Beeghly dedication honors the family

Mayor says donation will help generations of students to live the American Dream.

NICOLE TANNER
Editor in chief

Beneath all the bricks and mortar of the newest building on campus, there lies the immense generosity of a family who has been involved in the community since 1918 — the Beeghlys.

This generosity was honored at 6 p.m. Thursday during the dedication ceremony of the Beeghly College of Education.

"This is a true example of how community partnership comes together to make something special happen," said Vern Snyder, vice president of development and community affairs.

Snyder, YSU President Leslie Cochran, Youngstown Mayor George McKelvey and College of Education Dean Clara M. Jennings all expressed their gratitude to the Beeghlys following a ribbon-cutting ceremony by all present members of the family.

"This is one more step in the history of YSU and the generosity of this family," said Cochran. "The Beeghlys provide not only dollars and mortar, but advice as well."

The total gift from all members of the Beeghly family for the new college totaled more than $2.2 million, said Cochran.

He also noted a new endowment from the Beeghlys, which will provide ongoing funds for the college.

McKelvey said, "The true measure of a person — or in this case, a family — is not how much you earn or accumulate, but how much you give to help others live a better life."

He added the Beeghlys' dedication to the community is "priceless" and would allow "generations of students and teachers to live the American Dream."

Bruce Beeghly also spoke at the ceremony, relaying some of the family's history in the Mahoning Valley and adding that the college of education is the 10th building to bear the Beeghly family name.

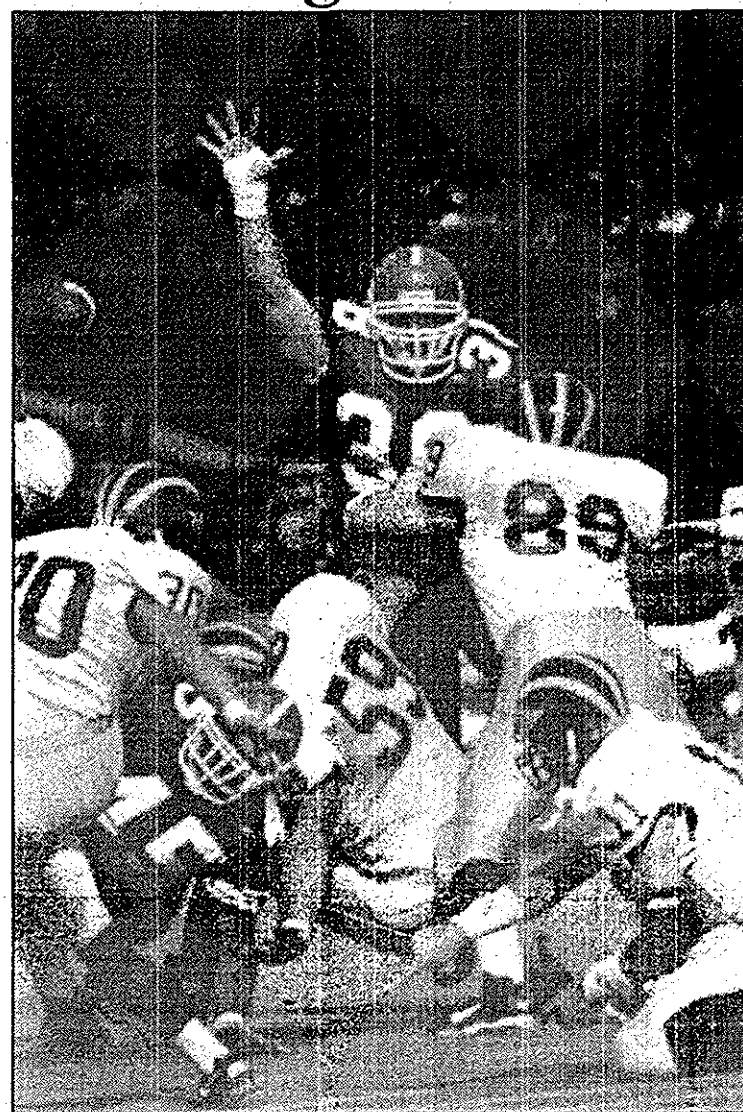

Others include the YSU Physical Education Center and buildings at Westminster College, Mount Union College, Ohio Wesleyan University and American University in Washington D.C.

