borrowed from corporate boardrooms and collegiate lecture halls, to explain in thirty second sound bites why we need N.A.F.T.A. It's a hard sell. Somewhere in the back of our minds lurk those voices of yesteryear saying that government must serve and protect the public. Multi-national corps don't have a hometown and aren't concerned with local economies, environmental degradation, or inequalities in distribution. Governments share these concerns with the governed. The big multi-nationals are concerned with the bottom line.

The "new world order" seems intent on downsizing government and letting big corporations assume the responsibilities once entrusted to government. The new world order wants all the protection a free nation can provide, and the fealty of that government, too. We are told loud and often that government is too big, too slow, and too inefficient. What they really mean is that our government has interests that aren't the same as big business.

This is supposed to be a government of the people, for the people, and by the people. If we allow multi-national corporations to direct the foreign and domestic policies of America the Beautiful then we must prepare ourselves for the hatred of the Third World while we descend to their economic level. I hope that we never grow accustomed to seeing our soldiers' bodies dragged through the dusty streets of some dump in the middle of nowhere for reasons that lean more toward the profits of corporations than the welfare of Americans.

The Elephant Man Comes To Town

Andrea Vagas
Entertainment Editor

"Most people believe that beauty is good, ugly is evil," said artist Chris Yambar, whose recent exhibition, Freakshow, will open at the Banana Rodeo Gallery Saturday. The exhibition portrays the lives and oddities of circus sideshow freaks.

Yambar said he has done about four years' research on sideshow freaks. His exhibition takes actual photographs of these freaks and transforms them into Andy Warhol-like paintings.

Yambar uses bright colors in his paintings. "I use colors that normally don't go together," he said. Orange meets green, purple mixes with turquoise and aqua joins black.

Yambar actually compared P.T. Barnum, "the greatest sideshow organizer in sideshow history," to Andy Warhol. He says that they both formed an event. "They both threw together oddities, staged events and then invited the world to see the show. And the world would pay for it."

The photographs Yambar based his paintings on were dated in the late 1800's. He found them in the books Human Oddities by Martin Monestier, Very Special People by Frederick Drimmer and from ReSearch, Freaks: We Who Are Not as Others.

Yambar cites vitamin deficiency, Down syndrome and scarlet fever as causes of these deformities.

Scarlet fever is the disease that Slim Jim (Milton Malone) suffered from. As a result of the disease, Slim Jim weighed a mere 96 to 97 pounds his entire life.

Slim Jim's figure is similar to those victims of the Nazi concentration camps. The colors red, black and white, which Yambar chose for this painting, represent the Nazi flag.

Next to this painting is a depiction of the Pinheads, or the Aztec Girls, Yambar's favorite painting. He likes it especially "because it's the most helpless and the most beautiful [of the paintings]. Something about their innocence. It is the most incredible quality they had. It isn't tainted. It doesn't have prejudice or fear."

One painting that may seem obscene to some is of a real hermaphrodite. This idea of nudity as obscenity comes from societal fears, Yambar said. "We feel the most terrifying thing is to see ourselves nude."

But many sideshow freaks weren't afraid of showing themselves to others. Yambar says they were happy - and rich. "Some of these freaks came from royalty. A lot of them made a serious amount of money."

General Tom Thumb, "perhaps the most famous dwarf in history," said Yambar, was a favorite among governesses. He and his friend P.T. Barnum would enter a room full of dignitaries, bow in their suit and hats and begin their show.

Tom Thumb was shorter than two feet and "the governesses would want to pick them up and hug them."

Other paintings Yambar created are of the Elephant Man, the Caterpillar Man, JoJo the Dog Boy, the Cyclops Baby, the Rubber Skin Man, Omi the Great, who has tattoos literally from head to toe, and the Parasite Woman, a shocking painting of a woman with "extra body parts."

A special evening opening of Freakshow will be this Saturday from 7:30 to midnight. The first 100 guests will receive a special trinket bag. Also, the cult film Freaks will accompany the exhibit. Admission is $1 per person and the show will run from Oct. 9 - Nov. 13.

Music Review

The Cure Remixes Tunes For Show

Joe DeMay
Assistant News Editor

The Cure just released a live album entitled Show, but when I mentioned that to a bunch of my friends who used to live for the next Cure album to come out, their responses ranged from the apathetic "So what, who cares?" to the violent "I don't give a flying fk, you stupid a!"

Now, aside from being ever-so-slightly offended by the latter comment, I wasn't very surprised that my hard core Cure friends had renounced their allegiance to the band they swore they would love forever.

