ROCKIN' 'N' ENROLLIN': Students stand in line at the newly renovated enrollment center in Meshel Hall. All the enrollment offices are now located in one building.

Enrollment offices join forces in Meshel
 ■ The move creates a convenient enrollment area for students.

"One-stop shopping" — as it has been dubbed — is now complete, so anyone planning on changing their registration or applying for financial aid should now head to Meshel Hall instead of Jones Hall.

Philip Hirsch, executive director of administrative services, who coordinated the move, said, "The idea was to get a centralized enrollment center — a one-stop shopping center for students."

Bassam Deeb, executive director of enrollment, is in charge of two of the three offices that moved to Meshel.

"All indications show that everyone is adapting very well to the change," he said.

Deeb said the move has been very positive because all offices are in close proximity to the Bursar's office, which moved last year. Students can also conduct all registration and payment procedures in one building.

Students on campus said they appreciate the move for convenience reasons.

Mariam Ally, sophomore, business, said, "I think [the enrollment center] is better because students aren't running all around campus."

Pamela Zander, junior, social work, who transferred to YSU, said she had a very difficult time her first day on campus at the beginning of this academic year.

"It took me about six hours to get everything in order on my first day on campus," she said. "Having everything in one place will make students' initial experience with the university more positive which means a lot in terms of retention."

Andy Pettitt, freshman, undecided, said, "[The enrollment center] should make it easier for students to register and make everything more attainable with [all the offices] being in the same building."

Eileen Greaf, director of financial aid, said the change is good for the students and the staff working in the offices. The change has made all the offices — Bursars, financial aid and registration — closer in proximity and makes it easier for them to communicate.

She said there is a better working relationship developing among the staff already.

The individual assistance desks in registration and financial aid offer more privacy in Meshel. Greaf said there is more one-on-one contact with the students.

Foreign languages say Ciao for now

■ American Sign Language and Italian will not be offered fall quarter.

TELA DURBIN
 NEWS EDITOR

If you were planning to take American Sign Language or beginner Italian this fall, make other plans. The department of foreign languages is canceling ASL 501, 502, 503, 601 and 602 and Italian 501, 502 and 503 for the fall quarter. But have no fear, Dr. Allen Viehmeyer, chair of foreign languages and literatures hopes to reinstate these courses as soon as possible.

"The classes have been suspended, not canceled," said Dr. Viehmeyer. "We currently have a problem in staffing these courses. The classes are staying on the books, and as soon as we have the right personnel we will offer them again."

The foreign languages department currently has no full-time staff in ASL, and Viehmeyer noted though students fill classrooms for the introductory courses few students continue.

"There are about five students in the intermediate classes right now," said Dr. Viehmeyer. "They have no serious thoughts about becoming skillful in the language. To be fluent in a language you have to go beyond the elementary level."

The Italian professor will be retiring in June, prohibiting any more classes until the professor

Survey reveals ignorance about Stu. Government

■ A survey of 81 students showed few know who represents them.

CHAD E. HOLDEN
 STAFF WRITER

Students know next to nothing regarding Student Government, according to the results of a 10-question survey. Eighty-one YSU students completed a survey intended to gauge their general knowledge regarding Student Government and its activities.

The survey results reveal YSU students are deficient in general knowledge of Student Government and its functions.

Students were separated into several categories, including: class rank; student organizations; on-campus residents or commuters; and traditional or nontraditional students. Many students were surprised by the findings.

Mandy Dull, junior, theater said she can't believe only 30 percent of the campus knows the names of the president and vice president.

"That's sad, that's really sad," said Dull.

Dull was concerned about some of the other statistics as well.

"It's kind of ironic that 54 percent knew where the meetings were held but only 23 percent knew when," said Dull.

Others weren't surprised at the results and William Blake, Student Government adviser and director of student activities, said, "I don't find anything alarming about the results of the survey. I believe that only 10 percent of the student population actually knows what is going on and that is comparable to society today."

Blake also said voter turnout for Student Government has been extremely low — approximately 2,000 students vote out of an approximate enrollment of 13,000 students at YSU.