Beeghly said what's most important is not his family's donation, but "the future accomplishment of the people teaching and learning in the building."

Jennings compared the Beeghlys to a wise Roman em-

Confusion about Black Studies changes cleared up

Positions within the Black Studies program are not permanent because it technically is not a department at YSU.

EMILY D. CRONK
News Editor

The temporary removal of Sarah Brown-Clark as coordinator of the Black Studies Program leaves a new coordinator, Julian Madison, now in charge of the program, with the task, along with other faculty, of helping connect the Black Studies Program with other programs on the YSU campus.

The change in coordinators comes with the recommendation of faculty, as well as the former vice provost for Educational Equity.

According to a press release sent by Barbara Brothers, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, the new organization for Black Studies and the plan for expanding the on-campus visibility of the program grows initially out of a series of recommendations made by James B. Stewart, former vice provoost for Educational Equity, Pennsylvania State University and President of the National Council for Black Studies.

"Brown-Clark was asked to stay on and coordinate Black History Month events and was made aware that her removal was temporary," said Brothers. "It was purely a temporary thing this year because we are trying to decide what to do within the Black Studies program here at YSU."

Black Studies is offered as a major but does not have its own department at YSU. The faculty in this particular area of YSU do not have permanent positions.

"It is erroneous to talk about removing someone from their position because the individuals in the section of Black Studies do not occupy positions from which they

Maag cancels circulation on all current periodicals

The new system was started with hopes to protect inventory.

SABRINA SCHROEDER
Assistant News Editor

Maag Library's basement has a new look — the massive amount of periodicals is no longer visible, now hidden behind a wall constructed to keep students out and periodicals in. Students can no longer browse through the periodical shelving themselves, hoping to come across the one magazine they need.

Now, students must request the edition they need and library staff will retrieve it for them, in their effort to keep Maag's periodical investment intact for the good of all.

Thomas C. Atwood, interim director of the library, said, "librarians don't like to be gatekeepers, but sometimes by being gatekeepers it enables the librarians to better serve the students."

The closed circulation system was started over the summer on a partial basis and has been in full swing since Oct. 1.

"Sometimes by being gatekeepers it enables the librarians to better serve the students."

Thomas C. Atwood
Interim Director of Maag

The main reason for the new system is to help keep inventory where it should be, rather than students being able to browse through the shelves and perhaps leave the library with a copy of one of the periodicals. Buying replacements for missing periodicals takes time and money, along with holding up the binding process of the issues.

Over half the library's budget every year is spent on periodicals.

Atwood said one periodical alone costs $8,000 a year for a subscription, making the replacement of a missing issue costly to the library.

Bob Ault, assistant serials librarian, said the new system will save time as well as give the staff a better grasp of where things are, rather than students returning periodicals to the shelves and misfiling them.

Ault said the library holds more than 3,200 titles for periodicals, and right now there are more than 200 that cannot be bound because of missing volumes whose replacements have not come in yet.

In previous times, students

"The Beeghlys have left a unique cornerstone and special mark," Jennings said.

"They have given away to add to their continuous legacy toward quality education in this country," she said.

Jennings also presented two pieces of community student art that will hang in the college's atrium and announced the plan to have numerous works of community student art to hang throughout the building.

Following the ceremony, which also included the unveiling of a plaque listing the names of donors, guests were given the opportunity to tour the four-story building's classrooms and labs.

would browse through the shelving units searching for the periodical containing the information they needed; when they could not find it, the staff was asked for help.

With the closed circulation program, that extra step is cut out.

Leigh Altier, senior, pre-nursing, feels the new system will be an advantage, especially with the helpful staff in the library.

"You can stand in one spot and check the computer for information, doing research in a matter of seconds rather than having to leaf through pages to find the information you are looking for," she said.

The library staff is also able to record the amount of circulation that goes on within the periodicals. Over 1,000 items were circulated within the first two weeks of the quarter, according to Ault.

Students wishing to view the periodicals will have to present some sort of identification when requesting the materials.

The ID will be returned when the student returns the periodical.

The reason for the announcement was to increase emphasis on diversity, to work on making a better program and to identify Madison as the new coordinator of Black Studies.

"The press release covered several areas informing the public about some changes," she said.

Brothers said, "Our main purpose was to announce Madison as new coordinator and to call attention to the fact that Brown-Clark would still be in charge of coordinating events in regard to Black History Month."