Please note the use of the word "claimed" because, as much as they would hate to admit it, they probably all have their copy of Show stashed away where no one will catch a glimpse of it and think that, God forbid, they like a, gulp, well-known popular band.

Yes, as painful as it might be to admit, The Cure has become a big-time act joining the ranks of other "former" college/alternative bands such as U2 and R.E.M. However, even though liking these bands may not be as cool or cutting edge as it used to be when only you and a couple of weird kids, who were always rumored to be Satan worshippers because everything they owned was black, liked them; they are still making very good, very different (compared to the other crap on the radio) music.

This might not be entirely true of Show, because the material is, at its most recent, about one year old. However, it is a pretty decent showcase of both how far The Cure's sound has come since the days of Standing On The Beach, The Singles and how the band's live shows sound.

The material, mostly, is taken from the band's last two studio efforts, Disintegration and Wish. That right there is about the only criticism I can make about Show. I have to admit that I was happy to find that such driving, twisted, sinister songs from Wish such as "From the Edge of the Deep Green Sea," "Cut" and "End" were included in the mix.

Unfortunately, those were the only songs from Disintegration or Wish I cared about hearing again in this or any other form, with the possible exception of "Fascination Street," which was bumped from Show because of time limitations. It is, however, available on the CD maxi-single Sideshow.

Despite all of the heavy emphasis on their recent material, three songs from other Cure releases steal the show (a really bad pun, I know, but deal with it).

Everything sounds good and some of the cuts were great, but overall they [The Cure] could have picked better songs to include on a live recording.

"In-between Days" is a classic Cure song and definitely one of my all-time favorites. There's nothing blazingly different from the original on this cut, but it's nice to get a different and, most importantly, live version of this "oldie."

The song most bastardized from its original form is far and away Mixed Up's "Never Enough." Guitarist Porl Thompson and singer Robert Smith have reduced this song to a searing three chord punk anthem that blows the original out of the water. This is the way this song should stay forever. Find the murky, sounds-like-it-was-recorded-under-water original and burn it.

The jewel of the entire disc is The Cure's signature song, "Just Like Heaven." Again, nothing spectacularly new or different, but energy felt from hearing the live recording is enough to make you forget about the original forever.

I must admit Show is quite a nice collection of sonic fidelity reproduction which includes a few remarkable performances (says the reviewer in his most proper English accent). However, considering the plethora of stellar material from which the gentlemen had to choose, they ought to have achieved a higher degree of excellence. Translation: Everything sounds good and some of the cuts were great, but overall they could have picked better songs to include on a live recording. A good Tom Jones song would have been nice. Then again, maybe not.

Michael Jordan To Retire At 30

Kimberley Kerr
Acting Sports Editor

Wednesday, October 6, 1993, was a sad day for basketball fans around the world, when NBA superstar Michael Jordan announced his retirement from the NBA. Jordan, undeniably the greatest basketball player ever to play the game, said that he reached the pinnacle of his career and had nothing left to prove. At a press conference held at the Chicago Bull's training center Jordan said, "I have always stressed the fact that when I lose the sense of motivation and the sense to prove something as a basketball player, it's time to leave".

The announcement came as a surprise to fans, the media, and his teammates. The feeling of the basketball community were summed up best by Bull's owner Jerry Reisdorf when he called it "a bittersweet day". Jordan has mesmerized basketball fans, for the past nine years, with his exciting style of play. Most fans can not imagine the NBA season without the opportunity to see Michael Jordan regardless of the team they cheer for.

Bittersweet can also best describe Jordan's last year of his career. Jordan reportedly earned more than $50 million last year from his salary and endorsements. He guided his team to their third NBA championship, won his seventh straight scoring title, made the All NBA first team for the seventh straight time and made the All-Defense first team for the sixth straight year. However, he was also plagued by allegations of excessive gambling during the playoffs and then tragically lost his father, who was shot and killed on July 23. Jordan said that the death of his father was not the reason for his decision, however it did make him realize how easy life can be taken away and caused him to change his priorities.

Jordan appeared before the somber crowd relaxed, smiling, and confident. He spoke eloquently as he explained the reason for his decision to retire. He praised his teammates, coach, the owner of the Bulls, the companies whose products he endorses, friends, and his family for their support. Jordan, however, was critical of the media for their invasion into his personal life. "when I stepped on the basketball court, there wasn't anything left for me to prove to you. That's one of the reasons you guys stepped into my private life," he said.

