Penguins take fourth title

TRACIE KNIGHT
 EDITOR IN CHIEF

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. — The YSU football team brought home another championship title, but will have to wait until Feb. 7 to celebrate their success with the community. Planners call the event a "community celebration" that will include a speech from Coach Tressel and film footage of game highlights.

"We wanted to wait until the team members were back," said Paul McFadden, director of Athletic Development. "We wanted a Saturday where the entire community could get involved. The double-header basketball game Feb. 7 seemed to be the perfect venue." The football team will be on hand to sign autographs, a commemorative poster will be distributed to fans, the trophies and plaques will be displayed and vendors will sell team merchandise.

"We tried a parade in the past, and it was so cold that it inhibited the celebration. We wanted to tie the celebration in with a university-wide, community-wide event," said McFadden.

Even though the official celebration isn't until February, many fans made the pilgrimage to Chattanooga to support the team.

At the Chattanooga Marriot: Regis Chill, YSU fan from Girard, said he was the original owner of the now famous Pete on a Stick. Back in 1987 he tossed a penguin around the stands and never saw it again. Soon after, Pete on a Stick was born. Prancing around Chattanooga, Tenn., with a miniature version of the Pete on a Stick, he said, "It's great to be back after last year's heartbreak. I'd like to see them take it this year."

Kathy Jones of Howland made the trek with her husband Terry simply to "see 'em win." They predicted a score of 31-28.

Rich Wright of Austintown joked the game was a good excuse to "get away from the kids and the Christmas rush." His wife laughed at his remarks and shook her head in agreement. She said, "As a season ticket holder, it has been great to see the team rebuild. It is exciting to see them get here again to a championship game."

Tailgate: At tailgate festivities,

FANATICAL FRENZY: YSU fans lean over the balcony at the NCAA Division I-AA Championship game. The Penguins won the game 10 to 9 over the McNeese State Cowboys.

McNeese fans munched on Penguin Gumbo, screaming they needed more meat for their secret recipe. Many McNeese fans hung stuffed animal Pete the Penguins from fishing poles and even from their hats. One fan said, "You guys had your turn, today's all ours."

In the stands: John Gilcrest, who normally watches the Penguins through the window of his Stambaugh loge, got to see the championship game from a similar angle. He and his family arrived early to the game to find their seats way up high in W. Max Finley Stadium. He flew in from London to see his alma mater take the title. Gilcrest attended YSU in the late '60s.

"I think the football program is something the university can be very proud of and to play for Jim Tressel and the caliber of individual that he is, is a bonus," said Gilcrest.

Tim Aey, YSU alumnus, said he came to the game with his dad to watch the team play and win. There was no doubt in his eyes when he said, "There is so much excitement to be at the game. We were here in '94 and had to come back and see them do it again."

Pre-game jitters: Where is the band? Thirty minutes to game time and McNeese's band had dominated the field. YSU's band was nowhere to be seen. At 20 minutes to kickoff, the YSU Marching Pride stormed into the stadium. Director Steven Gage said the band's bus had gotten lost in Tennessee. They showed up in the nick of time to play some pre-game pep.

On the sidelines: The Cowboys' mascot looked like Woody from "Toy Story" and was no match for Pete the Penguin. The Cowboy mascot kept harassing YSU's cheerleaders by picking his nose and then trying to shake their hands. He was relentless. Then, he grabbed one of Krista Musolino's pompoms and ran back over to his side of the field. When she went to