Brothers said the press release was approved by the provost and Madison before it became public knowledge and was circulated to The Jambar and The Vindicator.

EDITORIAL

Education Act is a good move

With all the negative publicity about Clinton these days, some of the great things he's doing are being overlooked. A change in campus security provision, which has been a long time in coming, was finally signed into law by Clinton Oct. 7.

Under this new higher education act, all schools — public and private — can no longer use the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act as an excuse for refusing to release information about the outcome of campus disciplinary proceedings. It's about time this has happened.

For too many years schools have been protecting their images by covering up campus crimes in disciplinary hearings. Because of this students and parents have chosen schools without being properly informed of campus safety, but have received fluffy images of universities.

S. Daniel Carter, vice president of the Society of Professional Journalists, said, "These changes will significantly improve campus safety across the country. Students have been deliberately left in the dark and couldn't make informed decisions about how to avoid and prevent campus crime."

Another provision of the law is that schools must maintain police or security logs and make those logs open to the public. This has always been the case at YSU, but other universities will benefit from this. Other provisions in the law include access to crime statistics, athletic department revenues and restrictions on alcohol advertising.

This is a wonderful development. Applause to Clinton and the rest of the government.

Give racism a rest

EMILY D. CRONK
News Editor

Racism has no prejudice. Its like an incurable disease that strikes out at anyone or anything that gets in its way. So who will win the respected Nobel Peace Prize for finding a cure for racism? Maybe it could be you or me if we try hard enough.

Since I started school here at YSU last fall, I have noticed an extremely high intolerance level for other individuals. No matter what your race, gender or sexuality, there seems to be some negative remark that can be made about you.

So why must so many people, not only on this campus, but everywhere in the world, live their lives with such contempt for other people? Maybe it's because that's all you've ever known or it's the way you and your friends have some fun.

As far as I'm concerned, people need to understand there is no such thing as perfection. There will always be someone better looking than you or smarter than you. That's what makes us all unique.

Sometimes being unique comes with a price. The incident that just occurred in Wyoming really caught my attention. I don't mean to belittle other forms of racism, but in today's society you would think as human beings we would be above murdering and slandering individuals because they are different from us.

I may just be naive, but I think man's inhumanity toward man has gone too far. At least for my taste.

I want to live in a world where I can eventually raise my children to respect all individuals, black or white, homosexual or straight. I would hate to think I might be the cause for some of the intolerance in the world today by suggesting every person in the world is not equal.

So instead of making fun of someone because they don't look like you or have the same views as you, why not just go up and say, "hi" and introduce yourself. You never know, you might just have something in common and end up friends. The "erase the hate" slogan is no longer a good enough approach to racism. We just can't think about doing it. We have to do it. It might just make the world a better place to live.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

LGBT president responds to article

When I approached The Jambar about the incident with the rock being painted over, it was my suggestion that it start with the national story of what happened to Matt Shepard and then bring it down to a local level by expressing that YSU has an environment of intolerance. But instead you made me out to sound like an angry gay man. I shared the incidents about the rock, the signs being torn down and the sidewalk chalk being hosed off as evidence of these narrow-minded attitudes against, not only gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgendered students at YSU, but also other minority groups that have encountered similar situations.

I realize these same situations do happen to other organizations at YSU, but why? It seems many of the organizations on campus work against each other instead of working with each other to create a more positive and cooperative campus.

I have learned that the Gamma Phi Delta sorority painted over the rock because of their Rush, not out of hatred for the gay community on our campus. I would like to take this opportunity to formally apologize to the Gamma Phi Delta sorority for singling them out and to invite them to paint the rock with the LGBT throughout the course of the year. I would also like to ask all organizations to respect one another by not tearing down signs and allowing the work painted on the rock to remain visible for at least 24 hours.

Some required classes aren't necessary

LYNN NICKELS
Copy Editor

Are all of the classes required really needed to obtain a degree at YSU?

For example, are 12 or 16 hours of art history really necessary to obtain a photography degree? Or, are 8 or 12 hours of literature really needed to obtain a degree in professional writing and editing or journalism?

Tech schools have the right idea — only take classes necessary for your field, with a couple reading, writing & arithmetic classes thrown in for good measure. Unfortunately, YSU does not accept credits from tech schools, making any previous degrees obtained valueless — but then, that's a whole other story. Maybe that's because tech schools don't require you to take all those ball and chain courses you will never use and never need.