Edward Kennerly, senior, political science said, "I'm not surprised at all — it's a commuter campus, not a traditional campus — people don't get involved."

The highest-scoring respondents were those in the Greek system. Greek students have always prided themselves for working hand-in-hand with Student Government. Also, the Greek system is part of Student Activities, which is located next door to the offices of Student Government.

Sabrina Schroeder, Alpha Xi Delta Sorority, sophomore, professional writing and editing said, "I'm not surprised the highest scores came from the Greeks. A lot of the people involved with Student Government are in the Greek system."

Hana Kilibarda and Dan Moss, president and vice president of Student Government, said in a prepared statement, "The most troubling fact is that only 23 percent of those surveyed know how to participate in a decision-making process on our campus. As we continue to be confronted with the crucial issues such as: quarters to semester, North Central Accredita-

All-night shopping eases tension, loneliness

■ Shop 'til you drop or fall asleep at local 24-hour stores.

MATT HANTAK
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

The streets are deserted as you drive. The yellow traffic lights glow and blink in sequence like the signals on the runway of an airport.

One of the most striking things about driving to a 24-hour department or grocery store is the emptiness of the roads in the predawn hours. Busy thoroughfares like U.S. Route 224 and State Route 11 are often completely desolate. The loneliness ends when you pull into the store's parking lot. Perhaps this sense of togetherness adds to the store's appeal. For many, the store represents not only convenience, but also a diversion from the pressures of life during daylight.

These stores offer unique conveniences. Students with poor time management skills can catch up on badly needed shopping. People with unusual working hours can get coffee or the family groceries on their way to or from work. And insomniacs can hope that walking around and around the same store while listening to pop music hits of the 1980s will eventually bring them sleep.

Another reason people may find these stores attractive is the excitement and strangeness of driving around late at night. Traffic patterns and the appearance of some landmarks seem alien without cars or people swarming over them. Sometimes, the only other cars you'll find on the road at that time will be police cruisers, adding to the tension of being out in the wee small hours.

After your car door slams shut, the echo bounces off the empty blacktop and competes with the sharp electric crackling of huge neon signs. If you're lucky, you'll see a street sweeper or snowplow veering around the parked cars.

Often, finding the right entrance to the store poses a major obstacle. Some stores will be nice enough to post a sign, but tugging at locked doors and attempting semaphoric hand signals with employees inside is a frequent occurrence.

Nancy, a 10-year veteran of working third shift at Giant Eagle in Liberty, is something of an authority on the clientele of the all-night supermarket. This store is open all night except on weekends, something she enjoys.

"That's the best thing I like about this job," says Nancy, smiling. It's 1:30 Friday morning, and she anticipates a restful weekend. Often, night workers are rewarded for their twilight employment — some stores offer extra pay and Nancy's boss gives her the weekends off. She enjoys interacting with the customers at this hour, mostly people coming in or going to work.

"They're all good people," says Nancy. "Very seldom we'll have a problem with a shoplifter."

Sandy is busy working at a 3:45 a.m. one Wednesday morning. She says she doesn't mind the late hours at Super Kmart in Warren.

"It's a nice time to work," says Sandy, talking over the drone of the electric floor buffers passing by. "Sometimes, we have people come tion, General Education Requirements, student fees and charges and campus 2000, it is necessary that we properly communicate to students how to successfully confront those major transitions ahead of us.

"We continue to have an open door policy in order to properly assist students. Our offices are located on the second floor of the Kilcawley Center, next to the Women's Center. Student Government meetings are held Mondays at 4 p.m. in room 2068, second floor of the Kilcawley Center. Visitors are welcome to attend and voice their concerns."

Schroeder analyzed the survey findings and said the results should not go unnoticed. She said the impact of the survey can make a difference in future Student Government elections and accomplishments.

"Perhaps more people would vote if more people were aware of what Student Government does and what they can do for all students."

can be replaced. Viehmeyer said the Italian majors will be able to continue their upper division courses. The students will be taught by another professor, not from the foreign languages department. Viehmeyer said he has no authorization to hire a new Italian professor at this time.