High book prices baffle students

ANDY KORNBAU
 CONTRIBUTING WRITER

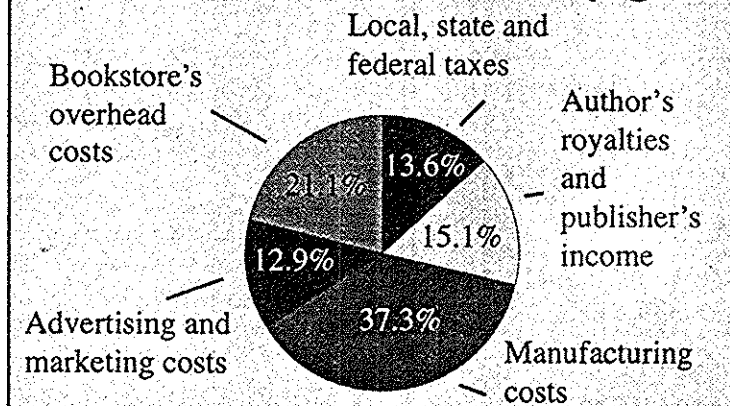

Visualize yourself in the bookstore looking at the prices of your books for next quarter. Now picture one of the friendly sales associates picking you up off the floor after your initial shock concerning book prices. But no one knows who's to blame.

"Book prices are way too high, but there's no where else to go," said Jared Weikart, MBA student. "I spend 6 percent to 10 percent of my income on books for the year."

Ben Bachler, sophomore, management, said, "I don't get my money's worth on a $60 book that I only open four times."

Responsibility for increasing book prices falls on bookstores, publishers and even the authors. All, however, refuse to take the blame. While each points the finger, students are forced to wonder who's at fault as they shell out the dollars.

The Association of American Publishers and the National Association of College Stores gathered statistics concerning how a book dollar is distributed. The averages they found are displayed in the pie chart above.

Many publishers determine the prices bookstores must offer. Others don't set a selling price. For these publishers, the bookstore adds a minimum standard mark-up.

MaagNet crashes due to power outage

TELA DURBIN
 ASSISTANT NEWS EDITOR

An unexpected power outage during the Christmas break at YSU's Maag Library has caused MaagNet — the computer service students use to find books — to crash.

Tom Atwood, interim director of Maag Library, said an inter-campus memo was sent around YSU explaining that the power to some of the buildings on campus would be shut down during Christmas break, but Maag Library was not one of the buildings. When Atwood returned after the YSU employee break of Christmas and the day after, he found all of Maag's terminal servers crashed.

"I never got the important call [to say] Maag's power would be shut off," said Atwood. "I am not sure what happened. It would be interesting to know."

Phil Hirsch, executive director of administrative services, said that it was an accident.

"There were scheduled power outages at Williamson, Cushman and Jones, but a breaker was pulled that shouldn't have been [causing Maag's power outage]," said Hirsch.

Atwood thinks the power was shut off either Christmas day or the day after. Since employees didn't return until after the weekend, the computers were shut down for a few days and the system was completely crashed.

"If I would have known that the power would have been shut off, I could have shut the computers down myself and gotten out gracefully," said Atwood.

Symposium to spark cultural sensitivity

TRACIE KNIGHT
EDITOR IN CHIEF

A series of discussions designed to generate cultural sensitivity will convene on campus throughout winter quarter.

Mark Knowles, foreign languages, said, "It's a nice opportunity for YSU students to gain awareness of a country that may be, or should, be of interest to them."

Dr. L. Allen Viehmeyer, chair foreign language, originally suggested asking visiting scholars to attend conversation hours. Knowles hopes to take that suggestion a step further.

"Since we already have conversation hours that represent the ethnic division of YSU, our department wants to make people aware of other cultures. We considered creating this series to go beyond the languages we teach and to present it to the community."

Knowles said the discussions will connect campus events and intermingle with current international events.

"There are events that we should pay more attention to and we have an excellent opportunity to do that [with this series]."

Although this is a newly formed program, Knowles said he would love to continue it throughout the year.

"We have just scratched the surface. We have resources on this campus — almost every country is represented on this campus," Knowles said.

Knowles urges students to take advantage of this free service.

"Education is often exhaustive in price. There are things that are free that deepen one's education — this is one with an international outlook. It can enrich students' education and become part of a person's educational mission."