I am fortunate in one respect, because I chose to do an Individualized Curriculum Program. The program allows the student to make their own curriculum of classes and degree title if it is not already an offered major at YSU. I was able to cut out a lot of unnecessary classes and chose basically only the classes I wanted. Well, almost.

I really would have liked to do an ICP with a double major — journalism and photography. The journalism major is possible because a new ICP Journalism Curriculum was recently approved, however, adding photography as a major instead of a minor is another story.

I have enough hours for a photography major, but in order to do a cross-college double major, I would have to take a lot of art history classes that I really don't need. I would end up having to take 20 or 30 additional hours on top of the 186 hours I need. I can't afford the time or the cost of doing that, and really, who can?

I have already been here almost four years and still have about 40 hours to go. I need to get out into the real world and get a job. I just wish when I apply for that job, I could say that I have a double major. It would probably make my prospects a lot better and myself a lot more marketable.

YSU Women's Center receives new coordinator

■ The Women's Center is a referral service located in Kilcawley Center and is not just for women.

CINDY MILLER
Assistant News Editor

The Women's Center is getting off to a late start this fall due to short staffing and a lack of permanent funding. Problems the new interim coordinator said she hopes to solve.

Cynthia Beckes has been named the new coordinator for a nine-month period, taking over the duties of Sister Pat Slater. Beckes is a graduate student from Kent State University fulfilling her graduate assistantship by serving as coordinator of the Center.

Beckes said, "My personal goal for the Center is to find permanent funding. The Center needs to be self sufficient."

Finding student help has also been a problem, since most students qualified for work study programs, have already found positions, she said.

The Women's Center has struggled to keep its head above water in the past. Beckes said it has almost closed a few times because of the funding problem. She said the need for funding is vital because the center is an asset to the university. It provides referral services, counseling and a safe place for students.

Beckes said, "Although it's called the Women's Center it is really intended for use by all students. Our focus is women, but we have programming for male and female students."

If a student has a problem with anything from stress management to financial aid, he or she can consult the Women's Center for the referral to the appropriate university service, Beckes said.

A recent survey revealed that 80 percent of students questioned did not know where the Women's Center is located or what services it provides. To increase awareness about the Center, Beckes plans to hold a poster contest. The winning design will be used as a logo for the Center and will capture the essence and diversity of women, Beckes said. The winner will receive $100 with $50 being awarded for second place.

In addition to her focus on obtaining permanent funding, Beckes said she wants to make the Center's hours more convenient to students. The center will most likely be open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., she said.

Beckes said she would like a diverse group of employees who reflect the diversity of the campus.

She said, "We want to focus on women who are out there doing it. We've come a long way, but we still have a long way to go. I'm going to try very hard this year to locate permanent funding. I'm very enthusiastic and glad to be here."

The student-run radio show, "YSU Now," will now air on four local radio stations for 30 minutes, five times a week.

The show is in its third year of production and provides coverage of YSU news and events to residents of the Mahoning Valley. Its premier show aired Oct. 12, 1996 with students participating in the direct production of the program, including interviewing, script writing, editing, announcing and producing.

Jason Hallelwell, producer and host of the show, said "The show has come a long way from where it was at the beginning. I've done what I can as a producer to help get it to the point it's at. As far as being the host, I've had some big shoes to fill, and the only way that I found it a feasible task was to change the overall feeling of the Progress is usually something that takes you forward. For the Penguin football team, progress seems to be leaving them at a standstill. This was evident over the weekend, as YSU fell to the University of Delaware, 30-20.

"I am real proud of the way our guys played from start to finish," said Head Coach Jim Tressel. "They played hard. Unfortunately, we didn't make some of the plays you need to win a game like that."