"This is very temporary," said Viehmeyer. "We hope to reestablish these classes soon."

Buechner Hall Truly Has Everything

This beautiful residence hall for women, located mid-campus at YSU, is truly first-rate. Single and double occupancy rooms are completely furnished, including linens, telephones, and free cable. The building is fully air conditioned, and staff and guards provide professional, 24-hour security. Weekly maid service, exquisitely decorated lounge areas, quiet study environment, on-premise dining room and home-cooked meals, fitness room, and laundry rooms are other features supplying their share of full-comfort living.

Sound expensive? Not at all. Thanks to the large bequest of the Buechner family, which completed the building in 1941, more than half of all residents' room rental is still absorbed by the Buechner fund. The remainder required from residents including 15 meals per week, is $837 per quarter for double occupancy and $907 per quarter for single. Payable weekly. Your inquiry is solicited.

Renowned cartoonist speaks at YSU

■ Crowds packed the Ohio Room to hear Jules Feiffer.

Lou YUHASZ
ASSISTANT NEWS EDITOR

Pulitzer Prize winning cartoonist Jules Feiffer, known for his bitterly sarcastic characters, spoke last Wednesday night to a standing room only audience in Kilcawley Center's Ohio Room as part of the Schermer scholar-in-residence program.

Feiffer is best known for his political cartoons that appear in the Village Voice newspaper. These cartoons are syndicated to more than 100 newspapers.

In addition, Feiffer has won an Obie Award for "Little Murders" and wrote the screenplays for Robin Williams' first movie, "Popeye" and "Carnal Knowledge" and has written three children's books.

Feiffer recalled growing up in the Bronx during the depression. He said he used the comics, especially the Sunday Supplements, as a way to escape. He said he read primarily the action comics, such as "Flash Gordon" and "Superman."

"As a kid, I was more interested in the earlier work than the later, more sophisticated, accurate work because it had more attitude," he said. "It was all action oriented."

At the age of 16 he went to work for Will Eisner, who at the time was drawing "The Spirit." Feiffer says at this point his work "stunk," but he was hired because he was a great fan of Eisner's and could flatter him.

Around this time he began to draw an autobiographical kids' cartoon, "Clifford."

"I replaced the action of the earlier strips with the body language of actual children and people," he said.

After this period, Feiffer began to experiment with the political cartoons he is now famous for.

"I'm known for political cartoons," he said, "but I think everything is political. Anything that happens in a relationship is political."

Feiffer showed the audience a collection of his favorite cartoons, doing impressions of political leaders such as Nixon, Kissinger, Carter and Gingrich.

After years of political cartoons, Feiffer has now branched out into writing and drawing children's books. His first book was called "The Man in the Ceiling" and follows a small boy who dreams of being a cartoonist.

"Much of the book is about what happens when a small kid, like myself or my children, fails," he said. "Because we aren't taught that process. I wanted to show that failure and going beyond it is OK and part of the process of growing up."

Since the publication of this book, Feiffer has written two more children's books, "Meanwhile..." and "I Lost My Bear." The last book is just in stores this week.

STC serves as a valuable resource to students

■ Members of the Society for Technical Communication include writers, graphic artists and editors.

TAMMY J. WILSON
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

The Society for Technical Communication, a professional organization for technical communicators, provides opportunities for all students whose majors involve making technical information understandable and available to those who need it. Student memberships are available for students taking at least two courses per quarter.

YSU student members of STC include professional writing and editing, graphic design and journalism majors, said Dr. Chuck Nelson, YSU chapter advisor. Student members of the organization pay a reduced membership fee and receive the same benefits as other members.

"Students should take advantage of the reduced membership rate," Nelson said. Students pay a $40 annual membership fee versus the $95 standard membership fee. The $15 initial enrollment fee is also waived for student members.

"I think as a student, you have a valuable perspective to add to a chapter. Remember, most of us did not have the chance to actually study what we are doing. We've had to learn through trial and error and through groups such as STC," Jill McCauslin, co-program chairperson for the Northeast Ohio

STC chapter said.