Jordan said that he will spend his retirement relaxing, playing pickup basketball, enjoying time with his family and watching the grass grow. He said that he supports the Bulls and will attend some of their games. He also left the door open to "unretire" when he said that he would "never say never" in response to a question about a return to the NBA.

Michael Jordan's legacy to the NBA and basketball, in his words is "the tongue. No one can match that," he said. That tongue represents an era of basketball that has come to an end and will be sorely missed this basketball season.

Editor's Note:

To achieve all of your goals professionally and financially, by the age of 30, and be able to retire with a smile, is truly the American dream come true. Michael Jordan, the personification of basketball, realized that dream, on Wednesday. He gave us his best both on the court and off, and he deserves the opportunity to enjoy the privacy that we each take for granted.

Jordan has set a new standard for the game of basketball that will be hard to match, let alone surpass. As a role model he represents the best of the best. Although he will be greatly missed, most of us can now relate to the jingle in one of his commercials "I wanna be like Mike". The best of everything to you Michael Jordan, you've earned it!

Penguins Tackle Delaware State

Rocky Nittoli
Staff Reporter

In the Pros, the road to the Superbowl usually travels through Buffalo, Dallas or San Francisco. In division I college football, the road to the national championship has to go through Miami, Michigan, or Florida state. In I-AA, the road must go through Marshall and YSU.

Delaware State, on the verge of having an outstanding season, knows they must have a victory over YSU this week. A victory over YSU will give the Hornets the recognition they feel they deserve. A victory will also probably place the Hornets in the top 25 poll for the first time.

If you think the Penguins are going to underestimate Delaware State, you are greatly mistaken. Coach Tressel at his annual press conference has already stated that he feels Delaware State should already be in the top 25.

The Hornets head coach Bill Collick brings his team here to Youngstown with an impressive 3-1 record. Collick also sports a 56-22-0 record overall for a .718 percentage. Collick's team, which runs the deceptive wing T is led by quarterbacks Harrison Dixon and Erick Jones who will split time. The Hornets are also headed by Junior Phil Anderson, who Collick claims is the best back that he has ever coached.

For the YSU Penguins, who are also 3-1, this game also has some important implications. A win this week will be a large step towards a return trip to the playoffs. However, a loss could leave the Penguins Play-off picture at a sudden stand still.

This year's game also marks the ninth annual Hall of Fame game. The Penguins are 5-3 in the Hall of Fame games. Last year the Penguins topped Eastern Illinois University, 28-19. This year's game looks to be a much better contest.

Last year the Penguins beat up the Hornets 42-20 after Delaware State's Dakiel Short's opened the game with a 59-touchdown run. From there the Penguins rolled off 35 straight points enroute to the blow out. Statistically however, both teams were almost equal. YSU led in total yardage 346 to 290. Both teams had 18 first downs each and Delaware State led in passing 122-60, but Delaware State also had five turnovers to YSU's one.

YSU meets the Delaware State Hornets at 7 p.m. this Saturday at Stambaugh Stadium.

On a bright note for the Penguins, three players were named the one hour photo "Player of the game." for their outstanding performances against EKV last week.

Offensively, Tamron Smith was the MVP with 108 yards on 21 carries. Smith's career total is now 3,775 rushing yards. First Penguin ever to rush for 4,000 yards in a career. He is also the team's leading rusher this season with 342 yards on 59 carries.

Defensively, lineman David Burch earned the honors by registering six tackles for loss and one fumble recovery paved the way for the Penguins as EKV had only 9 first half points.

The specialist of the week is Andre Mason from Youngstown South High School. Mason graded out at 92 percent on special teams. This is his first honor of the season.

Congratulations to these players, and good luck to them, as well as Coach Tressel and the rest of the Penguins team as they look for a repeat performance Saturday.

Cross Country Does Well In Invitational

YSU - The YSU Men's and Women's Cross Country teams competed at the Notre Dame Invitational this past weekend against nationally ranked top ten teams such as Notre Dame, Penn State and West Virginia. The men's squad finished 14th out of the 32 team field. Notre Dame won the meet. YSU was led by conference champion and nationally ranked runner Keith Gorby, a senior who finished as the fifth individual in the race out of 230 runners, with a time of 25:31. Coach Gorby sees Keith and the team getting better each week. The other top five runners are very young and all improved a minute from last year's times. Rounding out the top seven are Australian Simon Lindsay (JR) who was 61st with a time of 26:51, Paul Gorby (SOPH) 98th at 27:15, Donn Craig (SOPH) 110th at 27:22, Joe Gorrell (SR) 133rd at 27:42, Clive Gavin 149th at 28:00 and Jack White 167th at 28:18.