The symposium's topic will be "Cuba and Religion in light of Pope John Paul III's visit" and will begin at 2 p.m. Thursday.

retrieve it, chivalrous Pete came to her rescue. He put up his fins, and the Cowboy shuddered. Afterward, each had a new-found respect for the another.

Just an observation: During pre-game press conferences, YSU team members donned suits and ties while the McNeese players were dressed in old jeans and sweatpants.

When the teams took the field, McNeese rushed on, but YSU paid tribute to its 13 seniors by letting them lead the way.

A voice in the crowd: The Penguins were behind late in the third quarter, and it seemed their momentum was decreasing.

hind the team. She shouted with earnest honesty, "You guys can do this, come on, you guys can do this."

Soon the team turned the tables with an interception which led to the game-winning touchdown.

After the game: Immediately after the game, Coach Tressel threw up his hands and remarked, "Our kids are unbelievable!"

"No one got overconfident to win, but the team had to have a heart to win," said Brian McFarland.

"We have a standard mark-up value of 22 percent," said John Thomas, Campus Book and Supply textbook manager.

In comparison, Marietta Bookstore has a mark-up of 25 percent.

"Publishers receive 75 percent of the money from a book, while the bookstore only gets 25 percent," said Susanne Agostinelli, YSU Bookstore buyer and coordinator.

Both Agostinelli and Thomas agree that the prices of books are rising. "Principles of Anatomy and Physiology," a book and lab manual packet used in Biology 551, costs $117.45 new and $88.10 used.

"In order to combat the high book prices that are set, we try to provide as many used books as possible," said Agostinelli.

Used books at YSU are sold at an average of 25 percent off the new-book price. YSU Bookstore and Campus Book and Supply buy books back for 50 percent to 55 percent off the new-book price.

A 1995 Jambor article quoted Charles Sabatino, YSU Bookstore director, as saying, "Personally, I prefer dealing with the sale of used books because it's a win-win situation for students and bookstores."

Used books may be a "win-win situation" for students and bookstores, but not for publishers and authors. They only earn royalties on the sale of new books. All the money made on used books goes directly to the bookstores.

Dr. Thomas A. Shipka is author of "Philosophy: Paradox and Discovery," a text that has been approved by the Department of Philosophy and Religious Studies for philosophy courses. He said, "The University is caught in a paradox, one in which new books are not welcome."

Shipka doesn't keep the money earned by his book. He pledged to contribute all royalties from his text back to YSU.

"The used-book market drives up the cost of new books," said Shipka. "Publishers must assure themselves of a reasonable profit since so few new books are being sold."

Andrew Giangola, director Corporate Communication at Prentice Hall, said, "The profit on the sale of college books is actually less than it was 10 years ago. Many factors, including a more competitive market and an increase in production costs, have caused book prices to increase."

Classrooms are also using books that go along with test guides, teaching manuals, multimedia software and laser discs, which also increase price.

In order to keep new-book costs low, Prentice Hall attempted to print books entirely in black and white. Giangola said nobody would buy them, despite their attempts to lower book costs.

YSU should take on OSU

Oh yes, another championship. And of course, another rash of rumors and controversy.

Some fans are rumbling about President Cochran's personal feelings toward Coach Tressel. They say Cochran is upset because Tressel steals the limelight. But who cares? It seems to be indisputable that Tressel's leadership is anything short of incredible. Tressel delivers exactly what this community yearns for — pride and purpose.

It also seems undeniable that Cochran has brought his own magic to the area through his sense of vision. Although most of his ideas do not go without clamor, he has taught us the importance of goal setting with the fruition of Campus 2000.

Both then have shown us we have a reason to be proud and a reason to dream. With all this being said, it becomes irrelevant whether the two men like each other or not. But this is not the only hubbub that came home with the championship team. Other fans rumor that YSU is scheduled to play OSU next year.