Membership benefits include networking opportunities, conferences, STC's quarterly journal, Technical Communication, and the Society's magazine, Intercom.

STC awards scholarships to students enrolled in a technical communication program. Seven undergraduate scholarships and seven graduate scholarships are awarded in October. Eligibility is restricted to full-time students, and junior and senior undergraduate students. Students must apply for scholarships each year by Feb. 15.

"Technical communication is now one of the fastest-growing professions, and this growth has created a variety of career options. Technical communicators are writers, editors, artists, managers, educators and video specialists employed in every industry from automobiles to computers to finance," William C. Stolgitis, executive director of STC said.

Membership in STC has grown to more than 20,000 members since the organization's creation. Membership is divided into eight regions composed of 20 local chapters. Locally, YSU students can take advantage of the YSU chapter and the Northeast Ohio chapter.

The Northeast Ohio chapter holds monthly meetings at the Richfield Holiday Inn hosting a variety of speakers. Students pay a reduced fee of $20. Other members pay $22.

"I find the meetings to be as valuable for meeting people and discussing our work as for hearing the speakers," McCauslin said.

YSU's chapter does not have any activities planned for 1998.

"We hope to get things going later this year," Nelson said.

Student involvement is not restricted to local chapter activity. A student conference "Into the Future" will be held March 28 on the Florida Tech campus in Melbourne, Fla. In addition to listening to speakers and attending workshops, students are encouraged to bring their resumes and portfolios for review.

"Experts in the field will be available in an informal setting to give suggestions to interested students on their resumes and portfolios," Marilyn Goravitch, registration coordinator said.

STC's annual conference will be May 17 through 20 at The Anaheim Convention Center in Anaheim, Calif. Student members pay $145 for educational sessions, exhibits and social events.

Students interested in STC can contact Dr. Chuck Nelson at 742-3415 or the STC web site <http://www.stc-va.org>.

in and play pool over at one of the tables, or they buy all their groceries for the week."

The store's fluorescent lights make it seem almost like day inside. Shoes squeak on freshly cleaned floors that give the place an otherworldly, pristine atmosphere.

There is an inviting peace here, as demonstrated by the behavior of the customers. Often, customers will zealously comparison shop, reading each label on a can.

The store takes on the aspect of a 24-hour mall. The attraction appears to be in the social appeal of going out. Lonely people know that there's got to be at least one clerk or janitor they can talk to, even if only for a second.

People sometimes push the stomach of every plush toy they can find just to hear the recorded message. Some sit on the floor, or in display furniture, reading whatever's available, from books to magazines.

The hurried shopper is often at a loss at this hour. It's hard to find employees to assist you in the stereo department when the closest one is out of shouting range. After 30 minutes of being lost in the mammoth store, frustrated and tired shoppers head back out on the road.

The trip home can be satisfying, even if nothing was purchased. The journey's worth lie in discovering a smile, some warmth and good coffee.

GREG GULAS
STUDENT ACTIVITIES COORDINATOR

With YSU celebrating its 30-year anniversary as a state institution this year, an area that is sometimes overlooked yet has always played an integral role in the growth of YSU is Student Government. During the 1967-68 school year (the first under the state system), Ken Tomko was elected president with Judd Kline serving as his capable assistant in the vice president's chair.

During the past 30 years (31 if you include this year's elected officials), 50 students have led their peers by pressing for better opportunities, helping university administrators in the decision-making process while almost never compromising their stance on the issue at hand. Their creative vision and bright new ideas have created a positive change.

"This has been a fun year for me," noted current President Hana Kilibarda. "It hasn't been without its share of controversy, but we seem to have weathered those storms while keeping the interest of the students first and foremost," she added. "I'd like to think that Student Government was there for the students helping with their concerns in a timely and appropriate manner."

"Being involved with Student Government during my collegiate years was a most memorable experience," Anderson noted. "We were involved with every cause and issue that we felt would make YSU better for us," she said. "Hopefully, we helped lay the foundation for future administrations, leaving a legacy of caring and accountability in everything that we attempted."

As a salute to the university's 30th anniversary as a state institution, Kilibarda and Moss are hoping to invite many of the past president's and vice president's back to the YSU campus for a reunion in late spring.