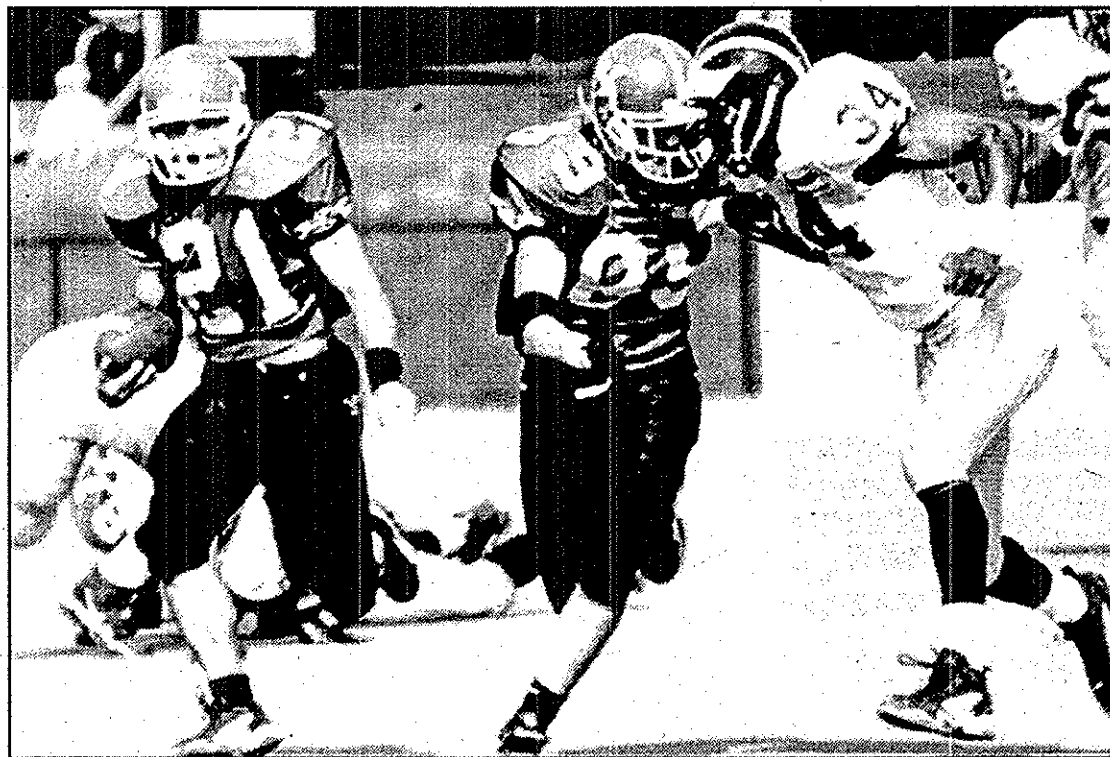

Senior Jake Andreadis rushed for 143 yards — his best this season — and placed himself seventh among YSU's all-time leading rushers. Junior Adrian Brown rushed for 47 yards to become the 13th YSU back to reach 2,000 yards.

Despite the honors, YSU's offense couldn't light the fire to brighten a path around the Blue Hen's defense. The Penguin offense scored three touchdowns, but didn't make that step needed to get YSU back on top.

"We knew they were a solid defense," said Tressel.

"Their defense came out and basically did what they had to," said Andreadis. "They set up a plan to stop our offense and let their offense do their job."

The first half was anybody's game. Delaware scored on the opening drive, and YSU answered on their second drive with a 58-yard run from Andreadis, who made his way around the huddle and up the side into the endzone. YSU took a 14-13 lead into halftime.

Delaware's offense was fueled by junior kicker Garon Sizemore, who nailed a 24-yard and 47-yard field goal in the first half, and nailed his career longest, a 48-yard field goal, early in the third quarter to put UD up 16-14.

YSU fought behind the arm of freshman quarterback Jeff Ryan who played the whole game.

"We felt as the game went, that was the thing to do," said Tressel.

Ryan completed 13 of 22 attempts for 99 yards, but threw an interception to Delaware's Dale Koscielski, who ran it back for a 45-yard touchdown. Ryan scampered into the endzone in the second quarter for a 6-yard touchdown run.

YSU's third touchdown came at the end of the fourth quarter, as the Penguins fought to get back in the ball game. Brown scored from 3 yards out. The Red and White were unsuccessful on the two-point conversion, as junior tight end Pete Superak dropped Ryan's pass in the endzone.

The YSU offense gained 297 total yards, with 198 rushing, but the Blue Hens, ironically collected 361 yards in the wing-t offense, an offense YSU doesn't see much of.

The Penguins hurt themselves with penalties on both offense and defense, racking up six penalties for a loss of 64 yards. YSU lost two fumbles to total three turnovers, including Ryan's interception.

"We certainly have to be thankful for the turnovers we got," said Delaware Head Coach Tubby Raymond.