This team has national and state talented runners who should be up front at the upcoming All Ohio meet this weekend and win the MCC, but injuries to our number two man, Jeremy Zarins, along with Craig and Gorby, must be overcome first before these goals can be attained. We must have our top five men in the 26:00 range to be national contender.

The Lady Penguins also had great performances at Notre Dame Invitational, going up against Alabama ranked fifth in the nation, and Notre Dame seventh. They ran together strongly as a team with only a minute between the first and fifth girls on the team. They finished 16th overall, beating are powerhouses Malone and Edinboro. Leading the ladies were freshmen Kim Rosenberger who was 69th overall with a time of 19:41. Not far behind was Anne Ralston (SOPH) 92nd at 20:02, and Nicole Kent (SR) 93rd at 20:03, whose time was a personal record. The fifth position which was weak early in the season, was filled and strengthened by Lisa Clegg, who has dropped her time by two minutes. Lisa was 101st with a time of 20:28. Rounding out the top seven were consistent Molly Minnick, 122nd who ran 21:15 and Vicki Billie, 129th who ran 23:47 in her first race. This girl's squad is the best in YSU history. This upcoming weekend, they are looking to improve on their tenth place finish at All Ohio meet last year. Both the men and women will be competing in Delaware, Ohio against 45 other Division I, II and III schools.

Keith Gorby

Athletes Get Opportunity To Complete Degree

Kimberley Kerr
Acting Sports Editor

Athletic programs across the country have been criticized for a long time the high number of athletes, who participate in revenue producing sports, and don't earn a degree. The problem has been addressed since 1984 by the formation of a consortium of college and universities.

The National Consortium for Academics and Sports provides athletes the opportunity to return to their college or university to complete their degree. Over 4,420 former athletes, who participated in revenue producing sports, have returned to school tuition free. More than 90 colleges currently participant in the consortium that is conducted by Northeastern University's Center for the study of Sport.

According to Richard E Lachick, director of the Northeastern Center, well over half of the participants in the program have earned their college degree. The program also benefits the communities surrounding the participating schools by requiring the athletes to participate in community service projects.

The success of the program has resulted in the start of similar program by the Continental Basketball Association (CBA), a farm league for the NBA. The CBA has gained the support of corporations and businesses to assist them in educating professional athletes. The consortium is currently working with the National Football League and the National Hockey League to provide support for their athletes who want to continue their education.

Macintosh Wants Its MTV

College Press Service

The latest media hype comes from the Macintosh computer people, who have launched a frenetic MTV campaign to convince college students that only nerds don't use a Macintosh Apple. The campaign, which may be the first non-mainstream advertising effort by a computer company, included five 30-second commercials with flashing titles, fast dissolves, and a hip spokesman who prods students to call an 800 number to find out the wonders of owning a Mac.

The commercial ended with the words, "A lot of stuff in life is complicated—at least your computer doesn't have to be. Macintosh—It's Easy. It's Powerful. What Else Is There?"

The flashy message was aired more than 400 times on many MTV programs. A Macintosh official who called the commercials "non-traditional and humorous," said this is the company's first direct response television effort.

POLICE BLOTTER

SEPT. 29

A vehicle was broken into, in the M-11 parking lot. The passenger side rear door window was smashed with an unknown object. After the vehicle's security alarm sounded, two suspects were seen fleeing the scene. Suspects were later apprehended and the owner reported that nothing was taken after the vehicle was broken into.

A student walking from DeBartlo Hall to the Kilcawley Student Center heard footsteps behind him as he passed the tar construction area and turned left towards the old rec entrance. The footsteps quickened and the student felt something cold and hard against the middle of the back of his head. He was sworn at by the suspect and told not to turn around. The suspect then demanded the victim's watch and money, before he ran up the stairs by the bookstore. The suspect used a small semi-automatic handgun. The victim stated that the subject had the hood of a sweatjacket pulled tight showing only eyes, nose, and mouth. His teeth appeared to be broken.

Officers were sent to Fedor Hall, on the second floor, in reference to a subject that was ill. The student became dizzy, passed out, and fell to the floor. The student stated that he was on high blood pressure medicine and had taken his medicine before coming to school. Although the student requested an ambulance, he refused to be transported to the hospital in the ambulance.

The Jambar is looking for students to write commentaries for fall quarter. If you are interested, contact Pia Brady at 742-1989.