They are hoping to share old stories and current ideas and hoping to get to know each other a little bit better while respecting the contributions each has made. They expect to share their thoughts on the many important topics they have faced, willing to shed some light on what future Student Government cabinets might encounter.

For further information, please contact the Student Government office at 742-3591, or the Student Activities at 742-3580.

STANDOUT STUDENTS

French

Suzanne L. French, of Brookfield, sophomore, political science, has been named a Capital Scholar by the Ohio Board of Regents.

As part of this appointment, French will complete an internship during spring quarter at the United States Information Agency in Washington, D.C. The award includes a $2,000 scholarship from the Regents. Accompanying the scholarship is an additional $2,000 scholarship given by the Washington Center for Internships and Academic Seminars.

She will work as a primary programmer. The duties of this position include welcoming Latin American dignitaries on behalf of the U.S. government, and helping to coordinate many of the activities that they will be involved in during their stay in Washington.

French said, "This internship is a great opportunity to advance my career plans in international affairs."

YSU became affiliated with the Washington Center in fall quarter 1997. YSU students chosen to participate in the program earn college credit for the internship.

Dr. William Binning, chair and professor, political science, said the internship program is available to students with any major. Additional information can be obtained from the Department of Political Science.

James Kravec, who graduated winter quarter with a 4.0 GPA, will attend medical school at NEOUCOM in Rootstown.

Kravec got involved in many activities at YSU, and I think it is necessary for his deeds to be publicly noticed.

I knew him best through Student Government where he served as a Representative at Large. While holding this position, Kravec also was the chair of the Publicity Committee for Student Government.

Student Government could count on him to get a job done. When faced with a task, he would go to great lengths to find out all the correct information, even if it meant being subjected to the administrative run-around for two days. He frequently brought matters of concern to the floor of Student Government where they could be discussed and acted upon.

He was a true representative in every sense of the word, always looking out for the good of the entire student body. As chair of the publicity committee, he had a lot of responsibility and without failure he did his job.

Kravec also served as co-president of Issues and Answers, which has sponsored open discussions on current campus and global issues. Additionally, Kravec served as the vice-president of College Democrats and was a committee chairman of the Newman Center.

YSU will miss Kravec. He is a hard worker and quite possibly the most dependable person I have ever met.

I wish him luck in medical school and in all of his future endeavors, but I know he does not need the luck. I want to thank him for all of his hard work, valuable time and most of all, his friendship.

Jambar offers explanation of missing issue

Many of our readers are probably wondering what's going on at The Jambar and why we chose not to publish last Thursday's issue. To set the record straight, it wasn't an April Fool's Day joke. However, the reasons we chose not to print did correlate to our April Fool's Day issue March 30.

Dr. Dale Harrison, Jambar adviser, feared some of our readers would be offended by The Fubar, our April Fool's portion of our March 30 issue. So when Harrison recommended we shut down for one issue and take that time to regroup, a majority of the staff agreed. The last thing we want to do as a newspaper that is dedicated to service the campus community is to offend our readers.

After reviewing the overall content of The Fubar, we anticipated some readers may think we went too far and this prompted our proactive decision not to print. After we had already begun analyzing the issue internally, Harrison received numerous calls from disapproving readers. And some members of the campus community told Jambar staff members that the April Fool's jokes weren't funny or creative and at best were in bad taste.

This year has been an incredible year in journalism — incredible in one sense and difficult in another. This year, amidst the frenzy of media bashing, The Jambar has fought hard to establish and maintain its integrity as a professional student publication and gain your trust. We have provided you with in-depth coverage and a wide variety of topics. We have been objective and dedicated to fair news reporting. None of that has changed or been compromised. And we never have — or ever intend to — give you any reason to question our ethics or commitment to effectively reporting timely news in any of our regular pages.

A majority opinion of The Jambar staff is one of regret. We never intended to upset or insult anyone. The jokes were meant to parody actual news events much like a late-night television program does. The Fubar was not constructed with the same standards or the level of critique as our regular pages. It was funny to us so we thought it would be funny to others. We did not break any media laws. So, readers have a right to disagree with our sense of humor, but not with our right to publish it. Apparently, according to some, we overestimated our humor.

