

Dr. Warren Will Aid Prof. Bare in Giving Vets Interesting Vocational Guidance at YoCo Center

By Sally Pitcairn

Prof. John W. Bare of the Veterans' Administration Guidance and Training Subdivision has been joined in his work here by Dr. Luther Warren of Mount Union College. Dr. Warren began his training in Cleveland and has been doing this type of work for seven months. These men, who handle an average of 26 cases per week, recently hit a new high with 34.

Each boy is given the same attention which begins with a personal interview and is followed by general intelligence, aptitude, and interest tests. Miss Peg Boyer, who administers the tests, has some 50 different types available. Another interview usually completes the job although after-tests are sometimes necessary.

These boys are your brothers and mine. Naturally, their interests and abilities are those of all young Americans. After a boy has been examined, he may go into job training or continue his formal education. A few of the boys who have recently begun job training are planning to become the following: a jeweler, an electric appliance serviceman, a salesman, an office machine repairman, a tool and dye maker, an airplane mechanic, a furrier, a commercial artist, and a furniture repairman.

Further schooling has been undertaken by men who hope to become: an architectural engineer; an office clerk, who is attending business college; a junior executive, studying business administration; a school teacher, whose major is manual training; a physical chemist, and a writer, whose chief aim at present is to become a reporter and who is studying journalism here at Youngstown College.

Any veteran is free to take these vocational guidance tests if he cares to do so, and boys here at school are excused from classes to take them. After making appointments, veterans are urged to keep them and to arrive promptly.