Although totally false, YSU should play OSU — this year! It would mean a great deal for YSU fans to see their team go up against the Buckeyes. Too many local residents cheer on the Buckeyes and laugh at those of us who root for the home team. This game could show Ohio fans and the country that I-AA championships do mean something, and that our team will give it their all. And whether they won or lost, it wouldn't matter — we'd still love them anyhow. But could you imagine how good it would feel just to have the chance? Ah, that would be victory!

We challenge President Cochran and Coach Tressel to work through the red tape, put aside their differences to work together and make this YSU vs. OSU game a reality. This could be a great opportunity to see if they truly can work together — and a great opportunity to test the pride and vision these two men have given us.

Letter to the Editor

Band member urges campus community for football support

As a YSU Marching Pride member, I noticed after the Hofstra game Sept. 27, fan support dropped at YSU football games. During the Hofstra game, the loud cheering of the large crowd helped YSU win because the Hofstra team couldn't hear the plays being called. That was one night the Ice Castle rocked. As for the last five home games, the few YSU fans present were almost silent. They just sat in their seats and watched the game as if they were at home watching TV.

I call this a lack of school spirit. Students and the community should be proud of YSU and show the team how they feel about them. Since I go to every home game, I know the real fans from the ones who only come to the games when the team is good enough for them. I am not saying a true fan has to stand the entire time and watch the game like I do. I would just like to see the stadium filled with fans who are proud of their city and the YSU Penguins.

The people of Youngstown have supported the team financially by helping to build and remodel the stadium. However, the support the team needs now is in packing the stadium with fans. Imagine how it would be to fill the stadium with over 20,000 fans cheering, screaming and chanting. All this can help the team in their quest for another championship, as well as build unity in our divided student body.

Staff Commentary

This is college not 'Romper Room': Attendance policies annoy student

TELA DURBIN
ASSISTANT NEWS EDITOR

Woo-hoo! Another fun-filled winter quarter has begun at YSU. Although it doesn't feel like winter quarter weather-wise due to El Nino's terrible wrath, the coldness of teachers has swept through YSU.

I thought I was an adult attending an adult college, but every quarter when I attended my first day of classes, I begin to feel more and more like a high school student.

Attendance policies were strict and rampant in high school, but I thought I would escape them when I attended college. Such attendance policies in my college courses have run from missing three days and you're punished grade-wise, to being five minutes late to class and being locked out of the room. This is winter quarter, and although the snow is not falling as we speak, it will come sooner or later. On those days when I will have to make the trek from Williamson to Beeghly in three feet of snow, (all uphill I might add) I will be mighty mad if I am five minutes late and the teacher shuts the door in my snow-wetted face.

If I can attend a class when I choose, missing days with reckless abandon, and I still manage to get an A — props to me! If teachers think they must make wacko attendance policies to make students attend classes — what does that say about the teachers?

Now I know teachers probably have some of these policies because they don't want to be interrupted over and over again by chronically late students. Other teachers probably truly want their students to be present for participation purposes in class discussions.

I am an adult who has to work three jobs to attend this school. If I need to miss a day of work, I call off, and I never give a long-winded excuse backed up with a tow truck receipt. The people at work depend on me, but I have no attendance policy at my various workplaces. If I miss three days of work, they don't dock my pay at the end of the year. My teachers aren't dependent on me to give their lectures, they can do just fine without me.

I am an adult doing adult things in an adult atmosphere. I am treated like adult when it comes to grades, deadlines and research papers, so why resort to child-like attendance policies?

Letter to the Editor

Higher-ups beg to differ on banning high school games on campus

While it is not our nature to comment on every opinion, the Nov. 18 editorial calling for a ban on high school football games at Stambaugh Stadium compels us to set the record straight.