A closer look at Jonesboro: Why popular culture creates hardened, little criminals

REBECCA SLOAN
COPY EDITOR

As Americans grapple to make sense of why two pubescent boys would open fire on their teachers and classmates, the questions are numerous, but the answers remain elusive. In response to the Jonesboro tragedy, people everywhere are taking stabs at solving the disturbing underlying forces fueling this shocking juvenile crime. "Locks on gun cabinets should be mandatory," "The boys came from troubled homes," "The parents should be held responsible" — these opinions and theories join the scores of others floating around, but despite theories and opinions, our uneasiness prevails and is as difficult to ignore as the mounds of fresh dirt on five Arkansas graves. Americans want to know how to explain the unexplainable and how to prevent similar crimes from occurring in the future, but many feel helpless and mystified over what our world has become and afraid of where it may be going.

Obviously the reasons for the increasing juvenile crime rates are complex, but no matter how complex the issues, a fundamental truth remains: "We reap what we sow."

So just what are we sowing? And on what filth is it growing?

Popular culture has become a powerful tool for molding young minds as it sets a precedent for what is regarded as acceptable and "cool." Unfortunately, most aspects of popular culture root and flourish in the muck and mire of a moral wasteland fit for wallowing hogs.

Take television for example. The tube provides youths with daily doses of violence, murder and gore, not to mention the various other types of smutty trash and vegetable-brained sit-sitcoms available. Television, music, video games and all other forms of popular culture say it's "cool" for youths to be callous, aggressive, selfish, rude, hateful and cynical. Lack of respect for others as well as all life forms in general has become the norm. It's "cool" to destroy, to greedily consume, to waste and to dominate. Messages supporting these types of disturbing attitudes are showing the younger generation how to live, and the messages are cropping up everywhere. Whether it's as minute as the soft drink commercial that depicts a pack of grungy-looking guys decapitating a slew of snowmen as they lunge and "surge" to guzzle the prize cola to the beat of hard-driving music, or as blatant as the box office success of movies such as 1994's "Natural Born Killers," the mind set is clear and it's spreading like a cloud of poisonous gas.

And then there's music. Much of the music that dominates popular culture is hard-edged and hopeless if not downright wicked. No, I'm not trying to sound like a Bible-thumping preacher at a down-home revival, but let's face it, violence for the sake of violence is garbage, so if you want to call it art then be prepared to pay the consequences. People don't breathe in toxins without getting sick. What we hear and see does influence us, so be prepared to usher in a generation of hardened little criminals who kill for the thrill of killing and hold no value for human life in their shriveled, blackened little hearts. Yeah, I know the argument — "But they're just being kids." Ok, and just because they listen to dark, chanting rhythms Beelzebub himself would sing along with and soak in film after film where violence and corruption are glorified doesn't mean they're going to do anything "bad," right?

Sure, and if I go skinny dipping in Antarctica I won't freeze to death.

Wake up America! Jonesboro is an alarm bell telling us to take a good look at how we are raising our children as well as what our society celebrates and holds dear. Does it make you sick? Are you even aware, or are you desensitized to the point where you might make a good character for a George Orwell novel? We need to change the way we as a society think and live. It should be "cool" to practice kindness, to be respectful of life and repelled by violence and gore and to seek truth and purity instead of reveling in the pernicious and the vulgar. It's a lot to ask, but it starts with each one of us, and until we realize this we just might see lots more grade schoolers slinging guns and plotting shooting sprees.

So if you are not shocked by the slew of murders played out on television, the big screen or on video games, or by the twisted evil vibrating from many kids' stereo speakers, then don't be shocked by Jonesboro.

If there was one thing that you could change at YSU, what would it be?

Beau Halcomb

"I would like more restaurant availability."

Megan Villani

"I would change the availability of classes — I would offer more."

Vallen Weeda

"I would like more positive images about YSU and the art department."

Ross Kline

"I would like to change the process of student class scheduling."