Senior linebacker Jarritt Goode and junior safety Dwight Smiley forced fumbles by the Blue Hens, but UD was able to recover on both. Goode led the defense with nine tackles and a tackle for a loss of four yards. Senior lineman Mike Stanec nailed seven tackles, including two for a loss of seven yards. Stanec also sacked Delaware quarterback Matt Nagy for a loss of three yards.

"We came out there and fought with them," said senior defensive back Anthony Pannunzio. "We played as hard as we could."

Smith credits YSU and was excited about a win at YSU.

"I'm especially proud we won here at this place," said Raymond. "It's a real special pinnacle in intercollegiate football, here at Youngstown State."

The loss puts YSU's record at 4-2, to head into Saturday's match up with New Haven.

Volleyball falls to No. 1 Oral Roberts

The women's volleyball team battled Mid-Continent Conference leader Oral Roberts Saturday, but fell in defeat, 12-15, 10-15, 7-15.

The Lady Penguins fought back from a 10-1 deficit in the first game, to bring the game as close as 13-12, before Oral Roberts went ahead for the win. Game two was played in the same manner, as YSU was down 12-4. The Lady Penguins' effort put them back in the game, as the Red and White earned two points off serves from freshman Melissa Lyczkowski and three points from senior Amy Hermann to get YSU as close as 12-8.

"I was very pleased we came out and performed as well as we did," said Head Coach Joe Conroy.

Hermann blasted 14 kills in the effort, along with eight digs, an ace and four blocks. Junior Vickie Robinson nailed nine kills and collected four blocks.

Sophomore Amber Nagy led YSU on defense with 17 digs. She also recorded eight kills. Lyczkowski had 36 assists to put herself in seventh place on the YSU single-season assist chart with 804.

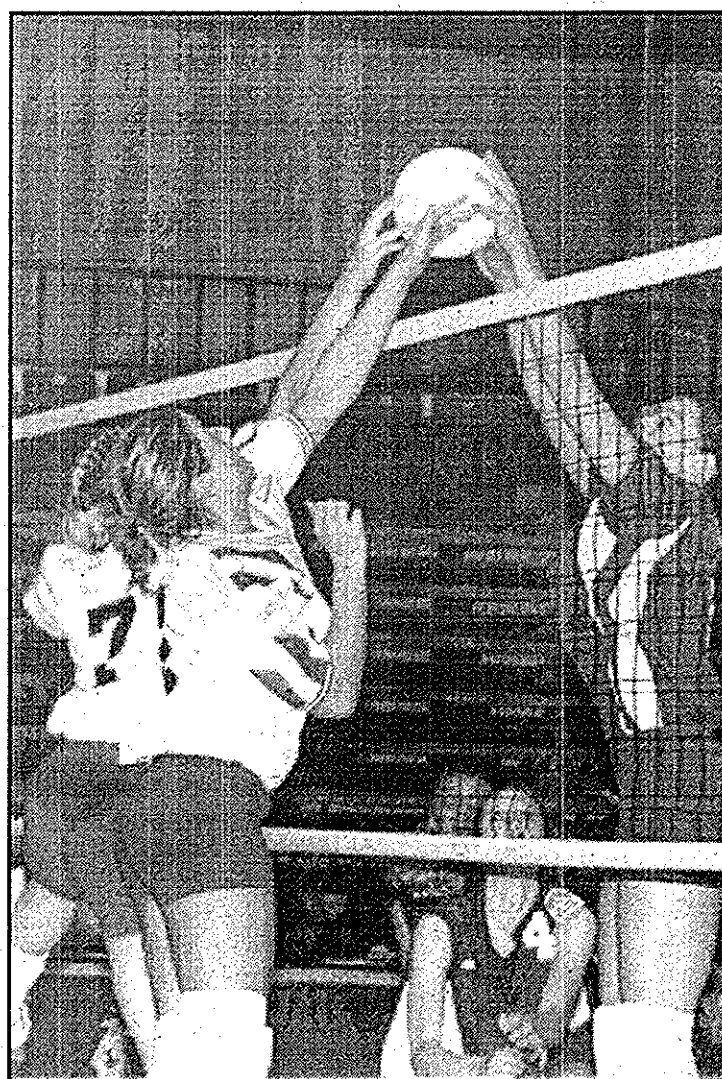

"We'll probably see this team again in the tournament," said Conroy. "I am just confident as a coach that we are making progress."