As you know, in Ohio, neither athletic facilities nor dormitories can be built with state funds. Thus, when it was decided to build Stambaugh Stadium, the community was solicited and responded to enable the west and east stands to be built. While not expressly stated in the solicitation, it was understood that all area high schools would have access to this facility, and the university would be accommodating with regard to schedules, costs, etc. Therefore, the breach of promise your editorial proposes raises serious ethical and moral questions and would have a serious financial impact upon the university. I hope this bit of history leads you to suggest other solutions to the problem.

We're No.1 – again

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. – "Never give up. Don't ever give up," said Jimmy Valvano, which is what the Penguin football team did against McNeese State in the NCAA I-AA championship and throughout the entire season.

YSU trailed McNeese 9-3 in the fourth quarter when the Penguins regained life through senior linebacker Jeff Fackrell's interception of McNeese quarterback Blake Prejean's pass, on the 34 yard line.

From there it took nine plays and 66 yards for the Red and White to score the only touchdown of the game and to take a 10-9 lead with 8:08 left on the clock.

Sophomore wide receiver Renauld Ray ran unattended into the endzone to catch the touchdown pass, from senior quarterback Demond Tidwell, and put the game in the hands of the Penguin defense.

That was the name of the game all afternoon – DEFENSE.

TERRY ESARCO, THE JAMBAR

MOVE THAT BALL: Senior wide receiver Mark Cox runs with the ball for a first down to set up the Penguin touchdown in the 10-9 victory over McNeese State.

Both teams' offenses struggled throughout the game, each producing a field goal by the end of the first half. All nine points for McNeese came courtesy of kicker Shonz LaFrenz.

"It was exactly as we expected it to be," said Coach Tressel. "When you have two great football teams going at it, especially two great defensive teams, getting into the endzone is not an easy thing."

The Penguin offense finished with only 200 total yards, while the Cowboys gained 201 total yards.

On the ending drive of the game, senior defensive tackle Harry Deligianis sacked Prejean consecutively, showing the Cowboys who's defense was No. 1.

The win gives YSU its fourth

National Championship and its 12th straight playoff victory. The Penguins and Georgia Southern are the only teams to win four national titles and YSU is the only school in I-AA to win four titles.

Sophomore place kicker Mark Griffith set the school record with 54 PAT's in a season after hitting the game winning field goal after the Penguin touchdown, to give YSU a one point edge.

In his final game as a Penguin, Tidwell showcased a grand performance, finishing 11-20-0 for 110 yards.

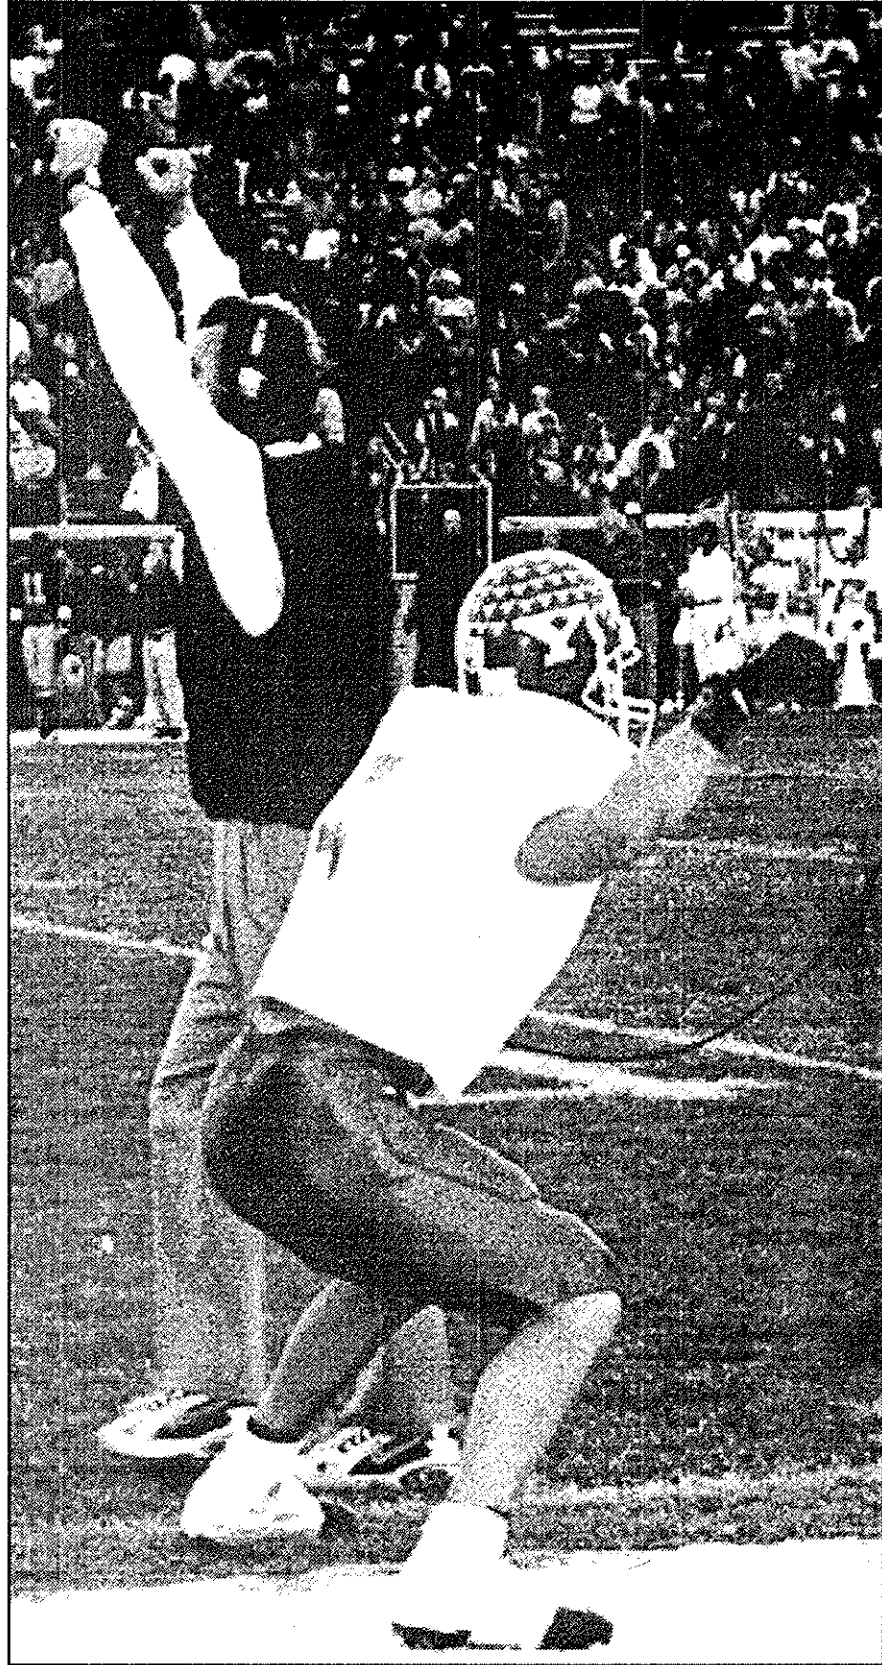

He hit senior tight end Tim Tyrrell for 22 yards to move the Penguins up the field on the game winning drive. Tidwell again completed a pass for 14 yards to senior wide receiver Mark Cox for a first down on the McNeese 9-yard line.

Tyrrell was the top receiver for YSU catching four passes for 54 yards. Junior Jake Andreadis led all rushers with 35 yards in 16 carries.