Oral leads the Mid-Con with a perfect 6-0 record and stands 15-4 overall. YSU is 11-10 overall and second in the Mid-Con with a 4-2 record.

Friday, YSU defeated the University of Missouri - Kansas City, 15-8, 5-15, 15-2, 15-13.

Robinson and freshman Kristen Meech each pounded 12 kills, while Hermann had 10. Robinson had 20 digs and five blocks and Meech had seven.

The Lady Penguins will be in action Friday against Valparaiso at 7 p.m. in Beeghly Center.

Dana music professor orchestrates 17th award

■ YSU's Dr. Robert Rollin composes award-winning music and promotes 20th-century artists.

Assistant News Editor

Dr. Robert Rollin, music, has received a monetary award from the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers in recognition of his original musical compositions. Rollin has had 20 pieces published within the past year, a feat he calls a milestone. The compositions vary in length and many of them involve stringed instruments.

Rollin submitted his work to publishers or directly to the ASCAP.

An independent panel judged the music based on its intrinsic value as well as recent performances of the work. Orchestras will play his pieces, entitling him to royalties in addition to his monetary award.

Five of Rollin's pieces have been published by the Seesaw Music Corporation of New York. They include original settings of Jewish, Mexican, Polish and Latino folk songs. Last November, his "Variations for Solo Viola" premiered. It was recorded by South African violist, Walter Mony and will be released on CD. It will be published this year by Acoma/Nambe Editions. Mony will perform at the annual fall concert of YSU's New Music Society, scheduled for Nov. 18.

During his 1996-97 sabbatical, Rollin composed "Concerto for Guitar and Orchestra," which will be released on CD by the Canadian classical guitarist, Lynn Harting-Ware.

Two orchestra compositions, "Memorial Pavan" and "By the Fireside" were published by Seesaw Music Corporation and had originally been requested by the Youngstown Commission for Jewish Education. The pieces premiered at the Mahoning County Courthouse Holocaust Memorial Ceremonies with Rollin conducting.

Rollin has also had two works published involving piano, titled "Nights Thought I" and "Fantasy on an Old Polish Folk Song." A trumpet piece called "Rondo Capriccioso," was commissioned and performed by trumpeter Susan Sexton and was also published by Seesaw.

Four choral works, arranged for the YSU Chorus, were published by Acoma/Nambe Productions.

Rollin has also composed a violin and viola duet for his daughter, which will soon be released.

Recent professional performances of Rollin's work include those done by the Brno (Czech Republic) Chamber Orchestra and the Dana Festival Chamber Orchestra.

Rollin said, "the ASCAP award is his 17th consecutive award." He said he enjoys teaching music, but said, "Composing has brought me the most success and I'm most excited about it."

Rollin is also the coordinator of YSU's New Music Society, a group formed in conjunction with The New Music Guild.

Members of the guild include local composers.

The society's focus is to increase the performance and popularity of music composed by 20th-century artists, Rollin said.

WCBA receives Bank One scholarship fund

■ Scholarships worth $500 will be available next year for business majors.

ANGELA GIANOGGIO
Managing Editor

A scholarship is the greatest gift that can be bestowed upon a college student.

And students in the Williamson College of Business Administration will have the opportunity to receive one more of the coveted awards.

Donald Cagigas, regional president of Bank One Corp., established an endowment fund to be used for scholarships for students majoring in business.

The first Bank One scholarship will be available for the 1999-2000 academic year for business students who live in Mahoning, Trumbull or Columbiana counties, are enrolled in the school of business, have a minimum 3.0 GPA and are in financial need.

In a press release Cagigas said, "YSU has produced many outstanding leaders and has served as an engine for growth by creating jobs, improving the standard of living and enriching our cultural life. It is entirely fitting that Bank One acknowledge this important role by establishing [the scholarship]."

“It is entirely fitting that Bank One acknowledge this important role by establishing [the scholarship].”

Donald Cagigas
Regional President of Bank One Corp.

Dr. Betty Jo Licata, dean of WCBA said the scholarship will result from the interest derived from the endowment and will be worth approximately $500.

The application for the scholarship will be available in February with the overall scholarship application for the college.

Licata said, "We have a regular scholarship process that we go through. Students have to apply and then we select from those applications."