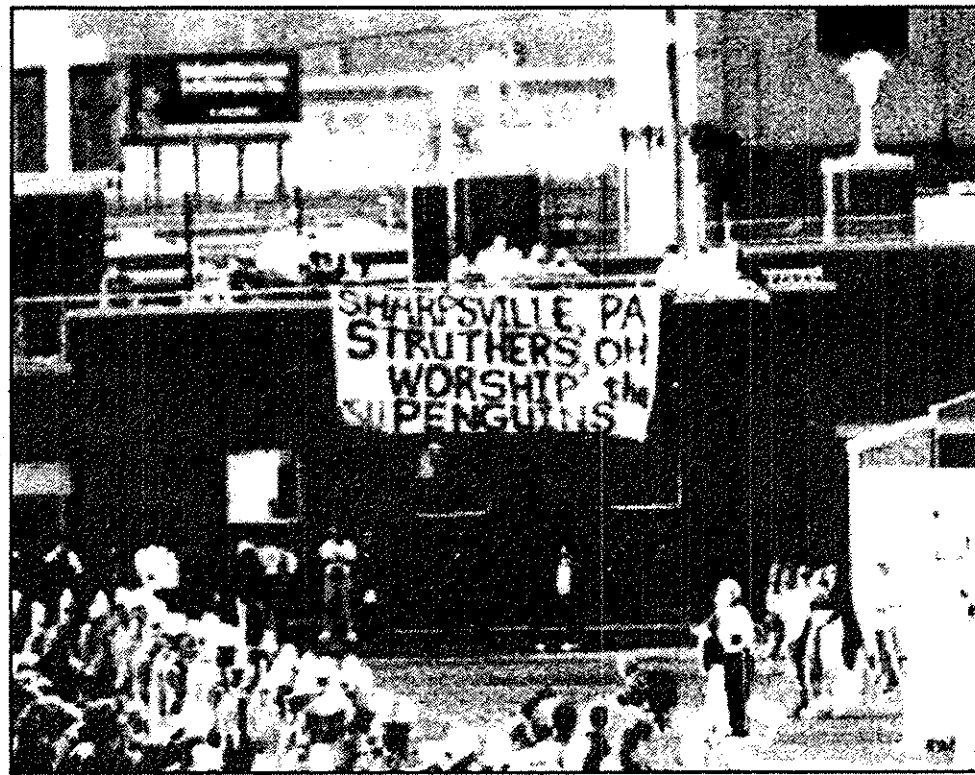

The Penguins close the season with a 13-2 record and Coach Tressel's mark moves to 108-4-2.

Four other Penguins hit double figures: junior Maurice Anderson with 14; junior Devon Lewis with 12; senior Anthony Hunt with 16 and freshman Desmond Harrison with 15.

Hunt went 5 of 8 on the floor and 3 of 5 from three point range.

Harrison pulled down seven rebounds and freshman Dave Brown grabbed 10.

In action against Loyola, senior Willie Spellman stepped things up in YSU's 80-68 win over the Ramblers.

Spellman scored 17 points, hitting 6 of 13 shots and 3 of 5 three pointers. He collected eight rebounds and two steals.

Harrison again scored 15 points nailing five free-throws and 5 of 8 attempts.

Hunt hit double figures with 12, as did Brown with 11 and Anderson with 10.

Brown connected on 5 of 5 baskets and recorded six rebounds.

The Ramblers out-scored the Penguins in the second half 46-32, but YSU's efforts in the first half were enough to hold on to the win.

is to create new software—a job Bob Quigley and Fred Sole from network services is taking on. The computers cannot boot up because there is no boot file to boot from. Quigley and Sole are working on building a new file to install in the computers. "We are at the mercy of Network Services," said Atwood. "MaagNet probably won't be back for a couple of weeks."

"It will probably take two weeks to get everything back to normal," said Quigley. Network services has set up 15 new web sites so students can access MaagNet. People can also get on MaagNet from personal computers at home and by Telnet from other sites on campus. Even with these other avenues for access to MaagNet, it is still a major inconvenience in Atwood's eyes. "It's already a big problem here with people standing in line—imagine what it will be like in a few weeks."
